FOUL MURDER

At The Bradford Hotel At Midnight.

The Courier Reporter Reached the Scene Just in Time to See the Last Act.

Thursday's Daily.

"Murder! at the Bradford House, Come down quick," was the news the COURIER reporter received over the Western Telephone at midnight last night. After several unsuccessful attempts to rub open our eyes we finally concluded to investigate and hurried to the scene. We entered the office of the Bradford and found all as calm as the sea. We wondered then where the murdered man was, and on a second thought we concluded that we were some one's victim, and the joke would be on us. But we investigated. Landlord Ralston escorted us to the dining room and here we were greeted with a chorus of forty melodious voices, in their favorite and ritualistic songs, "There's a hole in the bottom of the Sea," "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," etc. The banqueters were the members of the "Grand Orient," who held a meeting at their hall and conferred the mystic rites upon several Weary Pilgrims. To an outsider it is difficult to explain what mystic work they did do. In conversation with one of their candidates we are satisfied that there was but little they didn't do. However, we are glad to state this morning that all still survive although it was noticed that all the candidates "stood up." They had a "hot time" at their hall and wanted a banquet equal to the occasion. We heard no one complain. It was a spread for which Landlord Ralston and his good wife deserve the highest compliments. It was elaborate in every detail. Numerous persons were called upon for toasts. There were toasts by nobody but "roasts" for everybody. We give below the bill of fare:

Oysters stewed or raw, roast turkey with dressing, chicken, veal loaf, salad with mayonnaise dressing, coldslaw, cranberry sauce, buttered sandwiches, celery, olives, tarts, blancmange, maccaroons, sunshine cake, fruit cake, salted nuts, fruits, tea and coffee.

The Auburn Council of the order of the Grand Orient are a body of men who enjoy more than the ordinary routine work. The membership here now number over 100. It is a distinct and separate order from the K. of P. lodge, but is governed by rituals. Of course some extras are indulged in and to enjoy these ceremonies it is necessary to become a member. Those from Garrett were:

J. E. Crow, S. S. Freyr, C. K. Lantz, A. C. Widmer, W. W. Sharpless, L. J. Gengler.

From Auburn, M F Long, H R Culbertson, Geo M Ralston, C Platter, M B Willis, W E Thrush, Geo Lackey, G H Yesbera, U S Raut, A B Steele, Geo Baxter, E C Sheets, Geo Grund, John Snugers, Geo Lanning, Miles Baxter, C B Weaver, D A Garwood F Rose, A H Baker, D N Fitch, H C Shull, B M Bishop, W B Brown, Dr Nusbaum, W W Stimley, J E Pomeroy, M C Sheets, P D West, Frank DePew, J E Cutter, H B McCord, J P Crimmins, Jack Bland.

A Flag of Warning.

Beware of the dry, tickling, hacking, morning cough, for it warns you that consumption lurks near. The famous Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it. "I had a very bad cough. One doctor pronounced it consumption. I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and was completely cured; the cough left me and has never come back. Simon Smasal, 375 31st Street, Chicago, Ills." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup costs but 25 cents. Ask for Bull's, take only Bull's.

McDONALD-ETTER WEDDING.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs Milo J Thomas in Corunna at high noon, Wednesday, Dec. 29th, when Miss Anna the daughter of Mr and Mrs Henry Etter, became the wife of Mr. William M Donald, the ceremony being performed by the pastor of the Christian church, H. A. Wingard, of which the bride and groom are both members.

The costume of the bride was a beautiful cream colored cashemere dress trimmed in cream lace and satin, with white kid gloves and slippers. The groom wore a black cheviot suit.

Among the presents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas presented the happy pair with a set of silver knives and forks. Master Harry Thomas with his sister Miss Bertha gave a pretty lamp, and Mrs. Adams presented two elegant dishes.

They spend a short time with the parents of the bride, but will soon return to make their home in Corunna. May all their efforts be crowned with success and their lives be spent in happiness. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are to be praised for their royal kindness and generous hospitality shown to the bride and groom by giving in their honor such a rich feast of the good things that can load a table.

MISSING MAN.

His Wife Brings Suit to Recover Property.

Suit has been begun in the Elkhart county circuit court by Mary J. Holdeman to recover valuable property from Alfred Lowry. She is the wife to ex-Treasurer Holdeman of Goshen, who is alleged now to be a fugitive from justice. The plaintiff claims that the property was deeded to Lowry as security to prevent prosecution of her husband on indebtedness. Holdeman, who is said to be short for a large amount in his accounts, has been missing for some time.

Free Pills.

Send your address to H. E Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a free sample of Dr. King's New Life pills. A trial will convince you of their merits. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of consumption and sick headache. For Malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranted to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c per box. Sold at Robbins & McCord's drug store.

THE NEWSPAPER

I love it as the drinker does his wine;
A daily, dear companion, map of life
In busy circle, politics and strife.
Of words from tart reply to those divine.
It gives alike to all who ask; a mine
Of sterling worth spread out before the eye.
It talks to me of persons long gone by,
And of those passing now that brightly shine
No freight train draws such a commodity
Of various wares as this thing brings to me
Of information; hear'n and day and night.
Ocean and sea, are plundered of their sweets
To give me what my soul so gladly greets.

MURDERED!

Was The Waterloo Nightwatch While on Duty.

BY CHARLES JOHNSON

Who Was Caught in Chicago and later Died From a Wound.

Thursday's Daily.

Last night or rather about 1:30 this morning a bloody murder was committed at Waterloo. Night watch Charles E. Cox, was found dying from bullet wounds, at a point across the street from the postoffice, by two young men who work in Robinson's livery east of the Locke Hotel. They had heard several shots on Main-st near Boozer's Implement store, and soon after, two young men from Ashley, who had put their rig in the stable just before midnight came hurriedly in and called for it. The horse had its harness on yet and they were soon off. They cautioned the young men in the the stable, Brand and Beard, not to say anything about their going off so early. A suspicious thing, too, was the fact that instead of driving right west on that street to the road that goes out north past the cemetery, they went south across the railroad then west along past the Winslow building. When passing the Winslow building Wm. X. X. McDonald, who rooms there, and had been awakened by the shooting heard one of the men say, "He shot me, but I don't give a d—n. I fixed the son of a b—" But he thinks the man who said this was on foot, and not one of the two in the rig. It appears that the trouble began near the Boozer establishment, and they were probably trying to break into some room when the night watch caught them at it. McDonald says, that just before the shooting, he heard Cox say, "Come out of there," and then a dozen or more shots followed. Blood at this point showed where Cox was shot, and a trail of blood diagonally across the street to the east and north, across the tracks and around the corner going east, to where he fell from loss of blood. After the two Ashley men had left the stable, the two young men in charge, started out to see about the shooting. They came across the body lying in the road dead.

It would seem as if he had fallen while trying to go across the street toward the Locke Hotel. He lay on his face with his revolver near, it having dropped from his hand. Four chambers were empty and the 5th had been snapped, but missed fire. The young men got help and the body was taken into Shaver's saloon near by, and later to his home just south of the Edge Hotel on Main-st. after being cared for by the undertaker. He was shot just over the heart and then probably had started to get help at the Locke Hotel. It is now the opinion that the man who killed him was trying to break into the building. He had told him to come out A dark lantern was found near there, made out of an old teapot, with the spout off and the hole covered, and a candle inside. Cox had met two tramps early in the evening and refused them a place to lodge, as the council had ordered no more should be kept. It is likely that the two men from Ashley were near by in a house of bad repute and wanted to get away before they should be called as witnesses. The third man, the one that McDonald heard talking about the shooting is probably the guilty man. He apparently ran afoot to the west side of town and there stole a horse from the stable of David Johns, and rode it to near Sedan, where he stole the buggy and harness of Adam Hohman. Hohmam was in Auburn to-day, but had not yet found his property, from which it appears that man must have stolen another horse.

The two Ashley men, Nate Lochamier and John Householder have been captured by Sheriff Stroh and Deputy Platter, and were taken before Squire Reed in Waterloo for examination But the woman where they were, says they were in the house at the time of the shooting. They claim they hurried away, because they thought the shooting meant that some one was going to serenade them. There had been ill feeling between Cox and Lochamier as Cox had found him drunk a number of times. He may have had a hand in the killing but just now it looks as if the man who stole the horse and went west, is the man the officers ought to follow up.

J. C. Lochner of the DAILY went up this forenoon, and we are also in receipt of two letters from our regular correspondent there, and the above is what we are able to gather so far, and is probably correct, though, later developments may make changes.

Cox was about 37 and a native of Hillsdale county, a resident of Waterloo 5 years, and highly respected. He leaves a wife and one child, the latter about ten.

Friday's Daily.

Charlie Speer, of Waterloo, was here this morning. He was with the Sheriff over at Kendallvill last night to see if the murderer of Cox was seen at that place. But they report that Mr. John's horse, that was stolen, had been found, was not correct. The horse has not beed seen, and this accounts for the stealing of Adam Hohman,s buggy and harness. There was a rumor last night that the rig had been found at Garrett, but this is not confirmed. We should have noted in our report yesterday that Cox had a policy of $1000 in the D. of R. order of which he was a member. He was hired as night watch by the business men, the town Board giving him in addition, $5 a month. He died in defending the property and rights of those who employed and trusted him.

It appears there were three men concerned in the murder, and one of them was wounded, probably in the leg, as blood was seen on the snow, now and then they went west, for some distance. At David John's where they stole the horse, several emuly shells or ruined cartridges were found there. They had also torn up a sack there, as if to bind up a wound with it. It is believed they were going to rob the DeKalb bank.

The two men from Ashley were brought back and examined. The women they were with, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Forney testified that the two men were at Forney's in the parlor when the shooting was done, and at once went out and went away. This cleared the two men and they were released.

The Sheriff went west today with a deputy and it is supposed there is some clue, but up to time of going press nothing more is known.

Monday's Daily.

Deputy Sheriff Platter returned from Chicago Friday evening and brought word that Charles Johnson, the man suspected as the murder of Cox was dead. Blood poison had taken effect, due probably from the fact that, the wound was exposed, and it was found necessary to amputate his leg. He was found in South Chicago, and taken to the county hospital where his leg was operated on Saturday forenoon. He died during the operation. He made no confession and aside from circumstantial evidence the murder of the brave watchman still remains unknown, though Mr. Platter is positive that it was Johnson, as he answered the description in every particular.

Potatoes.

Potatoes, native to Peru, were discovered by the Spaniards in the neghborhood of Quito, where they were cultivated by the natives. Condor, a monk, first introduced them into Spain, whence they passed into Italy and thence to Belgium. Humboldt says that at the discovery they were cultivated in all the temperate parts of the continent from Chili to New Granada, but not in Mexico. In 1585 potatoes were taken from North Carolina and Virginia, on the return of the colonists sent out by Sir Walter Raleigh, and were first cultivated on his estate near Cork. The sweet potatoes, native of the West Indies, were given to Columbus by the natives of Cuba. They were introduced into England by Sir Francis Drake, who wrote of them in praise, but forgot to send instructions to eat only the root. The gardener of Queen Elizabeth planted them, and ate some of the tops. Being disgusted by the taste, he pulled up his crop, made a fire of the pile, was attracted by the pleasant odor of the burning tubers, picked up a root, ate it, and being pleased with the taste, continued the cultivation and introduced them to the notice of others --Lippincott's Mo.

BIG INTEREST ON MONEY.

Klondike is Not The Only Eldorado—A Bonanza in Our Own Town.

National banks pay reasonable interest on your investments, but there are other channels where the return to the investor is appreciably greater.

Chauncy DePew says, that "knowledge and information is the best interest we can get on our money." Benjiman Franklin says, "A good education to a young man or woman who is starting out to battle with this world is worth more to them than $10.000 in cash."

The brain of man, or the combind brains of men, have never accomplished a work that is more beneficial to the student or the progressive thinking man or woman, than Cram's Uuiversal Atlas of the World. If we should quote from hundreds of prominent educators, eminent men, from the press, or from the people at large, we would say that Cram's Universal Atlas has no equal. If what Gibbons says is true (and experience has taught us it is) that "we all receive two educations, one which we receive from others and one more important which we give unto ourselves," we should embrace an opportunity of placing in our homes for the benefit of ourselves and families a reference work which has no equal in the standard literary publications of the age, which is Cram's Uuiversal Atlas of the world. This meritorious work is not only Geographical, but Historical, Astromonical, Political, Statistical, Commercial, Biographical, Descriptive, Modern, Classical and contains a complete gazetteer of every city, town, village and postoffice in the U. S. See the display ad and send in coupon for more information which will be sent FREE.

Aggravation Below Stairs.

Mrs. Greene—"Really, I think that girls in domestic service have a pretty comfortable time of it." One of Them—"But we have our trials, mum. Just as like as not, when we have got a bonnet or a gown that is particularly becoming first thing we know our mistress comes out with something exactly like it."—Boston Transcript.

Probably a Base Slander.

They are telling of Boston that a woman resident of that center of culture has a complete breakfast service of cups, saucers and plates for her large family, on which are given, from photographs, the likenesses of the members, so that the servants can properly place the china to be used.—Exchange.

Heidelberg's Ancient Castle.

While repairing the Heidelberg castle ruins the other day some workmen came across a window group, the style of which revealed the fact that that famous castle was not begun in 1411, as heretofore believed, but about 200 years earlier.

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eventful Happenings in Every Known Hemisphere—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Politics, Religion, Commerce and Crops, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

ALARMING STATE OF AFFAIRS.

The United States Gunboat Marietta Ordered to Go to San Salvador with All Possible Speed.

Salvador is threatened with another revolution. To protect American interests the Navy Department, upon request of the State Department, has telegraphed orders to the gunboat Marietta, which is at Mare Island, directing her to proceed as soon as possible to La Libertad and remain until further orders. The importance of this action will be appreciated when it is understood that the Marietta was being fitted for service in the Chinese waters. The information upon which the State Department acted came from John Jenkins, Consul at San Salvador, who cabled: "The condition of affairs in Salvador is alarming; send war ship." The distance to La Libertad is about 2,500 miles and it will be covered in two weeks. The instructions to commander F. M. Simonds require him, upon arrival at La Libertad, to communicate with Mr. Jenkins and to take all measures possible for the protection of American interest.

READY FOR WAR.

Great Britain Calls Out the Naval Reserves for Action.

London special: A news agency announces that the British naval reserves will be mobilized. According to recent estimates, the reserve forces of the British Navy number somewhere about 28,000 men. Of this number it is calculated that at least 10,000 men would be required in case of war to complete the manning of the war ships of Great Britain, which are understood to require a complement of 110,000 men, whereas only 100,000 are actually in service. The naval reserve problem has long been discussed by British authorities and the general opinion appears to be that the number of men available is far short of the number that would be required in case of war. In addition to the men in the naval reserve, Great Britain has a large reserve fleet and a number of reserve merchant cruisers.

Stolen Property.

The Superintendent of Police, H. A. Gorsline of Fort Wayne, Ind., arrested two tramps with a lot of stolen cutlery in their possession, which has evidently been stolen from some cutlery store. The pocket knives are of the following makes: Southington Cutlery Company, Robeson Company, Cattarangus Cutlery Company, Little Valley N. Y.; Bgoth Bros., Stockholm, N. J.; Fillmore Cutlery Company, Germany; Winsted Knife Company, Winsted, Conn.; Atlantic Cutlery Company, Germany. One new American bull-dog revolver, 14 cheap silk handkerchiefs, 2 fancy cotton handkerchiefs, 2 bunches shoe strings.

There are also two crooks doing thirty days in jail for vagrancy who had on their person when arrested 24 good new knives, of the American Knife and Shear Company make; also two or three new razors sold by the Fletcher Hardware Company of Detroit; one of these razors has a white handle, made to represent alligator scales.

All of the above goods have undoubtedly been stolen, and while some one is no doubt looking for the thieves, the Police Department in Fort Wayne are just as anxiously waiting for some one to indentify property and punish the thieves. These men will be held here twenty-five days, when, if no owner can be found for the goods, they will be released, and the property returned to them.

Lynched a Dying Man.

Columbia (S. C.) special: The details of a most revolting lynching have just reached here from Kingstree, in which a dying man was shot to death by a mob. Deputy Sheriff Poston attempted to arrest Sam Turner, a colored man, who is a noted tough. Turner, as was expected, resisted arrest. In the struggle which followed, Deputy Poston was killed, but not before he had inflicted a fatal wound on the negro. Turner then surrendered and was being taken to the jail in a wagon, when the vehicle was surrounded by a mob of armed men who put pistols to the head of the colored man and shot him to death.

Broke His Neck.

John Mulholland, aged 55 years, of Columbus, Ohio, while playing hide and seek with his children, fell down a stairway and broke his neck, death ensuing almost instantly.

Robbed and Murdered.

Robert Frederick, who was in charge of the Cotton Belt Railway water tank near Kingsland, Ark., was robbed and murdered at his post of duty by unknown men.

Three Thousand People Homeless.

A special from Port au Prince, Hayti, says: A fire which assumed considerable proportions on account of lack of water to supply the pumps, broke out and destroyed 800 houses, including a number of warehouses, a hotel, the Church of St. Joseph and its parsonage. About 3,000 people were rendered homeless.

Will Be Lifted.

Assistant Secretary Howell has been advised that the embargo on the exportation of tobacco from Havana, Cuba, would be raised soon.

Child Crushed to Death.

At Greenville, O., Marna Burnett, the 10-year-old daughter of Dr. Burnett, while returning home from skating, climbed upon the hub of the hind wheel of a wagon loaded with wood and accidentally fell under the wheel, which crushed her head, causing instant death.

No Truth in It.

A recently printed article alleging that the United States Postoffice Department has been robbed of millions of dollars by means of swindling schemes worked by the railways is now pronounced a groundless fake by the papers that fathered its publication.

CONFER ON YUKON AFFAIRS.

Clifford Sifton and J. A. Mackenna of Canada in Washington.

Clifford Sifton and J. A. Mackenna of the Canadian interior department, who are to consult with Secretary Alger on the forwarding of supplies to the Klondike, have arrived in Washington. Secretary Alger hopes by a personal conference with the Canadian officials to arrange for the issue of a permit from the Canadian Government for fifty armed United States troops to serve as guards for the relief expedition to pass through Canadian territory. Another object of the conference is to adjust some customs questions that are involved in the sending of the expeditions. Another object is to secure the co-operation of the Canadian mounted police, which it is not doubted will be cheerfully extended and will be of the greatest value. A cablegram was received by the Secretary from Mr. Kjellman, the Government reindeer herder, who is now in Alten, Norway, stating that he is busy collecting reindeer needed for the transportation of the supplies to the Klondike. The inquiries made by the War Department in regard to the feasibility of securing promptly an adequate supply of condensed foods is already bearing fruit, and samples of all kinds are beginning to arrive.

DOES THIS MEAN WAR?

England Reported to Have Sent a Fleet to Corea.

Is England on the brink of a war with Russia in the far East? This is the question that is asked in every club in London. A Shanghai dispatch announces that seventeen British warships are off Chemulpo, Corea, southeast of Seoul. It means that England will not stand the absorption of Corea by the wily Muscovite without a strong protest. This protest is especially directed against the dismissal of McLeavy Brown, British adviser to the Corean customs, in favor of the Russian nominee. Whether England can force the restoration of Mr. Brown without a fight with Russia is very much doubted in London. Russia, it is known, has been getting ready for a struggle for some time. For months food and army supplies have been pouring into Vladivostok. Japan, it is said, has a fleet of thirty warships awaiting the result of the British representations. If Corea, which is under Russian influence, does not yield, Japan is quite likely to join with Britain. Another disquieting rumor from Shanghai states that Great Britain has seized an island at the mouth of the Yang-Tse-Kiang.

OMAHA BANK SUED.

Suit Due to the Defalcation of the Ex-State Treasurer.

As a sequel to the half million shortage of ex-State Treasurer Bartley, of Nebraska, the Attorney General has brought suit to recover $200,000 from the Omaha National Bank. The suit grows out of the fact that the Omaha bank acted as agent in disposing of a State warrant for the amount to the Chemical National Bank of New York City and when the warrant was paid by Bartley he drew a check on funds deposited in the local bank. The suit will amount to a test to determine the responsibility of banks transacting such business with officials who afterward become defaulters. The theory of the Attorney General is that the withdrawing of the funds was in the furtherance of the steal Bartley perpetrated on the State, and that the bank is, therefore, liable to the State for the sum. Indirectly the Chemical National is affected. The Omaha National is one of the strongest banks in the West.

PATENT OFFICE RUSH.

Highest Number of Applications Ever Known.

Three hundred and seventy-five applications for patents were received at the patent office at Washington, D. C., in one day recently—the highest on record for any one day in the history of the office. The fact that the new law requiring persons who have made applications abroad for patents to file their applications in this country within seven months of the filing of the application for foreign patent becomes operative Jan. 1 is accountable for the rush. Heretofore applications could be filed at any time within the life of a patent issued in foreign countries.

BURNS IN HIS HOME.

Martin Eckstein, of Newport, Ky., Loses His Life in a Fire.

A fire with frightful results occurred in Newport, Ky. Box 13 at 5:45 o'clock the other morning summoned the department to the home of Martin Eckstein, 728 Central avenue. An awful scene presented itself when the firemen reached the place. Doubled up in an almost unrecognizable shape was the form of a human being. It was the charred remains of Martin Eckstein, 71 years of age and one of Newport's respected citizens. The real cause of the fire that caused such frightful destruction seems shrouded in mystery.

Explosion in a Mine.

Six men were seriously injured by an explosion of gas in the Bellevue shaft of the Delaware and Lackawanna Company at Scranton, Pa. John Alexander, a laborer, and John O'Brien were so badly hurt that they may die. Alexander was frightfully burned and both of O'Brien's hips were broken. The explosion, which is thought to have been caused by a naked lamp, occurred in a gangway of a fourteen-foot vein where eighteen men were working.

Mrs. Lillian McElroy of Nashville committed suicide in the Brackin House in Union City, Tenn., by shooting herself through the heart with a revolver and by taking morphine. Under her pillow was a photograph of a man, with the name "T. O. Perkins, Nashville," written across the face, and also the words, "This is my boy."

Carlists Lack the Cash.

All danger of a Carlist uprising in Spain is over. That which is most indispensable in such cases, plenty of cash, is sadly lacking, and it is this deficiency of the sinews of war that compels Don Carlos and his followers to give up their present hopes.

Somnambulist Walked to Death.

At Memphis, Tenn., S. P. Lock secured a berth in a Pullman sleeper attached to the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railway train. Trainmen found his remains on a trestle. The supposition is that Lock walked in his sleep and fell off.

Broke Jail to Attend a Dance.

Irving Itigg, the convicted murderer, who broke jail at Fayetteville, W. Va., returned of his own accord and announced that he merely wanted to attend a dance near his home, and had no idea of leaving permanently.

Captain H. T. Draper Dead.

Captain Horace T. Draper died of paralysis at his home in Lansdown, a suburb of Philadelphia, aged 73 years. Throughout the war he was commander of the Hartford, Admiral Farragut's flagship.

Military Movements in Cuba.

According to Havana announcements from Spanish sources the combined operations undertaken by Gen. Aguirre in the province of Santa Clara have resulted in the capture of an insurgent camp, twenty of the enemy being killed and three captured. The Spanish loss was two men killed and seven wounded. It is further reported that the Spanish troops have been engaged with the insurgents commanded by Napoles. In this case the insurgents are said to have lost several men killed, and the Spaniards say that after the engagement an insurgent captain and seven armed privates surrendered. Advices from Manzanillo say that Spanish troops have left there to relieve the garrison of Santa Cruz, which is threatened by the insurgents. A report is current here that the son of Calixto Garcia died recently from wounds received during the insurgent attack upon Guamo. The insurgents have dynamited a railroad bridge at San Rafael, between Minas and Campo Florida. Congressman William H. King has gone to Matanzas, Sagua La Grande and other towns in the interior, bearing letters from Jose Congosto, secretary general of the government, to the local authorities.

Canada's Trade for the Year.

The trades and navigation returns shortly to be issued at Ottawa, Ont., will show the total imports entered for consumption to be $111,294,021, as against imports of $110,587,480 the preceding year. The duty collected amounted to $19,891,997, as against $20,219,037, a decrease of $327,040. Exports amounted to $123,950,838, an increase of $17,581,086. There were exported to the United States Canadian products to the value of $43,991,485, as against $34,460,428 in 1895-6, while from the United States Canada imported to the value of $61,649,041, an increase of $3,075,023 over imports of American products of the year before.

Lies to Save His Friend.

John Healey died in a New York hospital from the effects of stab wounds inflicted by George H. Lincoln, a designer. The two men were the best of friends. Lincoln entered his home intoxicated and threatened to strike his wife. Healey pleaded for her. The wife ran into another room. When she returned, after hearing sounds of a struggle, she found Healey covered with blood. Her husband had gone to a hospital. Lincoln, who was only slightly wounded, was arrested and taken to Healey's bedside. Healey positively denied that he had ever seen Lincoln before, and died refusing to implicate his old-time friend in any way.

Ship Loses Seven Seamen.

A special dispatch from Bermuda reports accidents at sea on the ship Van Loo in which seven lives were lost. The Van Loo, which is on a voyage from Cardiff to St. John, N. B., has put in there with loss of sails. She reports that the foreyard suddenly parted and fell to the deck. Of nine men who were carried down by the falling yard or were struck when it fell three were killed instantly and three others who took the chances of escaping by jumping into the sea were drowned.

Strikers Meet Defeat.

In New York, the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union made a complete surrender to the firm of J. B. & J. M. Cornell. This is their third recent defeat at the hands of the Cornells. Because of the alleged employment of non-union iron workers on the syndicate building being erected at Park row and Ann street a strike was ordered ten days ago. There were 360 men out.

Inhaled Gas Through a Tube.

In Cincinnati, L. W. Kampel, a tailor, was found by his daughter dead on his work bench. He had attached a rubber tube to the gas jet and from it inhaled the gas until he was overcome. He was at one time quite wealthy and had divided his property among his children, whose ingratitude weighed on his mind.

Negro Murderer Lynched.

Joseph Hopkins, the negro who murdered two white farmers on Christmas day at Glendore, a small inland town near Minter City, Miss., was lynched by a posse at daylight the other morning on the James plantation, near Swan Lake.

Foundered Off Cape Cod.

Schooner Ernest T. Lee brought into Salem harbor the crew of five men of the schooner Balsora L. Sherman, Captain Plummer, from South River, N. J., for Boston, which the sailors say foundered without warning off Highland light.

Hurt in a Wreck at Liberal, Mo.

A wreck took place at the Memphis road's depot at Liberal, Mo. Local train No. 46 broke in two on the down grade going into town, and the two sections came together in front of the station. Five persons were injured, two seriously.

Recovered His Speech.

Patrick Kelley, who for over a year has been dumb, suddenly recovered the use of speech in Louisville, Ky., during a fit of anger. He was greatly surprised to find himself talking and changed his curses to a fervent "Thank God."

Wants the Lodge to Pay Damages.

At Springfield, O., Frank McClure has brought suit against the trustees of Champion Binder Lodge, No. 3027, G. U. O. of O. F., to recover $5,000 for alleged injuries sustained while being initiated into the lodge.

Akron Tailor Missing.

A. J. Ruth, a tailor, has been missing from Akron, O., three weeks. He had a large sum of money when he left home.

FRANCE STEPS IN.

Tricolor Hoisted Over the Island of Hai-Nan.

Shanghai advices say that the admiral of the French fleet has hoisted the French flag on Hai-Nan island. The Chinese offered no opposition. A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Singapore confirms the report of the seizure of Hai-Nan island by the French. Hai-Nan island is off the south coast of China and separates the Gulf of Tonquin from the China sea. It has an estimated area of 12,000 square miles and a population of 1,000,000 Chinese, exclusive of wild tribes in the interior.

According to the Neueste Nachrichten of Leipsic, Prince Bismarck disclaims all responsibility for Germany's policy in China, but he approves it and wishes it executed with energy, on the assumption that it implies an entente with Russia. According to a special dispatch from Shanghai, the British admiralty has requisitioned three of the empress' steamships, belonging to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

The Tagliche Rundschau, on what it alleges to be the "best authority in London," declares that Russia and China have been negotiating for many months; that China consented last October to a temporary Russian occupation of Port Arthur, and that England, hearing of this, demanded a cession of the islands at Hong-Kong, a strip of coast opposite Kow Loon and the mouth of the River Canton; but, knowing that France also wanted compensation, England suggested that she should take Hai-Nan island. The French press has protested loudly against French inaction in the far east and the alleged subserviency of the Government to Russia.

SLAIN BY A MOB.

Iowans' Attempt to Tar and Feather Ends in Murder.

White caps have been at work in Lee County, Iowa, and as a result one man is dead and a warlike spirit has been aroused in the neighborhood that threatens further trouble. Abe Balm and his two brothers are well-to-do farmers, living near West Point. Not far away lived their father in the most abject poverty, and it was declared his sons refused to help him. When the old man died a few days ago it was claimed he had starved to death, and the alleged cruel treatment of the sons was generally denounced.

After the father was dead the sons refused to pay the expenses of his burial or even to see the body. This so enraged the neighboring farmers that they decided to rid their neighborhood of the brothers. They determined to tar and feather them, and Tuesday night a mob of about thirty marched to the home of the Balm brothers and called for Abe, the oldest. Abe stepped to the door, and, seeing the crowd outside, retreated into the house before the mob could lay hands on him. He called to his brothers, and all three opened fire on the visitors from the open door of the house, inside of which were Abe's wife and children.

The mob returned the fire, and after the smoke had cleared away it was found that Abe had been mortally wounded. The farmers retreated in the darkness. They were all masked, but Abe gave his brothers the names of seven neighbors, whom he declared he recognized in the mob. The brothers swore out warrants against the seven neighbors, charging them with murder. The entire neighborhood is up in arms.

TEACHERS IN SESSION.

Federation of Educational Associations Meet in Chicago.

In Chicago Wednesday afternoon the Federation of Educational Associations held the first session of its second annual meeting. The attendance at the opening was nearly two hundred. The Federation of Educational Associations is an outgrowth of the Western Penman's Association. At the tenth annual meeting of that body, held in Chicago in December, 1895, it was thought that the interests of the teachers of shorthand and typewriting, the teachers of writing and drawing in the public and parochial schools, and the teachers of the general commercial branches in the business colleges and commercial departments of all other schools demanded special and separate consideration. Three new bodies were formed, and with the existing association were made to comprise the federation.

A clash between the adherents of the different styles of handwriting taught in the schools took place. The argument arose in the discussion of a paper by A. N. Palmer of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, entitled "Copy Books Condemned." While the discussion was at its hottest chance reference was made to the vertical style of handwriting introduced recently. A score of excited pedagogues were soon arrayed against one another in spirited debate. The argument was decidedly in favor of the exponents of the old system of slanting chirography. Speed, the essential element in handwriting to-day, it was declared, could not be attained by the vertical system.

BANKERS OPPOSE THE PLAN.

New York Financiers Declare Against a Postal Savings Scheme.

The postal savings bank idea is not a popular one in New York banking circles. A canvass of presidents of prominent institutions showed that all practically agreed with President E. S. Mason of the Bank of New York in the statement that there were already so many banks in existence that rates for money had been cut to a point where there was little profit in banking. F. D. Tappen, president of the Gallatin National Bank, thought that possibly in thinly populated districts postal savings banks might prove beneficial to the people, but he was confident that the residents of large towns and cities had all the banking accommodations they desired. Oliver S. Carter of the Bank of the Republic said that the time had not come to discuss the proposition. Mr. Dumont Clark, president of the American Exchange National Bank, agreed with Mr. Carter. J. Edwards Simmons, president of the Fourth National, was also of the same opinion.

Lynching in Nevada is no longer conducted in a barefaced manner. The lynchers wear masks.

Two highwaymen robbed a Chicago saloon the other night and made the bartender "hot" by locking him in an ice-chest.

A wife in Pittsburg shot her husband in order to keep him at home nights. This at a first glance seems rather radical treatment; but perhaps he would have got half-shot anyway, if he had gone out.

A monument to George Washington is to be erected in London at once. Isn't this superfluous? Washington erected his own monument over there more than a century ago and the Britishers cannot overlook it nor forget it.

ON MODERN WARFARE

THINGS THAT WILL TRANSFORM FIELDS OF BATTLE.

Dogs Will Act as Sentinels and Locate and Carry Succor to the Wounded—Marvels of Communication by Use of the Telephone.

Kites that Drop Explosives.

When war again comes it will be waged under entirely new conditions and with modern improvements which would have amazed and awed even the great Napoleon if he could have beheld them.

Most people are aware that magazine breech-loading rifles and steel breech-loading cannon have been substituted for the old muzzle-loading musket and cast-iron muzzle-loading cannon; that there are now such things as Gatlings, and Nordenfeldts, and Hotchkiss and Driggs-Shroeder machine guns; that bicycles are coming to the front as a necessary part of a soldier's equipment, and that tactics have been changed and troops now fight in the manner of Indians rather than on the "serried columns" of the days of Frederick the Great. But how many know of the other "new things" in warfare, of which little is said? Some of these novelties will be here described.

An entirely new feature of warfare is likely to be an extensive use of kites for photographing an enemy's country, forces and works; for signalling, and for lifting and dropping upon an enemy high explosives.

Kites, too, will lift great loads. Either the Hargrave box kites or Eddy kites could be used to lift fifty pounds of dynamite into the air with a slow match attached. When the kites were over the enemy (the direction of the wind and time required to bring the kite over the enemy being, of course, factors), this match, burning out, would set on fire a cord tying up the box in which the dynamite was contained; and, the cord burning through, the box would open and drop its load. No human power could afford protection against the explosive dropped from above.

Since rifles with great power have come into use, shelter for the attacking party is an absolute requirement, and trees, houses or packed earth will not do. The balls go through the wood and through three feet of packed earth, and even through thin plates of steel. In this emergency, only so-called bullet-proof cloth seems to be available for hasty protection, and will probably be used, hung from light frames of steel, in screens for skirmishers.

It is not suitable for clothing, for while it stops a ball, when worn on the person, the ball inflicts a terrific shock upon the wearer. It has been found, however, that when it is hung up and allowed to swing freely like a curtain, it will stop a Krag-Jorgensen ball, which first indents it and then drops to the ground. Consequently it can be used in portable screens.

The United States Signal corps now has a telephone outfit which weighs only sixteen pounds, and can easily be carried by one man, and messages have been sent 500 miles with this equipment and additional wire.

Dogs are extensively used as sentries, ammunition carriers and ambulance "men" in Germany, and could be so used here. No wornout, hungry soldier can possibly be as alert at night when on sentry duty as a watchdog, which can be easily trained to distinguish an enemy from a friend, even when disguised, and by relieving men from picket duty, one-third of an army obtains rest it would not otherwise get.

Large dogs can carry along a line of battle hundreds of cartridges, and how well dogs may be trained to bring succor to the wounded can be learned from the exploits of the famous dogs of St. Bernard's hospital in the Alps. The German wardogs are trained to seek out wounded men on the field at night, and in bushes, thickets and marshes. They carry in panniers water and simple remedies and bandages, and stand by a supposedly wounded man and bark until aid comes.

In no department has a greater advance been made than in the medical department—the ambulance service. And in the next war the art of treating will almost succeed in overcoming the ravages of the art of destruction.

Electricity will play its part in the next war. Edison has suggested that armies should be equipped with fire engines and dynamos, and shows that a powerful stream of water into which a strong current was diverted would disable every man whom it touched. The searchlight will be used for preventing night attacks, which will be oftener made than formerly, for signaling, and to light up a field where the wounded are lying. Motors will be used to work machine guns, while the gunners lie under cover until reloading is necessary. Wires may be stretched around camps and guards, and when touched sound an alarm. Mines may be exploded by electricity miles away under cover.

Smokeless powder has made new conditions on the field, the absence of the sheltering smoke making the attacking party distinctly visible. To make smoke and cover an attack the English have invented bombs which, when broken, give out a dense smoke like a fog. Hand grenades are also made which can be thrown into intrenchments and give out gases which choke and suffocate without killing.

The dynamite gun has had a fair trial in Cuba with the most successful results, and will be used in cases of extreme necessity, cruel and inhuman as its use may seem.

These are but a few of the many new inventions suitable for use in war, but a description of these will serve to show "there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of" by the average peaceful citizen.

A SURE SIGN.

She Spilled the Salt and Quarreled Over It.

"You women," said Mr. Turlingham, "are always making fools of yourselves over your superstitions. Here you are, worrying just because you happened to spill a little salt. Why, it's ridiculous. Perfectly ridiculous!"

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Turlingham replied, "I suppose it is. But I've never known it to happen yet, without making me quarrel with somebody. I've noticed a thousand times."

"A thousand times, your grandmother! What's the use of exaggerating things like that? I'll bet you never spilled salt twenty times in your life, and if you quarreled after doing it it just happened so, that's all."

"Perhaps it just happened, but that's the very thing that worries me. I don't want it to happen. And as far as being superstitious is concerned, I guess you're just about as bad as the next one. Didn't you have to spit over your right arm and hop three times around an imaginary circle, when you saw the new moon over your left shoulder the other night?"

"I did that because you made such a blamed fuss about it."

"Oh, yes, it's well enough to try to blame it all on me, but I guess you wouldn't have done it if you hadn't been afraid yourself."

"Well, that's what a fellow gets for making a fool of himself to please his wife."

"It seems to me you are very willing to make a fool of yourself to please me, but you are never willing to do anything else to please me."

"Oh, of course not! Why, I'm the most horrible wretch that a woman ever promised to love, cherish and obey!"

"Henry Turlingham, I want you to understand that I didn't promise to obey!"

"You did!"

"No, I didn't. When the preacher said that I didn't repeat it!"

"It's all the same. It's part of the marriage service."

"I don't care. There is no reason why a wife should have to obey when the husband isn't compelled to do so."

"There isn't, eh? Why, most women are fools. They've——"

"Yes, I know that. They prove it by getting married."

"Oh, well, go on! Of course you've got to have the last word. A man might as well try to reason with a donkey as to try to get a woman to take a sensible view of anything. Confound it, I sometimes wish I could throw down everything and get out of this forever!"

Then he grabbed up his hat and hurried away without kissing the sweet little woman good-by, after which Mrs. Turlingham threw herself upon the lounge, buried her face in the pillows and sobbed:

"I kn-knew the moment I sp-spilled the salt that I would quarrel with somebo-body! It ne-never f-f-f-fails! B-o-o-o-o-o-o!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Snuff Dippers.

Passing through Lowell the other day with a companion well informed generally I remarked: "Here is the center of the snuff-dipping habit in the United States." He was astonished. "Do you mean to say snuff is used in Massachusetts?" he asked. "I thought it a habit confined to the Georgia crackers and the poor whites of North Carolina." I then explained that in the State of Massachusetts every year the mill hands—mostly women and young girls—use sixty-five tons of snuff for dipping, scouring, chewing and pinching. The powder is sold in one-ounce tin cans, which retail at 10 cents. Thus we have 130,000 pounds, making 2,080,000 packages, which at 10 cents cost the operatives $208,000.

While we have always associated the use of snuff in this country with the very dregs of humanity in the South, let us glance at the city of Lawrence, Mass., where are located such mills as the Pacific, Atlanta, Cotton, Washington, Everett, Pemberton, etc.; population about 46,000. The mill girls are French Canadians and Armenians, with a sprinkling of Americans, Irish and English. In summer, groups of them, from 16 to 20 years of age, go across the river and sit for hours along the banks indulging themselves with the snuff and rag. They consume over twenty tons of snuff annually. Lawrence is only twenty miles from moral, pure, holy Boston.—New York Press.

Late Hours and Health.

A German doctor, who has been collecting information about the habits of long-lived persons, finds that the majority of those who attained old age indulged in late hours. Eight out of ten persons over 80 never went to bed until well into the small hours, and did not get up again until late in the day.

The man who invests in watered stock is apt to get soaked.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Monon Train Struck Their Carriage—Aerial Warship to Be Investigated by the Government—They Nearly Killed Their Teacher.

Death Ends Honeymoon.

A fatal accident occurred at Terhune. Mr. and Mrs. John Moore and Miss Clara Brattain were returning from an entertainment, when a freight train on the Monon struck their carriage. Miss Brattain's skull was fractured and she died. Mrs. Moore cannot recover. Mr. Moore was slightly injured. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were married two days before, and this was the first time they had been away from home together.

Roberts' Aerial Warship.

William S. Roberts, an employe of the Hartford City Glass Company, has forwarded to Robert Craig, chief of the United States signal service, the plans and specifications of his aerial warship. Roberts has been at work for fifteen years on the problem of aerial navigation. He visited Washington and succeeded in interesting the Government in his invention and later forwarded his plans to Washington at the request of the Secretary of War.

Scholars Nearly Kill a Teacher.

William Miller, teacher of Woodland School, in Clay township, reproved a 13-year-old son of Bryant Robinson for refusing to read a Christmas essay. The lad attacked him with a knife. An older brother then struck the teacher on the back of the head with a stick of wood. Mr. Miller received a frightful scalp wound and his shoulder is broken. School was dismissed. The teacher may die.

Goes to Reform School.

Charles Cane, charged with wife desertion, was taken to the reform school for boys from Anderson. Though married he was not beyond the reform school limit, being scarcely 19. He has been confined in the institution and was out on parole. He is probably the first boy ever taken in for wife desertion.

Killed by a Train.

Winfield Haymond of Liberty township went to St. Paul to purchase his children Christmas presents. On his way home he was struck by a Big Four train and his body horribly mangled.

Ten Brakemen Are Promoted.

Ten Vandalia brakemen were called before Trainmaster Raidy at Terre Haute and notified that each one had been promoted to be a conductor.

Within Our Borders.

John Kinnie committed suicide at Fort Wayne.

At Huntington, Louis Meyer fell dead while eating breakfast.

The Bowser Oil Tank Works at Fort Wayne were damaged by fire to the extent of $35,000.

Mrs. Seneca Chambers and child were fatally burned by an explosion of gun powder in their home near Anderson.

At Brazil, John Smith, an old peddler, shot and wounded Harry Joseph, proprietor of the Central Oil and Tank line.

John Classen, who lived near Helmer, committed suicide by taking poison. Business troubles is the supposed cause.

August Johnson of Babcock was hurt in a runaway and gave his injuries no attention. Lockjaw set in and he is dead.

M. K. Michaels was drowned in Devil's Lake, near Butler. His body was recovered about two hundred feet from shore.

A warehouse at Hagerstown belonging to Cheesman & Co. was partly destroyed by fire. The loss is $3,000; insured for $1,000.

W. Paul Stratton of De Pauw University won the medal by a close margin in the oratorical contest given by the Lyceum League of Sullivan.

At South Bend, Charles S. Chapman and his wife died within fifty-five minutes of each other, the former of apoplexy and the latter from pneumonia.

At Fortville, Miss Effie Webb, aged 26, committed suicide by hanging herself with a rope in the smoke house. No cause for the rash act is known other than ill health.

People who purchase meat in Marion now pay the regular prices as existed before the retail stores of Armour & Co. were opened to meet the boycott of union labor. Armour's stores have been closed.

While dressing a duck Councilman Jas. Marshall of Hartford City discovered two small gold nuggets in the fowl's craw. The duck is supposed to have swallowed them while searching for food in a near by stream.

Dr. E. Chittenden and Dr. M. V. Hunt, medical men known throughout Indiana, met at the Big Four depot at Anderson. There was a clash and with one accord both drew knives and started at each other. Friends separated the combatants.

The Dobson gang of horse thieves was just ready to step out of the Anderson jail the other night when Sheriff Starr accidentally discovered that they had sawed the heavy steel bars. The saws were smuggled to them by the wife of the leader.

The remains of Albert Giersohki, a young Fort Wayne cigarmaker, were cremated at Lindenwood. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital a week before suffering with a deranged stomach. He sank rapidly and died. The reading of his will revealed the fact that he had swallowed poison with suicidal intent because he had been jilted in love by Emma North, a domestic. The will leaves a Cigarmakers' Union benefit policy of $500 to the girl. This she has refused to accept, as she says she never cared for Giersohki and had frequently ordered him away from the house.

The Krag-Reynolds company, wholesale grocers at Indianapolis, have been forced to assign. The liabilities are fixed at $350,000; the assets will reach $400,000. The cause of the failure was the effort of the company to do a large business on limited capital.

Very Rev. William Corby, C. S. C., head of the order of the Holy Cross in the United States, chaplain of the Indiana commandery of the Loyal Legion, postmaster at Notre Dame and commander of Notre Dame Post, G. A. R., died at South Bend after a ten days' illness with pneumonia.

At Kokomo, a 2-year-old son of Edgar Todd fell into a boiler of hot water and died.

A heavy coating of ice covered the earth for nearly two weeks, and quails, unable to get food, died by the thousands. Many, to get something to eat, have taken up in barns and stables or have abandoned the country for cities and towns.

The company which proposes to erect a sugar beet factory in New Castle has changed the contract and have agreed to pay $4 per ton for sugar beets, and do not ask the farmers to take one-half in stock, as heretofore. With this proposition it is thought that the factory will be a sure thing.

WOMAN'S REALM

CAPTAIN OF A STEAMBOAT.

MRS. IDA MOORE LACHmund, captain of the steamer Robert Dodds, is the only woman in the log-rafting business. Her home is in Clinton, Iowa. She is a Colonial Dame, a Daughter of the Revolution and a relative of the Patterson family of Philadelphia. She is justly proud of her success in timber towing on the Mississippi. Six years since Mrs. Lachmund purchased the Robert Dodds and fitted it up for towing the great [illegible] head waters of t[illegible] points as far as 500 miles southward. She handles more than $500,000 worth of logs each season, and in transit they are entirely at her own risk. This is no small responsibility, as the rafts are kept lying in hundreds of bays and sheltered places along the river, in order to keep the mills in material. In an emergency the steamer makes a run to one of these bays and drops a raft at the mill's dock. Mrs. Lachmund brings rafts of a million feet down the river, and she plans her trips so that the mills she supplies are never idle. The value of the rafts ranges from $10,000 to $12,000 each. An ordinary raft covers a surface area of five acres. All the details of the business and the management of the boat and crew are under Mrs. Lachmund's supervision. She buys her stores and fuel and hires her own hands, and she is as familiar with the steamer and the rafting as any man on the boat. The crew of the Robert Dodds consists of twenty-one picked men. The river men, from master to roustabout, treat Mrs. Lachmund with the utmost deference, and her crew is one of the best on the Mississippi. Mrs. Lachmund's home is in Clinton, Iowa, where her husband is in business. They have three sons, the eldest of whom is a sophomore in the University of Chicago. The two younger ones are in a preparatory school in Clinton. Their home is one of comfort and refinement. Mrs. Lachmund is a handsome woman, sensitive and refined. She is an accomplished musician and fond of literature and society.

Successful Woman Lecturer.

Greek archaeology is the specialty of Miss A. Gordon Dunlop, who has won fame in this branch of science and is now in America delivering lectures illustrated by 600 stereopticon views. She is a young Englishwoman, a protege of the famous English authority, Percy Gardner, and the friend of Burne-Jones, Halman Hunt and others of the pre-Raphaelite school of art. Miss Dunlop has achieved great success as a lecturer on the history and philosophy of pottery, sculpture and painting.

MISS DUNLAP.

Diana of the Sierras.

Forty-nve deer have fallen before the rifle of Miss Cornie Chittendon, of Cummings, Cal., in six years. Miss Chittendon possesses the keenest instincts of a sportswoman. Since babyhood she has been accustomed to live an outdoor, self-reliant life. Her parents, with whom she has been brought up, own a sheep ranch of some 400 acres, part of it having been pretty rough country, and over this and the surrounding forests and hills Miss Chittenden has been accustomed to roam at will almost since she was first able to toddle. When quite a little girl she was taught how to handle a gun, and very soon became so expert in its use that she could hit a bird on the wing three times out of five. Her father's ranch is hung around with the antlers of deer and the tusks of wild animals, while the floors are covered with the furs of foxes, bears and wildcats that have fallen before the deadly aim of this modern Diana.

Paper Published by Women.

There has just been launched in Paris a daily paper devoted solely to the interests of the fair sex. It is produced entirely by women, and not only are the editors, the managers and the staff of reporters women, but the type is set by female compositors, and it is reported that even the printers' devils are feminine members of the genus "gamin." The name of the paper is La Fronde. Used as a noun, this means the implement of ancient warfare with which David slew Goliath, while to the verb "fronder" the translation to sling, to censure, to blame, to criticise and to oppose all equally apply, and, judging from the first number, are singularly appropriate, since it is full of abuse of everything that can be possibly construed as the handiwork of man.

Women Not as Neat as Men.

Women, in the opinion of a writer in Godey's Magazine, are very neglectful of the minor details of their dress. In comparing the fair sex with men in matters of neatness the writer says:

"Women are endowed with strange vagaries, and while extremely fastidious in many ways are very neglectful in others. Even the swellest society girl is not as particular as to the freshness of her collar and cuffs as the plain, everyday man of business; to change his linen at least once a day is a sort of religion with most men. With women it is different. They will inspect their collars and cuffs after a hard day's wear, and decide that they will do, not recognizing the fact that if any doubt exists on the matter they should be consigned to the laundry without a demur. Again, a man is much more concerned as to the state of his shoes than a woman; even the poor clerk on his meager salary spends his nickel a day for a shine without grudging, and if it be imperative that the nickel be saved he gets up earlier in the morning and wields the blacking brush himself. The woman will gown herself in Worth's or Paguin's latest creation and forget to look at her shoes; she is willing to condone the loss of one or two buttons and the consequent baggy appearance of her extremities; like the peacock, she trusts to the gorgeousness of her plumage, and hopes that her skirts will cover all defects."

Novelty in Bridesmaids.

It was something of an innovation at a wedding lately to have the bridesmaids enter four by the right and four by the left door of the church. It was such a surprise, says the Philadelphia Times, that the wedding party should thus separate that the audience did not at first notice that two processions were simultaneously making their way to the altar. The bride, on her father's arm, entered by the middle aisle, when her attendants had accomplished about half the distance up the right and left aisles. She was preceded by two ushers and her maid of honor walking alone, another pair of ushers closing the procession. As the bridesmaids reached the chancel they formed a lane through which the bride slowly passed, to be met at the altar steps by the groom.

Girl Runs an Engine.

California has a young girl who has solved the mysteries of the locomotive throttle. The curves and grades of the roads are not obscure to her. She is Miss Lola M. Coulter, a fair-haired girl of 14, and when she met her first railroad train a few weeks ago it was only a few days before she was in the cab. She lives in Tuolumne County, where railroad trains have been unknown until recently.

CALIFORNIA'S GIRL ENGINEER.

She immediately made the acquaintance of Engineer Brown, and after three or four lessons she could manage the throttle, set the brakes, round up toward the turns and put on more speed for the steep grades. Engineer Brown says she learned how to handle the engine much quicker than any fireman he ever had in a cab with him, and that he never had to repeat any instructions. It appeared to be second nature with her to operate machinery, for she mastered the most difficult details almost instantly. The more intricate the mechanism the easier she learned its use and just how it was affected by adjacent pieces. Her cool head and steady nerves never fail her and she always has her hands on the throttle and air brake lever to bring the train to a standstill at a moment's notice.

Conducts a Grocery Store.

Another Denver girl has come to the fore by striking out in business for herself. She is Miss Elizabeth Collins, and is a true type of American womanhood. Bessie, as she is known among her girl friends and customers, runs a grocery store and is meeting with excellent success. Miss Collins is a pretty blonde of 19 summers. She graduated with honors last year at the North Denver high school. When the fall term of school commenced she grew restless, with nothing to do, her school days being over, and while chatting with a friend one day, telling that she hardly knew what business to choose, her companion suggested that she adopt the grocery business. She made up her mind to embark in that line, and with some capital furnished by her father soon had the place in readiness for customers, and these came in gratifying numbers.

Dog that Jumps Into a Net.

Engine company No. 1 of Pittsburg owns the prize fire dog of the country. He has the usual liking for "running with the machine" and can do all the old tricks, but he has many new ones. Among them is a high jump into the fire net. He comes out of a third-story window with all the ease and grace of a bird and lands in the net which the boys hold without a jolt. His name is Judge. He can smoke a pipe, but does not do it often enough to injure his health.

Electric Bread Cutter.

A machine has been devised which goes by electricity and which can cut and butter 750 loaves of bread an hour. The butter is spread very thin by a cylindrical brush—so thin that a large saving of butter is guaranteed.

SUBMARINE BOAT.

Invention of Richard Raddatz Swims and Dives Like a Duck.

The Raddatz submarine boat has been recently submitted to various tests, which, it is claimed, amply prove its approximate perfection. The young inventor is Mr. Richard Raddatz, whose fame had not extended beyond the limits of his native town of Oshkosh, Wis., before he became the inventor of a boat, the principle of which has been a problem that has absorbed inventors and men of science for many years.

The boat as she is to-day looks very like a war vessel of the most aggressive type; her steel prow being strong enough to pierce the sides of any armored cruiser, and very likely that of any man-of-war. In appearance she is shaped like a huge cigar or torpedo, tapering gradually to either end, and presenting to the water a surface in which the resistance is practically reduced to nothing.

She is 65 feet long 4 feet wide and 7 feet 6 inches high, and is built on a heavy framework of angle irons, steel plates closely fitted over one another. Her weight is 31 tons, and her construction for resisting the enormous pressure of the water at the depths in which she will at times be submerged is perfect. Once in the water, if for a surface trip, there is little to be seen, nothing, in fact, save the two turrets projecting above the water, and as these are only two feet high the spectacle is not suggestive of the great interest that is below.

THE RADDATZ BOAT.

Under the aft turret is the engineer, the outlines of the hot air engine showing just forward of the turret. The propeller shaft runs forward to the air engine, and near this engine are the storage battery [illegible] in the sides of the boat. On the under [illegible] of the boat forward of the propeller is a long and rather slender rudder. One of the most interesting things to men of science is the method by which the boat is lowered and raised, and this is one of the secrets which the inventor is not yet ready to make known. Certain it is that a method which might with profit be employed by elevator companies, for in the sinking, and raising again, as well as in all the turnings in the water, not the slightest shock is observable. Every motion is made with the most perfect ease and grace, and this thirty-one-ton man-of-war disports itself in the deep as naturally as a porpoise.

The interior of the boat can be made as light as desired. A wire loop runs from the dynamo, on which are three incandescent lights. The boat can be raised and lowered at the rate of three feet a second, and she dives in the water as readily as a duck in response to an almost imperceptible pressure by the pilot. As experimented with up to date the boat has been run at a rate of fourteen miles an hour on the surface of the water, while an approximate speed of ten miles has been attained under the water, but for all ordinary trips she has been run at a rate of from three to five miles per hour. The inventor and the members of the syndicate express themselves as satisfied with this speed as being sufficient for all practical purposes, at least at present.

The problem of the air in the boat was a vital one, in the full sense of the term. Here again one encounters a carefully guarded secret as to the full details, but it is known that the air is mixed on the boat—"mixed" being the term employed by Mr. Raddatz instead of "manufactured." It is kept pure by the chemical generation of oxygen and the carbonic acid gas in the air in the boat is absorbed by caustic potash, caustic soda and lime.

INVENTOR RADDATZ'S SUBMARINE BOAT ON ITS TRIAL TRIP.

A Profitable Failure.

"When I was old enough to strike out in business," tells a citizen who attained prominence years ago, "Bowley wanted me to go into partnership with him and build up a big hardware trade. Having won the prize debate at college, and made several campaign speeches in the back school districts, I flattered myself that I was destined for something more brilliant than a prosy business career. I was bent on gaining a reputation, world-wide and enviable. As an initial step I proposed to take to the lecture field, and made my first appointment at a little town in Indiana. I charged a pretty stiff admission price for those times and in such a locality, and it swelled my head considerably to make my bow before a crowded house.

"My subject was 'Light,' and, after a scientific consideration of the topic, it was my purpose to turn on some light fun just to show my versatility and send the people home saying what a promising young man I was. I had talked about five minutes when I noticed some of the folks on the front seat nodding and yawning. Three minutes later there was only a person here and there whose eyes met my own, and at the end of ten minutes every soul within the range of my vision appeared to be asleep. Bound to arouse them, yet stick to my subject, I shouted at the top of my healthy lungs: 'Blot out the sun, extinguish the moon, obliterate the stars——'

"'And blow out the gas,' cut in a red-nosed old patriarch who pretended to awake with a snort.

"That settled it. The meeting broke up in a roar. I left town before daylight and was in the hardware business a year before I knew that my partner had bought every ticket and put up the job."—Detroit Free Press.

When We Grow Old.

One of the first surprises that people have as they begin to realize that they are leaving the record of a goodly number of years behind them, is that people think they are old. Casual remarks to that effect made before them come as a distinct shock. The spirit does not grow old; it is merely hampered by physical infirmities, and more particularly public opinion.

People are made old; they give up youthful practices because people think they should, though that was more in the past than in the present. There is no doubt that people, women particularly, lost much of their physical force because as they grew older it was "proper" for them to give up this and that and settle down. Now that grandmothers ride the bicycle, things have changed somewhat.

Almost anyone can remember, as a child, wondering how it would seem to be very old—in the child's estimation, 20, 30, even 40 years. Then when the 20, 30, even 40 years have passed, the child, who has become a woman, looks back and thinks that she feels little older and surprisingly little wiser than that child.—New York Times.

LESSON IN PALMISTRY.

The Line of the Heart If Pronounced Indicates Strong Feelings.

The line of the heart begins at the side of the hand near the base of the little finger and extends across the hand toward the forefinger. It sometimes terminates on the Mount of Jupiter at the base of the forefinger, sometimes ends between the first and middle fingers and sometimes ends on the Mount of Saturn at base of the middle finger. The broad line in the accompanying cut shows the general course of the line of the heart across the hand. When the line is strong it indicates strong feelings. If it be stronger than the head line it shows that the individual can be led by the feelings rather than by reason. When it is strong and is accompanied by the girdle of Venus and a weak head line it shows a person who will lead a reckless life, who will be ardent and passionate and will go to extremes in matters of love.

THE STUDENTS' MONUMENT.

A Beautiful Column that Commemorates a Bloody Event.

Havana has one of the most beautiful cemeteries on the western hemisphere. Money has been lavished upon it and its costly monuments are works of fine art. The long, narrow passages of the city of the dead are closely fringed with magnificent marbles, but in the midst of this vast collection towers a beautiful and impressive pile which, in view of present conditions on the island, possesses considerable interest. Americans in Cuba always visit the spot where it stands and gaze in admiration upon its symmetrical outlines and figures.

The beautiful memorial is called the Monument to the Students. Sons of Cubans attending the University of Havana have always been against the Spanish rule on the island and have had anti-tyranny clubs. One night fifty or more years ago a party of these incipient revolutionists, bubbling over with the foolish patriotic enthusiasm of youth, climbed the cemetery fence and smeared the tomb of a dead captain general who, in his time, had been tyrannical toward the native population. The deed was a foolish prank properly punishable by expulsion or some such penalty. But the Spanish loyalists, the wealthy shop keepers of Havana—the Catalans, as they are properly called—demanded that a lesson in loyalty be taught. An investigation was held and the offense was charged to certain students. No one knew if they were guilty, but the Catalans insisted that they were. They said the offense was an act of treason. They called upon the captain general to inflict the death penalty. Spaniard though the executive of the island was, his mind revolted against such severity. The Catalans would have it. The students were led out one morning and shot to death. This was in no time of war. It was in accordance with Catalan policy to suppress and punish rigorously the slightest symptoms of revolt on the part of the native population. To the memory of these students the massive monument was raised. It stands to-day as silent evidence of deep-seated antagonism between Catalan and Cuban.

Germany's Hoard of Gold.

A dispatch from Berlin to the Chicago Tribune, says that the thrice-locked vaults of the Spandau fortress were opened a few days ago for the annual examination by the Secretary of the Treasury to see that the $90,000,000 in gold, which the Reichstag voted in 1871 as a fund for first expenses in the next great war, was all right. Baron von Thielmann selected a few bags at random, counted the gold in them, counted the number of bags and weighed the whole amount. Some dozens of workmen were occupied for several hours in the grotesque mediaeval function. The sum eats up $3,000,000 interest yearly.

NOVEL TIME SIGNAL.

Intended to Replace and Improve Upon the Block System.

The most disastrous wrecks known to modern railroading are most frequently occasioned by rear-end collisions. A train may be running fifteen or twenty miles an hour, while one following is making thirty-five or more, the engineer of the rear train knowing nothing of the one preceeding. The former is sure to be overtaken, and if no warning is given, or if there is a curve in the road or a fog in the air, a smash-up is inevitable.

Mr. John L. Allen, at present an operator in the employ of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, at Loretto, Ky., has, it is believed, solved the problem of the prevention of rear-end collisions.

By means of an ingenius device on which he has been granted letters patent, an engineer can always know when he is dangerously near a train preceding him, and trains may follow each other only a few minutes apart, without fear of a collision. This railway time signal flashes a warning signal in the face of the engineer, enabling him to determine the location of the train preceding him, and he can thus keep his engine under necessary control or run to the full limit, as the never-failing clock hands of the signals may instruct him. A train passes over the track bar, releasing the hands of the signal, and they drop to starting point, commencing at once to register the minutes elapsing since the passage of the train. Three minutes later, perhaps, another train thunders up the track. A glance at the signal tells the engineer that he is dangerously near to the train ahead and he slows down accordingly, ready to stop should the other train be sighted. A few miles further another signal informs the engineer as to how the train ahead is progressing, and he can correspondingly increase his speed or still further check it, as may be required, thus enabling trains to be run only a few minutes apart without danger.

THE TIME SIGNAL.

Mr. Allen told the story of his invention as follows: "The clock has only five wheels and very little of anything else. The track connection is very simple in construction. These signals will replace many block systems less reliable and more expensive. One winding up of the clock will run it for 800 trains. There is no jar to the clock from a train passing over the track bar. The bar is moved only half an inch by the tread of wheels. When the wheels pass over this bar the clock hands are released and they drop back to the starting point. When the last wheel passes over the clock moves and carries the hands to fifteen minutes and stops, unless another train passes before. The dials are lettered in a three-fourths circle, so as to obviate confusion in locating the hands. The dials are two feet square and the hands fourteen inches long. As an engineer remarked, all a man would want is a glance and he is shown exactly the time since a train passed that point if less than fifteen minutes. In many places the signals can be used without being lighted, the dials being large enough to be plainly seen some distance by the light from the headlight. A lamp is provided inside and can be used."

TWO MILLIONAIRE GIRLS.

Fair Young Debutantes Who Are Each Worth $5,000,000.

Two girls worth $5,000,000 each in their own right make their debut in New York this season. They are Miss Mildred Stokes, daughter of Anson Phelps Stokes, and Miss Josephine Drexel, daughter of the late Joseph Drexel. Miss Mildred inherited her money from her maternal grandfather, and Miss Drexel got hers from her father.

Both girls are pretty. Miss Stokes' hair is light brown, with golden glints here and there among its waves. Her eyes are big and blue, fringed with dark lashes, and she has a manner that is simple, frank and winning. She has traveled widely and spent the greater part of last year in England and France. Her education has been entirely in the hands of governesses, and it is most complete and thorough. She has never been to school. Sports are her greatest delight, and she is noted among her friends as an all-around athlete.

Miss Drexel is a member of the famous Drexel family of Philadelphia and New York. Her father was the head of the banking firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co., and his daughter inherits much of her father's intellectuality. She is only 17 years old, but is a strong, athletic looking girl, with merry brown eyes and an abundance of dark-brown hair. She is more fond of horses than of Paris gowns, but her costumes are admirable in their simplicity.

ETHICS OF BOOK BORROWING.

How to Take Care of a Volume Lent You.

In spite of Polonius' fatherly injunction to Laertes, "neither a borrower nor a lender be," most of us borrow a new book now or then or receive it from the generous owner who insists upon lending it. Some people take the book carelessly, others do not rest until it is read and returned to the keeping of its proprietor.

The first thing to do with a borrowed book is to cover it with thick paper to protect the covers from accidental splashes or from fingering. Do not wait a day or so, but cover it at once as soon as you receive it. Write the name of the book plainly on the paper cover, also the owner's name. If you are one of a large family and the borrowed book is likely to be laid on a table where any one can pick it up, write on cover, "This book is not to be left on the library table," for in spite of dainty davenport arrangements the library table often means close association with an inkstand, a vinaigrette, or flower vase containing water, or some receptacle of fluid which may be accidentally overturned and spot the borrowed book.

Do not read a little in the borrowed book and put it aside while you read three or four other more interesting books. Begin it and get through with it, reading as steadily as you can until it is finished, and then return it promptly. Do not wait until Thursday or Sunday "because you will surely see the owner then;" return it at once and then it will be safely off your hands.

It is provoking to have a book borrowed and kept for an indefinite time; it prevents others who may be awaiting the book from the opportunity of enjoying it. If the borrower finds herself not likely to find time to read it, she should return it at once and ask for the privilege of borrowing it another time.

Never, never, lend to another a book that you have borrowed. Let not that piece of superficial dishonesty be laid to your charge. Never permit your pencil to make any mark or annotation in a borrowed book. If you think a date is mis-stated or any piece of information likely to be of use in collateral reading recurs to you, you are at liberty to write it on a slip of paper and to leave it in the book at the page where it belongs. No one should ever score a passage or a word in a borrowed book. This is inexcusable.

Few of us could subscribe to Charles Lamb's suggestion, advising possessors of books to be shy of showing them, but if you do lend them let it be to one who will return them "with usury enriched with annotations tripling their value."

Return a borrowed book in the condition in which it was lent, and as soon as possible.—Philadelphia Record.

bosses many a body and burdens many a mind. You can't enjoy the food you like because you are bilious. You take all sorts of precautions, and yet the bilious attack leaps on you like a tiger from ambush. You know the feeling! The blood seeming on fire with a dull heat; the boring pains in the eyes; the head seeming to open and shut; the horrible nausea. You know the irritability which precedes and the languor that follows the attack. It's miserable, isn't it? Why not cure the trouble? There's a pill that will cure biliousness. Dr. J. C. AYER'S PILLS are an acknowledged specific for this derangement.

A. Swanger, Texarkana, Tex., writes: "For fifteen years I have used Ayer's Pills, and find them very effective in bilious complaints. I have yet to see the case where they have failed to cure."

A WATCH MEETING.

Was Held New Years At The Weber Lumber Yard.

New Years night some one broke into the carpenter shop at the Weber lumber yard and built up a good fire, made abed of shavings and old coats and then watched the old year out and the new new year in. Tools of every description were scattered around, but none were taken. It is supposed that the persons who spent the night there were from Auburn, and still worse, that there was a womap in the case.

TWO LOVERS

Could Not Marry and Preferred to Die Together

A CASE OF TRUE LOVE

But the Parents Objected And Now Both Are Dead.

Monday morning, the villiage of Monroeville, was shaken to its center this morning by the discovery of the most terrible tragedy ever enacted in that part of the county. Around the case hangs a mystery that may never be explained, but the awful fact remains that two of the most popular young people in Monroe township lie cold in death, with the evidences of a violent death upon them.

Michael Miller, who, in partnership with his brother, runs a saloon in the village, and Miss Viola Marquandt, daughter of Jacob Marquandt, one of the wealthiest farmers in the county, were found this morning in the room of the former, each with a bullet hole in the temple. The evidence, so far as can be learned, point to the young woman as the last to die, and while all persons will hesitate to cloud the name of the dead girl with the stigma of crime, the authorities can not explain the circumstances as yet by any other theory than that Miller was shot by the woman, who in turn took her own life.

The dreadful discovery was made by August Miller, a brother of the young man. He was almost crazed at the dreaful sight of the room where the tragedy occurred. The cause for the deed cannot be divined. There are many theories advanced, but three of which are tenable. It is either a double murder, a double suicide, with the young woman the last to die.

Michael Miller was a well-made, goodlooking young man something over 25 years of age. For many years he been engaged in the saloon business with his brother August. He had learned the duties of a telegraph operator, at one time was in charge of the Adams station. August Miller several years ago married a daughter of Jacob Marquandt, a wealty farmer living east of Monroeville. With his wife and family he keeps house in another part of the village from the saloon. Michael took his meals with his brother, but slept in a little room in the rear of his place of business.

Miss Viola Marquandt is a sister of Mrs. August Miller, and at the time of the tragedy was supposed to be visiting at the home of her sister. For two years Michael Miller has been attentive to Miss Viola, and it was popularly supposed that they were engaged to be married.

About 7 o'clock Monday August Miller went to the saloon to open up for business. He saw indications that things were not as he left them and opened the door of his brother's room to see if he were there. The sight that met his eyes nearly destroyed his reason. On the bed at the far side of the room lay the body of his brother cold in death, his hand at his side and a bullet hole over the right ear. Blood stained the clothes and had dried in unsightly pools on the coverlid. In the middle of the floor in a huddled heap lay his sister-in-law, her head in a pool of blood which had come from a bullet wound in the right temple. She was also dead. By her side lay a 32-calibre revolver with two empty chambers.

The young man lay on the bed with his feet nearly touching the floor, his sightless eyes starting at the ceiling. His features were composed and his hands by his side seemingly relaxed at the time of his death. There is no doubt that he died instantly and without a struggle.

The girl on the floor also died instantly. There was no sign of a struggle in her case, but the muscles were drawn and it is evident that she suffered some pain before dissolution.

Both of the young people were fully dressed. In fact, Miss Marquandt had on her jacket, as if she had just entered, or was just about to leave. Her hat was found with that of her lover's just outside the door of the room.

While the coroner was making his investigation behind locked doors, Jacob Marquandt, the father of the dead girl, arrived on the scene, having been hastily summoned from his farm. He demanded immediate admittance to the room, but was told that he must wait until the coroner had finished. "I want my daughter," cried the grief stricken father. "she is mine, and I want her." Friends attempted to detain him, as the door was still locked to keep out the crowd. The old father gave one push at the door and then broke the lock like a mad man. A glance at the scene within seemed to quiet him. "Go on with your investigation," he said to the coroner, "and when you are through I want my girl."

While the investigation was in progress two letters were handed to the coroner that were found by August Miller on the end of the bar nearest the room where the tragedy occurred. One of them Jacob Marquandt said he believed was in the handwriting of his daughter. The letter follows:

January 2.

You will wonder what has induced us to do this act, but we have concluded to die together and die game. My folks are opposed to our marriage and Mike is discouraged and we will die together.

Bury us side by side.

VIOLA MARQUANDT AND MICHAEL MILLFR.

The other letter was more lengthy covering four sides of a letter sheet. It was written in a firm hand and bears no evidence of excitement on the part of the writer. It relates wholly to private family affairs not directly connected with the case. From the general tone of the letter it seems that Michael was put out with his brothers He gives a statement of his debts and speaks of property which he owns. The letter refers to recent losses of Michael's which bear out the statement made by some of his friends that he had been gambling for the last two weeks and had been unsuccessful.

After disposing of the family affairs the letter says in closing:

"One more request is all I ask, and remember to fulfill it, and that is to bury us both together. Don't listen to what other people say or think, but have this last wish carried out. Although not married, when we both die together that shows that we thought enough of each other to do it. That is all.

"J. M. MILLER."

Those who knew young Miller say that of late years he has been wild and for this reason there was some objection to his union with the girl. The opposition could not have been very strong, however, as he has been the companion of the young woman for two years.

BUTLER.

The Waterloo tragedy created no small excitement about Butler and created a brisk demand for guns. Woe to the frisky footpad that attempts to hold up the average Butlerite.

The luckless residents of the west end are beset by petty thieves, one of them had her flour stolen from her kitchen while she stepped into a neighbor's house for a brief call; another had a pile of wood taken from his door while he went up street for an hour, but the boldest and dog-gone meanest theft of them all, was that suffered by Rev. John Hammand who serves Butler circuit of the M. E. church. Mr. Hammand's friends had delivered him about twenty-five bales of hay. His barn is situated a short distance from his house. A few evenings ago two men drove up to the barn with a two horse wagon and hay rack broke the lock from the door, loaded up twenty or more bales of his hay and drove away with it. Some of the neighbors saw them and even spoke to them, not thinking for a moment but that all was right but did not in the semi-darkness notice team, wagon or men close enough to identify them.

Lizzie Champion has been seriously ill the past week at the home of her sister Mrs. J. A. Campbell.

G. T. Johns and wife formerly well known residents of Butler, later of Duluth are making an extended visit with Mrs. Johns parents, J. T. Champion and wife. Mr. Johns who was one of the youngest volunteers from Allen Co., Ind., is now an invalid. He is suffering from some nervous affection that effects his lower limbs and his speech. He seems very gratified to his old friends for calling on him and helping him to while away tedious hours.

R. C. Campbell and wife visited Chicago during the holidays.

The writer enjoyed the sights at the state capital last Sunday, Monday and part of Tuesday. The weather was delightful for winter. The dry smooth roads enabled him to enjoy several long rides on a wheel. The city is improving rapidly and has a number of buildings that would do credit to Chicago. Trade is reported as very good. The crowds on the main streets reminds one of Broadway New York on a dull day.

Miss Edith Wilson spent her vacation at Striker, Ohio.

GREATER NEW YORK.

The New Year Brings in the New Government of the Combined Cities.

No such complicated system of municipal government has ever been organized in modern times, as that which went into operation in "Greater New York" on Saturday, Jan. 1, 1898. Of course it is partly an experiment to make such a complicated and extensive machine work. But it is to be tried and will probably succeed.

There are in this greater city, two large cities, a smaller one, many villages, and the entire territory embraced is three counties and part of the two other counties. It has one mayor over all, Mr. VanWyck lately elected, being the first. The great city is divided into five boroughs, each with a president elected at the same time as the mayor over all. Each borough, has its "Board" made up of all the members of the great "Council" and "Board of Aldermen" of the greater city, who live in that borough. These are of course also members of the great city "Assembly," which has two "houses" the upper house or "Council" and the lower house, or "Board of Aldermen." The mayor is at the head of all the city government and has indirectly the controlling power everywhere. His appointees are in the majority on all the boards, such as the "Board of Public Improvements" and that of "Estimate and Apportionment" The several borough boards have to ask the Muncipal Assembly for what they want. The Municipal Assemby will agree or refuse, according to what the Board of Public Improvements says. And if that Board approves, nothing can be done, unless the other great board, that of Estimate and Apportionment will agree to furnish the money. If the two houses of the Municipal Assembly pass a common ordinance and the mayor vetoes it, they can pass it over his head by the usual two-thirds vote. But if it is an ordinance that provides for the expenditure of money, then it takes five sixths to pass it over the mayor's veto. A queer thing too, is that the ex-mayor, when they get one, will be a member of the City Council. And every president of a borough, is by law a member of the Board of Aldermen. There are many other new arrangements that will be watched with interest.

DEKALB.

Meeting closed at the Chapel.

Arthur Housel has the timer, now, girls.

Jacob Miller had a break and went to Wayne Saturday.

James Monroe is on our streets again for a few days.

Mr. Gorman's daughter is here visiting from Wells Co.

Dick Jackson has gone up to work for his brother, north of Garrett.

John Terry of Cincinnati, Ohio, gave his brother Dan a visit last week. John is a policeman.

Wm. Shilling will build a new barn in the spring. John Dove will do the carpenter work.

Frank Pence and Theron Griffin went up to Auburn Friday.

NOT FOR EVERYTHING

But if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, you will find Swamp-Root just the remedy you need. People are not apt to get anxious about their health soon enough. If you are "not quite well" or "half sick" have you ever thought that your kidneys may be the cause of your sickness?

It is easy to tell by setting aside your urine for twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder need doctoring.

There is satisfaction in knowing that the great remedy Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, fulfills every wish in relieving weak or diseased kidneys and all forms of bladder and urinary troubles. Not only does Swamp-Root give new life and activity to the kidneys—the cause of trouble, but by treating the kidneys it acts as a tonic for the entire constitution. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar, or by mentioning Auburn Courier and sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton New York you may have a sample bottle of this great discovery sent to you free by mail.

OH! I SAY:

have you given Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a trial? It will cure you of your constipation, will correct your stomach troubles and make your life werth living. Trial size bottles 10c, (10 doses 10c) large sizes 50c and $1.00, of F. E Davenport.

COURT

A good deal of minor criminal work has been called up and disposed of. The assault and battery case against Cora Ross has been dismissed and as we understand it, will have to go back to the justice who first tackled it. The charges of perjury against John Murray and Sherman Kepler, have been dropped, also the case for criminal assault brought against Jacob Helms. Sentence was suspended in case of the boys who broke into Snell's grocery. The case of burglary against Harry Martin and others was called up, but not completed. Jesse M. Covington was given 35 days in jail on a charge of petit larceny. Frank Pence was fined $1 and costs for assault and battery. He had "assualted" Mr. Griffin who used to reside here. Thomas Kingsley had a case against him of petit larceny and was under bond to come into court and face it. But he preferred to stay away and gave no reason. Hence his bond was declared forfeited and some one will have to drop some money into the public till. Yesterday the jury had a pretty warm case of petit larceny to listen to. Frank Depew had charged Emanel Swander, with stealing a lot of wood belonging to Depew, but piled up in the Levin Lockwood woods. Depew claims that he missed 35 cords, but puts only 1½ cords into the indictment as he had taken pains to mark some of the sticks in that much. He marked them with a cross, and afterwards found some sticks that had similar marks at a house in Garrett, where Swander had sold some wood. A few of these marked sticks were in court as evidence. But Swander whatore he had marked some of his own wood, some with a cross and some with a single mark, as he had two different men cut wood for him. It also appears that the wood lots joined. The attorneys for the state were Prosecutor Rhoads assisted by J. E. Pomeroy, who is the deputy here. For Swander, were Mr. Sharpless, of Garrett and D. M. Link, of Auburn. Both sides made their pleas at the evening session, and did well for young men. Then Judge Roby charged the jury. He said petty larceny, where the amount stolen did not exceed $25, meant a term in the pen of not over 3 years; or, it might be punished by not over one year in jail. There was a fine and disfranchisement in either case. They were directed to to bring in a sealed verdict at 9, this forenoon.

WEDNESDAY.

At the opening of court this morning, the jury brought in a verdict that acquitted Swander. They did not consider the proof against him was sufficient to convict him of stealing the wood.

People generally seem glad that the man who killed Cox at Waterloo is dead. It may have been hard to prove his guilt as he showed no diposition to confess. He denied being at Waterloo. He said he got onto the B. & O. at Deshler, Ohio, and was shot by tramps at Elkhart. This of course did not agree with the fact that he get off the B. & O. at South Chicago. Mr. Speer, of Waterloo, says they had some evidence against him. It seems that evening three tramps stopped at a house just west of town and stole some grain sacks and a piece of clothes line. It was a part of these, that was left at the barn where they stole the horse, and used pieces of the sack to bind up the wounded leg after the fight. These pieces were kept. And earlier, they had stopped at stopped at Sedan and got an old tea pot of Mrs. W. H. Crane. This is the article they fixed up for the dark lantern that was dropped on the scene of the shooting. Mrs. Crane feels sure she could have identified all the men.

As we go to press the incest case from St. Joe is on.

Later, the Chorpening girl was sent to the reform school for three years.

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE.

Thursday's Daily.

—W. B. Rohm was a welcome caller to-day.

One Minute Cough Cure cures quickly. That's what you want. H. B. McCord sells it.

—The little poem we print today is by Rev L. C. Littell, who was in charge of the Waterloo Presbyterian church in 1868-71. Many of our people know him.

—Prosperity comes quickest to the man whose liver is in good condition. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are famous little pills for constipation, biliousness, indigestion and all stomach and liver troubles. H. B. McCord sells them.

—Prominent people should remember that their examples are liable to be followed. We saw a man hit another a deadly "swat" on the head today, because the other called him a liar. He was bound to keep up with the fashion.

—J. A. Perkins, of Antiquity, O., was for thirty years needlessly tortured by physicians for the cure of eczema. He was quickly cured by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the famous healing salve for piles and skin diseases. H. B. McCord sell them.

—A new electric light pole is being put up at the south end of Jackson-st to take the place of the very high pole at that point which has been causing some trouble and is believed to be in danger of going over.

—Mrs. M. B. Ford, Ruddell's, Ill., suffered eight years from dyspepsia and chronic constipation and was finally cured by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills for all stomach and liver troubles. For Sale by H. B. McCord —Our old friend Ed Morell, of Wolcottville, was a welcome caller today. He had been here several days helping to make some arrangements at the Junction Foundry. His son John who had been here for several days went home yesterday.

—Mrs. Stark, Pleasant Ridge, O., says "After two doctors gave up my boy to die, I saved him from croup by using One Minute Cough Cure." It is the quickest and most certain remedy for coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—The Ft. Wayne Journal should keep an eye on its Auburn correspondent. A few days ago, its dispatch from here said "Mrs. A. H. Barns was married to Price D. West." It should have been "Mrs. Mary Barnes." Mrs. A. H. B. was married many years ago, to the most popular newspaper man in the state. (Ahem!)

—Miss Allie Hughes, Norfolk, Va., was frightfully burned on the face and neck. Pain was instantly relieved by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which healed the injury without leaving a scar. It is the famous pile remedy. By H. B. McCord.

Friday's Daily.

—Mrs. Silas man and Mrs. McNabb, of Butler are the guests of their Uncle L. J. Miller, came over this morning.

—Our young friend A. C. Liens, of Corunna was in today and added his name to the list of new subscribers to the COURIER.

—Mrs. Mary Bird, Harrisburg, Pa., says "My child is worth millions to me; yet I would have lost her by croup had I not invested twenty-five cents in a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." It cures coughs, colds, and all throat and lung troubles For sale by H. B. McCord.

—Mr. Ella Nelson, of Butler, Mrs. W. F. Starks and daughter of Millersburg, are spending New Years with the family of John Turner

—Dr. W. H. Nusbuaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—It is easy to catch a cold and just as easy to get rid of it if you commence early to use One Minute Cough Cure. It cures coughs, colds, bronchitis pneumonia and all throat and lung troubles. It is pleasant to take, safe to use and sure to cure. For sale by H. B. McCord Auburn.

—Miss Della Weaver is assisting in the auditors office a few days while Mr. Boland is helping to make the annual invoice in the hardware store.

—Walter Hartman and Art Steel took a farewell quail hunt yesterday, and got 30 birds and four rabbits. The time expires today for getting quail, but they think the law is working well as there will likely be more quails next year than this.

—Bucklen's Arnica Salve.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum. fever sores tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay repuired. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For ale by Robbins & McCord. tf

—We heard Master Ralph Brown, telling his companions yesterday, what evidence the officers had, that Charles Thompson, was the murder of Nightwatchman Cox. One thing, he said was that he had begged an old tea pot, from a lady from which he made a "search light" and this was found near where the battle was fought. Ralph hasn't got over the excitement of the Auburn Carnival yet.

—Alva Brandon is nearly recovered from the terrible accident in which he was so burned by being caught against the boiler of the traction engine. The only unhealed part is on his left hand and its little finger. The finger is so bent and injured that it can never be used and will have to be taken off. But he is lucky that he got off with his life.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

A Clean Sweep

A renovation in winter stock is even more necessary than a change in politics. There never was, and never will be, more need for heavy raiment than exists at present; and never was, nor can be, more of a disposition on our part to clean out.

Now For It.....

Its quite probable that the only way most of us will ever make money is by saving it. Unless chances are presented for doing that, the barrel gets empty and the cruse runs dry.

Thursday's Daily.

—W. B. Rohm was a welcome caller to-day.

One Minute Cough Cure cures quickly. That's what you want. H. B. McCord sells it.

—The little poem we print today is by Rev L. C. Littell, who was in charge of the Waterloo Presbyterian church in 1868-71. Many of our people know him.

—Prosperity comes quickest to the man whose liver is in good condition. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are famous little pills for constipation, biliousness, indigestion and all stomach and liver troubles. H. B. McCord sells.

—Prominent people should remember that their examples are liable to be followed. We saw a man hit another a deadly "swat" on the head today because the other called him a liar. He was bound to keep up with the fashion.

—J. A. Perkins, of Antiquity, O., was for thirty years needlessly tortured by physicians for the cure of eczema. He was quickly cured by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the famous healing salve for piles and skin diseases. H. B. McCord sell them.

—A new electric light pole is being put up at the south end of Jackson-st to take the place of the very high pole at that point which has been causing some trouble and is believed to be in danger of going over.

—Mrs. M. B. Ford, Ruddell's, Ill., suffered eight years from dyspepsia and chronic constipation and was happily cured by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills for all stomach and liver troubles. For Sale by H. B. McCord —Our old friend Ed Morell, of Volcotville, was a welcome caller today. He had been here several days hoping to make some arrangements at the Junction Foundry. His son John, who had been here for several days, went home yesterday.

—Mrs. Stark, Pleasant Ridge, O., says "After two doctors gave up my baby to die, I saved him from croup by using One Minute Cough Cure." It is the quickest and most certain remedy for coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—The Ft. Wayne Journal would keep an eye on its Auburn correspondent. A few days ago, its dispatch from here said "Mrs. A. H. Barnes was married to Price D. West." It should have been "Mrs. Mary Barnes." Mrs. A. H. B. was married many years ago, to the most popular newspaper man in the state. (Ahem!)

—Miss Allie Hughes, Norfolk, Va., was frightfully burned on the face and neck Pain was instantly relieved by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which healed the injury without leaving a scar. It is the famous pile remedy. By H. B. McCord.

Friday's Daily.

—Mrs. Stutsman and Mrs. Mattabb, of Butler are the guests of their uncle L. J. Miller, came over this morning.

—Our youdg friend A. C. Lines, of Corunna was in today and added his name to the list of new subscribers to the COURIER.

—Mrs. Mary Bird, Harrisburg, Pa., says "My child is worth millions to me yet I would have lost her by croup had I not invested twenty-five cents in a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." It cures coughs, colds, and all throat and lung troubles For sale by H. B. McCord.

—Mr. Ella Nelson, of Butler, Mrs. W. F. Starks and daughter of Millersburg, are spending New Years with the family of John Turner.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbuaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—It is easy to catch a cold and just as easy to get rid of it if you commence early to use One Minute Cough Cure. It cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia and all throat and lung troubles. It is pleasant to take, safe to use and sure to cure. For sale by H. B. McCord Auburn.

—Miss Della Weaver is assisting in the auditors office a few day, while Mr. Boland is helping to make the annual invoice in the hardware store.

—Walter Hartman and Art Steel took a farewell quail hunt yesterday, and got 30 birds and four rabbits. The time expires today for getting quail, but they think the law is working well as there will likely be more quail next year than this.

—Bucklen's Arnica Salve.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum. fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay repuired. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For ale by Robbins & McCord. tf

—We heard Master Ralph Brown, telling his companions yesterday what evidence the officers had, that Charles Thompson, was the murder of Night-watchman Cox. One thing he said was that he had begged an old iron pot, from a lady from which he made a "search light" and this was found near where the battle was fought. Ralph hasn't got over the excitement of the Auburn Carnival yet.

—Alva Brandon is nearly recovered from the terrible accident in which he was so burned by being caught against the boiler of the traction engine. The only unhealed part is on his left hand and its little finger. The finger is so bent and injured that it can never be used and will have to be taken off. But he is lucky that he got off with his life.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. 25c.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES

One pound of sheep's wool is capable of producing one yard of cloth.

A doctor asserts that the growth of young children takes place when they are asleep.

No beer is allowed to leave the best German breweries until after it has been made three months.

Arkansas has a town named Credit, Iowa one named What Cheer, and Florida one called Hurrah.

A toboggan slide in St. Moritz, Switzerland, is three-quarters of a mile long. The descent is made in seventy-one seconds.

The longest reign on record occurs in the history of France—that of Louis XIV.—which lasted seventy-two years, from 1643 to 1715.

In Germany all employers are obliged to insure their employes, even when the employment is temporary and unpaid.

All birds when perched on trees or bushes serve as weathercocks, as they invariably arrange themselves with their heads to the wind.

Teapots are used in China only by the poor. Among the wealthy it is customary to put the tea leaves in each cup and pour water on them.

It is noted that the women of the royal families of Europe are, on the average, much stronger mentally and physically than the men.

Artificial legs and arms were in use in Egypt as early as B. C. 700. They were made by the priests, who were the physicians at that early time.

Pneumatic boxing gloves are an improvement over the old style, as they can be made hard or soft by forcing air into their backs through a valve in the wrist.

The little island of St. Helena is said to be the smallest diocese in the world. There is a Bishop, Dr. Thomas Welby, whose annual salary amounts to only $900. There are also three clergymen.

A young man began work in a Kansas City hardware store a few years ago who was supposed to be in the last stages of consumption. He now explains that his robust condition is due to the iron absorbed into his system in minute particles from handling the goods.

It may not be generally known that when a person falls into the water a common felt hat may be made use of as a life-preserver, and by placing the hat upon the water brim down, with the arm round it pressing it slightly to the breast, it will bear a man up for hours.

It is said that in France there is an international band of bicycle thieves, who have warehouses for the storage and sale of machines in all the large towns of Europe. A bicycle stolen in one country is sent to another, and the police are never able to recover it.

In the sixteenth century the average length of a doctor's life was thirty-six years and five months, in the seventeenth century it was forty-five years and eight months, in the eighteenth century forty-nine years and eight months, and in the nineteenth century, fifty-six years and seven months.

Pope Leo made eight hogsheads of wine this year from the vineyard he had set out in the Vatican gardens. A small part of the wine is reserved for his own use, another portion is sent to churches to be used at mass, and the rest is sold. The Pope is proud of the profits of his agricultural enterprise, and intends to plant more vines in the Vatican and at Castel Gandolfo.

Some of the comic actors of Italy sometimes amuse their patrons by exploiting the syllable "oh." Out of a word that is only a single vowel sound they can create surprising effects by a trick of articulation, varying the key, volume, accent, length, emphasis, and accompanying manner and facial expression through the whole gamut of different meanings.

Beggar Who Revels in Luxury.

John Wadleigh, better known as "the king of beggars," has returned to this city after an absence of over a year. He arrived a few days ago with his wife and family to seek pastures new among the charitably inclined, but as his true character is well known he may not reap the amount he did on his last visit. Wadleigh and his wife have been in the habit of traveling from place to place and by their plausible tales of want and suffering have succeeded in gaining a living without much exertion. The title of king was given to him by his class owing to his great ability as a beggar. It is said by those who know that his earnings on his last visit amounted to nearly $200 a month.

The "king" is in the habit of occupying nicely furnished flats and enjoying the comforts of home life. At his leisure he follows the races with varying success, and is also addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors. His wife, Irene, is a little woman, with a sweet face, and has an air of worldly ignorance about her which leads people to listen to her story, and often moves them to assist her. It is her scheme to obtain donations of furniture, bedding, provisions, etc., from as many people as she can, and then dispose of the same at the highest price she can receive for cash. The last time these unworthy alms seekers were here they played on the sympathies of the various charitable organizations with great success until they were shown to be impostors. —San Francisco Call.

Not in the Egg Line.

In the polyglot dialect, "Yiddish," spoken by the aliens of the East End, London, there is a word which most humorously illustrates the tendency of people to take things for granted without using their own observation.

These foreigners call their Irish neighbors of Whitechapel and St. George's by the term "Beitzemers," which is the ((classical) Hebrew noun for "egg-merchants." Now, as a matter of fact, very few, if any, of the Irish in these districts are in this trade at all, being generally tailors, laborers, and the like.

The word arose thus: About sixty years ago, an imaginative German immigrant judged it right to spell the term "Eirishmen" in a letter home to some of his compatriots. "Eier" is the German for eggs, and it was naturally assumed that these unknown people were somehow connected with the egg trade.

The Yiddish-speaking fraternity abroad (who use German and Hebrew indifferently) substituted the ancient word "Beitzemers" in place of the uncouth German hybrid "Eirishmen," thinking that it sounded better and more euphonious.

So the singularly inapplicable name grew to be the popular one among London Jews, and no one thinks of pointing out and correcting the blunder.

HERRMANN'S SHOOTING TRICK.

It Is Easily Done When You Know How.

Any trick is simple when the way to do it is known, and there are several ways of doing most tricks. A famous French magician used to do the shooting trick by means of a gun which was loaded with a bullet, and fired a blank, or performed some other similarly unusual antic; but Herrmann the conjurer allowed six soldiers to fire at him once, and to use the guns that were furnished to them by the State. The soldiers were all in the secret, however.

Herrmann brought out in a little ornamental case the cartridges that were to be used, and showed them to the audience, allowing any one who chose to mark one or more for identification. The ornamental case had a slide in it, and, on his way back to the stage Herrmann opened the slide, and the ball cartridges were thereby concealed, while the same number of blank cartridges were revealed, but only to the soldiers, who loaded their guns with them.

Herrman then went to the side of the stage and gave the case to his attendant. The attendant quickly put each of the cartridges into a vice, wrenched out the bullets, and heated them over a lamp. While this was going on Herrmann was talking to the audience, and the soldiers were marching about the stage and getting into position.

Then Herrmann went to the wing to get the plate to catch the bullets in. He received the bullets at the same time. As soon as he had these he knew that his life was out of danger, for he could not get them till they were drawn from the cartridges.

Then he held the plate before him, the soldiers fired, and under cover of the smoke, it was easy for him to put the bullets into the plate and have them ready to bring down to the audience still hot, for examination and identification.

Corncob Pipes and Ti-Ti Stems.

The manufacture of corncob pipes has become a considerable industry at Beaufort, S. C. Special machinery has been made for the purpose, and an expert turner is employed to carve out the bowels, which are of many designs. The cobs are of a particular corn grown in the Mississippi Valley, and are transported to South Carolina by the carload. The cobs have to be seasoned for two or three years before they are used. The supply of cane stems, which is obtained from the cane brakes along the Port Royal Railroad, in lots of 60,000 stems, capable of being cut into three length, also employs much labor in the country, to select and gather them. A new and attractive feature of some of these pipes is the ti-ti stem.

The ti-ti is a shrub, the botanical name of which is "Cliftonia Ligustrina." It grows up in a long straight, pointless stem, with a soft center pith, and of various circumferences, from the size of an ordinary pipe stem to that of the little finger. It has enjoyed the reputation, from the aborigines and among Southern planters and others, who have ever used it in preference to any other, not excepting the cherry or fig stem, of best absorbing the nicotine and affording a grateful and fragrant taste.—Savannah News.

Declined to Join the Band.

The following is an exact copy of a letter received by a Syracuse young lady who, possessing a piano and being about to remove to a small country town, advertised for room and board with a family "musically inclined": Deare Miss, we think we kin sut you with room and bord, if you prefer to be where there is musick. I play the fiddel, my wife the orgin, my dotter Jule the akordion, my other dotter the bango, my son Hen the gittar, my son John the floot and koronet, an' my son Clem the base drum, and all of us sings Gospel hims in which we would be glad to have you take part both vocal or instrumental if you play on anything. We play by ear an' when we all git started there is real musick in the air. Let us know if you want to come here to bord."—New York Evening Post.

Full Particulars.

Says a Philadelphia marriage license clerk: "Probably 50 per cent. of those who come to us for licenses to marry imagine that before they can get the necessary permit they will be compelled to tell all their family secrets. One man who came in one day last spring was actually prepared to undergo a physical examination to prove that his heart and lungs were all right. We made out a license last week for a young fellow who had prepared with some pains evidently the following history of his bride, which he left with us: 'Miss ——, aged 28, in Phil. eight years, father and mother Both Living Willing grandfather and mother Both dead. Mother 55 yrs old father 65 yrs old grandfather 76 when he died grandmother died when father was 18 yrs old all from delaware Sussex Co.'"

POLITICS OF THE DAY

READY FOR THE BATTLE.

The Democratic managers intend to inaugurate the Congressional campaign at an early day, says Senator Jones, national commander of the allied forces of Democracy. While the Republicans are quarreling and fighting among themselves over Cuba, the money question and civil service reform, the Democrats are ready to make a determined effort to capture the next House. The reports received from all parts of the country are of the most encouraging character.

According to these reports, the Democrats are practically certain to gain eight seats in Illinois, seven in Indiana, five in Iowa, four in Kentucky, five in Maryland, seven in Michigan, four in Minnesota, twelve in New York, six in Ohio, five in Pennsylvania and two in West Virginia.

This makes a total gain of sixty-three and it is not expected that the Republicans will gain more than four seats, making the next Democratic gain sixty. According to these figures, the next House would stand: Republicans, 171; opposition, 186. It is not doubted that the Populists and the silver Republicans will act with the Democrats in the next Congress. In organizing the House the Democrats would be allowed to name the three principal officers and the chairmen of all the important committees, while none of the House officers and a number of the less important chairmanships would be given to the Populists and silver Republicans.

"So far as the State of Kentucky is concerned," says Representative David Highbaugh Smith, of Hodgensville, Larue County, "the Republicans have had their day in court down there and have shown themselves to be unworthy of public confidence. The administration of Governor Bradley is so disastrous a failure as to amount almost to a disgrace. The men who have been sent to Washington by the Kentucky Republicans during their lease of power have not made a favorable impression on the country. The old Commonwealth is back again in the Democratic column, and there it is likely to stay. At the next election for members of Congress the Democrats will carry every district except the eleventh and the delegation in the next House will consists of ten Democrats and one Republican. Silver will be the battle cry all along the line. The platform will be the same in every district. It will be such that there will be no need for fusion. The candidacies in various districts will be distributed among the Democrats, Populists and Silver Republicans, according to the vote polled in 1896.

Gold Standard Blindness.

Like all other champions of the old standard the Chicago Times-Herald assumes that if a farmer only succeeds in paying his debts, it is proof positive of his prosperity, and further that he ought to be supremely happy. It overlooks the circumstance that when may and do pay debts under great disadvantages. A man may have a mortgage on his farm. Grasshoppers may come and destroy a crop; drouth may come and ruin another; his barn may be overturned in a cyclone, his house be consumed by fire, sickness and death may invade his family circle. Still, by almost superhuman efforts and by denying himself and his loved ones many things which they need, he may at last pay the mortgage. But would this prove that the grasshoppers, the drouth, the cyclone, the fire and the sickness and death were blessings and helped him to do it? According to the Times-Herald's philosophy, yes. The mortgagee might surreptitiously change a $1,000 mortgage into one of $2,000. The farmer might succeed in paying it, but would that make the act of changing the figures any less a crime or a disadvantage to the man who is compelled to pay $2,000 when he only agreed to pay $1,000? No matter that robbery and extortion are practiced upon the debtor, it is all right so long as he succeeds in paying. That is the infallible gold standard proof.

National and Individual Footpads.

When a man with a gun robs a defenseless man on the street he is called a footpad, and we send him to the penitentiary. If we can catch him. When a man with many guns robs a defenseless country of its property and civil rights we call that diplomacy, sometimes; statesmanship sometimes and sometimes war. The moral element is about the same in both cases, or little in favor of the footpad, who takes his chances, while his august executor takes none.—Louisville Times.

One Way to Wipe Out Deficits.

We observe that quite a number of moral Republican editors are pointing with pride to the gratifying increase in the internal revenue receipts. An impetus can be given to the general drunkenness of the country and the old Republican party will be revived from the hole in the treasury and the ship of state will avoid the rocks.

Will Not Down.

With a yawning chasm between receipts and expenditures, with protection in abundance and revenue in negative quantity the Republicans say they want the tariff let alone for ten years. No doubt, but the people who pay these taxes do not propose to let it alone. "Maw, make Bill keep quiet; every time I hit him with the hammer he hollers."

As the Republicans Reason.

Wonderful is the logic of Republicanism. According to this system the Wilson bill brought about a deficit of $70,000,000 fourteen months before it was passed, and now it has brought about a deficit of $46,000,000 five months after it has been repealed.

Political Pointers.

We now have government by banks.

Secretary Gage wants prosperity for the bankers only.

Is there a Democratic club in your vicinity? If not, why not? The work of organization is going on everywhere.

If every Democrat puts his shoulder to the wheel 1898 will be a great year for the people.

Do you belong to a silver club? If not, why not? The battle of your prosperity can never be won without your aid.

In the Congressional campaigns every Democratic candidate for Congress must stand on a platform that indorses the Chicago platform in every particular, as well as the financial issue.

Do not allow a goldbug into any Democratic club with which you are connected. Point to the fact that a man cannot be a Democrat and an advocate of the British gold standard at one and the same time.

Are there any gold bugs in your vicinity? Find out who they are and all about them. As such they have no business to meddle in Democratic politics. They belong in the Republican party.

If you see an article in this paper that contains any points that would in your opinion remove doubt from the mind of a Republican neighbor please send him a marked copy. The great majority of Republicans are honest and only need to read the truth honestly told.

It is the duty of every Democrat to make a personal neighbor-to-neighbor campaign in behalf of the Democratic platform. Work among Republicans who are disappointed at the action of the administration in slumping to the gold standard. Honest Republicans will be glad to listen to you.

Says State Senator Burley (Rep.) of West Virginia: "The Republicans of our State are almost equally divided on the silver issue. We cannot go before the people with a gold basis platform, and at the same time hope for success at the polls." Mr. Burley is not only a Republican, but is also an advocate of the gold standard."

THE SOLDIER ABROAD.

The Private Is Seldom Seen in the Main Streets of German Cities.

The private soldier is seldom seen in any of the leading thoroughfares of the streets of the large German cities, observed a recently returned military gentleman, to a reporter, not, however, because he would not like to be seen there, but because it is quite a job for him should he show up in a crowded street. In Europe it is different from this country, for military officers have to wear their uniforms constantly. Indeed, many of them have no other clothing. In this country it is extremely rare to see an officer in uniform, and never unless he is going or returning from some function where the uniform is necessary, and which, as I say, is very, very rare. There are in all of the large cities and towns of Germany hundreds and hundreds of officers. It is an imperative duty of the soldier to formally salute every time one passes, even if the same officer passes him five or ten times in an hour. The private soldier generally takes a side street, so as to avoid meeting officers, for saluting every five minutes in a day, and sometimes oftener, which would be the case should he travel in the principal streets, gets to be tiresome after it is observed for three or four hours. The soldier is nearly always loyal, and takes a pride in saluting his superior officers, but there is often too much of a good thing in military life, as there is in other walks of life. Even in the side streets he has considerable saluting to do, but nothing in comparison with what he would have to do should he venture on the largely traveled streets. The officers are very particular in insisting on salutes, and should a soldier attempt to pass them without doing military honors, on the excuse that he did not see the officer, the result would be somewhat serious to him.

To Awaken Sleepyheads.

For the benefit of the sluggard who finds it impossible to awake betimes, some ingenious contrivances have been produced by inventors. There is a kind of bedstead, for example, which holds its mattress in a frame that is retained in the normal position by a catch. At the proper hour the catch, operated by a clockwork mechanism, loses its grip and the mattress frame becomes vertical instead of horizontal, throwing sleepyhead out upon the floor. Another bed lets the head of the sleepy person drop when getting-up time arrives, one end of the mattress frame collapsing. But one of the queerest of the patented methods of waking people up involves the employment of a tin pan and a weight hung by a cord. When the hands of a clock reach a certain point, the weight is released and falls upon the pan, making a direful racket. Another oddity is a frame from which are suspended a number of corks. During the night it is lowered gradually by a clockwork mechanism until at the proper hour and minute the dangling corks begin to bob against the nose and face of the sleeper. Of course he promptly wakes up.

Drinking Oysters.

It may sound odd to speak of "drinking" oysters. One would assume their opportunity to quench their thirst was fairly good, but oysters must be "drinked," "drank' 'or "watered"—as oystermen say—before they are fit for market. The "drinking" process is simply a matter of fattening, or, to be more truthful, inflating.

When oysters are "raised" (taken from the beds to the air) they are dumped aboard of the sloops, and when a load is obtained the sloop sails for some fresh water stream. At the mouth of these streams are floats into which the oysters are dumped at full tide. As the tide ebbs, and the fresh water from the stream gradually freshens the water in the floats, the oyster opens. He appears to be drinking, but instead is simply allowing the fresh water to wash out the salt. When this is completed the oyster closes. The fresh water causes it to swell, sometimes till the shell gapes open. Thus the oyster becomes plump, and when opened looks fat and fit.

STYLES IN TRIMMING.

SKETCHES OF A HALF-DOZEN STYLISH GARMENTS.

Bodices Are Lace Trimmed—Blouse Waists Continue to Come, but in New Designs—Prompt Revival of a Recent Fashion.

Dame Fashion's Dictates.

New York correspondence:

REAL lace is very seriously mistreated by the way fashionable women interpret the current styles. It is made up with hand embroidery into bibs and yokes, and in being thus disposed the lace and embroidery are cut shamefully, the idea being to display at once needlework, design, lace and embroidery.

But there is almost no need for this slaughter of fine nets. Very pretty fronts can be made—at home, if you like—without resorting to such foolishness. The one seen on the first pictured blouse was highly ornamental, yet it was embroidered white chiffon over white satin. Combined with other simple trimming it made a very pretty blouse of what was really a most unpretentious garment. The dress goods was merely a dark blue serge, the scalloped edges of revers, epaulettes and bodice were finished with black silk ribbon, and black braid ornaments appeared on the fronts.

Almost as strongly flavored with extravagance is the current trick for trimming fine gowns with white satin that is banded with rows of narrow black velvet. Inside lapels are set on over jacket lapels, cuffs being made to match. A narrow fold of white satin follows the edge of the jacket where it opens down the front to the belt, and this fold is barred with little lines of narrow black velvet ribbon, each bar ending in a loop of the ribbon. Panels are let in, glimpses of fronts show this black and white effect, and hats are also trimmed with black-banded white satin. Now and then other combinations are used. An example of this method of trimming was sketched in the second picture, though it was typical only in the nature of the trimming, whose design was silver gray velvet. It was close fitting, and the mauve bands were spangled richly with gold. The bands crossing the bust served as heading for a fall of rich lace that reached to the waist. Yoke and collar were also of the spangled stuff, and lace and velvet both plain and spangled were tastefully combined in the sleeves.

Blouse waists keep coming in new designs, despite the big number of them that have already appeared. The Russian models have been passed by the procession long ago. They are seen in plenty and are all right out of doors, but it is too late to plan new garments of that cut. Indoors more elaborateness is wanted, and women are getting it, too, with variety as a highly desirable side issue. The ingenuity of designers of the bolero era is being equalled now, and the blouse is a better medium for showing it off than the bolero was. Though a half dozen blouses can but feebly express the current range of blouse waists and effects, yet there is considerable variety in the accompanying pictures. In the second one the blouse suggestion is but faint, coming in a fall of lace that masks a tight bodice, while in others the bodice itself bags above the belt all around.

It is pronounced in the three models that are grouped. That at the left was made of scarlet satin. It had a plain scarlet yoke, but the collar was embroidered with black chenille. Other bands of the embroidery outlined the yoke, ran from yoke to hem of dress skirt with the princess pretence now so popular, and gave belt and cuffs. Below the yoke the plain scarlet material was arranged in deep pleats that overhung the belt. The blouse next to this was dark red cloth, and the trimming on shoulders, revers and fronts—also on skirt yoke—was a vermicelli pattern of embroidery done in black silk braid. Black cord frogs were placed below the revers. On the last of these three blouses there were a black satin vest and an inserted satin panel at each side. Between waist and bust were several round-and-round bands of black and gold braid. The skirt to accompany this blouse was cut high enough to give the belt, and was trimmed at hips and hem to match the blouse.

PROMPT IN REVIVAL.

Silk blouses beneath boleros were many in the days when two bodices out of every three had a bolero or a counterfeit of one. This period was so recent that, now these blouses are returning, they are not strongly marked with the characteristics of new fashions, and unless made up richly are not as attractive as newer forms of the blouse. But here is one in the concluding picture that was swagger enough. The blouse itself was made of white gros grain and hung with even fulness over the belt at sides and back. It had a panel covered with heavy black lace, and was finished with a collar to match. Over this came a bolero of white velvet striped with pale green, and the two together made a very dressy bodice.

Not Tall Enough.

Just at the time when vague reports were beginning to creep abroad that Germany was meditating fresh extension of her frontier at the expense of Holland, a Dutch official of high rank happened to be visiting the court of Berlin, and among other spectacles got up to amuse him a review was organized at Potsdam.

"What does your excellency think of our soldiers?" asked Prince Bismarck, as one of the regiments came marching past in admirable order.

"They look as if they knew how to fight," replied the visitor gravely, "but they are not quite tall enough."

The prince looked rather surprised, but made no answer, and several other regiments filed past in succession; but the Dutchman's verdict upon each was still the same: "Not tall enough."

At length the grenadiers of the guard made their appearance—a magnificent body of veterans, big and stalwart enough to have satisfied even the giant-loving father of Frederick the Great; but the inexorable critic merely said: "Fine soldiers, but not tall enough."

Then Prince Bismarck rejoined: "These grenadiers are the finest men in our whole army; may I ask what your excellency is pleased to mean by saying that they are not tall enough?"

The Dutchman looked him full in the face, and replied with significant emphasis: "I mean that we can flood our country twelve feet deep."—London Tid-Bits.

Stealing English Rifles.

Some surprise has been expressed at the number of Lee-Metford and Martini rifles in the possession of the rebellious tribes of the northwest frontier of India. The Globe points out that our troops lose about fifty rifles yearly stolen by the Afridis. I was talking the other day with an old sergeant major who has spent many years in India, and he told me that, in spite of double sentries and the soldiers sleeping with their carbines under their pillows, his regiment was continually losing weapons while on the frontier, the natives creeping in during the night, stark naked, and with bodies so covered with grease that when one was detected it was almost impossible to hold him. If an unfortunate soldier stirred while his carbine was being abstracted, a blow from a keen knife effectually quieted him.—London Sketch.

A new invention for preventing vessels from sinking after being damaged by collision has been exhibited in London recently before a number of shipping experts. An iron model of a cargo ship was placed in water, after having been loaded with bricks. Then a hole, immense in size compared with the miniature vessel, was opened at the side. When the water had risen to a level with the deck a number of gutta bags fixed under the deck were inflated with carbonic acid gas and the vessel almost immediately began to rise.

Swiss Mountain Railways.

Only twenty-six years have elapsed since the railway was built up the Rigi, and to-day Switzerland has forty-six mountain railroads. The most popular of them at present is that up the Wengern Alp, from Interlaken, via Lauterbrunnen or Grindelwald. A few years ago there were only a few hotels near Wengern; this summer seven hundred guests jostled each other in the new hotels, while some of the other resorts complained of a lack of tourists. The Wengren Alp owes its present vogue not only to the wonderful view it affords of the Jungfrau snow-fields and frequent avalanches, but to the fact that it is the starting-point of the much-discussed Jungfrau railway, the length of which, from the Scheidegg, is conveniently reduced to six thousand feet. The motive power will be electricity, and the tunneling also will be done with electric power. The total expenses are estimated at $2,000,000.

A THRILLING BUFFALO YARN.

How the Old-Timer Saved Himself from a Stampeded Herd.

"I was huntin' buffalo down Medicine Valley, Kansas, along in the '70s," says the old plainsman. "The country was just alive with the critters, and I was knockin' 'em right and left, when all at once somethin' started a stampede, and three or four million buffalo came rushing down the valley, just makin' the ground shake as they came. I seen at once that I would have to get out of there or be run over, but my pony was all fagged out, and the herd kept gaining on him at every jump. I saw that them buffalo was goin' to run that pony down, and that something had to be done, and done quick. Well, sir, I seen that there was just one thing to do; I waited till the head buffalo was right on my pony's flank, and then I made a jump on that buffalo's hump.

"Then, sir, I just went jumpin' from the back of one buffalo to another and shootin' as I went—thought, maybe, you know, that I could scatter the herd and get a chance to get down on the ground. Well, sir, when I struck the rear of that stampede I was only a mile from home. I went out the next day and measured the distance from where I jumped, and found I had traveled on the backs of buffalo for six miles and a quarter. I'll tell you honestly, I think it was a little the closest shave I ever had."

Farmer's Handy Feed Cooker.

We desire to call our readers' attention to the Farmer's Handy Feed Cooker, which is sold at the low price of $12.50 for 50-gallon capacity.

By feeding poultry and stock with cooked food during the winter months, at least one-third of the food is saved; also having stock in a healthy condition, preventing hog cholera among your hogs, and insuring the hens laying freely during the winter months when eggs are always wanted at high prices. This Cooker will pay for itself in one week's time and is without doubt the best and cheapest on the market—just what its name implies, a Farmer's Handy Feed Cooker. Upon application to the Empire Manufacturing Co., 614 H street, Quincy, Ill., a catalogue, giving a full description, may be obtained. They are made in all sizes.

First Book in English.

So far as known, the first book ever written in English was a poem—A Paraphrase, as it was called—of the creation, the war in heaven, and of the fall of Satan, about the year 657. The author was Caedmon, a convert from paganism to Christianity. After the Norman conquest there seem to have been no books written in English until the reign of King John, which began in 1196. During this reign Layamon, a priest of Worcestershire, wrote a remarkable poem of 32,250 lines, called Brut.

BEWARE OF MORPHINE.

Mrs. Pinkham Asks Women to Seek Permanent Cures and Not Mere Temporary Relief From Pain.

Special forms of suffering lead many a woman to acquire the morphine habit.

One of these forms of suffering is a dull, persistent pain in the side, accompanied by heat and throbbing. There is disinclination to work, because work only increases the pain.

This is only one symptom of a chain of troubles; she has others she cannot bear to confide to her physician, for fear of an examination, the terror of all sensitive, modest women.

The physician, meantime, knows her condition, but cannot combat her shrinking terror. He yields to her supplication for something to relieve the pain. He gives her a few morphine tablets, with very grave caution as to their use. Foolish woman! She thinks morphine will help her right along; she becomes its slave!

A wise and a generous physician had such a case; he told his patient he could do nothing for her, as she was too nervous to undergo an examination. In despair, she went to visit a friend. She said to her, "Don't give yourself up; just go to the nearest druggist's and buy a bottle of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will build you up. You will begin to feel better with the first bottle." She did so, and after the fifth bottle her health was re-established. Here is her own letter about it:

"I was very miserable; was so weak that I could hardly get around the house, could not do any work without feeling tired out. My monthly periods had stopped and I was so tired and nervous all of the time. I was troubled very much with falling of the womb and bearing-down pains. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; I have taken five bottles, and think it is the best medicine I ever used. Now I can work, and feel like myself. I used to be troubled greatly with my head, but I have had no bad headaches or palpitation of the heart, womb trouble or bearing-down pains, since I commenced to take Mrs. Pinkham's medicine. I gladly recommend the Vegetable Compound to every suffering woman. The use of one bottle will prove what it can do."—MRS. LUCY PEASLEY, Derby Center, Vt.

Cover the fire, put out the lights,
The weary work of day is done.
The shadows of night are on vale and heights,
We may sleep and rest till another sun.

Cover the fire, put out the lights,
The tasks of the year are over and done.
We have trodden our valleys, and climbed our heights,
In life's hard fight we have lost or won.

Cover the fire, put out the lights,
Smile in the dark, when the days is done.
We are God's dear children, in days and nights,
And safe in His love our swift years run.

ROMANCE OF A READING ROOM

A curious friendship sprang up between two frequenters of the reading room at Cooper Union a year or two ago. Both were in the habit of spending the better part of every evening there, and both had developed a preference for a particular table. At first it was the location of that table also which attracted them, but in course of time they became accustomed to each other's company, and although perfect strangers, they felt acquainted, and though they met by appointment.

One was a stout old Englishman with a florid, stern face—one of those surly faces that usually go together with an honest and kindly heart. He was a well-read mechanic and a bachelor, and having, or pretending to have an aversion for women and children he passed his leisure hours either in the seclusion of his little hall bedroom or at Cooper Institute. The other was a dry-faced, beardless Dane, of fair with blue eyes, of pellucid clearness and long waxen locks, which adhered close to his head and neck. It was a childish and yet penetrating look of those crystalline eyes of his which first cast a spell over the gruff looking Englishman. He could not help glancing at them again and again, and as he tried to read his book or magazine he seemed to feel their soft, appealing gaze upon himself. At one moment he was on the verge of a quarrel, but no sooner had he met the Dane's eyes than instead of resentment he felt like asking if he could not be of service to him.

As to the Scandanavian, the dusty look of his neighbor, far from repelling, had a sort of peculiar glamour for him. And so the two passed two or three hours at the same table six nights in the week until they came to greet each other, at first with a slight nod, then with a more demonstrative one and finally with a bland "good evening."

One night as they sat reading the Dane handed the Englishman a note which read as follows:

"Dear Sir: My heart is full to-night, and I wish to speak to some good man. Will you be my listener? I like you without knowing who you are; but so much the better. Would you mind having a cup of coffee with me?"

"With pleasure," was the Englishman's written reply.

Some five minutes later they were seated at a marble table in one of the Vienna cafes on Second avenue.

The Dane spoke English with perfect fluency, and although his pronunciation was labored and often incorrect, his grammar was irreproachable.

"I beg of you, don't set me down for a crank," he began. "I am tired of being called that."

"Whether you are one or not, I'm not goin' to call you names," grumbled the Englishman.

"All right, then. This is my day of misery. Just a year ago Fate dealt me a blow—or, rather, played me a trick—under which I have been squirming and writhing ever since. To-day is the anniversary of an accident which may, after all, drive me mad. By the way, when you know me better you may find that I am no crank—not as yet at least. Well, then, it is a love story I am going to recount to you—a love story of which I am the unhappy hero. Is it not amusing—a hero and yet defeated and miserable? Well, some three years ago I fell in love with a poor but accomplished Swedish girl in Copenhagen. Have you ever been in love, sir?"

"That's neither here or there. You just go on," snarled the Englishman.

"I beg your pardon, sir. I mean no offence. As to myself, I had been in love a dozen times before I met the Swedish young lady, and when I saw that I was infatuated with her I thought it was something like my previous romances—a passion of a week or a month, after which there is nothing but 'smoke, smoke,' as the hero of one of Turgeneff's novels puts it. Are you fond of Turgeneff? But excuse my impertinent questions. Well, I had made up my mind to be a bachelor. You wish to know why? Because I was the most forlorn fool in creation. In the first place, I had taken into my head that I had been born to fill the universe with a new sort of sunshine—with the dazzling rays of my poetry. Accordingly, for me to marry and be bothered with a wife and children and the sordid details of family life would be a crime against the interests of humanity, don't you know. In the second place, I should get tired of my wife before the honeymoon was half over, and marriage would be eternal torture. I drew my conclusions—do you know from what? From the brevity of my former passions. I was an idiot; the greatest on earth!

"No you weren't," the Englishman interrupted him.

"Yes I was. Well, the last girl I fell in love with was a singular sort of woman. She was not pretty, No, I wish she had been, for then I should have forgotten her long ago. But she was good—a genius of kindliness—and it goes without saying that she was also called crazy. She loved me desperately, and I know it and that helped to spoil it all. I made a frank explanation to her and told her I liked her, but that my life belonged to humanity. Oh, the idiot that I was! She gave me a sad look and bade me farewell, and that is the last I have seen of her—in Europe, at least.

"I subsequently learned that she had emigrated to America and that was enough to bring me here. Why? Because I could not live without her, because when she was gone I became aware of the real nature of my love for her. Ah, dear friend! I found when it was too late that I had never loved before. No other woman left an impression so deep, so cruel, so ineffaceable. And the feeling itself, too, seemed novel, unprecedented, so entirely unlike anything I had ever experienced before. It is still there (he pointed to his heart) and will be there to make life hell to me as long as I exist.

"I abandoned a thousand things that I held dear and came over here in search of her—in a quixotic search for her. Was it not foolish, seeing that I knew not even in what city she had settled? And yet—and here I come to the most appalling part of it—I did meet her in this city, and at the same time I did not; but I hope to come across her again, although I may be chasing a golden sunset. But be it as it may I neither have the courage to give it up and to return to my home, nor do I enjoy a single hour's rest in this city.

"I had searched high and low for her in New York and in Chicago, where the Swedish colony is much larger, but all in vain. I had abandoned all hope and was nerving myself up to leave this country and to try to forget the whole episode as a romantic tale, which could never become invested in flesh and blood, when this very day a year ago I caught sight of her in an elevated train on Second avenue. Yes, I saw her seated by an open window—it was a beautiful day in September, like this. But it seemed fate had only intended it for a joke on me—for the most cruel joke it ever played upon a helpless being. Ah, only Tantalus and myself are familiar with this kind of torture.

"Yes, she was in an uptown train while was on the opposite track. I looked at her back without recognizing her, but just as the two trains began to move in opposite directions, she faced about, and—and—it was she! Excuse me, dear stranger, you don't see me crying, do you? And there is no lump in my throat, either. I am not overcome as I tell you this—no more, at least, than usual, than every day, for my poor heart is always crushed every time I think of it—and when don't I think of it?"

"Did you call to her?" the Englishman queried.

"Did I! I came near jumping out of the window. But she did not hear me—at least, she did not seem to.

"I rushed out of the train at the very next station and idiotically boarded an uptown one, and—and I have been a wretch ever since.

"I have spent many whole days and many dollars riding up and down the same road in the hope of meeting her once more, but in vain, in vain."

The Englishman was deeply touched, although he tried not to show it. He came away with the Swedish girl's full name in his memorandum book and with a secret determination to do what he could for his eccentric friend. He thought the Dane had not conducted his search in a practical manner, and he decided in his mind to see if he could be more successful.

The idea of discovering the young woman and presenting her to his lovelorn friend took a firm grip upon the misanthropic bachelor's mind, and little by little became the great ambition of his lonely days. He had a little independence of two or three thousand dollars, and half of it he set aside for advertisements and other expenses which the pursuit of his all-absorbing obejct might involve. Having learned from the Dane that his beloved had taught French and embroidery he framed his advertisements, in the "want" columns of English and German dailies, accordingly, in addition to having "personal" notices inserted in the various Scandinavian weeklies of this country.

A month passed, another and a third. Every evening his landlady would hand him a pile of letters. They bore all sorts of signatures and plenty of Swedish names in their number, but the one name which had become his idee fixe was not there.

The two friends met at the library as usual and frequently took supper together. Their intimacy grew apace, through the Englishman listened more than he talked.

"You aren't a crank at all," he once reassured the Dane. "You're queer a little bit, that's about all. If you met your good lady and got married you might settle down."

"Ah, dear fellow," sighed the other, without the remotest suspicion of what the Englishman was doing for him.

One evening, as the mechanic sat rummaging through his bulky mail, he suddenly leaped to his feet. "Good! I've got her," he exclaimed, so loud that his landlady heard him through the door of his room and whispered to her husband that their boarder was getting crankier every day.

He at once dispatched a letter to the Swedish young lady and next evening he called to see her.

When she heard the Dane's name she dropped her gaze.

"What is he doing in America?" she then inquired.

"He has come for you."

"For me?" she said, with a disconsolate shake of her head.

"Yes; for you. Why, are you married?" the blunt Englishman demanded, his heart sinking within him.

She shook her head more sadly than before.

"Very well then," her interlocutor fairly shouted. "Do you still love him? Will you marry him? He will die if you don't.

"How do you know?" She burst into tears and then pursued, sobbingly. "Is is really true, sir? Are you sure of what you say? Why did he not come himself? Where is he?"

"He is safe and sound; but look here, my friend, it is two weeks to Christmas—will you have patience to wait that long? Then I shall give the two of you the nicest dinner I ever ate. But promise me that you'll keep quiet and let me see you every once and awhile."

"But where is he?"

"No questions till Christmas or you won't see him at all."

When he met the Dane at the library that evening he thrust a note into his hand:

"Would you mind having Christmas dinner with me? Accept no other invitations."

At last the long awaited day arrived and the Englishman with a fast-beating heart received his Danish friend in his little bedroom.

"We shall have dinner with my landlady to-day," he said to him, "but first, I want you to accept a Christmas present which I have prepared for you as a token of our friendship. Come, it is in the parlor."

With [illegible] opened the door and ushered his perplexed visitor into the presence for which his heart had been pining and yearning without cessation.

The two were married the same week and immediately left for Copenhagen, where, judging from the long epistles which the Englishman receives from both, they live happily.

As to our British friend he still persists in inveighing against married life, but when he sits reading the endless rhapsodies on matrimonial felicity in his Danish letters, his crusty face becomes overspread with radiance and he seems to feel as if the writers of the effusive missives were his beloved children.—New York Advertiser.

ODD TOMBSTONE.

Miniature Cotton Mill Over the Grave of a Former Mill Owner.

It has often been said that a monument which to some degree represents a man's life work, is his most fitting tombstone. Seldom, however, has an attempt been made to carry out this idea with such realistic exactness as was done a few years ago in Oak Grove Cemetery, at Fall River, Mass., by one of the large mill owners of that city.

As the visitor proceeds through the southeastern side of the cemetery he sees a quaint little granite structure, looking at first glance in the distance like an enlarged doll's house, with windows and peaked roof, but as he draws near enough to catch the view of the great stone cotton mills in the city below the full significance of it flashes upon him. It is a mill, a miniature copy of the larger ones which are so distinctive a feature of Fall River.

It is a solid mass of stone, about nine feet high, seven and a half feet long, and four feet wide, representing a three-story building. The windows constitute the sole ornament of the monument, and their panes of highly-polished stone stand out in marked contrast to the rougher finish of the rest of the structure. There are six windows in each tier on both sides of the little mill, while in front the row is varied by a central door. Such doors are placed on the different stories of the cotton print factories for ease in loading and unloading goods, and so minutely has the imitation been carried out that round keyholes have been drilled in the middle of each of the doors represented on the monument.

The man who conceived this curious tombstone was F. H. Stafford, formerly part owner of the Stafford Mills. It was his wish to have the work with which he was so long identified commemorated in this way, and accordingly the monument was erected soon after his death, in 1892.

No finer site for such a memorial could have been found in the whole cemetery, or, in fact, in all Fall River. It is on the brow of a high hill commanding a view of the southeastern portion of the city, where many of the mills are located. Nearly forty tall chimneys can be seen against the distant sky, and as many gray stone buildings, with their rows of windows visible now and then where the sunlight strikes their glistening panes. The majority of the mills in the city, including the Stafford Mills, are built with slightly sloping roofs, but one great structure seen from the cemetery in the foreground shows the sharp-peaked roof which had been chosen as more ornamental for the monument.—New York Times.

Chinese Dog Farms.

In Manchuria and along the Mongolian borders of China there are thousands of farms on which nothing is raised but dogs of a breed peculiar to this region. Each proprietor keeps several hundreds of them. They are of a large size, and when eight months old are killed, usually in midwinter, for the sake of their skins. As a result of the severe climate they are covered almost from birth with a magnificent growth of fur. Hence they are much in demand among the northern Chinese as material for midwinter clothing.

They constitute the only wealth of this desolate country. In each family a certain number of dogskins are laid aside as the daughter's marriage portion. Yet they command no very high price, eight skins being required for a gown about two yards long, and worth $3 or $4. This would make the average value of each but little over 40 cents, from which must be deducted cost of sorting and dressing; also of manufacturing the garment. The hides find their first market at several main depots, whence they are taken to Moukden, Fou-Tocheou and other cities to be made up. Last year the estimated proceeds of this traffic at Newchang, a leading emporium, amounted to 1,000,000 francs, against 1,500,000 francs the year before.

A Dove's Refuge.

During the last trip of the Kennebec to Boston a dove flew aboard just off Cape Elizabeth. It soon became frightened and flew off, only to be met by a flock of sea gulls which drove the trembling bird back to the steamship. This was repeated at intervals until evening, when the dove decided that a prison was preferable to a continual fight for existence. So the tired bird crawled under a lifeboat—an appropriate berth— and tucked its head under its wing and quietly waited until the Kennebec reached Boston. Then it watched its chances and escaped.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Something to Learn.

As Mr. Ruffedge sat down, after having elbowed his way back from a between-acts trip, he happened to see some Japanese students sitting further in front.

"A great many Japanese come over to this country to get civilized, don't they?" he remarked. "I suppose it takes them a good while to get used to our ways.

"I suppose so," said Miss Cayenne. "And I don't think those young men have been here very long."

"Why."

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OBITUARY

Ada Irene Moody was born in Richland township DeKalb county, Ind., Dec. 5, 1854 and died at her home in Newell, Iowa, Dec. 27, 1897, aged 43 and 22 days.

She was a daughter of John R. Moody and his wife Mary Ann Moody, two of the earliest of DeKalb's pioneers and most worthy people. Mrs. Moody was a sister of our friend Ex-Commissioner G. I. Patterson. Mr. and Mrs. Moody were born three pairs of twins, the first being Mrs. Caroline Hall, who died some year ago, her mate having died in infancy; the second pair, were D. D. Moody and Mrs. W. H. Fair; then two sons, namely, William now at Payne, Ohio, and O. S. Moody of Butler township; the third pair of twins were Ada Irene, the subject of this sketch and her sister Ida. When about a year old the parents moved to Butler township to a farm near New Era. Here the family were reared, Ada and Ida growing to womanhood, and were educated in the schools there and later in the high school at Auburn. Their mother died when they were about ten. Both became teachers and made an honorable record as such, having been in the work at the time the Editor of this paper was county superintendent, and it gives him great pleasure to testify to their worth. In March 1875, the two young ladies started for the west to make a living for themselves, settling in Keokuk Co. Iowa, where they engaged in teaching with marked success. About a year later they went to Poweshiek county, their postoffice being at Malcolm. March 9, 1879, both were married, their husbands being brothers. Ada was married to Wm. G. Davie, and Ida to Alexander Davie. They taught a short time after this, when they moved to a farm in Beuna Vista county, the two families continuing to live together. They made a specialty of raising fine stock. More recently the two families left the farm and moved to Newel, the county seat, where they have since resided, and though for the first time separated the two homes but a few rods apart. It may seem strange that so much mention is made of both sisters. But they were always inseparable, and only death has put them asunder. Last year, Ada, was back among the relatives in this county for a short time. She had not been in good health for a year or more. Recently she had a partial stroke of paralysis, and it is supposed, a second stroke may have ended fatally. She was buried in Newell, Dec. 29. She leaves no children, but a large circle of friends who admire her many womanly qualities and admire the business energy that took two young girls to a new state to work out for themselves the problem of life's success.

Honesty and Virtue.

There is more honesty and virtue contained in a bottle of Salvation Oil, than in any other liniment known. "Mrs. A. Fiedler, 2864 Paletrp St., Philadelphia, Pa., confirms the truth: She found Salvation Oil to be an excellent remedy for rheumatism, stiff joints, bruises, etc., and thinks it should always be kept in the house." Don't listen to the dealer's arguments in favor of a substitute. Insist on getting Salvation Oil, it costs only 25 cts.

WOMEN IN THE PROFESSIONS

They Have Done Good, Honest and Competent Work.

The number of college women who have taken up medicine is considerable—some of them no doubt from a real love of science and some for love of a career, says the Philadelphia Times. While their work has been creditable and their success undoubted, it is just to say that they have not contributed originally to medical science. There are a few women collegians in literature, in the pulpit and in other professions and their helpful works and enthusiasm have been especially noticeable in educational and philanthropic work. In all these fields of usefulness the work of college women, "taken by and large," has been good, honest, competent work, above the level of the average industrious man, but it has been derivative, not creative; complemental, not brilliant, offering little opportunity for the celebration on the part of those enthusiasts who believe that women have needed only a diploma for conquering all the world that men have left unconquered. Hundreds of college-bred women, however, have been, and are, capably and efficiently engaged in teaching and a few have gained a certain distinction as presidents and professors in colleges for women but no great and original educator has come from among them. Occasionally a determined young graduate gets a foothold in a newspaper office and usually keeps it with credit to herself and her higher education, yet the few women editors of eminence have not been college bred and there is nothing to be gained by concealing the fact that the college women who have undertaken journalism seem as yet to have no influence in sweetening the flood of sensational and nasty print for which the newspaper women of the country must bear their share of discredit with the newspaper men.

HE TELLS US WHY

His Life Was Nearly Wrecked, Also How the Wreck Was Averted by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

How often we hear the invalid say, "The first of my trouble was sleeplessness. I could not get the needed rest." The same cause will shatter health while the world lasts. As long as people will neglect nature and fail to satisfy the urgent call for sleep during health they must expect a rebellious nature to refuse to respond when the nervous system is weakened from any cause. When you feel debilitated, fretful, despondent, worried, or cannot secure the full eight hours sleep prescribed by nature, use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer at once. Build up your nervous system before it's too late. Geo. Halstead, clerk at Jefferson House, Toledo, tells in the following words what it did for him: "I consider Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer a remarkable medicine for nervous troubles; I will tell you why. While living in Lima I worked nights; my sleep during the day was not regular or restful. I became very nervous, irritable, and all run down The doctors failed to help me, so also did other medicine which I used. A friendly druggist told me of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. I tried it and it worked like a charm. I was able to secure restful sleep after the first dose. My appetite returned and I regained my lost flesh, and was very soon perfectly well. I have recommended it to a great many and results were equally beneficial."

D. J. Baker our new P. M. is at home after an absence of two weeks at Tiffin, Ohio.

J. A. Campbell, of Butler, was in town Thursday of last week looking after the interests of his many insurance policies.

The many friends of Uncle George Wilmott will be pained to know of his continuous illness. He has been ailing for some time and at this writing is quite feeble.

M. E. O. turned up his toes on the sidewalk one day last week. Mort was in a hurry to reach the station for local and in rounding one of the many corners on the sidewalk down he went but being of a feathery nature and not very heavy the sidewalk was not damaged.

The Big (4) store have had on exhibition for sometime a great big doll baby (a two year old) and W. H. Simonton has had his eye on that particular doll for a long time. And to play a joke on his good wife Barbara, bought and had it put on the Christmas tree for he. It was all nicely done up and so nicely that the form of the doll was shown to perfection. When the caller, M. T. Bishop, called out the name of Barbara Simonton, who was in the back part of the house. The doll was carried to her by one of the attendants, who was careful to make it as prominent as possible. Everybody had a good laugh at the expense of the lady; but she was equal to the emergency and plainly told her sweet William that if he must have a baby he could carry it home and take care of it, and like the dutiful husband that he is, took the dolly in his fatherly arms and wended his way homeward, while his wife staid down town to do some shopping for the baby. It must be that W. H. is still caring for that doll as we have not seen him down town once.

The printer's devil, or some one connected with the St. Joe News, running short of locals last week cobbled up a part of our items and did not give the COURIER credit. One of the Tenth Commandments reads thus: ——

ABOUT PERFUMES.

The Most Agreeable Are Not the Most Helpful to Nerves.

The perfumes which are the most agreeable to the senses are not always the most helpful to the nerves, says the Philadelphia Times. Ambergris, for instance, is positively offensive to many, yet it is said to possess a wonderful power of clearing the brain and driving away those evil spirits known as the "blues." On the other hand, attar of roses, with the suggestion of glowing suns and gorgeous eastern colors, predisposes one to tears. A faint odor of musk acts as a tonic, while civet brings drowsiness of soul, for which the best antidote is the pungent odor of sandalwood. The fragrance of citron is as soothing to nervous people as far-off music. Many perfumes delightful in the open air become particularly disagreeable in a close room. A whole evening can be spoiled by the presence of tuberoses or lilies in a reception room. Their strong fragrance has a very bad effect. Magnolia blossoms, too, have a delightful perfume in their native grove, but woe to her who sleeps through the night with a single blossom on her pillow. There are many fragrant flowers, such as carnations, clove pinks, sweetbrier and apple blossoms, that are as beneficial as they are sweet scented. A vivid perfume is nearly always bracing, while a subtle one is generally enervating. One may become positively intoxicated through inhaling the odor of the peach, almond, wild cherry and other blossoms of the same class, because they contain a suggestion of prussic acid.

True Marriage.

What marriage may be in the case of two persons of cultivated faculties, identical in opinions and purposes, between whom exists that best kind of equality, similarity of powers and capacities with reciprocal superiority in them, so that each can enjoy the pleasure of looking up to the other and can have alternately the pleasure of leading and of being led in the path of development, I will not attempt to describe—to those who can conceive it there is no need, to those who cannot it would appear the dream of an enthusiast. But I maintain, with the profoundest conviction, that this and this only is the ideal of marriage, and that all opinions, customs and institutions which favor any other notion of it or turn the conceptions or aspirations connected with it into any other direction, by whatever pretenses they may be colored, are relics of primitive barbarism. The moral regeneration of mankind will only really commence when the most fundamental of social relations is placed under the rule of equal justice, and when human beings learn to cultivate their strongest sympathy with an equal in rights and cultivation.—John Stuart Mill.

A Cure for Tantrums.

"When the little girl is naughty," says Miss Jessie M. Fowler, giving a mother directions for curing her small daughter's bad temper, "put on her best gown, and you will soon see that she can't withstand its influence." This might be a good remedy for "grown ups." It is said that a man is never so much a gentleman as when he is in evening dress.

Color of Arctic Animals.

Nature is a very considerate and provident protector to her children. In winter many of the arctic animals become perfectly white and can move over the vast snow-fields with safety, when if they retained their summer color they would be an easy mark for beasts and birds of prey, or the hunter's rifle. The fox, squirrel, ermine and other creatures of their class have dark fur during the summer to correspond with the rocks among which they live.

WEST GOES DOWN

And Herbert Hale Holds The State Championship.

The wrestling match between Henry West of this city and Herbert Hale of Indianapolis at Fort Wayne last night resulted in a defeat for West, and Hale will continue as the champion wrestler of the state. The match was an interesting one, being on their feet over three hours.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A surprise, complete in every particular, was perpetrated on Miss Ella Gregg last evening by the Rebekah Lodge sisters. About 10 o'clock they came, 25 in number bringing light refreshments with them, and took possession of every thing in sight. After taking an inventory it was discovered a male sister somehow had got mixed in the crowd. He looked like Joe Stafford, acted like Joe and come to find out it was Joe. They forgot that once, and he had as good a time as if he was a full fledged sister. Miss Ella was remembered by a silver set of nut picks and nut cracker, in a neat speech by sister Mary McEntaffer. All had a good time and all went home happy.

BETTING ON THE RAIN.

The Queerest Gambling Game in the World Is Played at Calcutta.

One of the most curious forms of gambling in the world is "rain gambling," which in the winter season of the year is at its height in Calcutta, says the New York Herald. The principal rain gambling den is in Cotton street, Burra bazaar. No one who has not visited the place can have any conception of the vast crowds which at every hour of the day and far into night pass in and out. The great majority are Mawaris, who are born speculators, but there are as well plenty of well-to-do Europeans, Eurasians, Jews, Armenians and Greeks and women, too. All swarm into the small courtyard where this strange form of gambling is carried on, through a narrow entrance barely three feet wide. The courtyard is about 200 feet square. The far-famed tank with a spout falling into the courtyard is the one spot where all eyes are fixed. The tank stands at the edge of a second-floor roof. It is about six feet long by four feet wide and nine inches deep, with the spout opening inward, some three or four inches from the bottom. From this it will be seen that it requires a pretty heavy downpour for at least ten minutes to cause the spout to flow. Intermittent drizzles which partly fill this tank, do not count, as the shower to fill it must pour down uninterruptedly, and then the bets are won or lost. Chances are taken either for or against the spout running. A gray-haired, wizened old man is the owner of the den, and there is another similar place across the road, only smaller. On the roof, over the fifth floor, there is a small, square watch-tower, in which are stationed five or six men, whose duty is to scan the horizon closely and report on the formation of rainclouds. On these reports the odds rise or fall. A bet made and won one day is always paid the following morning. Everything seems to be "on the square," and indeed there is little chance for cheating. The odds range as high as 1 to 75 on some days, even in the rainy season. Many have made a fortune in a single day. One person won over £5,000 in the course of a few weeks. But he worked the system on scientific methods.

THE CROCODILE.

A Few of His Peculiar Ways of Transacting Business.

There is little in the animal kingdom that can look so dead and be so much alive as a crocodile, says the Pall Mall Gazette. The number of unsuspecting persons who have mistaken him for a log, and have failed to discover their mistake until it was too late to be of any benefit to them, will never be known. In ancient times, several years prior to the British occupation of Egypt, some of the people of that country worshipped the crocodile as a god, there being nothing else like him. The fed him on dainties and togged him out with jewelry. In other parts of Egypt, however, the natives looked upon him as a devil. Having no firearms, they did not fill him with lead, but they managed to immolate him successfully with such weapons as were fashionable at the time. The crocodile is not so numerous in the Nile as he was in the days of the Rameses family. In fact, he rather shuns the river now below the second cataract on account of the annoyance inseparable from tourist traffic. It seems impossible for a tourist to see a crocodile without trying to plug him with a revolver, and to a reptile who is fond of a quiet life this sort of thing is simply insufferable. He will not molest a man unless he can take him at a disadvantage, and so long as man does not unthinkingly step on him the crocodile will go his own way and calmly await his opportunity. He feeds on fish, but for a course dinner he would rather have humanity, black preferred, which shows that there is no accounting for taste even among reptiles. His methods for capturing large game are plural as well as singular. Sometimes he will lie on a river bank, partly covered with sand or mud, until an absent-minded native wanders within reach. Having grabbed his prey, he will waddle into the water, and there drown the struggler. He will then drag his victim ashore and bury him in sand or mud, and wait for days before he gorges himself.

Fresh Air and Consumption.

A French physician has recently expressed the opinion that, with proper regulations, tuberculosis may be restricted within the narrowest bounds and perhaps almost exterminated. This is a conviction founded upon the most thorough and conclusive experimental investigation, confirmed by practical experience. In France a strong effort is being made toward the restriction of the spread of the disease by working on consumptive children through the fresh air treatment, and an institution has been carried on for several years known as the "Fresh Air Cure for Consumptive Children." Two hospitals for this purpose are situated—one at Ormisson and the other at Villiers-sur-Marne. The medical men interested in this work consider it the most promising method yet employed in trying to reduce the rate of mortality from consumption in France, which in some cities—Paris, Rouen and Havre, for example—is exceedingly high. Medicine forms no part of the treatment, except the occasional use of cod liver oil in the cold season. The work of cure is, therefore, left entirely to fresh air and to the hygienic living of the patients. With the exception of a very few cases, where persistent fever keeps them in bed during the first part of their stay in the hospital, all the patients are obliged to follow the regular system of living. They rise early, bathe well, and are dressed in linen garments, loosely fitting. Twice a week, unless otherwise ordered by the physician, each patient is bathed and vigorously rubbed by an attendant. After the toilet the patients eat a light breakfast; this is insisted upon for each child, for suitable and regular meals have proved most necessary in aiding the treatment. After breakfast the children are sent into the garden or park or covered playground, where they enjoy games and exercises, varying with the season. The most serious cases are kept indoors, lying in reclining chairs, well wrapped in warm coverings, and breathing the fresh air admitted into the room. Except for the two principal meals of the day the entire time is passed in the open air, and the rooms are also ventilated with the greatest possible amount of fresh air. For the last five years the reports as to the condition of the patients have, without the least variation, shown the most satisfactory results, surpassing even the hopes entertained by the founders.

The Causes of Corns and Bunions.

The feet are surely pliant members when they can endure the variformed shoes that from time to time compel them into new habits with each new pair put on; yet they rarely rebel or give real trouble unless barbarously neglected. Corns and bunions are more often the result of wearing old shoes than in the wrong selection of new ones. A constant change of footwear inures the foot to variety, and even those who confine themselves wholly to the ready-made article need suffer no ill effects if they will keep their shoe supply as carefully replenished as is the rest of the wardrobe. It is one of the most fallacious of practices to attempt to economize by wearing old shoes about the house, unless they possess all their buttons, have straight heels and soles, and are daily brushed and aired, as are their newer fellows. Only in this way may the ankles be continually braced into straightness and the toes allowed to move gently in an almost straight direction. When the foot is thrown out of balance by worn-down heels, the toes, attempting to retain a level position, perform prehensile feats, which resemble the action of the forebears some scientists have ascribed to us. Moreover, the combined heat and moisture of the normal foot hardens the leather of the continuously worn shoe into permanent creases, which in turn render the foot extremely sensitive, and a struggling against its hard environment enlarges the joints and causes local distress.—Harper's Bazar.

A Great Moscow Hospital.

Moscow has a foundling hospital large enough to hold seven thousand persons. It was founded in 1764, and at present takes in children at the rate of forty a day, or about 15,000 a year. There are twenty-six physicians and about 900 nurses. In the period 1784-1864 the number of children received was 468,660. Mothers desiring to take back their children can do so. On his retreat from Moscow in 1812 Napoleon gave special orders to spare this building.

FARMERS' KLONDIKE.

The Greenler Co. Received 119 Loads of Elm Wednesday.

They Thought Tuesday Was a Big Day When 100 Loads Came In.

It is but once in an age that an article usually quite worthless can be sold for cash and in a market that is unlimited. Farmers have been working around the outside of elm swamps on their farms. The land was good, but the timber was almost valueless and was frequently right in their way. If they cleared off the land, the soggy timber had to be piled up and burned and if conditions were not favorable, the burning was a tedious job. Now all this is changed and farmers find a lively market for this stuff and it is cash down at that. Elm timber is the best in the market for making barrel hoops and is good for staves. The Greenler Hoop factory makes both products, and so is in the market for all the elm it can get. If the logs are too short or otherwise not suited for hoops they are cut short and used for staves. So nearly every elm tree is worth something and can be about all used up. A walk down to the south end of town to the big factory there will be a surprise to almost anyone. The quantity of logs and bolts brought in during the recent good wheeling and sledding is astonishing. And every log and bolt represents cash paid to the man who owned the land, and who will now get a crop off of it before it is cleared, and is in shape to clear it now at a small cost. We give our readers a small idea of how much has been brought in to the Greenler factory. Last Tuesday 100 loads of logs for hoops and bolts for staves came in and were delivered on their yards. But the next day, Wednesday put the record still higher for there was brought in that day 119 loads of which 70 were of logs for hoops and 49 were of bolts. The value of an average load of hoop logs runs at about $4; the value of an average load of bolts is $2 50. Of this teamsters get a part and the farmer a part unless the farmer hauls his own timber in which case, of course, he gets all. It looks certain that this growing industry is a good one for the producers, and we hope the factory may get a good profit out of it too, so that both parties to the business may be benefited. It is no longer in order to poke fun at a swamp elm. It is on top now.

CLEVELAND SUICIDES

The Hicksville Man Who Disappeared

William Cleveland, the wealthy Hicksville farmer who disappeared a few weeks ago committed suicide yesterday. After wandering around several days he returned to his home. The family watched him closely, but yesterday at noon the young man who was employed to watch him, and his wife had momentarily absented themselves when he got an old rifle and sitting down in the rocker he placed the muzzle in his mouth and pulled the trigger. Before any assistance could be summoned he was dead.

OBITUARY.

Lewis B. son of Oliver and Della Clay was born Feb 3d 1896 and departed this life Jan. 5th, 1898, at the age of 1 year, 11 months and 2 days. Little Lewis leaves to mourn his early death, a mother and father, 4 grand parents, 4 great grand parents besides many relatives. Lewis was a bright and lovely child and was the sunshine of the home. He was a special favorite of his great grand parent, Mr. Bowers with whom he spent many pleasant hours. In an hour when we least expected it, death snatched him from our embrace and pierced our hearts to its very depth. Lewis is gone from us, yet his memory shall remain in our hearts like a cherished jewel. May the sadness of this dark hour bring sunshine to our soul and bring us in close touch with Christ our Saviour. Lift your eyes up for he is not dead, but liveth with Jesus above. If faithful we shall meet him by and by.

The funeral services were conducted from the home of Mr. L Bowers Wednesday at 3 p. m. Jan. 5th. Interment took place in Evergreen cemetery, J. D. Grosy officiating.

SMITH-HOISINGTON.

(Kendallvill Sun)

The many friends here of Miss May R. Smith were surprised yesterday upon learning that she had been married at Albion on Tuesday afternoon to Mr. S. E. Hoisington of Auburn, at the Presbyterain parsonage by Rev. Ward. Her many friends here join in extending congratulations and best wishes for the future. They will make this city their home for the present. The bride the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Smith, is a very estimable and popular young lady, prominent in social circles, and has a host of friends in this city who wish her and her husband all happiness and prosperity. Mr Hoisington, though not a resident of our city, is well known here and highly regarded by all who know him.

AN OLD VIOLIN

Returns After Thirty-Three Years to its Original. Owner

George Rinehold, of Jackson township was here yesterday and related an interesting story concerning an old violin which he was the owner of more than thirty-three years ago. In the year 1865 he purchased the violin of Frank Klinger, of Huntertown. It was a good instrument and one he prized highly. While a resident of Allen county a few years later he sold it. All his family grew up they developed great ability as musicians and two boys became good manipulators of the violin. Mr. Rinehold then sought after a couple of second-hand instruments. Ira Cramar, of this place offered one for 50 cents, and Mr. Rinehold having a thorough knowledge of these instruments, bought it. In looking it over he remarked to his family, that he believed it was his old violin. He proceeded to make the necessary repairs and on the inside found his name and address. Just how many people have owned the instrument and how far it has traveled in all these years is a mystery that will probably never be solved. It is needless to say Mr. Rinehold is glad to come in possession of it again.

IN CLOSE QUARTERS

Was Theodore Robbins Formerly of Auburn.

(Ft Wayne Journal.)

Theodore Robbins secured a divorce from Nellie Robbins under peculiar and sensational circumstances yesterday, in the circuit court. They were married in 1893, and the plaintiff alleges he expected his wife to leave the home of her stepfather. Daniel Hissinger, who bore a questionable reputation. She refused to come to Fort Wayne with him, and abused him, according to the complaint, for asking her to. Then she went to Michigan and word reached the husband that she died. Believing it, Mr. Robbins took to his bosom a Fort Wayne girl and their home is at No. 55 Hough. The Michigan wife heard of this and proceeded to make things lively for the muchly married husband. She resides now at Auburn and from that point fired a general denial at the charges. The case was heard yesterday and a divorce granted to the plaintiff, Theodore Robbins. He was represented by Chas. E. Emanuel.

THE SNYDER CASE

Was Held In Squire Walborn's Court Last Night.

Thursday's Daily.

John A. Snyder was yesterday arrested by his brother Eli Snyder, on a charge of insanity, but after a full examination was discharged. The facts in full should be known, and are as follows:

John A. Snyder, has for some time been boarding with his brother Eli, though a part of the time during summer, he worked for Cal Husselman and others and is said to be a good hand. But unfortunately, he has a habit of getting full now and then, and on such occasions is liable to be ugly. He also imagines various things, such as people talking about him and accusing him falsely, etc. But when sober is a good natured, sensible man as far as the public has ever noticed. But it appears there was more or less trouble between the brothers which culminated yesterday in the charge of insanity, the warrant for John's arrest being sworn out by Eli. Eli had told John he could not board him any longer, and so John got a team and went up to Eli's house after his things. It appears that John had bought a load of wood and had it delivered there, and now insisted on taking this wood away with his other things. It appears that Eli did not want the wood taken away. Then the trouble was worse, and finally Eli swore out the warrant for John's arrest on a charge of insanity. Toward evening Sheriff Stroh and Eli went up North Main looking for John. After some skirmishing around he was found at Myers' livery barn, and arrested. In Squire Walborn's court a jury was impanneled and evidence heard for and against. But there appeared nothing to show that John was insane, and he was discharged. Mr. Myers, an attorney from Leo, was present to defend John and a good deal was brought out showing some of the causes of the trouble between the brothers, but that is not the COURIER'S business. It gives its readers the facts in the case fully and correctly always Auburn don't have any star chamber courts. Its court rooms, both of justices and judges are public and their records are public property, and every citizen has free access to them without let or hindrance.

THE WEATHER CALENDAR.

The COURIER has received the Cardui Weather Chart and Calendar for 1898 from the Chattanooga Medicine Co., manufactures of McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thadeor's Black-Draught This is one of the best calendars published. It consists of twelve sheets of paper, 13x20 inches in size, all fastened together with a gilt tin strip and a brass loop hanger. Each sheet contains the calendar for one month in large figures that can be read across any room. Under the figures patent weather signals indicating Prof. DeVoe's Weather Forecasts for everyday in the year appear. The moon's changes and legal holidays are also shown. The calendar is valuable in any home. We understand a few copies of it can be secured by sending 10 one cent postage stamps to the Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Boarding-House Soup.

From the London Society Journal: The proprietress of a Brighton boarding-house was musing over her menu. In her company sat the lady who had just sunk her $5,000 in that concern and who was being initiated into the mysteries of the profession. "Now, then, dear," said the principal, "soup—what shall we call it?" "Well," replied her companion, "I suppose that depends upon what it is made of." "Ah, ask rather upon what it is not made of. But, of course, as you are now one of us, I don't mind telling you that, though it is a most nutritious article of diet, it is manufactured from the little et ceteras which our guests leave on the edges of their plates." "Then I think you had better put it down as 'potage à l'omnibus.'"

Cost of Modern Naval Warfare.

Some expert declares that a sixty-minute engagement between two big fleets of the modern type would involve a cost of over $500,000. And this estimate takes into view only expenditure of ammunition and wear and tear of guns—leaving out of consideration damage to the loss of vessels.

SPECIAL JUDGES.

Cost a Vast Sum During The Year In Indiana.

The auditor of state reports that the cost of special judges for the past year was $17,160. The amount of delinquent taxes collected during 1897 outside of the two counties of Switzerland and Johnson, which have not yet reported was $1,826,961.28. The amount of delinquent taxes uncollected to be transferred to the 1898 duplicate is $3,073,985.67.

A Curious Freak of Nature.

Gus Frisch, who lives near Thirty-seventh and Market streets, is the owner of a curiosity for which he has received many tempting offers from museum managers, but which he refuses to sell. About three months ago Mr. Frisch received from his brother, who is a missionary in India, two eggs that were joined together. A note accompanying them explained that they were peacock eggs and a great curiosity on account of their strange form. Now, Mr. Frisch has a friend in West Philadelphia who is a poultry farmer and the idea struck him to have the eggs hatched in an incubator. In the course of a month the shells fell apart and instead of two separate birds stepping out the pair came forth joined together by a thick band of what appeared to be gristle. By dint of extreme care and careful feeding the strange pair were nursed through babyhood and are now beginning to get pin feathers in various colors. Their odd appearance excites no end of curiosity and they are interesting for another reason. Jack, the right-hand bird, is very fond of Mr. Frisch, while Ned, the other, shows an extreme aversion to his master. When Mr. Frisch returns home from work he gives a shrill whistle and then a fight ensues. Jack tugs toward his master, while Ned pulls the opposite way. Things are only settled by one or the other being whipped, when the victor follows his inclination, dragging the vanquished bird with him.—Philadelphia Record.

Dog With False Teeth.

The greatest curiosity at the kennel show at the Crystal palace, London, was an aged and very sleepy little Schipperke, which boasts of the proud and unique distinction of being the only dog in the world with a complete set of false teeth. His fame speedily spread among the visitors, and he was always the center of a curious crowd and the object of much admiration. At the outset he resented the attempts of strangers to open his mouth in order to inspect his artificial grinders, but eventually he yielded to the inevitable and accepted their attentions with considerable patience. The dog is owned by a dentist, who practices his profession in the city. The poor old doggy's teeth were fitted up by way of an advertisement, as his master intends to open a canine dental office.

A Famous English Prison.

Newgate, London, was disused as an ordinary prison, Dec. 31, 1881. The prison derives its name from the gate, to which was attached a small prison, gradually enlarged. One was erected in 1086 by the bishop of London. It was used as a prison for persons of rank as early as 1218, but was rebuilt about two centuries afterwards by the executors of Sir Richard Whittington, whose statue with a cat stood in the niche till the time of its demolition by the great fire in London in 1666. It was then reconstructed, but becoming an accumulation of misery and inconvenience, was pulled down and rebuilt between 1778 and 1780. During the riots of 1780 the interior was destroyed by fire, but shortly afterwards restored. In 1857 the interior was pulled down, to be re-erected on a plan adapted to the reformatory system.

Cheap Fire Extinguishers.

A simple fire extinguisher can be made at very little cost. If twenty pounds of common salt and ten pounds of sal ammoniac are dissolved in seven gallons of water and the mixture afterward put into quart bottles of thin glass the grenades so made will be found very efficient for extinguishing small outbreaks of fire. The bottles must be tightly corked and sealed so as to prevent evaporation and when a fire occurs they must be thrown in or near the flames so as to break and thus liberate the gas contained to effect the desired object.

Revaccination of Children.

A Polish physiologist, Dr. Jasiewicz, has gathered together some statistics which seem to show that the immunity from vaccination in infancy lasts a much shorter time than is commonly supposed. In the case of twenty-three children under 6 years of age vaccination was successfully performed in seven—35 per cent. Jasiewicz, therefore, recommends more frequently revaccination in childhood, and especially in early childhood. He believes that it protects from other infectious diseases as well as variola.

THE NEWS RECORD.

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S HAPPENINGS.

The Latest News as Flashed Over the Wires from All Parts of the World—Regarding Politics, Religion, Casualties, Commerce, and Industry.

Will Explore Greenland.

No matter what controversies arise, Captain Sverdrup, Dr. Nansen's Norwegian navigator, who directed the perilous course of the Fram during the explorer's first expedition, will lead an exploring party to the frozen north next summer. The authority for this statement is Dr. Nansen himself. Dr. Nansen says the Norwegian Government has already consented to lend Captain Sverdrup the Fram, and that the sturdy seaman would sail for Smith Sound and the unexplored region beyond early in the coming summer. He will take with him about fifty men. Dr. Nansen further says that Captain Sverdrup would make no attempt to reach the north pole, but would devote all of his time to scientific observations along the coast of Greenland. As he did not know of Lieut. Peary's intentions while forming his own plans, Dr. Nansen does not believe it would be an act of discourtesy for Captain Sverdrup to persist in carrying out his scheme, and inasmuch as Dr. Nansen is convinced that Sverdrup conceived the plan at least as early as Peary, he does not think that Peary has a prior claim on the route and project, or that he is entitled to any exclusive privileges on the northern coast of Greenland.

The Business World.

Bradstreets says: The year opens with a tone of quiet confidence pervading nearly all business, with encouraging activity in the iron trade, resumption of work by many thousands of industrial employes in the Western glass industry. The general outlook certainly is not inferior to any previous year at this time. The industrial activity is a special feature, unconfined to any one section, but specially notable in the West. Wheat exports from the United States and Canada the first week of January amount to 3,381,356 bushels, against 5,495,000 bushels last week, 3,108,000 bushels a year ago and 2,371,000 bushels in the corresponding week in 1896. Corn exports amount to 4,080,000 bushels last week, 4,480,000 bushels a year ago and 2,026,000 bushels the same week in 1896.

Spain Ready to Quit.

A special from Washington says: Spain is considering a formal request to the United States to use its good offices to stop the fighting in Cuba. Intimations have been received at the State Department that the Sagasta Government is confident the only way to save Cuba was to accept the often profered good offices of the United States. Conovas repeatedly replied to President Cleveland declining these good offices, and Sagasta did the same last November. Now the Prime Minister has become completely disheartened over the evident failure of autonomy.

Embargo Raised.

Washington special: The following telegram has been received by the Secretary of State from the Minister to Spain announcing the revocation of the embargo on exports of tobacco from Cuba:

"Tobacco bando revoked; leaf tobacco can be exported on paying tax of 12 pesos per 100 kilos. All manufactured tobacco except picadura free of export duty. Santiago de Cuba except from new order. New order takes effect January 15.

Increase in the Army.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs has ordered a favorable report on the bill increasing the military force of the country to the extent of two regiments of artillery. The purpose of the bill is to afford sufficient number of men to protect the new guns and mortars which are being put in place.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Jan. 12.—"In Gay New York."
Jan. 14.—Kellar.
Jan. 15.—"Sowing the Wind."
Jan. 17.—Louis Morrison.
Jan. 18.—"Human Hearts."
Jan. 19.—"An American Girl."

Weyler Not Prosecuted.

Madrid special: The question of calling Gen. Weyler to account for protesting to the Queen Regent against the wording of President McKinley's message is closed, the Public Prosecutor having informed the Supreme War Council that there is no good ground for prosecution.

Icehouses Collapse.

The mammoth icehouses in course of erection at Whitmore Lake, near Hamburg, Mich., collapsed. Two hundred men were at work on the buildings; two are known to have been killed, and possibly four. A dozen or more are injured.

Drought in California.

The crop situation in California is beginning to be serious. Scarcely a drop of rain has fallen in the farming counties for months.

Reciprocity with Italy.

Diplomatic steps are in progress to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with Italy. The United States wants Italian fruits and olive oil, while Italy wants the mercantile products.

Wife and Daughter Murdered.

In a fit of insanity Alexander Carter, a white citizen of Greenville, Tenn., killed his wife and 19-year-old daughter, Montie, while they slept, then shot and killed himself. Carter brained his wife and daughter with an ax. He is said to have been mentally unbalanced for some time.

Appeal for More Money.

The committee in New York having charge of the Henry George monument fund have made another appeal for subscriptions. In their report the committee states that $18,000 has been subscribed, but that this is in no wise adequate for the erection of a memorial such as had been contemplated.

Steamer on the Rocks.

London special: The British steamer Crown, from New York for Leith, remains fast on Inchkeith Island in the Firth of Forth, and is seriously damaged. About five hundred tons of her cargo have been discharged.

SETTLED.

Germany Carries Her Point with China.

Berlin special: The Reichenzanger announces that, according to a telegram from Pekin, an understanding has been reached between Germany and China regarding the cession of Kiao Chou Bay to the former. The arrangement, it is added, is substantially as follows: It is intended by the cession to render possible for Germany the fulfillment of her just wishes for the possession, in the same way as other powers, as a base for trade and navigation in Chinese Waters. The cession of Kiao Chou Bay to Germany takes the form of a lease for an indefinite time. Germany is at liberty to erect on the ceded territory all the necessary buildings and establishments and to take the measures required for their protection.

United States and China.

The Chinese question is becoming one of grave concern. The President and members of Congress who follow foreign questions, are watching developments in China with interest, and even anxiety. It is not a question of sharing in the division of Chinese territory, but one of protecting American interests and preserving American rights secured by treaty. The dismemberment of China threatens every treaty this Government has with that Empire, and American commercial relations with the orient.

It is regarded as time for this Government to guard its own interests in the east, and protect our growing trade there. American ambassadors and ministers have been notified to keep close watch on the moves made by the European powers in China, and let those powers clearly understand that the United States will demand recognition of all treaty rights as now existing.

Want Their Pensions Cancelled.

A special from Washington says: Since the agitation concerning the publication of the list of pensioners has commenced Commissioner Evans has received several letters from pensioners requesting a cancellation of their pensions. One pensioner in Michigan inclosed his certificate and stated his desire to have the same recalled, as he was not entitled to the Government's bounty. He added he would endeavor to return all the money drawn since 1895, when the pension was granted.

Shot Each Other for Fun.

William and James Weller, aged respectively 17 and 13, played Indian with fatal results at their home in East Chattanooga, Tenn. Each of the boys received a shotgun Christmas, and since that time have frequently fired at each other. The tragedy that the neighbors have been expecting came, and William was shot in the head with a load of birdshot. The boy cannot live.

Farmer Dies on the Pike.

Demirah Ward, a farmer, aged 63 years, and residing three miles beyond Olive Branch, Ohio, was found dead on the Batavia and Cincinnati pike a short distance from his home. An investigation by Coroner H. P. Brunaugh of Batavia, showed that Ward had attended an I. O. O. F. oyster supper at Olive Branch, and on his return home had suddenly died of heart disease.

Clipperton Island Incident.

The Administration has paid no attention to the report that the American flag was hauled down on Clipperton Island by a Mexican gunboat, nor will it do so until the matter is brought officially before it. The United States has never formally proclaimed Clipperton Island under its jurisdiction.

Those Perfect Counterfeits.

Washington special: The new counterfeit $100 silver certificates are so perfect as to almost deceive Treasury experts. Six of them were turned in to the Philadelphia Subtreasury, having been accepted by banks as genuine. Similar cases are reported from the Boston and Chicago Subtreasuries.

Would-Be Duelist Arrested.

Gen. George J. Hundley, a former Confederate officer, was arrested at Richmond, Va., on the charge of being about to fight a duel with Col. John Cussions, who was a noted scout in the Confederate army. The trouble grew out of a newspaper controversy.

Starving Cubans.

Havana special: Hundreds of starving women and children surround the American Consulate here asking for food. The Spanish authorities are bent on controlling the distribution of relief from the United States among the starving people in this community.

Young Woman Killed.

At Triana, Ala., Miss Anna Hundley, a popular young lady of Limestone County, was accidentally shot by Edmund Torey. Torey had a pistol in his overcoat pocket. It was discharged accidentally and a bullet lodged in Miss Hundley's heart.

British Loan to China.

London special: The Evening News says it is reported in the city that the negotiations for a Chinese loan of £16,000,000 guaranteed by the British Government, are practically concluded.

Run Down.

At Reading, Pa., Mrs. Hanna Keock and Samuel Flemming, while walking along the railway track were struck by a passenger train and ground to pieces.

HEAVENS' GREATEST SPECTACLE OF THE CENTURY.

HOW THE ECLIPSE WILL APPEAR THROUGH A TELESCOPE

INDIA will be the hub of the scientific world on the 28th of this month. On that date will occur a total eclipse of the sun, and for over four hours during the day darkness will be spread upon the earth and the stars will shine bravely forth. But American stargazers will be seriously handicapped because totality will be confined to the eastern hemisphere. There will be little this side of the Atlantic to indicate the obscuration of the sun. To view this eclipse the Indian Government and several astronomical societies have arranged to occupy all convenient spots along the whole line of totality, wherever the railway system intersects this line. They will witness a sight which few men have been privileged to see.

A total eclipse of the sun is one of the most stupendous, sublime and awe inspiring spectacles that the eye of man can behold. Nature, as if to impress upon us the grandeur of her beauty, lifts the veil from before the borderland and permits us a glimpse of the unknown realms of creation but too seldom and for too transitory moments. A total eclipse occurs in any given spot of the earth but once in many centuries, and even then a thousand and one casualties often rob the spectators of the longed-for spectacle. As the dark shadow of the moon steals over the face of the sun the distinct landscape grows dimmer and dimmer on the horizon with an ashy paleness, and a weird, dim light bathes the universe, till at last, like the rushing of many waters, the moon sweeps over the entire sun and enshrouds the earth in a pall of darkness. Just before the moment of totality—when the corona is almost hovering in sight—suddenly, right round the moon, shooting out into the surrounding darkness, appear huge tongues of fire, often 100,000 miles in length. Their appearance varies in color at different eclipses—sometimes blood red, sometimes rosy pink, and sometimes all the colors of the rainbow. Then comes the supreme moment, when the corona bursts forth in all its glory. It can only be seen, never described. Bright ethereal waves of white surround the sun just outside the lurid red, and stretch into the sky, often a million miles in length. Around the outer corona appear white streamers of light, radiating from different parts of the corona and reaching far out into space. And yet there is more to be seen; for, at the moment of totality, as if by the touch of a magician's wand, the whole sky is lighted in one instant by a multitude of bright stars, dotting the heavens like so many fairy lamps. Then, when the few precious moments of totality are over and the sun appears with yet more sudden swiftness than he disappeared, the stars are extinguished by the same magician's touch, the corona vanishes before one's gaze, and the red flames of the sun, after casting a lingering look behind, as if loath to bid the spectators farewell, shrink into the disk of the fiery orb.

The obscuration will begin generally over the territory where it can be observed at 4:46 in the morning of Jan. 22. It will be visible over all of Asia, Africa and Europe, with the exception of Spain, the west of France, Belgium and Holland. In other words, the western rim of the eastern continent will not be favored. The eclipse will begin in longitude 21 degrees 36 minutes east and latitude [illegible] minutes north at the hour named. It will end generally in longitude 110 degrees 7 minutes east and latitude 35 degrees [illegible] minutes north at 9:53 o'clock, thus affording observers something over four hours. The actual period of totality will [illegible] two minutes.

DURRANT PAYS THE PENALTY.

Legally Hanged for Diabolical Crimes Committed Three Years Ago.

Theodore Durrant, the San Francisco murderer and worse than murderer of Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams, has, after almost three years of dramatic history, at last paid the penalty of his horrible and revolting crimes. Durrant was hanged Friday in San Quentin prison and when the hangman sprung the trap he rung down the curtain on what has been one of the longest, most exciting, sensational and sharply contested murder trials in the history of American criminal law. While Durrant was convicted of but one murder under the law, he was held responsible by public opinion for the murder of both Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams, and it is felt that his death expiates one crime as much as the other. He kept up his remarkable nerve until the last and died protesting his innocence.

On April 3, 1895, Blanche Lamont, a member of the Sunday school attached to the Emanuel Baptist Church, suddenly disappeared from the residence of her aunt, with whom she lived. Nine days later Minnie Williams left her home in Almeda to attend a meeting of young people, and, like Blanche Lamont, she failed to return. The following day, April 13, the body of Minnie Williams was found in the library of Emanuel Baptist Church. It was terribly disfigured, and gave evidences of the girl having given her slayer a fearful battle before she yielded her life.

The machinery of the law was set in motion. Detectives, with hardly any clew to work upon, set out upon their task. In some way the finding of Miss Williams' body was linked with the disappearance of Blanche Lamont. A diligent search was instituted. Every nook and corner of the church was searched, and on the following day the police discovered Miss Lamont's body in the dusty belfry of the church. The method and manner of her death was identical with that of Miss Williams. San Francisco was horrified. The police were astounded at the enormity of the crime, but kept to their work assiduously.

They learned that Theodore Durrant was friendly with the two girls, and that Blanche Lamont was last seen alive in his company. He was promptly arretsed.

COLONEL ARANGUREN.

Daring Young Cuban Commander Who Ordered Ruiz's Execution.

Col. Nestor Aranguren, about whose personality so much interest centers because he met Col. Ruiz's offer of peace by ordering his execution, is one of the younger and most daring of the Cuban leaders. He is in command of a detachment on the outskirts of Havana, and much has he worried the Spaniards. Aranguren's most daring piece of work was a raid into the town of Guanabacoa, a suburb of Havana, across the bay. He held possession of the place for several hours, despite the fact that it contained a strong Spanish garrison. He laid a plot to capture Gen. Weyler on one of his trips into the country, and would probably have succeeded had not the premature explosion of a dynamite cartridge given warning of the presence of the insurgents.

though first reports gave as many as thirty killed.

Great as is the horror, it seems almost miraculous that more were not killed. Writing of the disaster a newspaper man who went down into the pit says: "The writer was hurled backward into the pit and underneath the falling timbers. When the air cleared of the dust and the bright chandelier immediately overhead shone into the death pit, a ghastly sight met the eyes. Faces gashed and covered with blood were everywhere to be seen. The drawn countenances of those who suffered internally and were in the throes of death were also among the number. Old men, with gray hair and beards matted with blood, lay pinned in the heap, along with small boys, distorted with pain. The clothes and faces of all were ashy with the dust of plaster and added to the horror of the scene. From above me, blood from those killed and injured began to trickle, and that, with the cries of the dying for deliverance from their pains made an impression on me which I shall never forget."

England exultingly declares that she holds "the key to the East," but whether she will use it to lock herself in or Germany out remains to be seen. The key trick may not work in the present case.—New York Mail and Express.

HOW WARS IN THE EAST ARE BEING FOUGHT AT PRESENT.

—Chicago Journal.

CONGRESS

Both branches of the National Legislature are again in session, having reconvened on Wednesday, after the holiday recess of two weeks.

The civil service debate began in the House the first day, based on the item in in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill for the maintenance of the commission. It promises to continue for several days. But it is generally admitted on both sides that the appropriation in the bill will stand, as the anti-civil service reformers do not seriously contemplate an attempt to strike it out. The debate therefore is only preliminary to any program which the enemies of the new law may agree upon.

The members of the House are divided into three camps on this question—those who stand by the law, those who advocate its entire repeal and those who desire its modification. These divisions were apparent in the debate on Wednesday, the nature of which was not as stirring as had been anticipated. Messrs. Moody (Rep.) of Massachusetts, Grow (Rep.) of Pennsylvania and Greene (Rep.) of Nebraska defended the law; Messrs. Dockery (Dem.) of Missouri, Robb (Dem.) of Missouri and Pearson (Rep.) of North Carolina opposed it outright, while Mr. Landis (Rep.) of Indiana favored modifications of the law.

The Vice-President laid before the Senate the reply of Secretary Sherman to the Senate resolution requesting information as to the application of the civil service law in his department. From consideration of this reply the Senate drifted into a debate upon the civil service question that was at times quite acrimonious. Mr. Allen of Nebraska spoke on the immigration bill and declared in favor of consular inspection of immigrants.

Secretary Gage in his report to Congress on the civil service recommended exemption from the classified service of about 4,500 places. They comprise deputy revenue collectors, lighthouse keepers, custodians and janitors. These exemptions are in the Treasury Department, but the other cabinet officers are preparing reports making similar recommendations.

Senator Teller introduced a concurrent resolution declaring the bonds of the United States payable in silver dollars, and asserting that "to restore to their coinage such silver coins as a legal tender in payment of said bonds, principal and interest, is not in violation of the public faith nor in derogation of the rights of the public creditor." The resolution was referred to the Finance Committee, but as a majority of the members of that committee are friendly to silver Mr. Teller anticipates that it will be favorably reported.

Thursday in the House was consumed by civil service debate, the executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bill being before the House. Speeches were made by Representatives Grosvenor (Ohio), Johnson (Indiana) and Lloyd (Missouri). In the Senate the bill providing for the holding of a congress of the representatives of different Indian tribes of the United States at Omaha in 1898 and appropriating $45,000 therefor was passed. A bill appropriating $175,000 for a public building at Fergus Falls, Minn., was passed. The bill to protect the name and insignia of the Red Cross was passed.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Report of State Gas Inspector Leach—Fatal Termination of an Old Feud—Warned with Hair Switches—Gave His Life for His Brother.

Gas Belt Report.

State Gas Inspector Leach has just completed gathering the statistics for his 1897 report of the Indiana gas belt. It will show that since gas was struck ten years ago about 5,300 wells have been drilled. Of these 2,200 are now producing gas, and the others have been abandoned. The original pressure was 325 pounds, a year ago about 230, this year showing a remarkably small general decline of only about twelve pounds. He will take a most encouraging outlook for the future and contradict reports that the end of the belt is at hand. He finds that oil operations in the gas belt are practically abandoned. In all the gas field there are but four derricks up and three drilling, where a few months ago there were 100. He thinks the Supreme Court will uphold the State's action against oil operators.

Dance Ends in Murder.

A dance was given at the Smith school house, three miles north of Petersburg. Among the dancers were James Smith and Alexander Quackenbush, between whom a feud existed. Early in the morning they went outside to settle their differences. Quackenbush drew a revolver and shot Smith in the head, he dying in a few moments. Quackenbush surrendered.

Hair Switches as a Warning.

When D. C. Mitchell, James Ludlow and Edward Leatherman, building contractors living in the same neighborhood in Muncie, arose on a recent morning each found a woman's hair switch on his front doorstep. The switches are worth $4 each, and this is accepted as showing that the affair is no joke. The police believe it is a white cap warning of some kind.

Pension Arrives Too Late.

Samuel Munson, a veteran of the civil war, was stricken with paralysis, and death followed at Shelbyville. An hour after death the postman brought his family, who are almost destitute, information that he had been allowed a pension of $72 a month, with several hundred dollars back pay.

Dies in Saving a Brother.

Fred, the 13-year-old son of Robert Jackson of Anderson, was drowned the other morning while saving the life of his 9-year-old brother, who had broken through the ice while skating. After getting him out Fred became too weak to save himself and sank. The body was recovered.

Within Our Borders.

Application has been made for a receiver for the Opalescent Glass Company of Marion.

Ex-Mayor Lyle of Valparaiso dropped dead at his home, after returning from a visit to Chicago.

Robert S. Campbell of North Salem hanged himself in his barn. He had been unable to collect some accounts.

Patrick Hughes was found dead in the big Barkoski ditch at New Carlisle. It is supposed that he died of heart disease.

Oliver Bassett, a Shelbyville farmer, ordered a hunter on his premises to leave. The trespasser shot Bassett. The wound is serious.

At Logansport, the Vandalia depot caught fire from a furnace and burned. Loss, $10,000. Money and tickets could not be saved.

Isaac Beck, local agent of the American Express Company at Muncie, committed suicide by sending a bullet through his brain while in his office.

Alonzo Hind's 4-year-old daughter poured carbolic acid in the baby's eyes at Elwood, destroying the sight and inflicting probably fatal injuries.

The school house at Yeddo was burned. It is feared two children perished in the fire. Two were thrown from a second floor window and badly injured.

By a vote of 7 to 5 the Muncie City Council passed a curfew ordinance, to take effect next month. The ordinance is the same as was introduced at Indianapolis.

Mrs. Owen Falls of Middletown fell in an epileptic fit while carrying her 5-months-old baby. She stumbled prostrate on her infant son and before assistance could arrive the baby was smothered to death.

Daniel Herin, manager of the Three Friends dairy at Zionsville, has agreed to plead guilty to a charge of violating the oleomargarine law. Collector Henry says the Government was defrauded of $3,000 during the six months.

Two hundred miners employed at No. 8 Brazil Block Coal Company mine inaugurated a strike because the bank boss allowed three drivers to work who had not settled their dues in the miners' organization for the last month.

At Muncie, Lafayette Thompson went to the home of Miss Estella Eastman to marry her. The girl's mother was to be surprised, but the surprise was on the other side. The woman attacked the young man and the minister with a butcher knife and ran them off the premises.

Great changes will occur in the economic conditions of the flint glass industry by the introduction of a labor-saving machine, which has at last been highly perfected at Elwood. The Hilde & Owens blowing machines have been put to practical test and found to greatly lessen the cost of production, while increasing the output. By the application of these machines the fact has been demonstrated that 1,000 electric bulbs can be manufactured in one hour at less labor and cost than a hand shop can make 500 bulbs in five hours.

Charles Sutton, aged 20, son of W. J. Sutton, was killed by a passenger train on the C., H. & D. Railroad. He took his sister Cora, a school teacher, to her school, and on his return was killed at the Simpson crossing at Lyons Station.

All strawboard trust plants have been put into operation again, and General Manager Williams of the American's nineteen plants at Anderson, which are included, states that indications are favorable for a steady and long run. These plants number thirty-four, or all but two in the country. About ten thousand men are thus put to work.

D. M. Geeting, State superintendent of public instruction, made the semi-annual apportionment of the common school revenue for tuition purposes. It is based upon the last enumeration, which shows that there are 749,902 persons of school age in the State. To each of these is apportioned $1.28.

J. Kirk Wright of Indianapolis, treasurer of the M. V. McGilliard insurance agency, secretary of the Indiana Insurance Company, and secretary of the Thorp Building and Loan Association, has disappeared. His young wife saw him last about the middle of December, when he left home, saying he was going hunting.

THE ROADSIDE AEOLIAN.

Layton Brewer in the Criterion.

When winds stream over the ragged knoll
The highway lies along
The wires stringing from pole to pole
Give tongue to a voice of song.

A-glint with beams of the morning sun,
They carry a blitheful air,
Humming a burden that seems to run:
"Good news is the word we bear."
This joyous one:
"Good news we bear."

They swing and swing at the breeze's will,
While the heavens smile above
To hear the measure they gaily thrill:
"We're speeding a line of love;"
With scale and trill:
"A line of love."

A cloud and a shadow go sailing by;
To the breeze's failing breath
In sinking cadence the wires sigh:
"Respect for a tale of death!"
More softly still:
"A tale of death."

O the songs are many the wires sing
When the roving wind is sent
To play of gladness or suffering
On its mighty instrument.

KATHIE'S ADVENTURE.

"Girls, I'm going into the country for two weeks; they've got it all planned. Two weeks—just think of it—and I never saw the country."

An eager crowd gathered around the little girl, who had rushed into the playroom of the Orphans' Home, her cheeks bright and her eyes shining with excitement.

"Tell us about it, Kathie?"

"Oh, oh! I wonder if some of the rest of us won't get a chance pretty soon."

"When are you going, Kathie?"

"This afternoon. The lady's name is Mrs. Winslow, and she lives on a farm. I was in the hall when she came in and asked me my name and talked a few minutes; then they sent for me afterwards and asked me if I would like to go, and I thought it would be so lovely; but no—it makes me feel mean to go when the rest of you want to so much and can't."

The child's face had clouded, and she looked around with troubled eyes. But one of the little group around her spoke up bravely.

"Of course it's all right for you to go when they ask you—the rest of us would go quick enough, and probably some of us will by and by."

"Kathie, the matron wants you to get your things ready," called a voice at the door; and Kathie hurried out, joy and sorrow chasing each other over her sensitive face.

She had always lived in the city—this little girl of 12—and in a crowded part of it at that; while many times since her father's death, three years before, she had been without sufficient food, and for the last year she had been motherless. But the Orphans' Home had taken her in and had cared for her, and she was glad of the refuge, although, as young as she was, she thought of the future and longed for a home which she would not be obliged to leave—a home to which she would have a right other than as an object of charity; for Kathie was proud-spirited, and her heart ached for love.

When Mrs. Winslow came at about 3 o'clock she fond her little charge ready and waiting in the hall with the traveling bag beside her, which she had carefully packed according to the direction of the matron. Her cheeks were flushed and her eyes were bright with pleasant anticipation as she shyly returned Mrs. Winslow's greeting and followed her in the waiting cab.

Mrs. Winslow watched her expressive face with sympathetic pleasure and talked to her just enough to make her feel at ease without interfering with her enjoyment of the novel scenes. It was 5.30 o'clock when the train pulled into a little station, and they found Mr. Winslow waiting for them with a horse and carriage.

The drive was half a mile over a winding road, with rolling fields on either side and green grass and trees, the houses just close enough together for companionship, was such a delight that the little girl sat as though spellbound, while her new friends looked into each other's eyes across the top of her head and smiled in sympathy.

"So you're not disappointed, eh, my child?" asked Mr. Winslow.

She looked up quickly into his kind face.

"Disappointed," she repeated, with a little catching of her breath that said more than words. "I didn't think the country could be so pretty."

Mr. Winslow laughed, almost as pleased as she was herself.

"Well, how does this suit you?" he asked as they turned into a pretty driveway and approached a comfortable white house with a deep veranda, surrounded by large trees dotted over a velvety lawn, while from the farther side a profusion of brilliant flowers peeped at them through the tree trunks and bending branches.

"Is this where we're going?" asked Kathie in a half whisper of delight.

"This is where we'regoing," andswered Mr. Winslow, gayly. Then they caught sight of an old lady and a tiny child coming around the father corner of the veranda.

"Hello, Gracie!" cried Mr. Winslow, as the child came running eagerly to meet them, laughing and holding out both hands full of flowers.

Mr Winslow caught her in his arms as he sprung out.

"This is the daughter of the house," he said, holding her up. "Gracie, this is a little girl come to see you and play with you."

Gracie made friends readily and walked up to the house, holding her mamma by one hand and Kathie by the other. Then Kathie learned that the old lady was Mrs. Winslow's mother, and when the latter bent and kissed her and told her she was welcome she thought there was nothing in the world so dear as old ladies.

They walked all around the house before going in, visiting the flower garden, peeping into the barn at the rear and looking out across the rolling fields to the river not far away, whose waters were shining like silver now in the bright sunlight.

And then they went in to get ready for supper.

How good the supper tasted. The fresh air and the perfume of the flowers came in through the open windows of the pleasant dining room, and the faces around the table were healthy and happy; while the snowy bread and delicious newmade butter, with thin slices of boiled ham and fresh new milk just out of the ice-box, the delicate frosted cakes and above all the strawberries, picked less than an hour before and buried in cream, formed a feast that even the daughter of a millionaire might have called perfect, and this little orphan girl, who had known much more fasting than feasting, almost thought it a table from fairyland.

After supper Mrs. Winslow allowed her to brush the crumbs from the snowy cloth and wipe the pretty china, and when this was done, they all went out together and she made the acquaintance of the cows and pigs and poultry and the gentle, kind-eyed horses, after which she romped with Grace under the trees, while the older members of the family sat upon the veranda and looked on, smiling at them.

"Perhaps you've found just the kind of girl you've been wanting, Jennie," said Mrs. Winslow's mother; "she seems careful and gentle, and Gracie takes to her, you can see."

"Yes," said Mrs. Winslow, "Gracie evidently likes her. How glad I would be if I knew I could trust her and she wanted to stay with us right along."

Kathie was delighted with her little chamber. Mrs. Winslow's mother had gone up with her.

"Your room is right next to mine, dear," she said. "I know you'll like it, and I want to show it to you."

And when she had seen how pleased the little girl was with it she kissed her and said good night and left her to look around and enjoy it to her heart's content. It was all blue and white and had two large windows looking out upon the green grass and tall trees and off across the fields to the river. There were books such as children love upon the table, and everything that a child could wish for comfort was there.

Next day was like a dream of fairyland to the little orphan. She helped with the dishes and amused the baby, and they all went for a drive in the afternoon—that is, the two ladies, Gracie and Kathie—and everything seemed too beautiful to be real; several times Kathie pinched her arm slyly to be sure she was awake.

"She seems like one of the family already," said Mrs. Winslow's mother, that evening when the children were playing together. "I don't know when I have taken to a child as I do to her."

"She seems to take to you as much," said Mrs. Winslow, smiling. "But, then, I don't know who could help it."

"Oh, you're partial, of course," she said "but I really believe Kathie is just the girl you want, and it would make such a good home for her. You're abundantly able to have her, too."

Just then the children came running in.

"Where would you rather live, Kathie—in the city or in the country?" asked Mrs. Winslow.

A wondering look came into the child's face, as if she had never thought there could be two opinions upon the subject.

"In the country, of course," she answered, simply, and there was so much of longing and pathos in her voice that both ladies turned their eyes away.

At the supper table next evening Mr. Winslow asked:

"Did you read about the hyena that got away in Chicago the other day?"

"No. Where did it get away from?" asked Mrs. Winslow hurriedly.

"From Lincoln Park," was the answer.

"Oh, dear," cried Mrs. Winslow, "what if it should come out here! I shan't dare let Grace play out at all."

"Oh, I guess it isn't as bad as that," said Mr. Winslow, laughing. "It would be caught or shot before it got so far as this."

"But it might not be," persisted the wife.

"There would hardly be much danger in the day time anyway," said Mr. Winslow. "A hyena is a cowardly beast you know. It might take some of the poultry. Why, Kathie, child, how big your eyes are! I shouldn't have mentioned it. But there isn't any danger—you may sleep just as snug as if Mr. Hyena was back in his cage, as perhaps he is now."

But Kathie was a sensitive child, and all night long she dreamed of hyenas and other wild beasts, and of trying to save Gracie from them, always finding when she started to run with her little charge in her arms that she could barely crawl along, while her pursuers were just upon her. She came down in the morning rather pale, but she said nothing about her dreams or her fears, and no one spoke of the hyena.

Perhaps Mrs. Winslow could not get it entirely out of her mind, for she told Kathie to play out in the back yard with Grace, and not go far away from the house.

"Mr. Winslow is in the barn," she said, "and I would rather have you out that way."

About half way between the house and the barn was an old shed which Mr. Winslow intended to tear down. All at once, in the midst of their play, Gracie started for this shed running as fast as her little fat legs would carry her, and Kathie started after her, calling to her, but the little rogue only screamed with pleasure and ran the faster.

Since hearing of the hyena Kathie had a vague fear of everything which she thought might possibly give a hiding place for a wild beast, and underneath this old shed was surely room enough, while it was dark there and had suddenly grown terrible.

But Baby Grace had no such fears. She ran up to it, laughing, and bent her chubby form to peer under it.

Kathie came up to her and caught her, bending, too, with a sort of fascination caused by her fear. And then for a horrible moment she stared as if both eyes would start from her head.

There, sure enough, were two great flaming orbs, like two jewels, staring at her, and she heard a low growl. But she could not move.

The baby pointed at those shining eyes and laughed; then Kathie's strength seemed to come back. She seized the struggling child in her arms and ran toward the house with her in spite of her kicks and screams, and all the time it seemed as it had been her dreams, and she expected to hear the rush of a flying form just behind her. But she struggled on, and in a moment Mrs. Winslow came running out to ask what it was all about.

Kathie's white face told her plight.

"What is it? What is it, Kathie?" cried Mrs. Winslow, taking the baby in her own arms.

"The hyena—under the shed!" gasped Kathie.

Mrs. Winslow gave a little scream, which was echoed by her mother, as she held the screen door open and pulled them all in.

At that moment there was a rush and a scurry from the shed, upon which all eyes were fixed. A flying patch of maltese and another larger one of black and white cut through the air, barely toching the ground—then the maltese patch turned, doubled into a furious ball, struck the black and white patch like a flash of lightning, there were a series of sharp yells, and the black and white patch was running the other way with his tail between its legs. Mr. Winslow and her mother looked at each other. Then they laughed.

"Mr. Brown's dog again," said Mrs. Winslow. "I guess he'll stay away now."

She opened the door.

"Come here, Tom," she cried. "You're a brave old fellow, but between you and Tige you've given us quite a fright."

Tom looked around two or three times, then walked leisurely up the house, came in and allowed himself to be petted. But he did not have all the honors. Mrs. Winslow and her mother both hugged and kissed Kathie and called her a brave little girl until she was utterly bewildered, for she had never thought it was a brave thing not to leave the baby in the presence of a supposed danger.

That night when she had gone to bed Mrs. Winslow said:

"That settles it. I shall keep Kathie with me as long as she wants to stay; so perhaps, after all, our scare had a purpose."

"I was sure you wouldn't let her go," said her mother.

A few days later the papers stated that the hyena had been shot and Kathie breathed freely once more. But when they told her she could stay with them just as long as she wished—could be one of the family, it took several pretty hard pinches to make her sure that she was awake.—Chicago Record.

NEW OCCUPATION FOR WOMEN.

The Breeding of Angora Cats Presents Financial Possibilities.

Forrest Crissey, in discussing "The Breeding of Angora Cats as a Vocation," in the Woman's Home Companion says:

"It is the general opinion of those cat fanciers that the culture of Angoras is an occupation which any young woman with a fondness for pets and a little of the commercial instinct may pursue with profit as well as pleasure. It is an occupation in which success does not depend upon a special talent. One cannot succeed in literature, music, the arts, or in teaching, without a course of training and an inborn aptitability, but the rearing of cats calls for no mental preparation, or for any rare power in any particular direction. Capital, however, is necessary. Angora cats bring a good price, and it will cost something to establish a kennel. The amount will depend upon the magnitude of the beginning. One may expend a hundred dollars and see, perhaps, three choice thoroughbred adults, or at an outlay of twenty dollars, or thereabouts, one may purchase a male and a female kitten and rear them herself. The fitting up of a suitable kennel need not cost much, but there are important points in the construction and care of the kennel which should not be neglected and which any owner of Angora cats is always ready to explain. The essentials for a successful Angora kennel are not elaborate. Most important is an ample outdoor runway, made of woven wire, with a roof of the same material. This should connect with a cosy house or dormitory. Both apartments should be provided with elevated shelves, as the cats like to sleep as far from the ground as possible. They also enjoy the exercise of jumping up to and down from their elevated perches. Fresh grass and pure milk are absolute necessities. The Angora has been a much slandered animal. The general public believes it be delicate in physique and surly and treacherous in disposition. This is as far from the truth as is possible. They are almost uniformly amiable and affectionate in disposition and possess hardy and vigorous constitutions. They are full of interesting eccentricities, however."

Pumping Oil From the Sea.

The only spot in the world where oil is pumped from the sea is on the Pacific coast below Santa Barbara, Cal. The oil-bearing strata reaches out into the ocean, and the drill scaffolding, looking like windmills without the wheels, crept nearer and nearer the edge until finally many of them were planted in the water. The work was started at extremely low tide and finally the tall scaffolding appeared 20 or 30 feet from the shore, seemingly rising out of the sea. These well at low tide are completely surrounded, the men working on platforms of various heights, which they ascend when working as the sea rises. The structures that are built in the sea have not yet experienced a strong southwester, and it is assumed by some that there will be a fall in oil when a heavy sea begins to break against the scaffolding. The drill is worked in the water by an engine on the beach, the fuel being the oil pumped up, this engine working several wells. At present the most daring well scaffold stands in six feet of water at high tide, and there is a rumor that others will be pushed out into the shallow water. Undoubtedly the entire coast in this vicinity overlies an oil-producing stratum. Off what is known as Moore's wharf, half a mile out, oil rises to the surface in several places.

Banana Culture

The banana is the most prolific of fruits. The produce of one acre planted with bananas will support 25 times as many people as the product of one acre planted with wheat.

San Francisco Correspondence:

Much as has been written concerning Hawaiian scenery, it is a subject about which literature can never be exhausted. People of all nations and of all climates are still continuous in their praise of the tropical verdure and scenery that can be found in the midst of the Pacific Ocean. There has been resident in the Islands for some time a Scotchman—Mr. Charles H. Ewart, of Dalbeattie, Scotland—whose soul was moved by the beautiful vision which he describes in the following poetic language:

"We are in an amphitheater of mountains, rising to an altitude of 3,000 and 4,000 feet, with a glowing raiment of leaf and blossom from base to summit, save in spots where the red earth peeps through the radiant curtain, as a foil to the flames of iridescent greens, and the fire of the blossoms that have enfolded the hills in their shining embrace. Here and there a pinnacle where no plant has found grace to grow, stands out a purple silhouette against the soft blue of a topaz-tinted sky. Caves and fissures are cleft in the steeps of these mountain walls, and torn from the nearly perpendicular cliffs which surround it, alone and apart, stands a pillar of stone twenty yards wide at the base, nearly a thousand feet high, and pointing 'Godward through the blue,' like the spire of some mighty cathedral. This monolith carved and fashioned by some bygone convulsion of nature when 'the hills glared at heaven through folds of fiery hair,' is swathed in a glorious garment of green and gold, chequered with the rose and the azure of the bells of the convolvuli that dangle from the cordon of vines that engird it."

HOME OF DR. M'GREW, THE FATHER OF ANNEXATION.

The valley in the early morning may be clear of mists, and a soft mountain breeze murmuring among the foliage, but at times it is filled with the noiseless ebbing and flowing of white vapor borne in from the sea, and out of this shimmering sea of mist the towers and minarets of the mountains arise clothed with mosses and ferns, and draped with garlands of eddying vines, that cover the faces of the cliffs, and droop over the edges of giddy precipices in "cataracts of bloom," till they are swallowed up in the "White mists that choke the vale, and blot the sides of the bewildered hills."

Although sugar cane is indigenous in Hawaii, little attempt was made toward its cultivation until 1835, when a plantation was started at Kauai, and several sugar mills were built. These mills were worked by the aid of mules and oxen, and the process was slow and laborious. What a contrast to the mills of the present day, where the cane is taken and made into crystals of sugar. There is no royal road to wealth in Hawaii, and any one who anticipates such a condition had better stay away. No man can go about blindfolded and pick up dollars in the streets, but no country offers a better opportunity and final reward for honest, earnest and constant labor. Especially is this true in the coffee industry. The pretty homes and coffee areas of Olaa are an evidence of this.

Butter is selling in Hilo at $1 a roll. It is quoted in Can Francisco at 16 cents to 24 cents a pound. There every field is as dry as a bone. In Hawaii every field is perpetually green. The dairy business offers a much better opening than any line of merchandising. And as a by-product to the dairy, hogs will pay magnificently. Pork is retailing at 25 cents a pound. The advertising columns of the local papers tell a curious story of the strangely backward condition of some of the smaller industries. "Ex Australia: Peaches, plums, oranges, apples, grapes, nectarines, lemons, celery, cauliflowers, potatoes, cheese, roll butter, crab apples, quinces, onions. "These are imported from a country over two thousand miles distant.

FOREST SCENE IN HAWAII.

The Hawaiian Inspector General of Schools, Mr. Henry Schiller Townsend, speaking of the educational system of the islands, says that the population of the Hawaiian Islands is small and the school system is necessarily small. The total population exceeds one hundred thousand slightly, of which fourteen thousand were attending school at the end of last year. Ten thousand were in the public schools. Fifty-six per cent. of all the children attending school at that time were of native Hawaiian descent, and twenty-five per cent. were Portuguese. The remaining nineteen per cent. represents a large number of nationalities.

HAWAIIAN COUNTRY RESIDENCE.

The English language is practically the only language as a means of communication or instruction in the Hawaiian schools. And here lies the difficulty of the work. Just imagine the teachers of California trying to teach the children of that State through the Arabic language. Yet English is probably as difficult for the children of Hawaii as Arabic for those of California. History, literature, natural science and even arithmetic, must be taught under great difficulties. Educative instruction under these conditions is a well nigh unsolved problem. But conditions are rapidly changing. The English language is coming into use as a means of communication among the graduates of the common schools, many of whom have no other language in common. Thus it is creeping into the homes of the people, even. When the children learn even crude English from their mothers, the teacher's task will be much simplified. For many years there have been schools in Honolulu and Hilo especially adapted to the needs of the children of English-speaking parents. Lately similar schools have been opened in a number of other locations, and still others will be opened shortly. These are not essentially different from schools of similar grade in America. A regular public high school is in process of organization in Honolulu, the greater number of the departments being already in working order. The endowed institution known as Oahu College has long offered full preparation for any college in America, and many of its graduates have entered leading American colleges on advanced standing.

HAWAIIAN HARBOR.

The natives are very found of music. The royal Hawaiian band, which a few years ago made a tour through the United States, was composed of native Hawaiians, all of whom were accomplished musicians.

Parisian Lady Wears Men's Clothes

Mme. Dieulafoy is one of the best known women in Paris and one of the most famous archaeologists in the world. She discovered the superb ruins of the Temple of Darius, now in the Louvre, at Paris, and for this notable achievement the French gave her the decoration of the Legion of Honor and the privilege of wearing men's clothes at all times. She avails herself of this freedom, and is said to wear the most stylish trousers, coats and hats in Paris. She and her husband have the same tailor. The couple are thoroughly congenial, and have a most beautiful home and salon, where the savants assemble and many brilliant discussions take place. Mme. Dieulafoy wears short hair and conducts herself like a man, though showing many little feminine ways.

ENGLISH GHOST STORY.

A Grewsome Discovery and the Apparition that Followed.

From Halton Holegate, a village near Spilsby, Lincolnshire, comes a most mysterious story, which one can easily imagine is causing the utmost sensation among the simple country folk in the neighborhod. For some time rumors of human bones having been discovered under a brick floor of a farm-house near the village, of strange, unearthly tapping and the like having been heard and of a ghost having been seen, have been afloat, and it was with the intention, if possible, of sifting the mystery to the bottom that a Lincoln reporter has just visited the scene. The farmstead where the weird sounds are said to have been heard and the ghost seen stands back some distance from the high road and is occupied by a Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and their man servant. Mrs. Wilson narrated the following story:

"We came here on lady day last. The first night or so we heard very strange noises about midnight, as though someone was knocking at the doors and walls. Once it seemed as though someone was moving all the things about in a hurry downstairs. Another time the noise was like a heavy picture falling from the wall, but in the morning I found everything as right as it was the night before. The servant man left, saying that he dare not stop, and we had to get another. Then about six weeks ago I saw 'something.' Before getting into bed, my husband having retired before me, thought I would go downstairs and see if the cow was all right, as it was about to calve. I did so, and when at the foot of the stairs, just as I was about to go up again, I saw an old man standing at the top and looking at me. He was standing as though he was very round-shouldered. How I got past I can't say, out I darted past him into the bedroom and slammed the door. Here I went to get some water from the dressing table, but feeling that someone was behind me I turned round sharply, and there again stood the same old man. He quickly vanished, but I am quite certain I had seen him. I have also seen him several times since, though not quite so distinctly."

Mrs. Wilson next conducted her interviewer to the sitting-room, where it appeared a grewsome discovery had been made. The floor in one corner, it seems, had been very uneven, and a day or two ago Mrs. Wilson took up the bricks, with the intention of relaying them. No sooner had she done this, however, than a most disagreeable odor was omitted. Her suspicions being aroused, she called her husband and the two commenced a minute examination. Three or four bones were soon turned over, together with a gold ring and several pieces of old black silk. All these had evidently been buried in quicklime, the bones and silk being obviously burnt therewith. The search after this was no further prosecuted, but a quantity of sand introduced and the floor quickly leveled again.

Asked what her own opinion was on the mysteries, Mrs. Wilson confidently asserted her belief at some time or other foul play had taken place. She was fully persuaded in her own mind with regard to the apparition, for though it was suggested she might have been mistaken she disdained the idea as being beneath notice. Dr. Gray, to whom the bones were submitted, stated that they might be those of a dog or pig.

Writing later, the correspondent says Dr. Gray on further examination states the bones are undoubtedly human, but he believes them to be nearly 100 years old.—London Daily News.

How the Visitors Saw Tennyson.

V. C. Scott O'Connor contributes to the Century an article on "Mrs. Cameron, Her Friends, and Her Photographs." The following new anecdote of the late laureate is told:

Mrs. Cameron's house at Freshwater, the rendezvous of many distinguished men and women, was in some sort the refuge of many whose heart's desire it was to know Tennyson. No one she could help was ever turned away; none willingly would she have left "out of the feast of life." With Tennyson she was on terms of friendly intimacy, being in her relationship with him, as in all other matters, a law unto herself. She could, and did, say anything to him, though always within the limits set by high-bred feeling and a heart that was never at fault. One day some American acquaintances of hers, visitors at Freshwater, went up to Farringford in the expectation of seeing Tennyson. But soon after they returned to Dimbola with a rueful tale of disappointment. "Oh, he won't see you?" she said. "Come with me!" And thereupon hastily throwing on her shawl, she took them straightway to Farringford, entered the open hall door, and marched them into the drawing-room, where Mr. Tennyson and his wife were seated. "Alfred," she said, "these strangers come from a far country to see the lion of Freshwater; and" —waving her hand—"behold—a bear!" Tennyson, ever gentle with his friends caught her direct humor, and broke into a hearty laugh, receiving his visitors in the kindliest manner.

Leprosy in France.

At the international congress of leprosy, which has just been brought to a conclusion at Berlin, the startling fact was elicited that the disease is very prevalent in France, especially in the northern districts thereof, and that it is on the increase. This discovery and the data furnished by the French medical authorities contributed in no small measure to the resolution voted by the Congress to the effect that leprosy is contagious.

Health Value of Hobbies.

A well-known doctor is convinced of the health value of a hobby. He says: "If you cannot find pleasure in the study of the very many wonders that surround you, if you care not for geology, natural history or astronomy, collect walking sticks, buy and cherish old and cracked china, fill up albums and scrap books, or even gather together autographs and postage stamps, anything sooner than be idle."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....January 13, 1898.

THE CAUCUS.

First Meeting of the Democrats Well Attended and Enthusiastic

The called meeting of the democratic committemen and voters, met at Auburn Saturday afternoon January 8, at 2 p. m. in the office of D. M. Link. On being called to order, Chairman Frederick being absent, Senator Nusbaum was made chairman and J. A. Barns secretery. The business of the meeting was stated, which was to select DeKalb's delegates to the district meeting to be held at Ft. Wayne Dec. 11, at which a district chairman was to be elected. The delegates to Fort Wayne were to be 18, or one for each 200 votes cast for president at the last election. The meeting decided that the persons present from any township should choose that township's delegates But if no one was present, the delegates whould be chosen by a vote of those present at this meeting. Fairfield, Richland, Troy, Stafford, and Smithfield, were not represented. The other nine had several men at the meeting, there being in all over fifty present. The delegates chosen are:

Butler, J. D. Rowley; Concord, Mahlon Baker; Fairfield, Solomon Reinoehl; Jackson, Frank Henderson; Keyser, L. J. Gengler, E. B. Thumma, J. B. Mager; Newville, D. J. Blair; Richland, M. J. Thomas; Smithfield, John Hoffelder and Wm. Clark; Stafford, Joseph Wilsen; Troy, Joseph Bell; Union, D. M. Link, W. B. Brown and Arnold Blodgett; Wilmington, C. P. Urie and John H. W. Krontz.

A motion was made by Mr. Baxter, that the delegates who attended at Ft. Wayne should have power to fill vacancies. Carried. Phil Plum offered a motion, that it is the sense of this meeting that if Hon. T. R. Marshall is a candidate for district chairman, we should support him. Carried. After considerable informal consultation, and speeches by Carr, Gengler, Baxter Barns and others, a motion was made by C. P. Hamman and seconded by W. H. Leas, that we call a meeting in two weeks, on Dec. 22, in the several townships, at such hour as the chairmen thereof should select, to elect new committeement, and these new committeemen should be called to meet one week later, Dec. 29, at Auburn to reorganize and elect a county chairman. This after some discussion, was carried, with the proviso that if it should not be convenient for Keyser to meet on the date named, they could meet at such other time as would be convenient for them, and that until new committeemen should be chosen, Keyser's present committeemen would be entitled to act for that township under all circumstances. A resolution was passed, that the secretary should notify chairman Frederick of the work of the meeting, and so that he might issue the call, and requesting that he be present at the meeting of January 29. The secretary was directed to send copies of the report of this meeting, as well as of the call to the various papers of the county in sympathy with the principles of the democratic party After some further remarks in which several others, including Lanning, W. B. Brown, D. J. Blair, Nusbaum, and others participated, the meeting adjourned.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Cures Coughs

"My wife was suffering from a dreadful cough. We did not expect that she would long survive, but Mr. R. V. Royal, deputy surveyor, happened to be stopping with us over night, and having a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with him, induced my wife to try this remedy. The result was so beneficial that she kept on taking it till she was cured."
R. S. HUMPHRIES, Sansey, Ga.

"My little daughter was taken with a distressing cough, which for three years defied all the remedies I tried. At length, on the urgent recommendation of a friend, I began to give her Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After using one bottle I found to my great surprise that she was improving. Three bottles completely cured her."

Trav. Salesman Wrought Iron Range Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is put up in half-size bottles at half price—50 cents.

CALL FOR CAUCUSES.

Democratic voters and all who are in accord with their principles as enunciated at the last democratic national convention, are requested to meet in the several townships on at 1 p. m. or such other hour as they may agree on, and choose their new committeemen for the coming two years. And the committeemen then and there chosen are requested to meet at Auburn January 29, at 1 p. m. to elect a county chairman to serve for the next two years.

W. J. FREDERICK,
Chairman.

LARGEST RECORDED

Was The Sunday School at The M. E. Church Yesterday.

The Secretary's records shows that the attendance at Sunday School at the M. E. Church, yesterday was the largest recorded in the past eight years. There was a large increase in attendance, the previous Sunday, as noted last week, but the number was swelled to 271 yesterday. This report is quite encouraging and shows that the recent revival has awakenend a great interest in the Sunday School as well as the church. Great credit is due Rev. Guild for his untiring efforts during these long meetings. If any of our readers have not been in the habit of attending Sunday School they will find well organized classes there and they should drop in next Sunday and help swell the number.

OH! I SAY!

have you given Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a trial? It will cure you of your constipation, will correct your stomach troubles and make your life werth living. Trial size bottles 10c, (10 doses 10c) large sizes 50c and $1.00, of F. E. Davenport.

COURT.

The case in regard to the Garrett Polanders, resulted in a verdict of $200 in favor of Lena Slupinski. (We had her nane spelled wrong in the earlier reports.) Of this $200, $25 is to be cash down; $25 in three months, and the rest to be paid $5 each month.

Monday, the case of Bergdorff against Hoffmeyer, came up, and was tried. It is a case from Fairfield. Wm. Bergdorff and Louis Hoffmeyer, had trouble. Finally they had a fight over some shocks of corn that each claimed. Each one said the other struck first, but it seems that Bergdorff who is much the smaller man, got the worst of it. He is the man who carries mail from Corunna to Fairfied and he claimed he was unable to carry it for a few days, and in fact was under the care of the doctor. So he had Hoffmeyer brought before Justice Stomm on a charge assault and batterly and claimed money damages. He was given $150 damages, which Hoffmeyer thought too big and so appealed it to court. Here Bergdorff's lawyers were Wickwire of Ashley, and Link, of Auburn. The attorneys for Hoffmeyer, were W. H. Leas and John W. Baxter. Evidence was given that showed that Hoffmeyer rushed at Bergdorff when the fight began, with a big knife in one hand and a whetstone in the other. From this, one would naturally suppose that he was a careful and thoughtful man, and foreseeing that the fight might be long and tedious, and that his knife might lose its edge by frequent contact with the sandy little German's hide, he would come provided with a whetstone so that he might sharpen up his weapon whenever it got dull. But after the first few rounds, it is not very clear, how the fight was carried on. The only point clear is that Bergdorff was badly whipped. The four attorneys made lively pleas and at about 8:30 in the evening the case was given to the jury. This morning Tuesday they brought in a verdict giving Bergdorff $100 damages.

Among other court items not heretofore reported, we see that Mary and Jesse Chaney were divorced. Albert Robbins and Phil Plum have been appointed jury commissioners for 1898.

MR. BROWN RETIRES

From The Big Hardware Firm of Brown, Culbertson & Boland.

The partnership heretofore existing beteen the big hardware and agricultural establishment of Brown, Culbertson & Boland has been dissolved W. B. Brown retiring from the firm For many years this establishment has been doing business in Auburn, and they also conducted a branch store at Butler and Spencerville. Farmers who have patronized them all these years found them pleasant to deal with.

The business relations of the firm have always been pleasant and it is by mutual consent that Mr Brown retires. In conversation with one member of the firm we learn that in all the years that they have done business together their relations have been pleasant and agreeable. Never have they had a word. This certainly is a remarkable record for a concern where many are interested. Mr. Brown's interest has been purchased by Mr. Culbertson and Mr. Boland and they will continue the business as before. They have had all the experience necessary and the success of the firm in the future is assured. We have not learned in what business Mr. Brown will engage. However he is capable of doing almost anything and we look to see him soon engaged.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

Two Couples Joined In Marriage By Rev. Engleman.

Perry E. Bogear and Mary A. Meier were united in holy wedlock at the home of the bride's parents in Jackson township, by Rev. Geo. Engleman. The occasion was a quiet one, only the parents of both parties and the sister of Mrs. Bogear and Mr C. Gatwood from Avilla being present. They will make their home at Garrett, where Mr. Bogear is employed by the B. & O. Ry. We wish them a happy and peaceful life.

Julius H. Hill and Huldah F. Wimmer were united in holy wedlock at the parsonage of the Reformed Church on Fourth-st, at Auburn, Ind., by the pastor Geo. Engelman. Mr. Hill and wife have an elegant home at Garrett where Mr. Hill is contractor. We wish them a prosperous and happy life.

THE SUN.

may shine brightly and the birds may sing their sweetest songs but if your stomach is not right there is no happiness for you. Keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the house and use it according to directions and the sun and birds will not shine and sing in vain. oCnstipation and indigestion cured. Trial size 10c (10 doses) and in 50c and $1.00 bottles. Of F. E. Davenport.

EDGERTON FIRE.

At ten o'clock last evening the Woolen Mills at Edgerton, Ohio, were destroyed by fire. The loss is a total one, as only a few pieces of goods were saved. The origin of the fire is unknown as no fire had been under the boilers for a week or more. Light insurance. It will be quite a loss to Edgerton and surrounding country. A. H. Gillis came over from there this morning and reports the loss.

STOP THAT!

Does the Wabash road know what it is doing by running that 9 a. m. train west bound through Butler, Auburn and Auburn Junction without stopping? If they don't, it is high time they stop and think. This train is the one that is most depended upon for best local passenger business on any point of their line, at least from Detroit to the Illinois line. The bulk of the Butler people depend on this train, as it brings them right into this place at the best time. Now, they must come by some other train and will go to Waterloo, probably, and come by Lake Shore trains, so that the Wabash will lose all of that business. It will also lose much Auburn business. It will pay the Wabash authorities to "reconsider" this inconvenient change

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE.

GRAND CONCERT.

And One of The Best Ever Given In The City.

We cannot speak too highly of the concert given by the Trumpet Note Band at the Opera House last evening. It was fine. The attendance was also good the higher priced seats especially being filled better than they have for some time. The program as published in the DAILY was carried out to the letter except the encores which were enthusically called for at every new number. The first and last parts of the program were what might be called "chorus" work by the band, whose numbers had been swelled to at least twenty by the addition of other talented players. Mr. Niles was leader and is easily a master in this work. And the band covered themselves with glory. They showed the gratifying improvement that results from careful teaching and training, won golden opinions from all. The middle part of the program was of the highest order of merit, as it called out such talent as Dr. Buchtel, Mrs Garwood, Mr. Niles, Mr. Hart, Mr. Chapman, Mrs. Fisher and the accompanpists, Miss Hoffman and Miss Shilling. Mrs. Fisher is well known to many of our people, as several years of her girlhood were spent in this county. She has become an accomplished singer, her voice being sweet, powerful and of fine quality and above all else well cultivated. Our people listened to her in raptures. And when in response to continued applause, she returned to sing "Suanee River," the sweetness and clearness of her voice were more than ever apparent. We seldom hear such rare vocal music. Her rank in the musical world is assured at the highest sound. And Dr. Buchtel never did better. He and Mrs. Garwood are a pair of musicians, she with the piano and he with the violin, who have no fear of a comparison with the most talented. We should not forget the clarinet piece by Messrs. Niles, Buchtel, Hart, Chapman or the accompaiment Miss Hoffman gave to Mrs. Fisher or Miss Shilling for Mr. Niles' clarinet solo. Altogether, this was one of the finest entertainments this town has ever had. Now let us all go to work and subscribe the stock for the big band. The way is clear and only this step is lacking. A concert like that of last evening opens our eyes to the possibilities we may look for with the coming enlarged band.

Scratching and Hair-Pulling.

Last Saturday, about three o'clock, two buxom girls, about sixteen years old, became involved in a dispute over a young gent living east of town. One of the girls seeing the other one talking to her "fellow," became very jealous and began calling her bad names. The word battle reached its climax by the time they had proceeded south on Main-st as far as S. V. Tarney's, where they clinched with a determination to end all further disputes about the matter. For fifteen or twenty minutes they pulled hair, each with both hands fastened tightly into the hair of the other. While there was no blood shed, yet the air was filled with hair and fur for several hours after the battle. Now, girls, whenever you have any more disputes to settle, don't undertake to do it by fighting. It looks bad enought to see boys and men fight, but much worse to see girls fight. There are enough "fellows" for all of you if you will be nice little girls and work your cards right.

NOT FOR EVERYTHING

But if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, you will find Swamp-Root just the remedy you need People are not apt to get anxious about their health soon enough. If you are "not quite well" or "half sick" have you ever thought that your kidneys may be the cause of your sickness?

It is easy to tell by setting aside your urine for twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder need doctoring.

There is satisfaction in knowing that the great remedy Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, fulfills every wish in relieving weak or diseased kidneys and all forms of bladder and urinary troubles. Not only does Swamp-Root give new life and activity to the kidneys—the cause of trouble, but by treating the kidneys it acts as a tonic for the entire constitution. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar, or by mentioning Auburn COURIER and sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton New York you may have a sample bottle of this great discovery sent to you free by mail.

PROPOSED SITE

Map Showing Location of Waterworks Plant.

Subjoined the readers of the COURIER will find a sketch of the proposed location of water works and electric light plant at Auburn Indiana.

The proposed location is immediately south of and adjacent to the original plot of Auburn and comprises about twenty acres of land, one half of which is covered with a beautiful native forest. Cedar Creek enters the tract near the south-east corner and flows in a general north-westerly course across the same, turning near the western boundary with a graceful curve southward and leaving the tract near the south-west corner. The spot is attractive and offers to the æsthetic taste of the citizens of our city an opportunity, which if properly employed will prove to be their pride and fully justify the wisdom and forethought of those who sought its selection.

This location was selected after mature deliberation and a careful comparison with all other tracts offered. Some of the reasons for this selection may be briefly stated as follows:

1st—The location of the plant is remote from the business and residence portions of our city and insures freedom from disagreeable noise and gruesome smoke.

2nd—The location of the city water supply will be remote from the contaminating influences of populous districts.

3rd—The location of plant upon the line of a railroad will save the cost of hauling fuel.

4th—The location contemplates the growth of our city toward its railroad center, Auburn Junction.

5th—The confluence of the principal streets of our city being near the place selected for the location of the proposed plant, will render the distributing system of water mains, natural, efficient and economical.

6th—The ownership of this tract by the city will permit of the construction of a main sewer to Cedar Creek and the disposal of sewage therein, without entering upon the lands of private parties or other corporations.

7th—Should a present or future contingency require the incineration of the sewage of our city, then the location in question is the one, and the only one toward which the sewage of Auburn would gravitate and would therefore save the expense of costly sewage pumping machinery.

8th—The proposed location offers favorable conditions for the distribution of a deep well system over large area should future requirements demand the same.

9th—The proposed location offers the most favorable conditions for the construction of a reservoir or artificial lake and should the deep well system fail to furnish adequate fire protection the an artificial lake becomes not an ornament but an absolute necessity

10th—In many commonwealths the state boards of health compel city authorities to locate their water plants upon suitable outside property and often condemn plants improperly located Therefore in view of all these facts, is it not wise for our people to look beyond the narrow realm of the present into the broader domain of the future?

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the estate of Thomas Chandler deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 2n day of February, 1898, and show cause, if any, why my final settlement account with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness my name this 6 day of January 1898

MARSALL FOR CHAIRMAN

The democrats of the 12th congressional district met at Fort Wayne yesterday in the City Hall, to elect a district chairman, who is also a member of the state central committee. They were called to order at 2 p. m. by the retiring chairman, T. R. Marshall, of Columbia City, who after reading the call, made a most brilliant and effective speech. It was not only brilliant and effective but eminently wise and conservative in tone. He counseled harmony, and forbearance, but no giving up of the principles of democracy. He was cheered frequently and at the close there was loud and long cheering. The next in order was the selection of a permanent chairman for the meeting and W. B. Brown of DeKalb was unanimously chosen, Mr. Michaels, of Ft. Wayne was made secretary, with all the democratic editors assistants. The chairman made a few remarks, and then declared the nomination of a district chairman to be the next in order. Hon. C. M. Brown, of DeKalb, in a well worded speech, put in nomination, T. R. Marshall, the retiring chairman. This was enthusiastically received, and seconded by several. It would have been passed in a minute, but Dr. Parke, of Kendallville, rose for a speech. He was not satisfied with Marshall's loyalty to free silver, and wanted to have him make a distinct pledge on that point. This started a debate and several took sides for and against, as to the wisdom or jurtice of such a step. Marshall himself made a short speech saying he did not see how he could make himself clearer or how he could be more loyal to the party than he had been. He evidently resented what he believed to be an uncalled for suspicion. Among others who took part, was Harry Colerick. He put in a resolution requiring a pledge from the house, and from Marshall, to support each and every plank in the Chicago platform and to work for the renomination of W. J. Bryan. There was a good deal of sparring back and forth, and Hon. A. A. Adams, of Columbia City, raised the point of order, that there were now two distinct resolutions before the house, the first being the election of chairman, which had been moved and seconded, and the second in which this resolution had been moved and seconded Colerick saw the trouble and healed it by asking to have his resolution made a part of the original motion for the election of Marshall, which was allowed by the chair and the consolidated motion passed without a dissenting vote. Mr. Marshall, followed with some remarks, in which he happily asked the united support of all, and especially made a hit at some of those who were charging him with not being loyal, by saying he hoped they would all prove to be as loyal to party, to platform and candidates as he had been. This was recognized at once, as a thrust at several of the speakers, who have been about as well known for bolting as for standing by by the party. The meeting then adjourned. The attendance was very large, and there was the best of feeling. Mr. Marshall has made an able chairman, and there was not a delegate who could say anything against him. He is our leader for two years.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

HANNA ELECTED

The Long and Bitter Struggle In Ohio is Over.

Reports by telegraph say that at the joint session today, of the Ohio legislature, Mark Hanna got the necessary 73 votes, the same he had yesterday when the two houses voted separately. This gives him the election for both long and short terms by a bare majority of one.

SEDAN.

John Bohler and family, of Smithfield visited with Henry Scuster Sunday.

John May and wife spent Sunday with their daughter Mrs. B. L. Hine

Will and Ed Casselman are the boss fishers of Sedan. They caught about 30 pounds of nice fish one day last week.

J. G. Raub is but very little improved at present writing. Dr. Rudolph is attending.

O. L. Wheaton has been laid up with rheumatism the last week.

W. H. Crame the popular Sedan merchant is bound to keep up with the times.

There are two good small pieces of land in this vicinity for sale cheap. For particulars call on or address S. W. Guthrie, Sedan.

ST. JOE.

George Swineford of the Hub was in town last Thursday on business.

A goodly number of St. Joeites had business in court at the Hub last week

Free Abel of Defiance, O., came up on Thursday to visit with his parents and other friends.

Mrs. Etta Barren and two sons visited in town three days last week.

James H. Abel has been quite sick for the last few days, but at this writing is some better.

Will Curie has sold his 80 acre farm north of town, 40 acres to Delas Greenhoe and 40 acres to the Jackson Bros.

A big crop of ice has been gathered by our business men and everything is in good shape for keeping cool during the heated term next summer.

B. A. Woodcox who was quite sick last week is greatly improved at this writing.

Josiah Kimes and wife of AnnArbor, Michigan have been in this vicinity for several days visiting with the families' of P. A. Shurts and B. A. Woodcox, who are brothers-in-law of Mr. Kimes.

Mr. Kimes since coming here has suffered a light stroke of paralysis and is in a very serious condition.

The telephone of which we have heard so much is likely to become a reality. We understand that O. H. Widney who is at the head of it has succeeded in raising the neccessary funds and early in the spring we may be connected with other parts of the world by telephone.

We are informed that the Wineland Hoop Factory will move to St. Joe county, Mich. the first of April. Scarcity of elm timber is given as the cause of removal. This move will be severely felt by our town as it will throw quite a number of men out of employment.

While out hunting last Friday, Marsh Andress, B. Abel, Roy Kinsey and another man, when opposite the residence of Hiram Reasor, their dog by barking called their attention to a hollow log near by, upon investigation they found four pair of shoes and that the size of the shoes correspond to the size of the feet and now each have a pair of new shoes. Now the mystery is how the shoes got there.

BUTLER.

R. C. Camdbell and wife returned from Chicago last week.

Miss Lizzie Champion is still confined to her room by serious illness.

Elisha Hallett an old and well-known citizen of this township, and for recent years a citizen of Butler, was buried last week, He was 67 years old.

A Mr. Wiley a former resident of this vicinity, but now of Norther, Mich., was visiting Thomas Revet and other Butler relatives last week.

J. A. Campbell was called to Angola to adjust a small loss last week.

The eastern papers continue to locate the coming Lake Shore division point at Butler.

James P. Campcell, living east of Butler is reported sick.

A large number of our old people in town and vicinity are in rather poor health. The winter though one of the most enjoyable for some years, does not seem to be conducive to good health among the old people.

Fred Oberlin, lying on West North-st., familiarly known as "Big Fred," is dangerously ill with chances against his recovery.

Dr. Kester was elected superintendent of the M. E. Sunday school recently to succeed J. M. Linkenfelter who held the position fifteen consecutive years. The doctor starts out with his usual push and success seems assured.

Uncle Andrew Casepeer, though past 90 years of age, still walks up town as spry as the average man of health his years.

Our factories are running full time with increased forces.

The Leighty Meat Market has pulled down the blinds, locked the doors.

A Clean Sweep

A renovation in winter stock is even more necessary than a change in politics. There never was, and never will be, more need for heavy raiment than exists at present; and never was, nor can be, more of a disposition on our part to clean out.

Now For It.....

Its quite probable that the only way most of us will ever make money is by saving it. Unless chances are presented for doing that, the barrel gets empty and the cruse runs dry.

POOR BABY

Fell Into a Boiler Containing Hot Water.

At Fort Wayne yesterday morning the three year old child of Mr. and Mrs Paul Keller fell into a boiler of hot water and its entire body was immersed. So severe was the pain that it threw the child into spasms. When its clothes were removed patches of flesh came off with the clothes which were worn next to the skin. The child's mother was scrubbing the floor, when the little child slipped and fell backward in the boiling water. Late last night the child was still living but there is no hope for its recovery.

MARRIED.

A. C. Leins of Corunna and Miss Myrtle Rohm of Sedan.

The marriage of A. C. Leins and Miss Myrtle Rohm occured at the home of Rev. Campbell, of Corunna, last Thursday at 12 o'clock. After the ceremony the young couple returned to the home of the bride's parents, where an elegant dinner was served. There were present only the immediate friends of the contracting parties. Both Mr. and Mrs. Leins have many friends in the vicinity in which they lived. They were the recipients of many useful and valuable presents. Mr. and Mrs. Leins will move on his father's farm where they will commence house keeping at once, and right too; for they are new subscribers to the COURIER.

Genteel Poverty In Washington.

Many Fashionable Men of the Capital's "400" are Poor Department Clerks.

"I never saw so much genteel poverty before as exists in Washington, D. C.," writes a cabinet member's wife in the January Ladies' Home Journal. "You have no idea how many of these Department clerks tremble in their boots for fear of losing their positions with a change of administration and enforcement of the Civil Service rules. The Departments unfit both men and women for any other occupation. You would be surprised to know how many of the fashionable society men are Department clerks. Some of the most attractive among them get a majority of their meals out of society. They rent a room for a small amount, and dine out every night, frequently getting a lunch or breakfast from a friend. In return, they make it their business to be entertaining and always in a good humor, ready to be of service and to initiate new people into the etiquette of the place."

FOR ALL WOMEN

NINE-TENTHS of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

Groom 100 Bride 77.

John J. Overton, aged 100, and Mrs. Mary Henderson, who owns up to 77 years, were married in St. Joseph, Mo., a few days ago. The old man says he is still able to split rails, break colts and lift at barn raisings.

WHERE DEER DRINK.

NIGHTLY VISITS TO A SPRING IN ARIZONA TERRITORY.

Strange March Witnessed by a Prospector in the Lava Beds—Herd Approaches the Water When the Dignified Buck Scout Signals.

Canyon of Tres Alamos.

No region in the world possesses as much of weird grandeur as the lava beds of Arizona. No portion of this wild district is so weird, so fantastically wild as the narrow canyon of Tres Alamos. Securely hidden in the mountain fastnesses, it is the most forbidding of all the many gulches with which the region abounds. Vegetation is almost absent. But three evidences of what more favorable ground might do are present. These are the three cottonwood trees which give the canyon its name. The rocks which compose the sides and floor of this strange canyon are what are known as conglomerate among prospectors. They contain a badly mingled mass of metals, including the precious metals, but they are so fearfully mixed that they are useless for any scientific purpose. Few men have ventured into the canyon, still fewer would care to remain longer than necessary to drink of the spring which gushes out of the rocks at the roots of the trees.

One man who has prowled about Arizona has seen wilder sights than L. J. Hart. He is a prospector who has spent many years wandering about the Territories in search of pay dirt. He is known all over the Pacific coast and has been in every nook of the dreary region where the earth vomited out its floods of lava rock. He put in several days and nights in Tres Alamos and witnessed the wild animals on their nightly visits to the spring for water. He recently made a visit to Phoenix after having remained in the canyon for a time. He relates an interesting story of his observations while out in the lava beds. He describes the canyon and then continues as follows:

A Wonderful Country.

A cold spring pours out of the solid rock and chatters its way noisily down the narrow canyon. Here, at the dead of night, come the beasts of the barren mountains for miles around to drink of the running waters. And here, lying quietly in the moonlight, I have been a silent spectator of some of the queerest sights that man's eyes ever beheld. I have seen the deer and the wildcat and the coyotes and the tufted lynx, and even a lumbering cinnamon bear or two, come here to drink. I have lain quite still in the moonlight and watched them for hours, and there is no more fascinating spectacle to be seen in the open.

"It is a wonderful country, and no man ever set foot into a wilder region. There are three cottonwood trees, where the spring pours out of the rock, and along the banks of the creek are many willows. Near the spring is a level spot of ten acres. The first night I camped there I was tired. But after that I stayed on for two weeks because of the wonderfully weird charm of the place. The walls of the canyon are marvels of conglomerate malpais or lava. There's gold, iron, copper, cobblestone, granite, marble, sandstone and silver ore all ground up in a mountainous mass that is as bare of vegetation as the day it poured from the heart of the earth. It was vomited forth in the most hideous shapes imaginable, and seen in the moonlight these shapes take on all kinds of horrible and wonderful aspects. It's a region worth traveling miles to see, and you can reach it in a day's lope from Congress.

Buck Acts as Scout.

"But the average man who goes there will not see what I saw in the moonlight. I'll tell you how the deer come to drink—it's the prettiest sight in the world. The first night I was on the point of going to sleep, when I heard a snort from the top of the bluff above me. I looked, and there was a big buck with magnificent antlers standing on the very brink, his dusky figure sharply outlined against the sky. In a moment his snort was answered by the patter of many feet, and he was surrounded by a pack of deer. I counted eighteen in all. The big buck ventured cautiously down the lava slope, and when half way down he halted, tossed his antlers about as he sniffed the air, and then gave another musical snort. At this signal on came the rest of the pack. They halted just behind him. Then he ventured further down, and presently stood so close to me that I could have hit him with a pistol shot. Here he halted again, again tossed his head up and down, right and left, then gave another snort and the rest of the pack came up.

"Three times in this way they halted. Always the buck acted as scout, and no one advanced till he gave the signal. Arrived at the water, the buck waded in a few steps, then signaled for the others to advance and drink. And while they drank he fell back of them several yards and stood there as guard until they had finished. Such an alert scout no human being ever made. And there was a world of pride and dignity in him as he stood there and watched and waited. Surely, he realized that the fate of the entire pack depended upon him, and his honors and responsibilities sat heavily upon him. It took the pack perhaps ten or fifteen minutes to satisfy its thirst. Then it moved back from the water and stood near the buck. Now it was the buck's turn to drink. He strode forth, bent his head and drew in great draughts of the cool water. But he drank with his dignity still upon him. The pack waited for him, and when he was once more at its head there was a wild scramble up the jagged sides of the bluff.

Other Animals Seen.

"I was fascinated by the spectacle and resolved to witness it again. So I stayed another night. The performance was repeated exactly. Again on the third night they came to drink in the same way, and the next night and the next, and so on, till it dawned upon me that I must quit loafing and get back to work. Of course, the deer scented me at once and knew all along just where I lay, but I kept very still and they did not seem to mind me.

"The smaller animals came at all times of the night, and the smaller they were the more noise they made. The foxes were the slyest of all and the most timid. They go on a dead run all the time, with their heads always wriggling from side to side. The first time they sniffed my presence at camp they made a wild scamper back to cover behind the rocks, but presently they ventured out again, and, after three or four essays, they finally came down and drank.

"I saw only one bear. He was a pretty big fellow, but I have seen lots bigger. He came down the bluff like a big pig, his nose rooting in the ground at every step. No, I wasn't afraid of him. There isn't an animal in America, I believe, that will touch man unless man makes the attack. He came within a few yards of me, stood still and stared at me. I met his gaze calmly and, I believe, fearlessly. Then he went on to the water, waded boldly in and drank his fill. Of all the animals that came to drink there only this gruff and daring old cinnamon bear went about his business fearlessly. Even the coyotes and bob cats moved cautiously, and would have turned tail and scampered off if I had stirred about. But Bruin was not that kind of an animal. I have never seen a timid bear in this country. We don't shoot bears in Arizona, you know. I meet them frequently on my trips and can handle a rifle as well as most men, but I never shoot. Often we have met face to face on a narrow trail, and in these cases I have always acted politely and stepped aside to let Mr. Bruin pass. I never dispute the way with a bear, nor court an untimely end by firing my gun when a bear is in sight.

"I prospected in the region a little, but in a day or so I saw there could be nothing located there. The lava is of too recent a date, and the conglomerate altogether too conglomerated to be of any use whatever. In the early days there was a picket post at Tres Alamos, and the larger bluff back of the spring is the famous Signal butte that you have read about in Capt. King's novel by that name. You can't imagine what a weird and uncanny sight it is in the moonlight, nor what entrancing sights I have witnessed there when the deer, the bear, the lynx, the coyote and the fox come out of their hiding places in the dead of night and drink at the springs."

THE BIG BUCK ACTED AS SCOUT.

The World's Telegraph Lines.

The actual length of the telegraph lines of the world is 7,900,000 kilometers—not including nearly 300,000 kilometers of submarine cable. This total is divided as follows: America, 4,050,000 kilometers; Europe, 2,840,000; Asia, 500,000; Australia, 350,000; Africa, 160,000. The entire length of all these wires joined together would permit of the establishment of twenty lines of telegraph between the earth and the moon.

Mines.

One million and a half of men work in the coal mines of the world. Of these Great Britain has 535,000; United States, 300,000; Germany, 285,000; Belgium, 100,000; Russia, 44,000. The world's miners of metal number 4,000,000.

There are as many chumps to the block in Chicago as in any country town in the West.

TO HAVE A CLUBHOUSE.

THE Ladies' Literary Club of Salt Lake City is the first feminine organization in the West to project a clubhouse of their own. These enterprising women recently purchased a desirable downtown lot and have just accepted plans for a modern structure of gray stone and cream-colored brick. Contrary to the devices of fair financiers in the East who have built numerous clubhouses by forming a stock company, these women will erect a home partly from club dues and partly from subscriptions within the club.

UTAH WOMAN'S CLUBHOUSE.

The clubhouse is to be commodious throughout, from the colonial veranda in front to the great auditorium on the second floor. There will also be reception-rooms, library, committee-rooms, lounging-room, dining-room and kitchen. That there should be a sewing-room for the Ladies' Literary Club is unique, but some of its members take their fancy work to meetings and industriously stitch away in the calm intervals between parliamentary debates and animated discussion of papers. It is intended to add another story to the building by and by.

The Young Wife's Social Duties.

To simply live alone, with no provision for the gratification of the social instincts, is apt to prove too severe a strain upon the reserve forces of even the happiest marriage. There is some excuse to be made for the man who seeks society outside of the home wherein no thought is given to social pleasure, while the wife is apt to grow petty and personal, and so less attractive as she shuts herself away from intercourse with others. This dropping out is very easy, but even when prosperity comes and large social functions are possible it is too late to gain that most valuable possession, friendship, which is entirely independent of financial success. To have and to hold a place in the social life of the world is not only the right, but the duty of the young wife who desires to have a home in its truest and best sense.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Shower Bath for Baby.

The grown-ups and club men are not the only ones in this world who enjoy a shower bath, but baby who is bathed in his own little tub cannot use an ordinary rose, and in such cases the portable shower of English design, here shown, comes in handy.

In England, where the stationary wash-tub is not so ubiquitous as in America, this device is of great convenience alike for young and old. When filled with water of the proper temperature a finger is held over an aperture in the handle, and when released the water falls in a fine spray and with considerable force.

PNEUMATIC PORTABLE SHOWER.

Russian Wedding.

A Russian bride is not submitted to the trying ordeal of appearing in white satin and lace in cold, broad daylight. The wedding takes place by candlelight in the drawing-room of the bride's mother. There is a banquet after, followed by a ball, and after that supper, and this in many houses is an occasion for quaint old customs to be observed. Here, as in America, a satin slipper (supposed to be the bride's) figures, but in a different way. A new white satin slipper is filled with wine and passed around to the bridegroom's friends, who use it as a goblet and drink the health of the bride.

Bustles in Favor Again.

Bustles are being universally worn again. All the newest gowns have a small bustle made in them, and where a woman's figure warrants it also hip pads. Some of the new bustles are long, some short, some fuller than others, and many round up the hips with small pads. All are made of fine quality haircloth, light in weight, and are small, neat and graceful. There was a time when there was absolutely no individuality in bustles. Fat and lean women, women with conspicuous hips, those with a conspicuous absence of hips, bought and wore the bustle which looked as if it would last the longest and give them the most camel-like proportions. Now a woman studies her curves and lines and buys a bustle to set them off to the best advantage.

How to Rip a Garment.

Most people think it is very easy to rip garments, but a fashionable dressmaker thinks otherwise. This modiste says few women know how to rip up a dress for remaking. Many a good gown is spoiled by being placed in the hands of an unskilled person to rip up, she says. Scissors should not be used, a sharp-pointed knife doing the work better. Bias seams should be carefully held in order not to stretch them, and all threads neatly pulled out after they are well cut, so that there is no knotting resistance. Hooks, eyes, buttons, clasps, etc., should be taken off with especial care, as they are usually so firmly sewed that they resist, often to the end of one's patience. The material should then be carefully brushed before being sponged or pressed, processes which in themselves need special skill.

Keeps a Tollgate.

Mrs. Minerva T. Hering has kept a tollgate for a longer continuous period than any other person in Kentucky. For almost thirty-eight years she has lived at the same tollhouse on the Keene and Troy turnpike, near Nicholasville, and collected toll. Mrs. Hering and her husband were installed there as gatekeepers when the road was first completed in the year 1860. Her husband died twenty years ago, but she has remained in charge of the gate, although the ownership of the road has changed hands on numerous occasions.

Since free pikes were voted in this county, just recently, the owners of the Keene and Troy pike have made Mrs. Hering a present of the tollhouse in which she has lived so long, as an evidence of their appreciation of her honesty and long labors.

MRS. MINERVA T. HEBING.

Women Wanted Beards.

Nowadays, when in every ladies' paper one sees perpetual instructions how to get rid of superfluous hairs, it seems almost incredible that women ever should have desired to have beards. Yet this really was the case among certain of the ladies of ancient Rome, whose morbid ambition made them so crave for these inappropriate appendages that they used to shave their faces and smear them with unguents in order to cause the hair to grow. Cicero relates that to such an extent did the beard mania among women grow that it was found advisable to pass a law against the "adornment."

Prefer Women Clerks.

In Germany, and also in Holland, girls are chosen in preference to young men in all employments in which they can be advantageously employed. At Munich many of the clerks at the banks and hotels are girls, and as cashiers and bookkeepers at restaurants and other houses of business they are well in evidence. Many women are also employed at railway stations as booking office clerks.

New Guinea Girls Can't Elope.

Girls in New Guinea have small chance of eloping. Every night they are put in a little house at the top of a tall tree. The ladder used to reach it is then removed, and the parents' slumber is all the sounder for the fact that their daughters are unable to take their walks abroad until they see fit to allow them to do so.

Bathing an Elephant.

F. Fitz Roy Dixon tells of "A Baby Elephant" that was captured by friends of his in Ceylon, in an article that he contributes to St. Nicholas. Mr. Dixon says: Her daily bath afforded her great enjoyment. A broad, shallow stream, with a sandy bottom, flowed through the estate, and in a large pool Rengan used to scrub her down every day. Of course he went into the water also, and she would lie down and roll, sometimes with all four legs in the air, but always keeping the tip of her trunk out of the water so that she might have air to breathe. When she had done enough of this sort of nonsense, according to Rengan's idea, he used to make her come out and lie down on a sandbar, and then he would scrub her down—a process of which she seemed highly to approve—after which she would be once more washed down, and then she would trot off beside her keeper, both clean and glistening, and remain a short while in her stable, whilst he went off for his dinner. He used to bring her back a handful of boiled rice, usually rolled up in a banana leaf, which she received with great satisfaction.

BATTLE WITH RATS.

Pennsylvania Farmer Terribly Mutilated by the Rodents.

Attacked by several hundred fierce rats, which swarmed upon him while he was imprisoned in a narrow space from which he could not escape, Robert Crook of Wilkesbarre, Pa., fought them until his strength failed, and then, unable to beat them off, fell senseless. He had been terribly mutilated when rescued and his sight had been destroyed.

Crook, who is a wealthy farmer, had suffered considerable loss from rats, which infested his barns. At length he hit upon the idea of constructing a monster rat trap in the loft of one of his barns. This trap was like a big box, some ten feet square and about four feet high. Mr. Crook completed it, baited it and then left it to do its work.

When he visited it again he found that its captives numbered several hundreds. The farmer called his rat terrier, Spot, and thrust the dog into the trap in the belief that he would make short work of the enemy. The dog sprang fiercely to the task, but the rats leaped upon him by the score from all sides and he was soon stretched lifeless in the trap.

Angered at the fate of his pet Mr. Crook armed himself with two stout cudgels, opened the door of the cage and crawled in. The rats flew at him as they had at the dog. He beat them down by the dozen, but they swarmed upon every part of his body. The farmer flung himself at the door of the cage in a frantic effort to escape. He could not open it. He had sprung the lock on entering the trap and made himself a prisoner. He threw his weight against the door, but it did not yield. He next tried to force his way through the wire netting, putting his back against it and raising himself with all his might. It resisted his strength. His strength failed and at length the horror of his situation overcame his senses and he dropped unconscious in the trap.

FIGHT WITH RATS.

Farm hands found him in that condition a quarter of an hour later. They had climbed to the loft in the expectation of seeing the terrier, Spot, exterminate the rats, and were horrified on looking into the trap to see the dog dead and mangled, his master mutilated and apparently lifeless and rats gnawing at them. The men opened the door and drove out the rats, then dragged forth the farmer and carried him to the house. His nose and ears were gone, his face frightfully bitten, his hands torn to the bone and his eyes so scratched that the sight was destroyed.

GREAT HISTORIAN.

Theodor Mommsen, Whose Birthday Was Recently Celebrated.

Theodor Mommsen, the eightieth anniversary of whose birth was recently celebrated with much ado in Germany, is one of the greatest of living historians. In the opinion of many competent critics Herr Mommsen deserves to be ranked with the noted Gibbon. Like the author of the "Decline and Fall," his one great work deals with the romantic, fascinating and inexhaustible theme that runs through the life of Rome. The German historian, not satisfied with one, or a number, of the aspects of Roman history, has endeavored to handle all. The title of his book is simple and sweeping—"Roman History." It was begun in 1854. In 1856 three volumes had appeared; in 1885 the fifth volume was published in advance of the fourth, which has not yet been issued. "Roman History" treats of the political and social growth of Rome from the earliest beginnings down to the battle of Actium. Its contents are as good history as it is possible for human reasearch and the highest erudition to yield. Besides this, the work is written in a style which is all that comparative history, ethnography, or even anthropography could desire. This is the "new history," with which Lamprehl, a copatriot of Mommsen, has startled the staid old school. Mommsen's book has been done into various languages. His "Roman Jurisprudence," which should be considered a part of his history, is a mine of information for students of history, law, methods of research, historical criticism, Roman chronology, topography and numismatology. Herr Mommsen was born in Schleswig, studied at Kiel, lived in Italy, and worked for years on the non-Latin inscription of pre-Roman Italy, which are called the Sabellian, the Oscan and the Umbrian.

THEODOR MOMMSEN.

The Cycle Path of Life.

Let me moralize—and don't interrupt me unless you want to lend me money.

To-day we are an infant on the wheel, held up by some friendly hand, progressing slowly, filled with vague fears and soothing syrup.

To-morrow we can wobble a little, though we suffer many falls.

The next day our line is straighter, we call ourself a "Wheelman," join the L. A. W. and own the sidewalk.

Then comes our rapid youth. We scorch—and sooner or later are laid up for repairs.

Afterward we learn to ride more sedately, and we think seriously of life.

Now we begin to eschew the solitary path and seek the broad road where two may ride abreast. We try and discover to our delight that we can ride with one hand while the other encompasses the slender waist of a pretty girl.

Then we enter the holy state of tandem riding. In a sense we have to learn to ride over again. There is another period of wobbling, but eventually we do as well as the rest.

Now comes the period of caring tenderly for smaller wheels.

Finally we become so expert that we can ride the strait and narrow path.

And then we croak.—The Yellow Book.

BUNKO MAN'S LATEST GAME.

Working a Trick on Conductors Whereby He Clears $3.95.

To an honest man it would appear that the field of bunko had been pretty well worked out; but every little while some ingenious and crooked gentleman contrives a new method of making other persons pay for his ingenuity. Just at present the street railway men are looking for the deviser and operator of a very slick game of which the car conductors are made victims. The requisite for this game is $6 (a $5 bill and a $1), and its working does not require great nerve, as the bunkoer, if caught, can always declare that it was a mistake, and to prove the contrary with legal certainty would be almost impossible.

The crook gets on a car and tenders the conductor a $5 bill. Now, no conductor wants to give up all his change and leave himself short, and no conductor will take a $5 bill if there is any way of getting out of it. Therefore, he looks at the crook's bill and says:

"Is that the smallest you've got?"

"I think it is," says the crook. "Wait a minute and I'll see."

Crumping the bill up in his hand—the game is usually played with crisp new bills, as they crumple more obviously—he goes through his pockets in search of change. Not wanting to find any, he doesn't find any.

"Sorry, but that's all I've got," he says.

Thereupon the conductor, with inward wrath, seizes the crumpled bill, jams it into his pocket, and gives change. Not the original crumpled bill, however, for during the search for change he has contrived to substitute a new $1 bill, equally crumpled, for the $5, and the conductor, in nine cases out of ten, doesn't think to unroll and examine the bill which he has just seen to be $5. At the end of the day's work he discovers that he is $4 out. Should he discern the substitution, the crook simply says:

"Why, that's queer! I thought it was a five I had all the time."

And what can the conductor do?—New York Sun.

Did Lots of Chirping.

Two-headed animals are common enough, but a two-headed bird has never come to light till recently. The freak, a two-headed English sparrow, well-developed and about a year old, was shot by the son of W. L. Morris, of Columbus, Ohio. The boy went out to shoot sparrows for a sparrow pie, and the ornithological freak was among the bag. It was placed in the hands of a taxidermist, who pronounced it the first two-headed sparrow on record.

AN ORNITHOLOGICAL FREAK.

One to the Tailor.

When Poole, the famous tailor, was an old man he was at Brighton on a vacation, and one afternoon went out to walk upon the pier. A young man was also upon the pier with a couple of ladies, to whom he said, as he saw Poole coming:

"Now, you wouldn't take that good-looking man for a tailor, but he is. Just listen while I take him down a notch or two. I'll tell him my coat, which I have just had from him, doesn't fit."

As he spoke Poole approached and politely acknowledged the salutation of his customer, who, walking up to him, said: "Here, Poole, now do take a look at me. Does this coat fit?"

Poole took in the situation. "It certainly does not fit," said he, and pulling out a piece of French chalk he proceeded liberally to mark and cross the coat all over, and then observed, with the utmost urbanity: "Now, if you will kindly send that coat to my shop the alterations shall be attended to."—Tid Bits.

The Weaker Sex.

Despite the fragility with which their sex is credited, the number of British female centenarians greatly exceeds that of the men, 225 women out of every 1,000,000 reaching the century mark, while only 80 men of the same number round out 100 years.

Not an Id a Place.

"No," said Wheeler, thoughtfully, "I can't cotton to the idea that heaven is a place where the streets are paved with gold. I don't believe a fellow's tires would stick worth a cent to a street of that kind."—Indianapolis Journal.

Newfoundland Stamps.

Newfoundland exhibits much originality in its stamp designs. It has on various issues a seal, a codfish, a Newfoundland dog's head, her majesty in a widow's cap, the prince of Wales in uniform and a whaler in full sail.

WIFE'S NOBLE SELF-SACRIFICE.

Gave Up Honor and Reputation to Save Her Husband's Life.

Five years ago two continents were shocked by the perpetration of a cold-blooded murder in Paris, France. An angry American husband shot a prominent Frenchman for being in his wife's apartments. The participants in this tragedy were Edward Parker Deacon, of New York; his wife, formerly Miss Florence Baldwin, daughter of the late Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, U. S. N.; and Mr. Abeille, of Paris. Deacon was arrested and tried for murder. Under French law the only ground on which a husband could be acquitted of murder under such circumstances would be that of the guilt of the wife, and Mr. Deacon was practically acquitted, for his original sentence was for only a year's imprisonment, and President Carnot pardoned him after he had served only a few months. When he was liberated he returned to this country and shortly afterward was placed in an insane asylum. Mrs. Deacon, divorced from her husband, remained in France until a few months ago, when she also returned to America to take charge of her four children. Since her arrival friends have effected a reconciliation between her and her husband.

MRS. DEACON.

Mrs. Deacon, to prevent the finding of her husband guilty of murder and to do everything possible to secure his actual acquittal, did not put in any testimony exposing the perjury of the hotel clerk. Nor did she offer testimony as to her husband's excessive use of liquor and drugs. Such testimony would only endanger her husband. If she had told the truth her husband might have been convicted of murder. She contented herself with merely denying that there had been anything wrong in the relations between Mr. Abeille and herself.

ROYALTY AT THE PLAY.

Cause a Whole Lot of Trouble When They Go to a Theater.

The outward and visible sign of the presence of royalty at a London theater is the Guard of Honor, composed of a corporal's guard of grenadiers stationed outside the doors.

At the houses bearing the title "Royal," Drury Lane, the Haymarket and the Covent Garden, the Guard of Honor is always mounted the year round while performances are given. Thus in case royalty should make up its mind at the last moment to look in the manager would be prepared. Although the Prince of Wales always pays well for his theatrical amusements, there is also increased trouble and expenditures incurred by the house, of which outsiders have no idea.

At Drury Lane Theater there is attached to the box a drawing room beautifully upholstered in old gold and tapestry. A couple of bottles of wine, a box of cigars and a case of the Prince's favorite cigarettes are laid on the table. There is also the program—a white satin square—upon which the cast is printed in gold. If it is the Princess of Wales whom they are entertaining the managers provide a bouquet, which is placed on the ledge of the box.

It is understood that ordinarily when members of the royal family visit the theater they are incognito, and unless the orchestra strikes up the national anthem, the majority of the audience are not aware of their presence. If the anthem is played it is a sign that the visit is a formal one and the audience rises as a mark of respect.

UNIVERSAL CLOCK.

It Shows the Time at Any Point of the Earth's Surface.

A novel astronomical clock for the schoolroom, in which electricity supplies the power, has recently been patented. It shows the days of the week and the hours at all points of the earth's surface. The question of international time is a puzzling one to school children, but by having this model constantly before them it is believed they will gradually obtain without effort definite and accurate ideas on the subject. A round globe, whose surface represents a map of the earth's surface, is revolved inside a stationary ring, graduated for hours of the day. Another disk, graduated for the days of the week, is also revolved, so as to show through an opening two days of the week at a time, and a line of demarkation, carried by the map disk, indicates the dividing line between the days of the week.

Gloucester cathedral's lady chapel, one of the finest specimens of the perpendicular style of architecture in England, has been restored and opened to the public, after being closed for twenty-five years.

BAD DIGESTION, BAD HEART.

Poor digestion often causes irregularity of the heart's action. This irregularity may be mistaken for real, organic heart disease. The symptoms are much the same. There is a vast difference between the two; organic heart disease is often incurable; apparent heart disease is curable if good digestion be restored.

A case in point is quoted from the New Era, of Greensburg, Ind. Mrs. Ellen Colson, Newpoint, Ind., a woman forty-three years old, had suffered for four years with distressing stomach trouble. The gases generated by the indigestion pressed on the heart, and caused an irregularity of its action. She had much pain in her stomach and heart, and was subject to frequent and severe choking spells, which were most severe at night. Doctors were tried in vain; the patient became worse, despondent, and feared impending death.

A Case of Heart Failure.

She was much frightened, but noticed that at intervals in which her stomach did not annoy her, her heart's action became normal. Reasoning correctly that her digestion was alone at fault, she procured the proper medicine to treat that trouble, and with immediate good results. Her appetite came back, the choking spells became less frequent and finally ceased. Her weight, which had been greatly reduced, was restored, and she now weighs more than for years. Her blood became pure and her cheeks rosy.

This disease is a common one, and that others may know the means of cure we give the name of the medicine used—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

The Wild Horses of Arizona.

"There must be 20,000 head of wild horses in Northern Arizona," said Will S. Barnes, one of the largest cattle-owners in Navajo County, recently. "They are the worst nuisance that can be imagined. It has reached the point when we cannot safely turn out a riding horse to graze. We have to keep our saddle animals and round-up horses stabled all winter or bring them down to Phoenix for pasturage. The wild stock not only eat the food that ought to go to the cattle, but they run cattle off the range. They have chased off all the cattle from the west end of the Hash Knife range, one of the best grass districts in Northeastern Arizona. It is useless to put out salt for the stock, for the wild horses chase away the cattle that come near it. At this season of the year they are fat and have shining hides. They sweep over the country in great bands, gathering up any stray animals they may come across. A horse is as good as lost that joins them."—Correspondence St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A LETTER TO WOMEN.

A few words from Mrs Smith, of Philadelphia, will certainly corroborate the claim that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is woman's ever reliable friend.

"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly.

"For nine weeks I was in bed suffering with inflammation and congestion of the ovaries. I had a discharge all the time. When lying down all the time, I felt quite comfortable; but as soon as I would put my feet on the floor, the pains would come back.

"Every one thought it was impossible for me to get well. I was paying $1 per day for doctor's visits and 75 cents a day for medicine. I made up my mind to try Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has effected a complete cure for me, and I have all the faith in the world in it. What a blessing to woman it is!"—MRS. JENNIE L. SMITH, No. 324 Kauffman St., Philadelphia, Pa.

FURS AT LOW PRICES.

MILD WEATHER CAUSES SACRIFICE BY DEALERS.

Persian Lamb Is Just the Right Thing Now—Less Expensive than Seal and Cannot Be Imitated—Chinchilla Is the Popular Trimming Fur.

Trying to Oust the Blouse.

New York correspondence:

MUCH warm weather at the beginning of the winter was a trial for the furriers, and now they are selling away down to work off their stocks. This last is so plain a fact that whether the explanation here given is correct or not, this is certainly a great year to buy furs. Sealskin holds its own, as probably it always will, but the pelt that is just the right thing for coats and jackets is Persian lamb. It costs a lot less than seal, but on the other hand is not imitated.

Of the fine furs used for trimmings ermine has for several seasons had the call, but chinchilla is now more popular and much more attractive. Ermine is not so generally becoming and does not blend so softly with lace and colors as does chinchilla. Mouffion is less expensive than last year, and is made up into very handsome muffs and tippets. Such tippets are almost always set on a yoke of some closer fur to avoid a bunchy effect about the neck. Velours handsomely trimmed with fur is almost as handsome as entire fur, and those who cannot afford a complete fur coat choose velours, line it throughout with inexpensive fur, and make collar and lapel of chinchilla or ermine. An even less elaborate garment was the original of this first picture, yet it was strikingly handsome. Its material was gray velours; this was freely ornamented with black soutache, and collar; lapels and wrists were finished with chinchilla. Its vest was pleated white satin, and black satin furnished its belt.

A new type of fur-trimmed jacket is appearing, and it comes as if with authoritative indorsement, although it is not being much worn as yet. This is the cut of jacket of which three are shown in one picture. While it is far from being a striking novelty, being in respect to materials and the nature of its trimming similar to the blouse coats now so generally worn, it is a radical departure as to cut. Back, sides and basque are tight, the only looseness coming in front right at the waist line. The model is a jaunty one, especially good for slender, well-proportioned figures, and should make good headway if women can be induced to forget their liking for bloused looseness. The left hand one of these three jackets was made of tan cloth and was appliqued with braid and bias folds of the goods, Alaska sable trimming it as indicated and necessitating a muff of the same fur. Black velvet was the fabric of the second of these garments, Persian lamb, braid and beads trimming it in the manner shown. Last comes a model in green cloth, covered with soutache and trimmed with feather galloon. These jackets are held at the prices usually asked for advance offerings of exclusive fashionableness, which would indicate their eventual acceptance by the copying millions.

Braid set as thickly as that of the picture last described is often seen and is entirely correct, for this trimming has taken a new lease of life, instead of passing, as prophecies of early winter had it to do. On jackets and bodices such use of it seems entirely tasteful, and in skirts there is fashionable indorsement for using it in abundance, though there it doesn't always seem beautifying. Some skirts, for instance, are grotesqutly covered with braiding, great dragons are depicted, and lattice work and wavy streaks are there in plenty. Few conscientious dressmakers will advise you to interfere with the beauty of fresn cloth in any such fashion, but you may take advantage of the fad and freshen up last year's cloth gown with this sort of thing. For the new skirt enough of braid is the quantity put upon the skirt of the next picture, which was encircled at the hem with a band of triple squares like that running down the front of the bodice. This pattern was again suggested by the treatment of the cuffs, while plain braid finished all the bodice's edges. The material of this costume was cadet-blue broadcloth, krimmer finishing the collar and cuffs, and a gray suede belt fastening with a silver buckle holding the waist.

ONE MORE FRANKLY DIFFERENT.

PUT FORWARD TO OUST BLOUSES.

Both this bodice and the one that follows in the illustrations are significant of an attempt by fashion-makers to wean women away from the blouse. As usual with such inciting to change, this attempt is made at the height of popularity of the fashion that is to be undone, and with a cratty likeness to it. That is, this bodice, though tight fitting throughout, has in all but looseness above the waist the look of the tidy blouses that are now so plentiful. With the bodice of the concluding picture there is no attempt at likeness, and fit and cut are of the riding habit order. This last model was carried out in black cheviot and soutache in six-row groups. One of these groups at the hem was all the trimming the skirt had. This was so frankly unlike the current blouse as to be nothing short of startling, but the design is already finding favor with those women who are forever discarding the styles that their less fortunate sisters have just copied from them.

If Water Never Froze.

The whole economy of nature would undergo a startling change if water never froze, says Pearson's Weegly. The ice-bound polar seas would cease to exercise their chilling influences, and consequently the currents of the ocean might either cease or be turned aside in different directions.

Thus the gulf stream would seek other shores than those of Britain and the climate there might be subject to the extremes of heat and cold noticeable in other countries of the same latitude. The ice-bound rivers of the north, notably those of Russia and Siberia, would be open for navigation, and Russia's activity as a sea power and a commercial nation might alter the whole world of commerce.

Canada would become another country altogether. An immense tract of land would be available for cultivating hardy plants, and Greenland might be what its name indicates. The absence of icebergs off the coasts of Newfoundland and Iceland would result in a much warmer climate in those lands, where now the crops often fail.

Ice, too, plays an important part in the economy of nature. Thus, if water never froze, snow, hail and hoar frost would cease. The loosening of soils and the disintegration of rocks by the frost and many other now vital effects would be lost. In short, the absence of ice would be on the one hand an incalculable disaster, on the other hand a great boon.

Spelling of Geographical Names.

The United States Board on geographical names has adopted for guidance, in determining the official form or rendering of geographical names, the following principles within the United States:

Spelling and pronunciation sanctioned by local usage should in general be adopted

Where names have been changed or corrupted, and such changes and corruptions have become established by local usage, it is not in general advisable to attempt to restore to the original form.

In case where what was evidently originally the same word appear with various spellings, sanctioned by local usage, when applied to different features, these various spellings should be regarded as in effect different names, and as a rule it is inadvisable to attempt to produce uniformity.

Where a choice is offered between two or more names for the same place or locality, all sanctioned by local usage, that which is most appropriate and euphonious should be adopted.

The possessive form should be avoided whenever it can be done without destroying the euphony of the name or changing its descriptive application.

In all names ending in "burgh," the final "h" should be dropped.

In all names ending in "borough," this termination should be abbreviated to boro.

The word "center" as a part of the name should be spelled "center," not centre.

The use of hyphens in connecting compound names should be discontinued.

The letters C. H. (court house) as a part of the names of county seats, should be omitted.

In case of compound names consisting of more than one word, it is desirable to simplify them by uniting the compound parts.

It is desirable to avoid the use of diacritical charity.

It is desirable to avoid the use of the words "city" and "town" as a part of names.

Discipline.

At the Parents' Congress, recently held in New York City, considerable discussion was called out by the address on "Government of Children," by Rev. Dr. McConnell of Holy Trinity Church. Some of his views are set forth in this brief extract:

I never knew a child and never want to have an intimate acquaintance with one that did not need punishment. This punishment need not be harsh and should never be humiliating, nor such as to lower the dignity of the child. I believe that a child may be spanked with dignity.

It always irritates me to hear a mother say that she cannot trust her temper to punish a child when the fault is committed, but waits until next day. I do not know of any more diabolical punishment than this fad of weak mothers.

Trifling physical punishment, when the offense is committed, is less trying than delayed punishment, which keeps the little one on the rack and tries its nerves. * * * In closing, let me say a word about the so-called decay of family discipline. I do not believe in it. There is less of the decorous behavior of children towards their parents than was customary a generation or two ago, but there is more comradeship and a better understanding between the individuals making up the family group, and society, in consequence, is better for it.

Teaching History.

Use the historical cards.

Encourage the pupils to read.

Talk familiarly; do not lecture.

Assign topics for historical effect.

Pay great attention to biography.

Pay attention to noted days in history.

Require each pupil to keep a notebook.

Read extracts from books before the class.

Give frequent exercises in written work.

Assign the lesson by topics, not by pages.

Call frequent attention to causes and results.

Information is not the main end to be outained.

Correct, systematize and supplement the matter given in recitation.

Show how the history of a place or country depends upon its geography.

Require each pupil to prepare maps on paper, and to reproduce them quickly upon the board.

Education and Crime.

Some figures relative to education and crime were read by Sir John Lubbock at the sociological congress recently held in Paris. They are essentially as follows: Since the act of 1870, the number of children in English schools has increased from 1,500,000 to 5,000,000, and the number of persons in prison has fallen from 12,000 to 5,000. The yearly average of persons sentenced to penal servitude for the worst crimes, has declined from 3,000 to 800, while juvenile offenders have fallen from 14,000 to 5,000. Sir John Lubbock sees in these figures a confirmation of Victor Hugo's saying, that "he who opens a school closes a prison."

Empty chool Houses.

A public auction of schoolhouses is a novelty witnessed in Western Kansas. State officials decided that schoolhouses in depopulated districts, which are not in use, may be sold to the highest bidder. There are more than 100 of these buildings scattered over the prairies that have not been in use for years, the abode of bats and owls. They are decaying and crumbling. They will be sold to the highest bidder, to be used for cattle sheds or cut up into kindling wood. In many cases a single family runs a school from the taxes gathered from non-resident land owners.

SAILORS' SEWING MACHINES.

They Are Hand Machines and Owned by the Men.

Visitors on board war vessels in the navy yard will very likely see among the sailors scattered about the decks smoking, talking, and so on, a sailor at work with a sewing machine. It is a hand machine, and has a pretty heavy base, so that it can be set down on deck and worked easly without shifting its position.

The machine is owned by the man working it. On a big ship like, for example, the battleship Indiana, carrying a crew of 400 men or more, there would probably be found as many as a dozen sewing machines; on a third rate cruiser, a smaller vessel, such, for illustration, as the Detroit, there will be apt to be four or five sewing machines.

The machines are oftenest owned by sailmakers and sailmakers' mates, but they may be owned by sailors; any man on the ship might have a sewing machine if he wanted to.

Space is valuable on a vessel, and so only hand machines are allowed, and to bring a machine aboard permission must be got from the commanding officer. It is not to be supposed that every man in the ship would want a sewing machine; as a matter of fact, comparatively few men do, and those who want to take one aboard are not likely to find any difficulty in the way.

A sailor who has a sewing machine makes and repairs garments for himself and he does work for others for pay. There are not so many sewing machines on the vessel of the new navy as there were on those of the old; the sailor nowadays makes up less of his own outfit than he formerly did; he draws more completed articles from the Government; but there is still plenty of work to be done aboard ship with sewing machines, and some money to be made with them yet.

THE HOSTETTER CO. WINS ANOTHER CASE.

Infringements on Their Bitters Not Tolerated by United States Court.

The United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, Judge Townsend presiding, handed down an opinion Dec. 23, 1897, granting injunction and accounting, in the suit of The Hostetter Company against Isaac Sommers and Louis Joseph, for infringement of its Trade Mark. The jurist states, in bold and clear language, the rights accruing to the Hostetter Company, and the liability incurred by all who would rob them, by fraud or misrepresentation, of the well-earned reputation and profits of a business built up by the efforts of half a century. The Judge says, in part:

"The complainant is entitled to protection against the appropriation of its trade mark, by any and all unfair and dishonorable means, and a court of equity has power to grant such protection whenever it is satisfied that an attempt has been made by ingenious subterfuges, to invade the rights of an owner of a trade mark. * * In the sharp contest between the individual manufacturer, who strives to acquire and retain the fruits of industry and honesty, and the field of keen rivals, seeking to wrest from him the prize of the public good-will, the inventive ingenuity of the infringer has conceived a great variety of devices for evading the established rules of fair dealing. * * Courts of equity finding that their ultimate object and effect were to enable and induce the retail seller of a fraudulent imitation to palm it off on an unsuspecting public for the genuine article, and thus to contribute to the infringement upon the rights of the original owner, have not hesitated to apply the remedy."

Dogs Trained in War.

In all the European armies save that of Britain canine intelligence is employed in the role of spies, messengers and aids to the wounded. The Italian sentries in the Alps are always accompanied by dogs! the Dutch found them in Acheen invaluable in preventing the butchery of sentinels by stealthy foes; the Russians employed them to some extent in their last war with Turkey; the French have used them in Tunis and Algiers, and the Austrians utilize them in the detection of ambuscades. The dogs employed by the Russians are wolf and sheep dogs, and a species of St. Bernard, and equipped with packages and bandages around their necks and flasks of soups or brandy, are taught to find the hidden wounded, offer them restoratives, give the alarm, and afterward, if necessary, to draw them on little hand carts to the hospital. The Germans use pointers, Scotch collies, Pomeranians and short-haired sporting dogs, which are trained to march silently, indicating strangers by a point or a low growl, to carry messages some miles, to obey men in the German uniform and to halt all others.

"Doctor, did you ever fight a duel?" asked his friend the lawyer.

"No," replied the doctor, "I could derive no satisfaction from the killing of a felow creature."

"I suppose not," answered the lawyer. "You would naturally prefer something new and more novel."

All Over a Cent.

A remarkable case of marvelous treasury bookkeeping was developed recently at Washington by the settlement of a balance involving a single copper cent, which had puzzled the bookkeeping experts for seven years. As long ago as 1890 a controversy arose between the Treasury Department and the Auditor of the Postoffice over a shortage of 1 cent. An investigating committee took up his accounts minutely and at last discovered that many years ago the disbursing officer had credited himself with an odd cent and the shortage was his. Prompt payment was made. This seems like red tape with a vengeance. It cost hundreds of dollars to round up that pesky cent.

Destructive Storms Along the Coast.

Reports of maritime disasters along the coast come in thick and fast. People who "go down to the sea in ships" should bear in mind one thing in particular, namely, that it is highly desirable to take along a supply of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a remedy for sea-sickness. Nausea, dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, malaria, nervousness and kidney trouble, all succumb to its beneficent and speedy action.

World's Richest Gold Mine.

The richest gold mine in the world is located under the thriving town of Ballarat, Victoria, Australia. The town has about 25,000 inhabitants, nearly all of whom are employed in the mine. There are more than 100 miles of tunnels under the city, some of them being at a depth of 2,000 feet. The entrance to the mine is outside the city limits, and from this mine in 30 years more than $150,000,000 has been taken.

Two Bad Habits.

Taking strong coffee to cure a headache is like taking whisky to cure the shakiness which is one of the effects of whisky. It seems to do it, but the result is deceptive. The cure becomes a new cause and you are worse off than before. Better stop coffee altogether and use Grain-O, the new food-drink. Whereas coffee is not a food at all, but only a nerve-fooling toxic stimulant, Grain-O is a preparation of pure grains, palatable, nutritious and absolutely harmless. It is thoroughly satisfying, four times cheaper than coffee, acceptable to the most sensitive stomach and free from the constituents which make coffee a damaging beverage. Drinkers of Grain-O are never kept awake of nights—not by that anyway. Ask your grocer for a 15c. or 25c. package.

No Difference.

Physical troubles of a like nature coming from different causes are often a puzzle to those who suffer pain as to their treatment and cure, as in the case of lumbago from cold or a strain in some way to the same muscles. The treatment of such need not differ one with the other. Both are bad enough and should have prompt attention, as nothing disables so much as a lame back. The use of St. Jacobs Oil will settle the question. Its efficacy is so sure in either case there is no difference in the treatment and no doubt of the cure.

Thin Blood

Where the blood loses its intense red—grows thin and watery, as in anemia, there is a constant feeling of exhaustion, a lack of energy—vitality and the spirits depressed.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is peculiarly adapted to correct this condition. The cod-liver oil, emulsified to an exquisite fineness, enters the blood direct and feeds its every corpuscle, restoring the natural color and giving vitality to the whole system. The hypophosphites reach the brain and nerve centres and add their strengthening and beneficial effect. If the roses have left your cheeks, if you are growing thin and exhausted from overwork, or if age is beginning to tell, use SCOTT'S Emulsion.

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

$10 A WEEK FOR EIGHT.

Feeding a Family at a Cost of 18 Cents a Day for Each Person.

In the Ladies' Home Journal Mrs. S. T. Rorer tells how a family of eight persons can be fed—and well fed—at the aggregate cost of $10 a week. "To carry out the scheme," she says, "articles must be purchased economically and no waste permitted. A table which is supplied for a family of eight for $10 a week must, of necessity, be plain, but it may, at the same time, not lack for variety or wholesomeness. Sweetmeats and rich desserts must be counted only as occasional luxuries and 'company' dishes must be omitted altogether. Meat, the most expensive food item, may be purchased in a much larger quantity than is needed for a single meal and utilized French fashion. The poor and middle class of this country must learn more about the food value of the legumens, more about the proper perparation of food and last, but not least, more about the proper combinations of food. Avoid the buying of steaks, roasts and chops each week. It is an expensive household indeed which has no repertoire of cheap dishes. A beef's heart or a braised calf's liver makes an excellent and economical change. Broiled sheep's kidneys, with a little bacon, give a good breakfast, at a cost of 10 cents. Smothered beef, which may be made from the tough end of the rump steak, is appetizing and only costs half the price of an equal food value of tenderloin steak. The housekeeper should go to market early and buy only the best materials. They keep longer and go further than the inferior ones. Perishable food should be bought in small quantities two or three times a week. Groceries enough to last a month should be laid in. Canned goods and conserved sweets should be bought sparingly. Meat is always a most expensive article and not a particle of it should be allowed to go to waste."

COURT.

Thursday's Daily.

There was more in the Chorpening case from St. Joe than we could report yesterday. It appears that their daughter, about 15 or 16 years old, had become a mother a year or so ago, and had lately written threatening letters to the telegraph operator there telling him if he did not support her, she would expose him. It appears he denied having any interest in the matter and finally brought her into court and became the chief witness against her. It also appears that her people are unworthy people and it is even rumored that her father is the one to blame for all her trouble. As she is still young, the best place for her is the reform school for girls, and to this the Judge sent her to stay till she is 18. He gave her a good lecture and although it does not bring out all there is in the case, it is worth giving to our readers for the good things it contains. In substance it is this:

JUDGE ROBY'S TALK,

Miss Chorpening, it is a pleasure to the court to send you to the Reformatory. You will have good care there. You never have had any care. You will be better clad, fed and taught during the next three years there than you have ever been. You may yet be a good woman. The court believes that you will try to do your part and make yourself useful to the world and to those with whom you may be associated. You do not go with the world against you. The jury who have heard the evidence to day, the lawyers and the court, indeed all who know your condition, are in sympathy with you. You will find kind people at the institution to which you go. Deserve well, and you will receive what you deserve. Your future lies before you. Your past is behind. Forget it. Look upward and remember that life may be of great utility to you yet if you are a good woman.

For the the parents who have instead of protecting you, caused your ruin, the court says to you, harsh as it may seem, that you had best turn your back on them now and always. They had committed to them a duty which the dumb brutes recognize, to care for their offspring, but have refused to perform it. You are better off without them. The court cannot pretend to say one word with regard to the prosecuting witness. Between you and him, the judgment of the court is with you. He must settle with his own conscience.

Friday's Daily.

The case of Georgie A. Points against John Shilling, on a charge of bastardy came off yesterday. The young woman and her people were in court, and the child, a bright looking baby, added interest to the unfortunate case, for both the parties belong to families who have a high standing. But the result was that Shilling was declared the responsible man, and that he must pay for the support of the child, $100 down, and then $75 on the first day of each year for ten years. This he utterly refused to do, and went to jail rather than pay the money. The law is that a man who refuses to obey the court in cases like this must go to jail a year at least. If at the end of a year if he can show that he is too poor to pay, he may be let off.

The past two years seem to have been bad ones from a moral point of view if we are to judge from the number of cases of bastardy, etc that keep coming up this term. For instance, today brings another. This is from Garrett. It may be called a

POLANDER CASE.

The unfortunate girl is a Po'ander, Miss Lena Kupski, and the man in the case is also a Polock, Mr John Kinowski. The attorneys for the state are prosecutor, Mr. Rhoadski of Angola, and Atty Sharplessowski of Garrett. For the defense, the attorneys are J. E. Roseski, L. J. Genglerowski and H. Mounteskivistoviteh. The jury likewise have a Polack flavor as shown by the list of names. Read them:

J R Stevioski, M. Simantoniveski, A Baughmannski, Ed. Boamsioskoviski. Perry Longoviski, A. Sherekioski. Orrin Goodrichivinski, Wm. Koshtovichski, James Sibertioskoviski, Ed. Potterinski, Jay Kepleriovistichoynski and John Platerivistometnski

And all the witnesses were Polander Dutchmen of some degree, some of whom could not speak English, even as she is spoke in Garrett.

The Court being in plain United States, Frank S. Roby, asked the attorneys to say something to the jury. They then explained the nature of the case, and how John Kinowski had, viper-like, wormed himself into the confidence of the Kupski family, and they laid special emphasis on his relations with said "Lena Kupski," which had resulted "greatly to the disadvantage of the said Lena, and the scandal of the community and the good name of DeKalb County, State of Indiana, S. S." The other side, took a strangely different view of the matter and became quite eloquent over the wrongs of John Kinowski, who had been deceived and ruined by the said Kupski resulting in great mental disturbance for which said Lena should be held accountable. And now the "issues were joined" fairly and equirely and the wrestle began. Since writing the above we find that the girl is more unfortunate than we supposed. She is a deaf mute and not being able to speak, her mother had to act as interpreter of her sign language. Then, as the mother speaks only Polish an interpreter had to translate her evidence for her into English. It is altogether a strange case and one of peculiar hardship. The evidence is all in as we go to press.

After we closed our columns yesterday afternoon the attorneys in the "Polander" case from Garrett made their pleas and the jury was charged and went out. At about five o'clock they tapped on the door, and bailiff Charley Crew let them out. Their verdict was handed to the Judge who read it, in which they found for the plaintiff. Judge Roby then excused the jury till Monday at ten o'clock and after they had gone, he had the attorneys on both sides examine the defendant, John Kuronski, with a view to see how he was fixed financially, so as to know about how much money he ought to pay or could be made to pay to the girl he had wronged. The young man said he is fireman in the shops of the B. & O. and gets $1.25 a day of 11 hours, so that his monthly pay when he is in good health and can put in all his time, will be about $35. It was not fully decided how much he ought to be assessed, but there was some talk about making it about $300, he to pay $60 down and then $5 each month. He thought if he could be given a day or two to see his friends he could do so and the Judge gave him till Monday. He can talk but little English and at times it was difficult to understand him.

Some of the witnesses' names are:—Mrs. Maggie Kupski, John Kupski, Sarah Twotski, Josephine Jahoski, John Lemish, Albert Goski, Josephine Moleski, Michael Schevoloski. And at Garrett there are others.

A good deal of other odds and ends of work have been done. Among those divorced were Rachael and Wm Sheely, Lizzie and James A Forrest, Laura and Francis Dilgard. Emma Beall vs Otha Smith, surety of the peace was dismissed. E. E. Bottenberg vs F. G. Sparling on account, dismissed. Dilworth vs Wm. Smith, account, finding on report of arbitrators, that plaintiff gets nothing, but recovers his costs.

Minnie Falk was divorced from Albert Falk, she paying the costs of the case. Mary Chaney was divorced from Jesse and Anna Strause from Max Strause.

Jackson Burns sued Samuel Martin and E B Alsbaugh on a mechanic's lien claim. Alsbaugh was excused and given the right to collect costs. Burns was allowed a judgment against Martin of $8 50 and recover costs of Martin. There was no court today, Saturday.

ANOTHER CHAIN

Started.—This Time the Messages Are Words of Praise Gratefully Given by Users of

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The public remembers that a short time ago a chain of letters was started for some worthy purpose, which reached such a magnitude that the whole world talked of it. A chain of oral messages has been started with also a worthy object, but different, for the reason that each one who participates reaps a benefit. The messages sing the praise of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer in the treatment of all nervous troubles and diseases resulting from debilitated nerves. Mrs. Geo. Halstead, Toledo, Ohio, has added over fifty links to the chain by telling that many of her afflicted friends what Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has done for her. These are her words: "Last spring I was all run down, nervous and very sick; due probably to the change of weather. The doctor was called and he treated me for a long time without much benefit. I then concluded to try Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer because I had heard such favorable reports from its use. I commenced to improve at once. I told the doctor what I was using and the beneficial effect; to which he replied, "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is a good medicine, keep on using it;" which I did and was soon up and about as well as ever. I have recommended it to over fifty people and results have been entirely satisfactory."

O. W. WERNTZ & CO.
Auburn Junction.

On the evening of a bright day last September, I wheeled from Butler to Garrett and after an hour or two of tedious waiting took passage on one of the fast trains of the B. & O. east bound. The night was delightfully mild and chancing upon good company the hours flew by without notice, and when the light of the morning aroused my sleeping companions we were rushing across the fertile farms of Ashland Co. Ohio. Only one or two stops were made during the night. The sun was just creeping over the smoky eastern hills when we reached Lodi, a small town in Medina Co. where I visited when so small, that I stood between my father's knees, as we trudged into the little place in a one horse wagon behind the faithful old white horse, Dick. Our stop was brief, when we again were moving swiftly down the old historic Chippewa. On one side the sluggish little river occasionally showed its glistening yellow face as patches of sunlight were reflected, while on the other side steep hills towered, from whose bowels great piles of blue diamond had been mined, and awaiting shipment. A stroll through the train as it lay for a short time at Warwick, (where in youth I used to gather hazelnuts) discovered several other Butler people. Among them were Dr. Madden, Hiram Madden, Martin Hook, and Mrs. Robert Ashford, sister, and Mrs. Adam Tintsman, all bent on enjoying a visit among eastern friends. We were again in motion over the route of the Old Akron Branch, the first railroad to invade the sacred banks of the Old Tuscarawas River, and Ohio Canal. We passed by Summit the highest point between Lake Erie and Gulf of Mexico, where Summit Lake pours its waters into the Ohio Canal, and the strange feature of water running both north and south is seen, to the north into Lake Erie, and to south into the Gulf of Mexico. We soon reached Akron, that as early as 1845, opened to my childish imagination all that was wonderful and curious, where I have stood entranced on the banks of one of its twenty-one canal locks, and looked at the rushing waters as they filled them, and at the great white boats as they glided noiselessly along. The town always noted for its enterprise and rapid growth, has spread out in all directions. I took a short walk on its familiar streets, and was surprised at the lack of good buildings, and the small and poor stores that they contained. Howard street that was once one of the busiest marts of trade to be found almost anywhere, was dens, and dirty second hand stores. I returned to my hotel almost disgusted with this part of the city, secured my wheel, and started out to cover the twelve or fifteen miles that lay between the dingy city and the haven I had in my mind for the night. I found the roads almost impassable. The long drouth had broken up the sandy roads until they were about like plowed fields. I struggled along until I reached the top of the Summit Hill, where a few minutes rest seems a necessity. I turned around and cast a glance backward and saw a panorama that has few equals in the broad old Buckeye state. Akron with its scores of belching black chimneys, and its scores of church spires and its thousands of white residences, green trees and winding streets, seem to lie almost at my feet. I pursue my course for a mile or two over deeper sands and dustier roads until I reach "city limits," and strike the nice gravel roads of Barberton (formerly Portage.) Here surprise after surprise awaited me; the new town had spread out for fully two miles and I almost lost my bearing as I tried to follow the old stage route, known as the Portage road. I threaded my way along until I came to Wolf Creek Bridge which, was once said to divide the two mud holes between Akron and Wooster. Crossing it, familiar scenes presented themselves again. The old mill, and Johnson's Corners, its quaint old buildings looked natural enough. I pulled through slowly, drinking in deeply the pleasures awakened by the thoughts of other days. I reached the house of a friend soon afternoon, and willingly stepped from my wheel, eager both for rest, water and my late dinner. A good dinner, a good wash, and a short rest and I am again on the way for a visit to one who was once a dear friend. A warm greeting and a delightful hour, living again the long ago, awaited me. Then a trip to the crow's nest, Doylestown, perched upon hills high above all the surrounding territory. I wished for some my of boastful wheelmen, to see them vainly try to pedal up its mile of steep hill. I reached it in due time and found kind and well remembered friends. A good supper and I am ready to return to my friend of the noon hour, but alas my wheel has given out and I am compelled to seek repairs, I walked back to my friends house at the evening shadows gather and reflect upon the many times I have walked over the same road. But the way then was short, and the hills not half so high. A good visit, a good nights rest, and I am again in the town, with a repaired wheel, and I am myself again as I rush down the slopes toward the valley of the Chippewa. I take the old route by "Rogues' Hollow," and "Brown's Mills." Repeatedly I am lost to the surroundings and again familiar places break to view. Chidesters Factory, almost a ruin with no water in sight, to turn its dumb and decaying wheels was hastily passed "Browns mill," was reached, but no trace of its once familiar visage could be seen. A trackling rivalet flowed, where once a dashing stream boarded along. On again, and I cross the Chippewa. A large stone quarry had removed much of its ledgy bank, and the grove of spruce pines that had once been a landmark had disappeared. On, and I soon am passing the old school house, where my last days in district schools had been spent.

The scene was most familiar. It seemed but yesterday, that with my schoolmates I enjoyed, as boys only once enjoy the pleasures of school days. On, and I passed many buidings that were homes in '54 and '55. Of the happy inmates, few are living. As I passed along the road once traversed twice a day to school in sunshine and storm, I am surprised to think that I riding a wheel over this once familiar way. Soon I see the farm upon which I was born, and am tracing the rooms in which the joys and sorrows of childhood and the early days of manhood had been passed. I recalled the room and the house, where a devoted and kind mother had bid me goodbye, and urged me to be a good boy, as death was stealing over, and whose kind work and example has never been supplied by another, the want of them haunts to this day. Things were strangely like they used to be. I wandered over the old farm with thoughts too big for utterance. After an hour of rambling and with moistened eyes, I again am flying from the dear familiar place, for no friend of boyhood was near. I passed over the well-remembered "Ground Hog Hill," take the Wooster road, and my flight is more rapid than when in '63. I passed over the same route behind "Old Tobe," a well remembered family horse. I soon passed over the six miles to the site of the old Secrist Tavern where kind friends again greet me, and good dinner await me. After an hour of social chat, I am again on my way to Homerville, distant a good twenty-five miles, and Saturday afternoon warns me that no Sunday trains will help me out if I break down. But the roads are good and comparatively level and I speed noiselessly along, and miles are dropped behind me in rapid succession. In an hour or so I reach Congress a little straggling corners. I inquire for my second mother, a Mrs. Reed, that rocked me to sleep in infancy, and am surprised beyond expression, to learn that she yet lives, though over 80 years had just passed her house. I returned. I met her, and when I told her who I was I received only such a greeting as a mother bestows on long lost son. My stay was brief, as fully twenty miles were yet before me, and bells were ringing for supper. Down hills, up hills, through woods, over level stretches of road I pushed on and soon came to Burbank. The sun was now low. Six miles to West Salem, I thought it was but three and I leave the bright little village behind as I climb up from the valley of Kellbuch, to the level land above. As the sun is setting, I see the spires of West Salem glistening in its last rays I passed it a little to the South and along its four miles of intervening space, and as darkness begins to settle about me I see the white washed fences of the B. & O. crossing and reach the home of my cousin. James Tinsler, who together with his kind sons and daughters greet me in welcome and I enjoy a needed rest. I spend a couple of days here visiting old friends, and Monday afternoon I am passing Lodi, again I spend Monday night with friends near Medina. Tuesday morning I passed through LeRoy, the noted Home of the Ohio Farmers Insurance Co. It is a small weather beaten village with no buildings of any note, except the church like home of this old terrible mutual that has made more agents sick at heart than all others combined. I passed over the stage route to Seville (LeRoy has no railroad) and enjoy my last visit with friends of other days. Then take the B. & O. back again to Akron, on account of my ticket then homeward bound. I reach home about 9 a. m. on Tuesday well pleased with my day in Chippewa.

MARRIAGES AND BIRTHS.

The Former Show a Decrease And The Latter An Increase.

The State Board of health report has this to say of marriages and births in the state during the last year: Total number of marriages, 20,419, a decrease of 819 from the previous year. The marriage rate for this year per 1,000 of the population was 7.7. The foreign born grooms numbered 1,020 and the foreign born brides 755; number of brides under twenty, 5,029; number of grooms under twenty, 435. The total number of births for the year was 32,273; males, 16,717; female, 15,557; excess of males over females, 1,160. There were 681 negroes born, being 2 per cent of the whole number of births. Of American parents 26,715 were born; of foreign parents 1,763. The greatest number of births were in July, the least number of births were in June. Five sets of triplets have been born in Indiana during the year. Illegitimate births numbered 583, an increase of thirty-one over the preceding year. Nine counties show no illegitimate births. There was an increase of 696 births over the preceding year. It is noted while the marriages are fewer this year than the preceding yerr, the births, both legitimate and illegitimate have increased. Clark county shows the highest marriage rate in the State and stands fourth in birth rate.

PHILLIP HARTER'S WILL.

The Ft. Wayne Journal speaking of the will of the late Phillip Harter, says:

"The last will of Phillip Harter was filed for record yesterday. He leaves $250 to the Wayne-st Methodist Episcopal church, and the rest of his estate to his wife providing that in case of her death the property is to be divided one-third to his grandson, Hugh Harter, and two-thirds to his brother and sisters.

THAT SHOW.

Auburn is divided into two hostile camps today, and all this over a most unworthy object. Night before last, "Prof. McKay" gave an entertainment at the opera house. Those who attended do not seem to agree as to its merits. But one thing is certain only men were invited and only men were present. The plan of "Prof. McKay" in the various towns he visits is the same he followed here, and is of itself enough to condemn his entertainment. He came late in the day, hired the opera house, paid Mr. Henry in advance and got his receipt for the money. Then he quietly passed over town just in time to finish before supper, and distributed cards and bills announcing a "free lecture and entertainment for men only." This sort of a thing drew drew out a good house, all men, for the the circulars said "bring your wives, nit." They had the pictures of nude girls, without even the excuse of the traditional fig leaf, distributed after they were in the Opera House. And the printed matter on the circular was of the same character, except that it was more mysterious. For there was no mystery in the pictures. There was nothing for the imagination to supply.

At the opera house the "Professor" made a speech, artfully intended to be catchy and told those present, that Mr Henry did not know what kind of a show it was to be given, but that if anyone feared it would be too suggestive for them to stand, they could retire and he would now pass through the audience and take a quarter from each man who wished to stay. He further excited their curiosity by adding that if after it was underway, anyone found it too strong, they could go out and their money would be returned. But the majority remained and paid the quarter. Those who were there, say the play was a good one, as good as a majority of those put on at the Opera House. The ladies who were on the stage were in no way worse than those generally in theater companies. The only indecent feature as reported to us, was in the dialogues between the members of the company, who repeatedly got off smutty jokes. The next day, yesterday, several ladies of the town circulated a paper, that was signed by all the ministers and the officers of the ladies' clubs and other organizations, protesting against such shows. Then Prosecutor Pomeroy got out a warrant for the arrest of "Prof" McKay, who was to show at Garrett in the evening. Some one who had received one of the pictures would have to sign the affidavit for the warrant. Mr. Lochner of this office had received one, and was urged to sign the warrant. But he for some time refused, as neither he nor the writer cared to be mixed up in the matter. However the prosecutor came to the office and told Mr. Lochner, that he could call him before the justice and compel him to make oath. So, he unwillingly signed the affidavit. Sheriff Stroh with two rigs and several persons went to Garrett and the arrest was made, and all brought over here and tried today before 'Squire Walborn, on a charge of circulating indecent pictures. It is surprising to see how many respetable people take sides with the showman, and many are angry with Mr. Lochner for the part he unwillingly took in the case. Others are angry that such a show was allowed, and speak bitterly of Mr. Henry. Altogether it is a most unfortunate affair, and the whole trouble arises over a man who conducts a questionable show on a still more questionable plan and while doing the city a great harm and getting our people by the ears, goes out of it with a large sum of the people's money.

After working on the case till about 2:30 this afternoon, and when the jury was all ready, McKay asked for a change of venue and 'Squire Walborn sent it to 'Squire Tarney, of Jackson, at 10 a. m. Monday The state was represented by Prosecutor Pomeroy and John W. Baxter; the defense by Rose & Rose, of Auburn, and Sharpless and Gengler, of Garrett. He must give bond of $100 and the case comes up on Monday.

As we go to press we find the whole company went to jail.

PLEAD GUILTY.

Prof. McKay and His Company Vacate the Jail

At 1:30 this afternoon a crest-fallen looking lot of people, marched out of the front of the Hotel de Stroh, got into a many seated rig and took up the route to Garrett.

We pick up their story now, where we left off Saturday. That evening, the prosecutor, Mr. Pomeroy, took a different turn on it. He filed an information in the Circuit Court, and brought the matter before Judge Roby. This dismissed the case before the justice. The party remained in jail till today, when they, through their attorney, made a motion to quash the information. This was overruled by the Judge. Then arrangements were made to recall the regular jury to try the case, as they had been dismissed till the 24th. But the state having really no case against the members of the company except their Manager, "Prof." McKay, and it was believed the others had no knowledge of the circulating of obscene literature and pictures, they were all let off, and McKay then plead guilty before the jury and made the following written agreement:

MCKAY'S AGREEMENT.

AUBURN, Ind. Jan. 17, 1898.

TO THE PROSECUTOR:

I hereby agree to leave the state of Indiana, inside of the ensuing 24 hours and give no show or theatrical exhibit by my company; that I will not circulate any more obscene literature or advertising matter of any kind in DeKalb County, Indiana.

LEWIS MCKAY.

Judge Roby then imposed a fine on him of $10, and costs, and having no money to pay, he went to jail again. The Judge had purposely made his fine as low as he could, hoping the man could pay a small fine and so get away and not be an expense to the county. However, this afternoon his attorneys replevined the fine and costs, and, as stated, the troupe at once left for Garrett to get their baggage and then they leave the state, and their future address will be some where in Ohio. The fact that McKay plead guilty ought to satisfy quite a number of people that a further defense of McKay and his troupe will hardly be worth their time. It will be a good lesson to the next crowd of this kind that heads towards Auburn. They are lost to sight and not dear to memory. Now fumigate the jail and count the spoons.

A REPUBLICAN SUES IT.

The Petersburg, Ind., News, a rock-ribbed Republican newspaper during the McKinley campaign, is displeased with the present condition of things, and editorially says:

During each month of the year we furnish our readers with Republican prosperity supplements—no more such supplements will be sent out with our paper. The supplements are a fraud, a delusion and a lie. We are ashamed of them, sick and sore at the idea of sending out 'Prosperity Supplements,' when at the same time we are unable to collect enough money to meet our bills, after having made them."

THAT ROTTEN SHOW.

It is with surprise and regret, that we notice so many of our citizens taking sides in favor of the most rotten and indecent show that ever came to our town, and heaping abuse on all who had anything to do with prosecuting this brazen lot of people. What interest has Auburn in these strangers or their bawdy show, that we should hug them to our hearts while we kick the portion of our people who disapprove of such shows? Have these people done Auburn any good? Do they propose to do Auburn any good? Can a set of people, who put on the stage and before a house filled even with "men only," a lot of course, vulgar and indecent old smutty jokes, do anybody good? There is not a man defending these people, but would have been ashamed to have his wife, daughter or sweetheart present at that show There is not one, who has dared to repeat in the sacred precincts of his home, the dirty talk and still more foul allusions, that constituted the chief items of the intellectual(?) bill of fare presented to them by "Prof." McKay and his company on Thursday evening. We do not know what the law is, on matters of this kind, and do not care. But there is an unwritten law that lives in the hearts of all law-abiding citizens, that should force such troupes as this to get out of DeKalb county in a haste that is unmistakeable. There may be communities where such things might be tolerated. But we hope for the good name of Auburn and vicinity, that our community is not one of them. The editor of this paper was not caught by the glittering attractions of this show, and cannot say from personal experience what was said or done. But judging from the admissions of those who were present, but who are still defenders of the thing, we have come to the conclusion, that the sooner "Prof." McKay and company shake the dust of Auburn from their feet, the better it will be for Auburn.

Since writing the above our attention is called to our remarks in Saturday's issue, where we allude to Mr. Henry. There was no reflection on him intended. But the facts are, he was overreached by a set of sharpers. We have been told that he wanted to get out of his bargain, after he had their money, and found out what sort of a show they were liable to give. But they had his receipt and held him to it. All our people will remember that some years ago, he stopped a play while it was on the stage, because it did not suit him or the audience. And if half that the friends of Prof McKay tell of this show is true, it was a much worse one, and Mr. Henry was justified in trying to get out of his bargain with them.

OUR GARRETT FRIENDS

Yesterday in company with George Bishop jr we visited Garrett. This city has very made many improvements during the winter. New brick business blocks have gone up and they add greatly to the appearance of the city. At the B. & O. depot we met John Crimmins. He is now the official time keeper of the B. & O. and has a good position. He commenced there Jan. 1st, taking the place of Chas Sullivan, who received the appointment as postmaster. Henry Dills is also employed in the office with Mr. Crimmins. He is an all around jovial good fellow and we are always glad to meet him. We took dinner at the city restaurant and here we found an Auburn girl, Miss Mattie Pearce, waiting table. In the Wagner block we met Ed Koons. He has been employed there since August in a clothing and shoe store. We found Bro Miner busy in his office, and by the way he has been making some recent improvements, by way of adding new material to his office. He now has an office that will compare favorably with any in the county so far as equipment is concerned. The business men of that city seem to realize profits from his medium too, for he has a number of ads. We notice that Garrett business men understand the art of advertising and are keeping it up during the dull season.

WHO'LL TACKLE THIS?

A recent number of the Chicago Record brings out some more of the old arithmetical puzzles, among them the one about the man walking on the moving railway train, and the other about the Mexican and the American silver dollars. The last named, we believe we have not yet submitted to our readers. It refers to the time a few years ago when the bullion value of a silver dollar, was the same as its stamped or nominal value. The Mexican dollar being a little the heaviest was really worth a trifle the most. But in reality they passed at the same value with everybody, except in government business and at points near the boundary line between the countries. The Mexican government, in order to discourage the usage of American dollars, had its people allow but 90 cents for a U. S. silver dollar. Then the U. S. government did the same by the Mexican dollar. At El Paso, a town on the American side of the Rio Grande, a Mexican silver dollar would only pass for 90 cents, though the American dollar was worth 100 cents. Then right across the not very big river, on the Mexican side, at the Mexican town Paso del Norte, now called Juarez, the American dollar would only pass for 90 cents while their own Mexican dollars were good for 100 cents. And here comes in the Record's revision of the old silver problem.

One day a Texan with a thirst for liquor bought a 10-cent drink of whisky at a bar in El Paso and offered in payment an American dollar. The bartender gave him as change a Mexican dollar, worth 90 cents on our side of the river. The Texan took his Mexican dollar over to Paso del Norte and bought a 10-cent drink of mescal, receiving an American dollar in change He returned to the Texas side and bought another drink, received another Mexican dollar in change and made a second trip to the Mexican side, where he had his drink and received his 90 cents in change represented by an American silver dollar.

He repeated his trips back and forth until he was comfortably drunk. The saloonkeepers had not lost any money by the various transactions. When the man went home he still had an American dollar, the amount with which he started out.

Question—Who paid for the drinks?

NO PAY—NO CURE

ROBBED THE DUMMY.

(Hickstille New.)

On Friday evening of last week at the supper hour, the shades of night just having fallen, it was discovered that one of the clothing dummies in in front of the store of Boon & Bevington had been robbed of a coat and vest and like articles stripped from another dummy across the way.

Suspicion at once fell upon Joe Stafford, as he had been seen loitering about the corner but a few moments before.

H. M. Hartzler hunted Joe up, and after bluffing a little, he owned to having the stolen articles. Mr. Hartzler went with him and he crawled under the large warehouse of Kerr Bros. & Co., on the rear of Grandma Dixon's lot, and soon emerged with the garments.

Joe was placed under arrest and given a hearing before Justice Berger Saturday. He was placed under bond of $150 to appear before the probate court at its next session. The bond was furnished and Joe liberated.

During his hearing, and while about the streets, the arrested man compromised John Sewell, claiming that he assisted in the theft, and that it was him who partially stripped the other dummy.

Sewell was accordingly arrested Saturday and kept in the lock-up until Monday afternoon, when he also was given a hearing. Stafford, though, told so many conflicted stories that enough good evidence to hold the second man could not be secured, and he was accordingly dismissed.

Joe Stafford is to be pitied as well as blamed. It seems that his is a genuine case of kleptomania. Theft is a real disease with him, and he cannot resist it. The parents of the young man have endeavored to teach him properly and have never failed to point out the consequences of theft, and how wrong it is. But Joe cannot resist and with him, generally, a temptation means a fall.

PAYING THE STATE DEBT.

It is laughable to hear Gov. Mount boast that he is paying the state debt, and take all the credit to himself. During the last republican state administration, the debt got pretty large Then the democrats came into power, and in spite of the fiercest opposition from the republicans passed a law that would make all sorts of corporations pay a fair share of the taxes. Republicans have ever since been telling the people what a wicked law this was, and even Gov. Mount himself in the campaign that elected him, was fierce against it. But the law has been sustained and enough extra money forced from corporations to enable the state to keep up payments for reducing the debt. Now, Gov. Mount and his friends point to the reducing debt and say "See what we are doing:"

Lord Mayor's Regalia.

The most interesting features in connection with the inauguration of the lord mayor of London are the objects of plate and jewelry connected therewith. The scepter, pearl sword and city purse are carried before the lord mayor at this inauguration. The stem of the scepter is the oldest piece of jewelry extant in England. It is cut crystal and was fashioned in the days of Edward the Confessor. The pearl sword dates from the time of Elizabeth and the ponderous city mace from George II.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

POLITICS OF THE DAY

DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF.

There is truth in the assertion that a house divided against itself cannot stand, and the Republican party is beginning to recognize this fact.

On many questions, the g. o. p. is a house divided against itself, but on no question is it so markedly divided as upon that of the currency. With Secretary Gage at one extreme and Senator Chandler at the other, there exists a great gulf between the two which neither can pass.

But the great mentor of the Republican party, Secretary Sherman, does not stand by the side of Secretary Gage. On the contrary, he is on record as being in sympathy with the views held by Senator Chandler. When Sherman was Secretary of the Treasury the same struggle was made by the bankers which they are now making to retire the greenbacks, and this is what Secretary Sherman told them:

"United States notes are now, in form, security and convenience, the best circulating medium known. The objection is made that they are issued by the Government, and that it is not the business of the Government to furnish paper money, but only to coin money. The answer is that the Government had to borrow money, and is still in debt. The United States note, to the extent that it is willingly taken by the people, and can, beyond question, be maintained at par in coin, is the least burdensome form of debt.

"The loss of interest in maintaining the resumption fund, and the cost of printing and engraving the present amount of United States notes, is less than one-half the interest on an equal sum of 4 per cent. bonds. The public thus saves over $7,000,000 of annual interest, and secures a safe and convenient medium of exchange, and has the assurance that a sufficient reserve in coin will be retained in the treasury beyond the temptation of diminution, such as always attends reserves held by banks."

Secretary Gage need not call upon Gompers to argue the question of finance with him. He can find a foeman worthy of his steel sitting close to him at the Cabinet table. The gold advocating Republicans have plenty of opposition in their own party without seeking trouble with the captains of organized labor. Let them fight it out together.

Take Democratic Papers.

Men who desire to bring about a return of prosperity to this country should act upon the advice of William J. Bryan and lend their practical as well as moral support to the Democratic newspapers.

No agency is more potent for good or ill than is the newspaper. Recognizing this fact, Bryan earnestly advises the Democracy of the nation to subscribe for and advertise in the Democratic journals, thus giving legitimate support to the advocates of the people's cause.

During the Presidential campaign of 1896 the subsidized press of the money power wielded an immense influence, deluding the people with false promises and deceiving them by misrepresentation of the position taken by the friends of constitutional money.

Democratic newspapers have saved the people $20,000,000 recently by exposing the Union Pacific steal and forcing the Republican administration to demand a just settlement of the account. The questions which are to be discussed for the next two years are vital. In their correct settlement lies the fate of the nation; therefore, the newspapers which befriended the people should receive the support of the people.

William J. Bryan is a great orator, but he is also a practical man, and in his suggestion that those who wish the good of the country should support Democratic newspapers he has given wise and eminently practical advice, which should be promptly followed.—Chicago Dispatch.

Raiding the Civil Service.

The Republican raid on the civil service in Congress has commenced in earnest. The pie brigade has been strong enough to override the law in the internal revenue service at every point, notwithstanding the protestations of the Civil Service Commission and the false pretensions of the administration. We will see when the vote is taken where the administration really stands on the question. The civil service law will come out unscathed in Congress if McKinley really favors the law as it stands.—Louisville Dispatch.

Trusts Under the Dingley Bill.

The tendency of high tariffs to promote trusts was also faithfully pointed out at the time the Dingley bill was under discussion, but no one could have foreseen that the rush in this direction would reach such formidable proportions as it has assumed during the few months that the new law has been in operation. There has been such open and indecent haste, and the effect upon articles of necessity so obvious that the outcry against the trusts has lost all semblance of partisanship.—Manchester Union.

The Truthful Compositor.

A Georgia editor says: "Times are not improving very fast. We are jagging alone in the same old way." He probably wrote it "jogging," but permitted it to fall into the hands of a compositor who was determined to tell the truth, even if he lost his job.—Cleveland Leader.

On Its Last Legs

The Republican party is flickering its last flicker. It has outlived its usefulness. Every question that made it great in Lincoln's time is settled. It is traveling on its shape, and just now there isn't much left of its shape.—Toledo Bee.

No Pensions for Civil Employes

By no stretch of the doctrine of gratitude can it be claimed that the Government owes clerks and other civil employes anything beyond the remuneration which is paid with a certainty and a regularity that cannot be depended upon in any commercial or other business pursuit. It is, therefore, not only un-American in principle to establish a civil pension—and that is a logical outgrowth of the "merit system"—but it is an outrage upon the taxpayers.—St. Louis Republic.

Republican Dissensions General.

From nearly every section of the country come telegraphic announcements of trouble and disagreements in the ranks of the Republican party. In Ohio the party is rent in twain over the Senatorial struggle. The same may be said of the State of Maryland. In the State of Iowa matters are but a trifle better, while in Illinois the party may be said to be split in fragments. The same might be said of half a dozen other States.—Peoria Journal.

Prosperity in New England.

Prosperity under the Dingley law has struck New England with a dull thud, and the cotton operatives who have been hit by a reduction in wages, as prosperity fell on the robber barons, are expected to turn the other cheek on election day and vote to continue "prosperity" for robber barons, and poverty for the rest of mankind.—Louisville Post.

What McKinley Has Done.

Mr. McKinley goes into the new year with nothing accomplished for the country or for mankind. The nation has only the farmer and a European shortage to thank for what measure of prosperity has been restored. As to civil service reform, that is being knocked out by office brokerage.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Civil Service a Fixture.

Civil service reform has come to stay. The only fault we have to find with it is that it has not gone as far as it should. But it will advance, and any political party which dares to go to the country on a declaration against it will be beaten badly and will richly deserve the castigation.—Atlanta Journal.

Economy in Legislative Vacations.

The holiday vacation of the Legislature cost the people of this State only $20,000, and it was cheap at that. It would have cost a great deal more had the Legislature been in session, in all probability.—Peoria Herald.

Know Each Other.

It is eminently proper that both parties to the Ohio Senatorial fight should have employed detectives to shadow their opponents. Everybody knows that all Republicans will stand watching.—St. Louis Republican.

Forakerism Good by Comparison.

Bad as Forakerism is and has been in Ohio politics, it is saintly in its integrity compared with Hannaism.—Columbus, Ohio, Press.

Bryan's Good Advice.

It is more important that we support our newspapers than that we assemble at banquets.—W. J. Bryan at Jackson Day Banquet.

MENAGERIE ANIMALS.

Their Cost Ranges from a Few Dollars Up Into Thousands.

People who see all sorts of tamed animals in their cages at city zoological gardens and circus menageries are curious to know the cost of the animals. The annual quotation of prices from the world's greatest animal mart—Hamburg, Germany—was recently received and is as follows:

Female Indian elephant, 6 feet high trained to do several tricks, carries six people to saddle, $1,500; female elephant, 5 feet 6 inches high, no tricks, $1,300; young, fresh imported male elephants, 4 to 5 feet high, from Burmah, $1,000; females, $1,100; zebras, 5 years old, per pair, $2,000 and both broke to drive in single or double harness; 8-month-old zebra, male, $450, and female, 3 months old, $350; Nubian wild ass, 6 months old, $200; wild asses from the Russian steppes, per pair, $900; double-humped camels, per pair, $500; llamas, 4 years old, per pair, $250; Axis deer, from India, per pair, $200; Sika deer, from Japan, per pair, $150; waterbuck antelopes, 2 years old (country not given), per pair, $750; Bengal tigers, male, 6 years old, female, 3 years old, per pair, $1,750; Bengal tigers, female, 3 years old, each, $750; Nubian lions, 6 years old, per pair, $1,500; Nubian lions, 2½ years old, per pair, $1,000, and 1¼ years old, $600; female jaguars, 18 months old, each $225; pumas, 3 years old, per pair, $350; Indian leopards, male, $175 each; striped hyenas, each, $75; Russian wolves, each, $100; young polar bears, per pair, $450; polar bears, 18 months old, $650, and fully grown, $1,000 per pair; young Russian bears, $150; African and Indian porcupines, each, $40; male kangaroo, $125; beaver rats, $30 per pair; male ourang outang, 7 years old, $1,500.

May Have Been Some Truth in It.

American and English tourists who visited Ischl, in Austria, recently, were confronted with the following notice on a sign board over the door of one of the hostelries of the place: "To the gentlemans Englanders and Americaners, here you become asses." Upon inquiry it was learned that the purport of the singular sign was that the proprietor of the place had donkeys to let, which were used for excursions into the neighboring mountains. A much-traveled cobbler, who professed to be able to master the English language, was responsible for the unique wording of the sign. He had translated the German sentence: "An re Herren Englander and Amerikaner, hier becommt ihr Esel," the latter four words meaning "here you can hire asses."

The disqualification of one of the three members of a town board to sit on a hearing for the revocation of a license is held, in State ex rel. Getchel vs. Bradish (Wis.) 37 L. R. A. 289, to make a decision of the board revoking the license invalid, and the chairman is held disqualified when he has procured a person to make an unlawful purchase in order to get evidence to revoke the license.

BRYAN AT CHICAGO.

ELOQUENT ADDRESS MADE TO DEMOCRATS.

The Guest of Honor at the Jackson Banquet He Discusses Questions of the Day—Pays His Respects to the President and Secretary of the Treasury.

A Notable Celebration.

A host of Democrats, quite a number of them from Iowa, Indiana and Wisconsin, celebrated Jackson Day by a banquet at the Tremont House in Chicago. William J. Bryan was the principal guest. Mr. Bryan was received with cheers when introduced and spoke in part as follows:

It is especially fitting that at this time the American people should recall the name of Andrew Jackson and gather inspiration and encouragement from his public career. We are engaged to-day in contest very similar to that in which he played so conspicuous and honorable a part. During his term of office, the National Bank attempted to overawe the representatives of the people and control the government. He grappled with it and overthrew it. Arrayed against him were the very classes which have forced a continuance of the gold standard in the United States in spite of the almost unanimous protest of the people—the same classes which are now trying to coerce the government into the surrender of the sovereign right to control the money of the country. It seems that every generation presents a combat between the producers of wealth and the money changers. The latter, conducting their campaign in secrecy, fasten themselves upon the body politic and prey upon industry until their hold is broken by an awakened and indignant public.

Secretary Gage Is Scored.

The present Secretary of the Treasury Mr. Gage, is eminently fitted to be the instrument of the financiers in their effort to complete the scheme commenced twenty-four years ago and continued without interruption until the present day. He possesses a sublime faith in the superiority of money over man and a supreme contempt for the rights, the interests and the opinions of the people at large. He knows that the gold standard was adopted in the United States without any party ever asking for it. He knows that for twenty-three years after its adoption no party ever dared to commend it; he knows that in the campaign of 1896 the party composed of bolting Democrats was the only party which dared to declare the gold standard a blessing; he knows that at the polls 99 per cent. of the voters registered their opposition to a single gold standard, differing only as to the means of securing bimetallism; he knows that the President to whose partiality he owes his position sent a commission to Europe to beg other nations to help us get rid of the gold standard; he knows that the Senate and House with scarcely a dissenting vote appropriated $100,000 of the people's money to pay the expenses of the commission while it was seeking relief from the gold standard; he knows that France by joining in the demand for international bimetallism condemns the gold standard; he knows that the farmers, the laborers and to a large extent the manufacturers of England desire international bimetallism; he knows that the maintenance of the gold standard means unmerited advantage to the money owing and the bond-holding classes and undeserved punishment to the vast majority of the people of this country and of the civilized world; and yet in spite of his knowledge of all these facts, he is deliberately planning to fasten the gold standard permanently upon the people of the United States. Not content with advocating a policy which places the destinies of seventy millions of free men in the hands of foreign financiers and permits a few London bankers to control our standard money he now proposes to give to the National banks full and complete control of the paper money of the nation. In November, 1896, six million and a half of electors voted against the retirement of the greenbacks and seven millions supported a platform which was silent upon the subject.

No Relief for the People.

The Republican candidate for President in his letter of acceptance pledged the Republican party to keep in circulation (and as good as gold) all the silver and paper money now included in the currency of the country, while only one party advocated the retirement of the greenbacks and that party polled less than one per cent. of the total vote.

Mr. Gage knows these facts, and yet, in spite of that knowledge, he is seeking to organize a money trust more dangerous not only to the industries, but to the liberties of the people, than all the other trusts combined. At such a time and under such circumstances, the memory of the hero of New Orleans ought to be invoked in every State, county and hamlet to arouse the people to a sense of their danger. Twelve months have elapsed since we celebrated this day a year ago and every month has borne witness to the failure of Republican policies to bring relief to the people. Just after the passage of the Dingley bill our opponents were boisterous in their announcement that prosperity had returned. The Republicans were given full swing. They framed just such a law as their hearts desired and their brains devised and what is the result? Read the daily papers and you will find the items of news arranged under two heads—the formation of trusts and the reduction of wages.

Can combination among employers be innocent if co-operation among miners is a crime? In most of these factories can be found tranparencies and banners promising good times. The mill owners would probably quote the right of a court of equity to interfere and plead as a defense that the operatives have an adequate remedy in the ballot.

A few days ago an association of mill owners tried to justify a reduction of wages by laying the blame upon the laws passed in Massachusetts for the protection of the operatives. Their complaint is significant because it emphasizes the reactionary tendency of present conditions. If this grinding process continues, the laboring classes will lose all of the advantages which they have gained in the last quarter of a century. Instead of shorter hours for adults and more education for children, we shall be asked to lengthen the hours of labor and to dwarf the intellects as well as the bodies of the children by manual labor during the years when they should be in school. How many plagues will be required to soften the heart of our financial Pharoah? Does he not know that now, as of old, "bricks without straw" but presages the coming of the day of deliverance.

Since the last celebration of Jackson's Day thousands of political prodigals have returned to the old home and thousands more are growing weary of the husks. The reception of those who have returned has depended upon the spirit which has animated the prodigals. Those who have come back acknowledging the binding force of the Chicago platform and willing to work harmoniously side by side with the brethren who went not astray, have been taken into full fellowship and their wanderings forgiven. But those who have swaggered back boasting of their intention to remodel the house and revolutionize the method have found neither the fatted calf nor the banquet hall. There is no humiliation in the acknowledgment of error. To a large portion of our people the money question was a new question in 1896, and as we demanded affirmative action, the timid and only half-convinced arrayed themselves against us. Since the election there has been time for study and events in rapid succession have been vindicating the position taken by the bimetallic forces in the last campaign. The Republicans, too, intoxicated by success, have been disclosing schemes which were carefully concealed during the contest. We may therefore expect continuance of accessions to our ranks.

I have so much confidence in the earnestness and intelligence of those who are enlisted under the banner of independent bimetallism, that I am sure that all things needful will be done, I therefore bid you be of good cheer. Unless all political omens fail, the twentieth century will open with the money of the constitution restored and the motto, "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none," the controlling principle in all departments of the government. Then will all of our people sing a new song of a nation redeemed.

Speeches were also made by Senator Stewart of Nevada, Samuel E. Morss of the Indianapolis Sentinel, the Hon. James H. Lewis of Washington State, Mr. T. R. R. Cobb of Atlanta, D. J. Campau of Detroit, Mayor Taggart of Indianapolis, and others.

Alaska and Lin oln.

Secretary Bliss, in his report to the President, will probably suggest that Alaska be divided and the northern half of the Territory be called Lincoln. That name is good enough for anything we own. But few of our States have been named for men. Delaware was named in honor of Lord De la War, Georgia in honor of George II. of England, New York in compliment to the Duke of York, the Carolinas after Charles IX. of France, Pennsylvania after William Penn, and Louisiana after Louis XIV. of France.

MILLIONS OF FISH.

GREAT QUANTITIES WHICH THE WORLD CONSUMES.

In the Great Industry of Fishing the United States Takes the Lead—Statistics of the Business—Hardships and Perils of Fishermen.

An Enormous Supply.

The extent of the world's fisheries, the number of persons to whom they give employment, or the amount of food they contribute to the world's supply, is something of which few people have any adequate idea, although everybody eats fish, occasionally, at least. When the subject is suggested, every one sees at once that the quantity of food supplied by the ocean to the use of man must be enormous, for oysters, as an example, are found in every hamlet in the country, at one time or another during the year. The grocers' shelves are always piled high with cans of preserved lobsters, shrimps, salmon and whitefish, while the store that could not furnish a dried codfish or a smoked herring has not yet been found. But these commonplace facts, while significant as indicating the universal use of sea food as an auxiliary article of diet, are far from furnishing an adequate idea of the extent to which the sea and its tributary rivers are relied on for a permanent supply of food.

As a fact, fishing is one of the greatest industries in the world, employing more men, using more means and bringing larger returns than many others about which there is much more talk.

In Great Britain, according to the latest available statistics, 34,900 vessels, HAULING IN A HERRING NET.

having 112,600 men as crews, were employed in the fisheries, and during the year 1888 they captured 317,000 tons of fish, valued at $25,000,000. The English are great fish eaters. There is not a point in England 100 miles distant from the sea, and it is not surprising that fish should form so important an article of diet. The English eat 100 pounds per annum to each inhabitant, a fact indicating that in one form or another sea food must be found on every British table at almost every meal. The principal fish, so far as Great Britain is concerned, is the herring, of which, in 1888, 2,635,000 barrels were taken. Nor do the herrings much exceed in number or in value the oysters and lobsters, for of the former, in the same year, there were taken 29,000,000, and of the latter, 5,500,000 tons, a total so large as to defy understanding.

The French, too, have an industrious fishing marine, though their deep sea fishing is not progressing like that of other nations. Yet the number in both the deep sea and the coast fishing is respectable, the latest returns showing there are 13,000 men engaged in the former, who took 34,000 tons of fish, while on the coast waters 72,000 found employment in taking 96,000 tons. In oysters and sardines France takes the lead. During the year 1885 the French oyster men captured 127,000,000, while those who turned their attention to sardines took 494,000,000. The French also do a large fishing business on the Newfoundland banks, taking home and exporting about 19,000 tons of dried codfish every year.

The Dutch fisheries are but a shadow of their former greatness. Three hundred years ago the Dutch had 1,500 fishing boats engaged in the Shetland herring fisheries alone, while 260 large ships scoured the polar seas for whales. No less than 14,000 men composed the crews in the Dutch fishing fleet at that time. But at the present time there are but 416 vessels, mostly of small size, that take annually about 270,000 tons of fish.

The Russian fisheries are mostly in the Baltics and along the northern coast, which is closed to navigation nine months of the year. The annual catch of the Russian fleet is valued at $10,000,000.

Sweden has 29,000 fishermen and the annual catch exceeds 60,000 tons. Norway each year sends out 111,000 fishermen and they take 475,000,000 fish, with a value of $10,000,000. This, however, does not include the whales and sealers. From 350 to 400 whales and 80,000 sealskins are an average year's work.

The United States Leads.

Whether considered in regard to the number of vessels or the output, the United States is far ahead of any other nation. According to Mulhal, there were in 1880 51,400 boats of all sizes, manned by 131,400 seamen, with an annual take of over $40,000,000. Great Britain comes next, the number of boats and men being already given, and after Great Britain comes Canada and Norway, each having about the same number of persons engaged in this industry, while France is fourth, Italy fifth, Russia sixth, Spain ninth, Germany twelfth and Holland at the end of the list.

To the man who fishes once or twice in the year as a recreation, no sport is more delightful, but to him who finds in fishing a means of livelihood, it is as arduous as any other way of making a living, and far more perilous than most callings followed by men on the land. In the first place it is very hard work. In the coast fisheries, such as those of France and the British Isles, while the fishermen generally go out before day and return late in the afternoon it often happens that they are out on the banks for two or three days at a time, during which they are exposed to all kinds of weather, not infrequently being wet to the skin for days at a time. It is not surprising that, according to the health statistics, over one-third of their number die of some form of lung or throat trouble, nor that another third should be constant sufferers from rheumatism.

Aside from the dangers arising from exposure, the work of a fisherman is exceedingly hard. In the cod and other deep-sea fisheries, when a school of fish is located, all the crew have to do is to bait their hooks and let them sink to the bottom of the sea, where the bait is almost instantly taken and the line is at once pulled in. Exhilarating as may be the sensation of drawing in a line with a big fish at the end of it, the thought of sport is soon lost in the idea of labor. Pulling in a cod is hard work. The line soaked with sea water soon makes the fingers sore, and the slightest scratch sometimes becomes a painful ulcer. Laborious days are followed by sleepless, anxious nights, for a watch must be kept, and at the first signs of bad weather all must make for the nearest port of refuge. They are lucky if they reach it in time, too, for every year great numbers of those who follow this perilous calling make the fatal mistake of not starting in time, and the result is they are never heard of again.

The mortality arising from the wrecking of vessels of the world's fishing fleets is something appalling. The latest statistics show that the annual loss of life in this calling from drowning exceeds 2,500, and, this being the case, no wonder can be felt that the wives of the fishermen watch their daily departure with dismal forebodings, well knowing that the small sail that disappears on the horizon may have gone forever from human eyes.

Tiny Tandem Riders.

This amusing picture shows the smallest tandem and the tiniest tandem riders in the world. England is the proud owner of the twain. Their names are Doris and Bert Cooke, and they recently rode a mile in five minutes on their diminutive machine. They are never so happy as when bicycling, and can pedal away in the most business-like fashion imaginable.

A Photographic Improvement.

Capt. Colson, an English army officer, has devised a promising means of diminishing the time of exposure of photographic plates in order to get a good image. He finds that some of the light gets through the gelatino-bromide plate, and reflects it back into the film by a smreen of white paper, or cardboard, close to the film. He proposes to get even better results by making the plates with a thin, white opaque layer on the glass and flowing the emulsion over them.

"BIG BEN."

Great Bell Cracked, Broken Up, Recast, and Then Cracked Again.

"Big Ben," so called after Sir Benjamin Hall, who was the first commissioner of works, when the order for the clock was given, was cast in 1856 at Norton, near Stockton-on-Tees.

From the North of England this enormous bell, weighing sixteen tons, was conveyed to London by sea, where it had, on a small scale, almost as adventurous a passage as the Egyptian obelisk which now graces the Thames embankment. Once or twice during the voyage, indeed, it was feared that it would send the vessel bearing it to the bottom of the ocean. Not very long after the clock had been placed in a temporary position at Westminster—on Oct. 24, 1857—and while it was being rung, as was customary for a short time at 1 o'clock on Saturdays, it was noticed that it had a cracked, uncertain sound.

On a minute examination with a lighted candle a crack was discovered to extend from the rim about half way up the side. The catastrophe to an instrument which cost £3,343 raised the question as to who was to pay for recasting it. The founders repudiated responsibility, declaring that too heavy a clapper (it weighing 12 cwt.) had been used. The authorities, however, placed on record that it was "porous, unhomogeneous, unsound, and a defective casting."

Be that as it may, "Big Ben" was broken up and recast at a cost of £700. Its weight was 13 tons 10 cwt. 3 qr. 15 lbs., its diameter 9 feet, and its height outside 7 feet 6 inches. It was rung for the first time on Nov. 18, 1858.

Alas! in less than a year after this the new bell ceased to strike the hours, having become more seriously cracked than its predecessor. The crack, which was inside, was three inches in extent. For about three years afterward the hours were struck on the largest of the quarter bells. The experiment was then tried of turning the great bell round so as to present a fresh place for the hammer, or clapper, to strike on. With a light hammer this experiment proved so far satisfactory that during the thirty-eight years that have elapsed the fissure does not seem to have increased; and it is possible when the wind is favorable to distinctly hear it in most of the suburbs booming out the midnight hour.—London Mail.

TWO WORTHY WOMEN.

Miss Goldthwait, Typewriter—John Adams' Descendent a Nurse.

Miss Alice Goldthwait is said to be the most rapid operator on the typewriter, under test conditions, in the world. At an exhibit of expert typewriting given in St. Louis, Mo., a few days ago, Miss Goldthwait, in the test made, wrote 80 words per minute from dictation. In the second test of three minutes and ten seconds she wrote 302 words, an average of 95½ words per minute. The dictation was from a sermon and other unfamiliar matter. Another interesting test was in writing a familiar sentence, in which Miss Goldthwait wrote 155 words in one minute.

In a hospital in Philadelphia, learning to be a nurse, is a great-great-granddaughter of John Adams, second President of the United States and one of the founders of the government. Her name is Miss Emma O'Neill, and, despite the fact that she is scarcely more than 20 years old, she possesses in not a small degree some of the characteristics of the distinguished family of which she is a proud descendent. She is beautiful and much courted by Philadelphia society men, but on her mother's death a year ago she decided to devote herself to ministering to the sick.

Outwitted the Laird.

In the absence of a family, says Spare Moments, the private grounds of a certain Scottish lord were often used by the natives of the two neighboring villages, as thereby a saving of fully a mile was effected.

Occasionally, too, when his lordship was at home, attempts were made to "run the blockade," for, whenever any trespasser was caught by his lordship he had to obey the command to "go back the way he had come."

A local hawker, when cautiously wheeling his barrow along the forbidden path one day, happened to see his lordship before the latter saw him, and coolly turning the barrow round sat down with his back to the dreaded laird, who, coming up, gave him a severe reprimand and then ordered him to "wheel about and go back by the road by which he had come."

The wily hawker did as he was bidden, thereby turning his barrow in the direction in which he wished to go, and so effectually outwitting the unsuspecting laird.

There is something to make fun of about every one.

GAINED FORTY-EIGHT POUNDS.

"A strong appetite for liquor was the beginning of the breaking down of my health. I was also a slave to tea and coffee. I took the gold cure, but was not helped."

This is clipped from the Daily Herald, of Clinton, Iowa. It might well be taken for the subject of a temperance lecture, but that is not our object in publishing it. It is to show how a system, run down by drink and disease, may be restored. We quote further from the same:

I Retire to City Life.

"For years I was unable to do my work. I could not sleep nights or rest days on account of continuous pains in my stomach and back. I was unable to digest my food. Headaches and painful urination were frequent, and my heart's action became increased. I left my farm and retired to city life, for I was a confirmed invalid, and the doctor said I would never be well again.

"Soon after I happened to use four boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and since then I have been free from all pain, headache and dyspepsia. I eat heartily and have no appetite for strong drink, and feel twenty years younger.

"My weight has increased 48 pounds. I cannot say too much for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and claim that they have cured me. JOHN B. COOK."

Convicts Work Ungarded.

The anomalous spectacle of a large gang of penitentiary convicts working in the open with no officers or armed force to guard them is presented every day at Yuma, Ariz. They are camped on the Colorado River, a little above Yuma, to be exact, and they are engaged in cutting wood for the territory. None of them escape. None try to escape. Why do they stay? Because each man guards the other. Each man is a "short termer," none of them having more than a year yet to serve. All are allowed a rebate for the work they do. When a convict has cut two cords of wood he has earned a day's rebate on his term, but should one of the gang escape then every man in the gang loses all rebates. Thus each man becomes his brother's keeper in a more practical sense than the beautiful theory is often carried out among freemen.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Young Womanhood.

Sweet young girls! How often they develop into worn, listless, and hopeless women because mother has not impressed upon them the importance of attending to physical development.

No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodical pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick and needs motherly advice, ask her to address Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell every detail of her symptoms, surroundings and occupations. She will get advice from a source that has no rival in experience of women's ills. Tell her to keep nothing back. Her story is told to a woman, not to a man. Do not hesitate about stating details that she may not wish to mention, but which are essential to a full understanding of her case, and if she is frank, help is certain to come!

GREAT MASONIC LIBRARY.

T. S. Parvin, of Cedar Rapids, the Conserver of a Unique Collection.

Theodore S. Parvin is the name of the originator, builder, conserver and guardian angel of the great Masonic library which is now stored in its fine new fireproof home in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Mr. Parvin, for more than half a century, has been busy collecting books that pertain to Masonry, and the result of his labors in a library unique in the world of books. Every rare work on Masonry has gone, for years, to his collection. Book sellers in every city of the earth have watched and worked for him, and he has been the first to know about old editions turning up in the world's market through auction sales and other channels. The most valuable treasure in the collection is the "Book of Constitutions"—the first edition of 1722. For this and a few others the British museum would pay a small fortune. The library now has about 30,000 volumes—a complete collection of books on Masonry. Mr. Parvin has exhausted the field and there are no more rare books to get. He has them all in the Iowa library. The institution is not famed in America, but scholars all over the world know it. Students from the Orient, from India, from all the countries of Europe have come to Mr. Parvin to use the works untiring patience has gathered together. The story of his life from the time he came to Iowa in 1838 as private secretary to Governor Lucas is the story of that collection of books. He has done nothing else, but that work has been thorough. The library is now in charge of Mr. Parvin and his son. The old bibliophile is drawing to his earthly end among the volumes he loves so well.

THEODORE S. PARVIN.

Prayer of the Pedestrian.

Keep me this day unharmed, I pray,
From wheelmen scorching up and down
They never look nor care, not they.
They bowl one o'er and ride away,
And who they are there's none can say,
And you with broken ribs and crown.

From reckless driving, I implore,
Guard me this day. I fear the boy
Who drives for some small, petty store,
(Each year their numbers grow the more),
They dash along with wild uproar
And accidents fill them with joy.

But if it be ordained that I
Must meet to-day with happ'ning dire,
That 'spite of how I strive and try,
In spite of care and warning cry,
Am struck, run o'er and senseless lie,
Grant me the favor I require.

Let me, while yet I sigh and groan,
But have at least the luck or chance,
That that which breaks my collar bone,
Be carriage some rich man shall own,
Whose name and number will be known,
Ere I am in the ambulance.

Let me be bruised by cable cars,
Street railroads are the best to sue;
Or some great brewer's wagon jars
Be what shall make me first see stars
And leave me with the jury scars—
Scars tell with twelve good men and true.

Keep me, I pray, unharmed this day
As I go forth where danger lies;
But if with harm or hurt I meet,
Let it be done, I pray, entreat,
By those responsible complete
For damages and compromise!

The Turkish Lady.

We can hardly realize, writes a correspondent from Constantinople, the full monotony of a Turkish lady's life. Every woman, rich or poor, with the least regard to her character must be in her house by sundown.

Only think of the long, dull winter afternoons and evenings when no friend can come near them, as all their female friends must be in their own houses, and male friends they cannot have. Even the men of their own family associate but little with them.

On the Bosphorus their caiques are a great resource to the Turkish ladies, but in Pera those of the upper classes can only go out, in closed carriages, to the Sweet Waters, occasionally accompanied by their husbands on horseback.

But they may speak to no one while driving; their own husbands and sons cannot even bow to them as they pass, and no one would venture to say a word to his own wife or mother when the carriage pulls up—the police would at once interfere. The highest mark of respect is to turn your back to a lady, and this is obligatory when any member of the Imperial harem passes.

GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE ANOTHER

Young Man Drowns After Rescuing a Companion from Death.

A story of splendid heroism in a youth who gave his life to save that of his friend comes from Fraserburgh, in Scotland. The hero of the story is St. John Dick Cunyngham, son of Lieutenant Colonel Dick Cunyngham, V. C., of the Second Battalion Gordon Highlanders, stationed at Aldershot. Young Cunyngham and the master of Saltoun (son of Lord Saltoun) left Philorth together, and went to the sea to bathe. Evidently the lads were unacquainted with the treacherous nature of the sands at the point at which they entered the water, for they walked out at once to easy swimming depth. Suddenly both found themselves in deep water, a strong undercurrent having drawn them into one of the many "pots" or pools which constitute the chief danger of the place.

To the lad Cunyngham the situation was not desperate, but the young master of Saltoun was quickly exhausted and was on the point of giving up the struggle when his companion, forgetful of his own danger and eager only to save his friend, devoted all his remaining strength to the work of rescue. After a desperate struggle Cunyngham succeeded in getting his friend into shallow water, through which the latter dragged himself in a terribly exhausted condition to the beach.

Turning to thank his rescuer, the master of Saltoun was horrified to find that he had disappeared. Frantic with excitement, he ran as fast as his condition would permit to some fishermen who were working some distance along the beach, but although they lost no time in making search for the lad no trace of him could be found. He had given all his strength to save his friend, and the cruel sea had sucked him back to his death.—London Mail.

DIAMONDS ON FINGER NAILS.

Finger Nail Jewelry Is About the Latest Thing Out.

Finger nail jewelry is about the latest thing that manufacturers of gemmed novelties have brought out. There are both rings and pendants, and they are made in quite a number of forms, but all of them have just as light a setting as is consistent with the safe fastening of the stones. The pendants most affected consist of two or three small stones, set tandem, and connected by fine gold chains instead of by solid bars. That makes them less awkward to the wearer and also more effective when they are flashed.

The jewels are attached to the nails by a screw arrangement such as is often used for diamond earrings. The nails do not have to be especially long, but great care must be taken in perforating them, and that is an operation which is usually left to a manicure. New holes must be made every week or two, and the more common practice is to transfer the gems from one finger to another whenever a new hole must be made. When rings are used instead of pendants, they are usually only about half the diameter of the ordinary finger ring, and are studded all around with very small stones.

Railroad Logic.

A sleeper is one who sleeps. A sleeper is that in which the sleeper sleeps. A sleeper is that on which the sleeper which carries the sleeper while he sleeps runs. Therefore, while the sleeper sleeps in the sleeper the sleeper carries the sleeper over the sleeper under the sleeper until the sleeper which carries the sleeper jumps off the sleeper and wakes the sleeper in the sleeper by striking the sleeper under the sleeper.

CHINA'S GREAT BELL.

The Largest and Most Perfect in Use in the World.

When the first announcement of the mission of the United States bell of liberty to the Atlanta Exposition appeared in the press in April last there rung out, far away in the Celestial empire, the advent of peace and liberation from her foreign foes, China's bell of liberty at Pekin, the capital, says the Baltimore Sun.

For the last 400 years—that is, ever since the discovery of the new world—this bell, the largest and most finished on the globe, raised its tongue of peace and prayer in China. The famous bells at Moscow and Mandalay are both unhung, the former being fractured and otherwise defective, but the Pekin bell is ringing on, suspended by its wooden beam and sheltered beneath the roof of an open fan, still as bright and sound as when it left its matrix.

China's bell of liberty is in many respects the finest work of art in China, a product of native skill, which could probably not be duplicated by the highest ability or resources of western foundries. It weighs 120,000 pounds, stands 14 feet high, with a circumference of 34 feet and nearly one foot in thickness. Without a flaw or defect, it is completely covered in relief, both inside and out, with myriads of Chinese characters, each one an inch in size. They form prayerful extracts from Buddhistic classics.

It is one of the vagaries of Buddhism that its prayers of the faithful may be infinitely and acceptably repeated by mechanical helps, as, for instance, by revolving wheels. So here, when the lips of this mighty and eloquent bell are moved by fitting tongue, they breathe forth in deep, sweet, prolonged and wonderful vibratory voice these prayers to Buddha and calls, as well, all devotees to worship.

One of the chroniclers of the fifteenth century states that it was a period of supreme suspense in Pekin among all lovers of art and religion, from emperor down to humble craftsman, as the day and hour approached for pouring the molten metal into that myriad-lettered matrix, and for producing Ta Chung, the noblest bell in all the world, and no doubt the other day an almost equal interest was awakened when it run out the advent of peace with Japan and the restored liberty of the empire.

The artists who successfully accomplished the molding and casting of this great bell were not only congratulated by Buddhistic ecclesiastics and their followers but they were ennobled by the emperor, while their work itself amid changing creeds and dynasties, is imperishable, being as clear-cut and perfect to-day as when it first came forth from the crumbling mold of sand.

Profits of Monte Carlo.

The merchant whose losses are the result of untoward and unforeseen changes in the market receives sympathy and help, says Good Words. But what bank or private friend will advance money to a gambler? The betting man who has staked his last shilling and lost it is pronounced a fool, and has put himself beyond the reach of practical compassion. The sharper who has fleeced him has neither gratitude nor pity. He uses his victim as the butt of his ridicule. And the victim himself, who has risked his money on mere chance, or on baseless information or on fraudulent representations, freely pronounces himself a fool, judging himself in the light of the issue. To fancy that we shall be exceptions and win where others have lost, that we shall be the solitary lucky ones among the thousand unlucky, is a folly to which we are all liable, but it is none the less a folly.

It is stated that the winnings of the table or bank at Monte Carlo last year amounted to £800,000; that is to say, this was the net sum lost by those who played. Yet each gambler who stakes his little pile fancies he will be the one to win. There are some thousands of bookmakers in our own country. Out of whose pockets do they pick so comfortable a living? Out of the pockets of their dupes, who so bountifully contribute to the maintenance of their worst enemies.

A Good Dictionary for Two Cents.

A dictionary containing the definitions of 10,000 of the most useful and important words in the English language is published by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. While it contains some advertising, it is a complete dictionary, concise and correct.

In compiling this book care has been taken to omit none of those common words whose spelling or exact use occasions at times a momentary difficulty, even to well educated people. The main aim has been to give as much useful information as possible in a limited space. With this in view, where noun, adjective and verb are all obviously connected in meaning, usually one only has been inserted. The volume will thus be found to contain the meaning of very many more words than it professes to explain.

To those who already have a dictionary, this book will commend itself because it is compact, light and convenient; to those who have no dictionary whatever, it will be invaluable. One may be secured by writing to the above concern, mentioning this paper, and enclosing a two-cent stamp.

THE CANADIAN GOLD FIELDS

They Do Not All Lie in the Yukon.

The excitement of the past few months has drawn a great many people to the Canadian Yukon in the search for gold, and has diverted the attention of many others. But in order to get there it is necessary that a man should be possessed of the best of health, strong powers of endurance and considerable means. He leaves his wife and his family for a considerable period, and the hardships he has to endure are all unknown to him.

Canada has other gold fields, though. They are the fields that produce her golden grain. This year the crop of Manitoba, lying directly north of North Dakota, yielded 21,000,000 bushels of wheat alone. The current price averages 76 cents, which, as a local paper puts it, "makes the product in gold this year, for wheat alone, equal to a value of $15,960,000." Twenty thousand farmers did this, or an average to each producer of about $798.

"But these same farmers are not living by wheat alone. This is only one source of revenue to them out of many. They have also beef, butter, potatoes, oats, barley and poultry to sell, and sometimes other things, so that it may be fairly estimated that their incomes will average at least $1,000 per farmer. Thus Manitoba's fields have yielded this year fully $20,000,000 in gold, divided among 20,000 actual producers, and a general population of about 200,000."

After counting the cost of stamp mills, expenses of men, etc., rich as is the Klondike, such vast wealth as is being taken out of the soil in raising wheat in this one province, cannot possibly be secured in any mining district. Of course mining development assists agricultural development, and that is why the Government of Canada feels so much assurance in predicting prosperity to all who take up farms in Canada. Western Canada to-day promises more than any other known field that is open to immigration. Farms of 160 acres, capable of producing the best No. 1 hard wheat, yielding thirty to forty bushels to the acre, are given away free. Railways, markets, schools, churches—all are convenient. The Canadian form of government is one of the most liberal known, and a hearty welcome is given to settlers of all nationalities. Already there are many settlers gone in from the States, and the reports from them are highly favorable. Those desiring information as to free homestead laws, low transportation rates, etc., will have pamphlets, etc., sent free on application to the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any agent of the Government.

Quieting the Indians.

"It was not the United States army that quieted the Indian," said the Milwaukee man; "it was the cowboy. Twice a year, regularly, the men who herded cattle went out to tame the aborigine, and you know the only way to do that is to kill him. The army could not have accomplished in a hundred years what the cowboys did in twenty."

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it because when properly prepared it tastes like the finest coffee, but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children, as well as adults, can drink it with great benefit. Costs about ¼ as much as coffee. 15 and 25c.

The Cuban Scare.

Although the diplomatic entanglement with Spain over Cuba is to some extent influencing the stock market, Wall street expects no serious complications. Nevertheless, a serious complication with other matters may be expected to follow an attack of biliousness, which is not checked at the outset. The most effectual means to this end is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an admirable remedy, moreover, for dyspepsia, malaria, kidney trouble, constipation and nervousness.

Deadly New Bullet.

The British Government is considering the adoption of a bullet invented in Birmingham. This bullet is made of lead, and, instead of being conical, the top is level and has a cup-like cavity. On entering the flesh this bullet acts like a punch, cutting a clean round hole, which does not close. The bullet begins to expand immediately after entering, and after it has traveled six inches it produces a jagged hole three or four inches in diameter. The bullet is said to make the most terrible wound producer known, and it is a question whether its use would not be a breach of the international convention.

I, the undersigned, Auditor in and for the County of DeKalb, State of Indiana, do hereby certify, that the foregoing is a true and complete list of all the lands and town lots in said county returned delinquent for the taxes for the year 1896, with the delinquent tax, penalty and interest, and also the tax for the year 1897, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Notice is therefore hereby given that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon or due from the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn in said county, on the second Monday in February, A. D. 1898, (the same being the 14th day of said month), unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m. on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale.

FRANK A. BORST, AUDITOR.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, Post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....January 20, 1898.

A FALLING TREE.

(Ft. Wayne Journal.)

Mr. John Harper, a wealthy farmer, living about three miles north of Sheldon, met with a peculiar and quite serious accident late Friday afternoon. He was engaged in chopping down a large tree, the tree fell and in doing so it caught a young sapling, bending it over upon the ground. Mr. Harper was in a kneeling position, and the sapling struck one of his legs near the ankle joint, breaking both bones of the ankle. Dr. Swartz of Williamsport, was summoned and reduced the fracture.

The Dr. Swartz above referred to, is the son of Drs. D. J. and Vesta Swartz of this city. We are pleased to note that Dr. Willard is working up such a splendid practice and has been called upon to treat critical cases.

A QUEER ITEM

A man in Columbian City brought a bill before the council charging 50 cents "for burying a dog supposed to be dead." The question now is, What would be the charge for burying a "dog known to be dead," or a "dog known to be alive." Are we to give the city or the dog, the "benefit of the doubt?" Let us have another monetary commission to settle this burning question. While our exchanges are trying to decide the justice of that Waterloo preacher's bill against De Kalb county, for preaching the funeral sermon of an old soldier "supposed to be dead," we would like a little light on this dog bill.

THE OTHER SIDE.

After all the uncalled for abuse heaped on Mr. J. C. Lochner of the COURIER force, for the part he took in exposing and punishing that show troupe, it is with pleasure that we recede to the request of the following ladies, to publish their article commending his course. There are plenty of other ladies, as well as plenty of gentlemen who would have attached their names to such a paper had it been deemed necessary.

AUBURN, IND., Jan. 17, 1898.

MR. JNO. LOCHNER,

Dear Sir:—Permit the undersigned to express to you, our high appreciation and sincere gratitude for your manly course in the action brought by State of Indiana, against McKay, for the circulation of obscene literature. This together with the prompt action of Justice Walborn and Judge Roby, has contributed to relieve our county of a most disgraceful and corrupting organization.

Your very truly,

M. A. EHLERS, County Supt. Social Purity Dept. W. C. T. U.

MISS L. MCTIGHE, President Woman's League of Auburn.

MRS. J. A. BARNS, President of Ladies' Literary Club.

MRS. T. C. FORD, President of University Association.

MRS. J. D. MYERS, President of W. C. T. U.

SAME EVERYWHERE

The Daily Post last Thursday had a writeup of Prof. McKay's Great Moral Smut Show, that held forth at Columbia City the night before it reached Auburn. Their plan was the same as here. But the people there took the imposition more patiently than we did in Auburn. When Auburn does get her back up, she does not need to be ashamed of the quality of her spinal column. And our people have learned a lesson, they will not soon forget.

DR. HARTMAN SAYS

Pe-ru-na Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

All classes and conditions of people have chronic catarrh. It spares neither stone nor [illegible], old or young, healthy or sickly. All ranks of people have chronic catarrh. Rich men, poor men, beggar men, thieves, lawyers, doctors, merchants, priests. Not only catarrh of the head, but catarrh of the throat, catarrh of the lungs, catarrh of the stomach, catarrh of the liver, catarrh of the kidneys, catarrh of the bowels; and a multitude of women are afflicted with catarrh of the pelvic organs.

When it is said, therefore, that Pe-ru-na cures catarrh wherever located, a much larger fact is stated than at first appears. Who is it that says Pe-ru-na will cure catarrh wherever located? Doctors say it, lawyers say it, preachers say it, a vast army of men and women say it, who have tried it. The old and the young say it. They say it in the East and in the West; they say it in the North and in the South. All these say that Pe-ru-na will cure catarrh wherever located.

Send for a free copy of an illustrated book of testimonials, entitled "Facts and Faces," sent by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, O.

GO TO WATERLOO.

The Trumpet Note Band will go to Waterloo next Monday evening to give their popular concert. The program will be substantially as it was in Auburn, and therefore excellent. Miss Celia Fisher will be with them, as she was here and sing several pieces. She is one of the sweetest singers in the country, and will of course do her best at the old home town. But all the entertainment is good and we hope the roads will improve so Auburn people can hear them again.

THE COURIER STOPS IT

Commencing to-day January 18th that 9:03 West bound Wabash train that has been whizzing through Auburn will stop at Butler and Auburn to take off and on passengers. The management of the road saw the article in the COURIER we suppose and concluded that the best thing to do was to stop that train. This will be good news to our people, and much credit is due Mr. Zent for the accommodation.

CONDEMNED CANNON

Goshen is getting a number of these "old and condemned cannon," so popular in the construction of soldiers' monuments. They are very appropriate things with which to adorn and round out these monuments to our heroic dead. It seems so proper, too, that the guns that served in war, as did these veterans, and that both guns and veterans now stricken by age and helplessness, should now be united in the memory of a grateful people. But a great deal of this romantic sentiment is destroyed, when we come to know, that these "old and condemned cannon" have been called for so often and have been voted by congress so often to the hundreds of monuments all over the country, have long since been all taken. And now, there is an appropriation used each year to make a large number of new "old and condemned cannon," and it is only these new ones that can now be obtained, Oh, well, perhaps it is just as well. Like the Santa Claus story, it is just as good as if all was really what we believe.

NOT HERE.

The Kendallville Sun in clipping an article now going the rounds, say it did not happen at that place. It alludes to the following:

A prominent druggist in a neighboring town, not here of course, is making a collection of queer orders he receives from people who send children to the store for things they need. Here are a few samples of them.

This child is my little girl. I send you five cents to buy two sitless powders for a grown-up adult who is sike.

Another reads:

Dear Dochter, pleas gif bearer five sense worse of Auntie Toxyn for to gargle babi's throte and obleage.

An anxious mother writes:

You will please give the lettle boy five cents worth of epcac for to throw up in a five months old babe. N. B. the babe has a sore stummick.

This one puzzled the druggist:

I have a cute pane in my child's diagram. Please give my son something to release it.

Another anxious mother wrote:

My little babey has eat up its father's parish p asther. Send an antedote quick as possible by the enclosed little girl.

The writer in this one was evidently in pain:

I naf a hot time in my insides and which I would like it to be extinguished. What is good for to extinguish it? The enclosed quarter is for the price of the extinguisher. Hurry pleas.

BUTLER.

Mother Friedenberger living near Hopewell school house Wilmington, was buried last Sunday.

Miss Edith Wilson returned last week from a visit at Stryker and West Unity Ohio.

Florence E. Campbell was quite sick the last of last week, but has so far recovered as to return to school on Monday.

Miss Lizzie Champion is still seriously ill at her sister, Mrs. J. A. Campbell.

The Odd Fellows had a hot time last Friday night. Installing officers in the Subordinate and Rebekah lodges. The Christian church funished the banquet and right royally did they entertain the 135 members of the order and their friends. The good sisters of their church had a supper that has had few equals in the old town, and we are glad to say that they realized $29.27 out of it for their church.

Rev. Munson, of Toledo has been stopping for a few days in town. He has just spent ten years as a missionary in India. He gave a very instructive and realistic lecture at the M. E. church last Monday night. His graphic delineation of the social life of the people in faraway India and China was highly entertaining.

James Kannel, of Metz and Alvarado a well know and respected business man, whose wife is a near relative to I. J. and D. H. Knisely, has gone wrong He hastily disposed of his stores at the above places, and has gone to parts unknown. He leaves an excellent wife and a promising daughter, and not a few financial mourners holding empty sacks. We hope for his own good that he may speedily return and make good the confidence his friends place in him.

LAST FAINT ECHOES.

They Die Away On The Plains Of Garrett. Ohio Now Has Them.

Prof. McKay and his angel band, went in a procession to Garrett as noted in yesterday's DAILY. Whether any of our people followed them over there as the boys did the "Pied Piper of Hamelin" we cannot say. But it soon became known here that they were to give the three-days-delayed show over there, before leaving the sacred soil of Indiana, within the prescribed 24 hours. It was probably the knowledge of this that induced McKay's attorneys to go security for the payment of the fine and costs. Garrett gave them a good turnout and the attorneys stood at the door and took in the money. This morning they had about $60 to turn over to the county. This settles the burning question so industriously discussed all over Auburn by the friends of the troupe. They claimed it would have been better to let the troupe go, as their detention "would cost the county so much money." Now, the entire expense, has been paid out of the earnings of the troupe itself. And the people of Auburn feel that law and decency have triumphed. And now, the next rusty troupe that comes this way, will hide their blushes behind their fig leaf lane when the conductor calls out "Orbun." As the diplomats say, "The incident is now closed."

MRS. PALMERTON DEAD.

Death Sunday morning relieved from suffering from ronsumption, Mary, the wife of C. M. Palmerton, the hoop cutter at the Greenler factory. Her remains were taken to Hamler, Ohio, today at 1:32 for interment. She leaves besides her husband, two children.

ST. JOE.

Atty. Lou Gibson of Newville was in town Tuesday.

Mrs. John Leighty nee Coder visited with friends in town for a few days last week.

M. F. Body and family will move into the Geo. Nicols property as soon as vacated. Mr. Body has advertised his residence for sale and it will be sold cheap for cash.

Wm. Leighty has rented the Leighty Hotel property to Charles and Sarah Bartlett who will take possession about March 1st. Miss Bartlett has had an extended experience in the hotel business and will no doubt keep this hotel up to its former good standard.

Will G. Erick, of Spencerville will start for Oklahoma Territory Monday to visit a month or two with his brother Beeks. Along with his visit Will expects to put in a part of his time hunting and having a good time generally.

Josiah Kimes, wife and son who have been visiting in the family of B. A. Woodcox, returned to their Michigan home Wednesday.

Wm. Curie, Mahlon Baker and Hugh Wineland attended the Democratic District meeting at Ft. Wayne last Tuesday.

Professor Christ of Frankfort, Ind., chairman of the state prohibition committee, visited our town Saturday and Sunday last. Saturday evening he delivered a prohibition speech which we are sorry to say was not very well attended. Sunday evening he preached in the Lutheran church to a very large and attentive congregation taking for his text these words: "Is my son safe?"

B. A. Woodcox who was reported some better last week is much worse at this writing. Rheumatism of the stomach seems to be the disease at present.

Dr. Bowman and Frank Barney were at Auburn last Friday.

Freeman Abel and family who moved to Defiance about two months ago have concluded that the climate of that country does not suit them and have come back to St. Joe. A modern laundry of the latest Chinese fashion is to be the outcome of their home coming.

A meeting in the interest of an oil well has been called to meet at the office of G. W. Woodcox next Friday night. All that are interested in the prosperity of our little town are invited to be present. An effort will be made at time to organize a company to prospect for oil, gas, gold, silver, salt or anything that can bring a boom.

Geo. Bartlett tells a good one on himself. Everybody who knows George knows that he generally gets the long end of the bargain, but this time he came to grief and this is the way he tells it. Not long ago a smooth looking genteel appearing young man stepped up to George and told him he was selling a new kind of medicine that would invariably cure the disease with which George was afflicted. Finally the gent insisted so hard that George (our George) agreed to take a bottle. The medicine was handed over and George paid spot cash. The bottle contained perhaps a tablespoonful of a white looking powder, the bottle was to be filled up with double distilled water when the medicine was ready for use. Being naturally of —At Huntington, West Virginia, Sunday, in the severe cold weather, there was a baptism and they had to cut through the ice. The minister and the woman he was taking in, slipped on the ice, and went under water. Both were finally pulled out, but the woman died. Would it not be better to wait for warmer weather?

—Mrs. Ira Ryerson at Pierceton, died Saturday after a long illness. Mr. Ryerson himself is lying at the point of death. This item recalls the terrible murder that occurred in their house several years ago. Their cousin, Charley Butler followed his wife from Ohio his cruelty having driven her from home, and finding her at Ryerson's, asked an interview and shot her dead. Butler was hanged in the jail yard at Columbia City after a full and fair trial.

HARTMAN FOR JUDGE.

Following the public announcement in the papers, that Judge Roby will decline a re-nomination for judge, comes a statement that Hon. E. D. Hartman of Auburn, will be a candidate for the place. Mr. Hartman is especially fitted for this high position by his knowledge of the law and his natural taste for fairness and justice. And as the place will be filled by some republican we are pleased to see him seeking it.

WANTED.

—Officials of Elkhart county are quarreling up at Goshen. Expert Ernst is undoing more crooked work than they care to have done. They evidently wanted him to stop off suddenly when he had got through with the treasurer. And now he won't stop He is going for the rest of 'em.

—We forgot to mention a visit we had a few days ago, from L. B. Fretz, formerly of this office, but now engaged on the Edon Independent. He was on his way home from Chicago, where he had been to deliver a lecture he has recently prepared. The DeKalb boy still keeps on the front seat.

—The Hicksville Independent recently had a savage article on whisky selling down there, where the town is supposed to be "dry." He mentioned one man by name. And now that man comes back at him, and says the trouble is that he refused the editor whisky some time back, when he, the writer of the letter, was really keeping a saloon. He claims the editor drinks when he thinks he is safe and then plays temperance in his paper. There are others, even here in DeKalb.

—Indiana comes to the f with an "everlasting" light, which discounts electricity. A Logansport man has it confined in a glass ball entirely disconnected by wires or other appliances. There is no heat, no diminution of light, and is always ready. When you don't want the light, either tuck the glass ball away in the bureau drawer, or smash the ball and the light is instantly extinguished.

—Mrs. G. D. Beber and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. G. Beber, both of Garrett, were callers to-day, and the former subscribed for the COURIER. We are glad to see our friends adding to the already good list of the best weekly in the county.

—The Dispatch publishes quite a list of factories, etc, that have raised the wages of their hands. Singularly enough it forgets to mix in with these the long list covering the eastern states which foots up a total of over 200,000 men in various mills, who have had their wages reduced within one month from 10 to 20 per cent.

—Some one has discovered that the proper and natural length of the foot is exactly the same as the length of the "ulna," the outer bone of the arm that reaches from the wrist to the elbow. If any one is in doubt all he has to do is to take off his foot and place it along side of his ulna, or he can take off his ulna, and place it along side his foot. It don't make any difference which, and both are easy to do.

—At least fifty persons are believed to have perished in the great cyclone at Ft. Smith, Ark. Many bodies have been taken of the wreckage of buildings, that were so badly mutilated that they could not be identified. More may still be found.

—Noble county has within its borders one daughter of a revolutionary soldier, Mrs. Eliza Johnson, who lives near Ligonier. She is 81 years old.

—Our friend Joseph Witt was here today and as is his custom paid in advance for his son, William's COURIER another year ahead.

—Geo. Apple one of the very earliest of the COURIER patrons came in today and paid ahead as usual.

—Collingwood postoffice is still in the "pendulum" state, so to speak. It is swinging back and forth over the line between Allen and DeKalb, as it has done for several years past.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wash Greist, of Hicksville, O., successor of Mr. Lane in the Auburn Laundry has moved into the Gus Barttle's property in East Auburn.

—Mr. and Mrs. Archie McIntyre entertained Mr. and Mrs. Guild, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Brown, Mr. and Mrs Charlie Brown Mr. and Mrs. George Lanning and Mrs. Ella Richards to a six o'clock dinner yesterday.

Monday's Daily.

—W. H. Brown paid the COURIER way ahead Saturday

—Simon Holsington and wife are in the city.

—H. D. Boozer is the next lucky man to pay his COURIER up into '99, and has thanks accordingly.

—Peter Shull on Saturday, prepared for a good Sunday, by getting in his cash on the COURIER. That is the way to begin a new week.

—Columbia City Post:—Recently while Col. Rush's fine, thoroughbred, Scotch Irish terrier Chrysanthemum, was enjoying his noonday meal, a large, brown rodent deliberately strolled out from under the woodhouse and quietly shared the ration with the purp. The Col. values Chrys. at fifty dollars.

—We seldom hear more eloquent or interesting sermons than both those delivered by Mr. Colvin on Sunday. The audiences were good too, and in the evening there was the full orchestra, which of itself is a great attraction It will pay our people to attend these services, wheteer they are church members or not.

—A Chicago young man, says the Kendallville Sun, served his social circle a pretty trick. He was acting as best man at the wedding of his sister, and when the ceremony was completed he stepped to the front, hand in hand with one of the bridesmaids, and took advantage of the preparation made by being himself married to the young woman. He sponged everything except the preacher.

—Silver Dawn:—Tuesday last was an unlucky day on the Francis farm. In the morning while engaged in loading baled hay, F. C. Francis made a slip and fell backward, falling ten feet and striking a round of the ladder. He injured the back of his head, and jarred himself badly, and is now confined to the house. In the afternoon the horses attached to the wagon got frightened and ran away demolishing the wagon, but fortunately no one was in it.

—The Ligonier Banner says that a well known widow residing in that city received a letter one day last week in which was enclosed two ten dollar bills. The letter was written on a scrap of paper in a disguised hand. It recounted the fact that the writer had beaten her husband out of money in a deal some years ago and wanted to return it; that he was too big a coward to give his name and circumstances, but wanted to replace the amount with interest. He signed himself "A cowardly, but penitent scoundrel." The lady now realizes that some one has a conscience that troubles him.

—The old Catholic church in Waterloo, has been taken up into Smithfield to the Catholic church there and will be used as a hall for public and church purposes, festivals, entertainments, etc. A good idea, as it had long been vacant at Waterloo.

—Joseph A. Stahl will hereafter use printed stationery as the COURIER job department turned out letter paper and envelops for him the week. Farmers should call at this office and see our samples and learn how cheap they can get up-to date stationery.

—The editor of the Tri-County Gazette published at Mentone has a little son who at the age of five began to report for the paper and set type. He is now about seven. Of course, the editor used to be a DeKalb man. C. M. Smith taught the Junction school some years ago.

Quite a joke is told on Sheriff Stroh. They say that faling to catch on, when the show was here Thursday evening, he and some friends were going over to Garrett to see it Friday evening, when he was suddenly called on to arrest the troupe and stop the play. It was probably a great disappointment, for after his arrival there, it is told that he telephoned to Prosecutor Pomeroy, asking if the show might be allowed to go on and then bring them over here later. Pomeroy said, No, and the show stopped.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. W. McClellan south of town are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Jourdon of Mansfield, Ohio.

AROUND THE WORLD.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS OF THE GLOBE.

News from Foreign Shores—Domestic Happenings—Personal Pointers—Labor Notes—Political Occurrences—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Etc.

Will Utilize Waves.

Thomas A. Edison, Jr., has invented a machine for utilizing the wave power of the sea. When in place the machine will be twenty miles out at sea, and will consist of a series of gigantic air pumps. The air compressed by these will be used to run dynamos.

For $25,000,000 he can construct a plant, he says, that will furnish 1,000,000 horsepower, enough to supply the entire State of New York. He says that a powerful syndicate has the matter of immediate construction of the plant under consideration. His plans are said to be practically complete.

Quiet in Oklahoma.

Adjutant General Breck has received the following telegram from Gen. Brooke at Chicago:

"Major Eskridge telegraphs from Earlboro, O. T., that all is quiet there. Both sides have been excited and threatening. There is no hostile gathering of Seminoles. None is probable, and the whole thing was a grand scare, which is all over. In view of this information I do not deem it necessary to send any troops to the border between Oklahoma and the Seminole Nation, as contemplated by your recent telegram."

Publication Curtailed.

Havana special: A decree has been published prohibiting the publication in daily newspapers of cable dispatches without previous censorship and without twelve hours notice of their receipt. In addition, in future, the postoffice here will decline national and foreign newspapers not having been previously censored. Violators of the law are warned that they are under military jurisdiction. Another edict will be published shortly, forbidding the gathering of groups of more than four persons either in the streets or in the stores.

Saw Andree's Balloon.

Prof. Nordenskjoeld, the Arctic explorer, has informed the Swedish Academy of Science that the Foreign Office has received intelligence that several persons worthy of credence saw Prof. Andree's balloon early in August, in British Columbia, seven miles north of Quesnelle Lake, in the District of Cariboo. The Professor regards the news as being of sufficient importance to call for closer investigation.

Canada Wants Half.

Ottawa (Ont.) special: A committee of the Cabinet has drawn up new regulations regarding mining in the Yukon, which make important changes. It is now stated that the alternate claim regulation has been abandoned and that the Government proposes to reserve alternate blocks of ten claims, which, it is thought, will give miners a better opportunity to operate.

Dole Coming to Call.

Honolulu special: Ex-President Sanford Dole leaves for Washington by the steamship Peru on the 8th inst. The chief executive of this country journeys to the capital of the United States for the purpose of consulting with the administration there on the subject of annexation of these islands to the greater republic.

Verdict Set Aside.

The big verdict given Engineer Fred R. Ketcham at Chicago, against the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad for alleged blacklisting, was set aside by Judge Richard W. Clifford. A new trial is granted. By the verdict Ketcham had been awarded $21,000 damages. The case was an outgrowth of the Debs strike.

Merry's Defense.

Chris Merry, the alleged wife murderer, of Chicago, will make a novel defense. Efforts will be made to show that he is a degenerate. Experts on sociological criminology and lines of heredity will be called. This indicates that the defense will admit that Merry killed his wife.

Killed for His Gold.

Prof. A. J. Keeler, Fred Cook Kinsley and Thomas Field, all of New York, lost their lives in the Arizona deserts. The professor had been prospecting, and had secured a quantity of gold dust and precious stones. He was murdered by a roaming band of Navahoe Indians.

Corbett to Be Unseated.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, by a vote of four to three, decided against the claim of H. W. Corbett to a seat in the Senate under the appointment of the Governor of Oregon. The Legislature failed to elect, and he was appointed.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Jan. 17.—Louis Morrison.
Jan. 18.—"Human Hearts."
Jan. 19.—"An American Girl."

Trainmen Killed.

A train on the Southern Pacific was wrecked near Del Rio, Texas. Fourteen freight cars were piled up. Brakeman Briggs and Fireman Muller were buried under the wreck, and their bodies have not been recovered.

Conscience Money.

The Southern Express Company officers at Atlanta, Ga., has received by mail a package containing $3,700. It is supposed to be conscience money. The company will endeavor to ascertain the name of sender.

Deadly Explosion in a Mine.

Six lives are supposed to have been lost by an explosion, probably of dust or gas, in shaft No. 5 of the Mount Carmel Coal Company's mine, a few miles south of Pittsburg, Kan., near Chicopee. The explosion occurred when but seven or eight men were in the shaft.

White Man Convicted for Murder of Negro.

"Bill" Adler, charged with the murder of William Johnson, colored, was convicted at Kansas City of murder in the second degree and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Adler is the first white man in Jackson County convicted of the murder of a negro.

MONEY ORDER FRAUDS FOUND.

System of Checking Results in a Loss to the Government.

Auditor Castle of the Postoffice Department at Washington has discovered irregularities in money order accounts which may possibly result in a loss to the Government of a considerable sum. They were brought to light as the outcome of a new system of checking accounts by postmasters which went into effect on the first of the year. About three years ago the practice of checking money order accounts in the office of the Auditor was changed, they being audited by stubs or coupons and not by the orders themselves, as had been done previously. If the postmasters' returns corresponded in each item with this coupon or stub the account was assumed to be correct and was closed. When Auditor Castle took charge of the office he discovered defects in the system which made it possible for dishonest postmasters to rob the Government. He then put into operation a new system, which he believed would cover all defects. Several cases have already been detected in which orders were issued for as high as $80 and $100 and were reported by the issuing postmaster at $1 or $2 each. How many such frauds were perpetrated during the three years in which the old system was in operation can only be guessed.

HOLIDAY EFFECTS ON EXPORTS.

As Usual Cereal Shipments Are Light at the Beginning of the Year.

Bradstreet's commercial report says: "The year opens with a tone of quiet confidence pervading nearly all branches of business, with encouraging activity in iron trade, a resumption of work by many thousands of industrial employes in the Western glass industry, a largely reduced volume of business failures as compared with corresponding periods in preceding years and a general outlook certainly not inferior to any previous year at this time. Autumn weather in the Northwest checks distribution, but collections are reported good. The holidays have exercised their expected effect on export trade in leading cereals. Wheat exports from the United States and Canada for the first week in January amount to 3,481,576 bushels, against 5,495,000 bushels last week. Corn exports also show a sensible diminution, amounting to 4,086,000 bushels last week, against 4,819,000 bushels in this week a year ago."

PREFERRED VOICE TO MONEY.

Romantic Marriage of Miss Gibbons and Mr. Ashenden at Toledo.

Miss Kittie Gibbons of Toledo, O., was secretly married to Clarence B. Ashenden of Boston, instead of a millionaire clubman of Pittsburg to whom it was thought she was attached. Mr. Ashenden is a baritone singer who has a musical studio in Boston. He went to Toledo a few days ago to see Miss Gibbons, and sung in the Central Congregational Church. The two principals in this romance met seven years ago, while Miss Gibbons was attending the Lasell seminary, near Boston. For some reason the union of the two was not looked upon with favor by the woman's parents, who preferred the Pittsburg man.

SUFFERINGS OF SPANISH TROOPS.

Of 12,000 Spanish Troops Garrisoned at Moron Only 2,000 Are Active.

Word comes to Havana semi-officially from Moron, on the central trocha, that of the 12,000 men Weyler left upon the line, but 2,000 are now available for garrison and picket duty. The hospitals of Moron, Ciegodevila, San Fernando and other points along the trocha are filled with living skeletons, the victims of paludal fevers, and the few men able to do duty are having their numbers rapidly decimated by poor food. Hundreds of cases of smallpox are also reported.

Legislation Desired by Labor.

The legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor, consisting of President Samuel Gompers, Secretary Frank Morrison and Andrew Furuseth, by direction of the seventeenth annual convention of the federation, held in Nashville in December last, has issued an address to the members of the Fifty-fifth Congress. After calling attention to the introduction of modern machinery and new business methods and the competition of convict labor, by which wage workers are forced into idleness and want, the committee say they feel that they have a right to bring their grievances to the attention of the law-making power and to expect "such definite measures of relief as seems most likely to improve our condition and preserve our independence and freedom as workers and citizens, and, therefore, urge your earnest consideration of and your best efforts in enacting into law the following measures: 1. An eight-hour work day on all public works. Such law to provide that all contracts or subcontracts for materials furnished or work done must contain a proviso that eight hours shall be the maximum labor of any one individual in any one calendar day. Further, that it shall be the duty of officials vested with the power of signing such contracts to withhold their signatures until such proviso is inserted therein. 2. In order to stop the indiscriminate and dangerous use of the writ of injunction we urge the adoption of Senate bill 35. 3. In order to in some degree lessen the competition of convict labor we urge the adoption of a law to prohibit the transportation of prison-made goods from one State into any other State or territory. 4. We urge the adoption of a reasonable law to restrict undesirable immigration, such law to be based upon an educational qualification."

Killed and Mutilated by Indians.

The Seminole Indians at Muscogee, I. T., went on the warpath and left a trail of blood and ashes. Two hundred and fifty braves went to Maud, O. T., just over the line, and massacred twenty-five men, women and children of the homesteaders. After killing every white person they could find they fired the town and it is in ashes. Many of the victims were scalped by the savages, and other bodies were otherwise mutilated according to Indian traditions.

Ghastly Find in an Express Office.

Representatives of the Adams Express Company opened an ill-smelling box at Chariton, Iowa, having become alarmed at the strong odors emitted therefrom, and found the remains of a human body cut into bits. The box stood several days in the express office and the officers becoming suspicious, pried off the lid. They were nearly knocked down by the stench. Detectives were at once put to work on the case.

Banker Is Murdered.

Patrick A. Largey, president of the State savings bank at Butte, Mont., and a wealthy mine owner, was shot and killed by Thomas Riley. Riley was injured in a big explosion Jan. 15, 1895, and his since been making threats against Messrs. Connell, Kenyon, Clark, Largey and others who were supposed to own an interest in the buildings in which the giant powder was stored.

Klondike Relief Train.

The government relief expedition starts for the Klondike on the steamer Oregon from Portland, Ore. The advance party consists of 60 men from the Fourteenth Infantry and with them takes 100 mules and 250 tons of supplies. Capt. Ruhtan of Fort Riley has charge of transportation.

"Let Bloodshed Be Stopped."

T. Estrada Palma, in New York, has received a copy of a letter written by General Maximo Gomez, the rebel chief in Cuba, to Captain General Blanco. The letter says in part: "You have come to substitute Weyler. To a man of your conditions I would ask, as I did in the case of General Campos: What are your aims and purposes? To exterminate us? It is impossible to do that, and to pretend such a thing might be little honor to you. Is your purpose to subdue us? That is absurd, and might prove a ridiculous attempt for you. Our determination is well known and patent. Neither extermination nor submission would mean peace. In view of this fact, I now repeat to you what I said to General Campos: 'Let this bloodshed be stopped. Let the use of the torch cease, general.' Spain should not allow Cuba to owe her independence, directly or indirectly, to outside help. Let the deep abyss between Cubans and Spaniards disappear by Spain's recognition of the Cuban republic. Then there shall be eternal peace. Otherwise there shall be blood and fire. That would be the command of our honor and dignity. We would follow it until victory, which always crowns those who fight for justice, settles our fate." A dispatch to the Imparcial of Madrid from Havana says the sending of supplies from the United States to aid the indigent population of Cuba has aroused deep animosity among the Spaniards, who, it is alleged, "are incensed at the pretext thus given to the American consuls and the Yankee element to interfere in Cuban affairs." It is further asserted that the American newspaper correspondents have been instructed to exaggerate the sufferings of the peasantry in order to again arouse public feeling in the United States so as to provide Washington with an excuse to intervene.

GOTHAM LOSES HER TRADE.

Last Year Shows a Decline, While Trade of Whole Country Was Larger.

The forthcoming annual report of the New York Chamber of Commerce for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1897, will show the total value of foreign exports in 1896-7 was $880,278,419, of which $556,948,911 was entered at the port of New York. The total value of domestic exports was $1,127,701,948, of which amount New York is credited with $467,624,856. The decrease of the total foreign commerce at the port of New York for the last fiscal year as compared with the previous year was $3,153,044, while the increase at all the ports of the United States during the same period was $135,994,713. The total value of merchandise and coin bullion imported into and exported from all the ports of the United States in 1896-7 in American vessels was $247,563,860. Foreign vessels carried $1,661,107,043 worth of goods.

DEATH OF SETH D. TRIPP.

Invented Pegging Machine and Revolutionized Shoe Manufacturing.

Seth D. Tripp, whose inventions revolutionized shoe manufacturing, died in Lynn, Mass., aged 72 years. When about twenty years old he began work on his first machine, which was for pegging shoes, and it was a pronounced success from the start. Previously all the work in making shoes was done by hand. The machine was considered a wonder, and finally found its way into many factories. He next invented a counter-skiver and later secured numerous patents on rolling machines, [illegible] shank cutters, heel polishers, so[illegible] cutting and beating-out machines.

Eighty Japs Drown[illegible].

Latest advices from the Orient state that the Japanese transport steamer Nara, of 2,510 tons, bound to the Pescadores, was wrecked and about eighty lives lost. The only survivors were five seamen, who were picked up by the steamer Madsura Maru. The vessel struck an uncharted rock, her cargo shifted, and she went to the bottom.

To Remove a New York Harbor Wreck.

A bill is to be introduced in Congress asking for an appropriation of at least $1,000,000 for the removal of the famous wreck Scotland, which for twenty years has encumbered lower New York Bay just off Fire Island. The wreck of the old schooner is marked by the Scotland lightship, which costs the government annually $15,000.

May Move to Chicago.

President Ratchford of the United Mine Workers recommends that the headquarters be removed from Columbus, Ohio. He claims that there were many reasons against the retention of the national offices at Columbus, all of which combined fully warrant the change. The majority of delegates favor Chicago.

Price of Shingles Advanced.

At a meeting of shingle manufacturers at Tacoma, Wash., it was decided to keep the shingle mills of the State closed until Feb. 1. An advance in rates of about 10 cents per 1,000 was inaugurated.

WIND'S AWFUL WORK

NEARLY FIFTY LIVES BLOWN OUT AT FORT SMITH, ARK.

Many Residences and Public Buildings Ground Into Splinters—Dead and Wounded Are Dragged from the Ruins by Survivors.

Cut a Wide Swath.

Fort Smith, Ark., was swept Tuesday night from end to end by a terrific cyclone, and Wednesday the business portion of the town was in ruins, while the dead lay in long rows at the morgue. Fifty people, it is thought, perished in the fury of the storm.

Coming from the southwest the cyclone swept Fort Smith completely, smashing everything along the way. The crash of falling houses was first heard at 11 o'clock and before the sleeping inhabitants could rise and seek refuge the full force of the storm was upon them. Buildings went down in heaps on every side. One large boarding house, struck by the full power of the tempest, broke in fragments like an eggshell. Fifteen bodies were taken from that boarding house Wednesday morning, and it is thought that at least twenty-five victims died among the falling timbers. The handsome new high school building, recently erected at a cost of $100,000, dissolved like a fabric of a dream. Two churches fairly flew asunder when the cyclone pounded on their walls. Residences went crashing to the ground, stores and business blocks followed in one hideous ruin. In a few moments it was over—the storm had passed and the city was in ruins.

In the blackness of the night, the uproar of the falling walls, the cries of the injured and the hurtling of flying timbers, the uninjured citizens were for a time completely panic-stricken. Toward midnight, regaining their self-control as best they could, they began a systematic investigation of the damage done, and also an attack upon a number of fires which had blazed up among the ruined buildings. For a time it seemed as if this new danger would add equal damage to that done by the wild work of the storm. Several bodies, whether dead or living it is hard to say, were cremated in the flames before the fire department could overpower the blaze.

Then, every physician in town having been summoned to the rescue, a search was begun among the ruins—a search in the blackness of a wild night, with torches and lanterns for light, with the cries of the wounded as guiding sounds, with the shaking, tottering ruins on every side as added dangers. Dead men and women were found at every point among the ruined houses—people who had been killed as they lay in bed, as they sat in their parlors, as they strove to flee. Wounded—pinned down by big timbers, bruised and stunned by the rain of bricks and plaster—were intermixed among the dead. These were cared for as best the searchers and the hastily summoned doctors could, while the death list steadily grew and the row of bodies in the morgue grew continually longer.

Morning came and revealed a scene of horror and destruction. Among the wreckage, torn out of all shape by the storm, burned and blackened by the ensuing fires, were found more dead, more wounded. The hospital was full to overflowing. The morgue could hold no more. Scores of people who had missed relatives or friends in the wild uproar of the night joined with the searchers, directing, aiding, digging among the masses of masonry, rooting up the fallen timbers and dragging away the shattered beams. No estimate can be made at this time of the damage done to property.

After tearing through Fort Smith the cyclone veered, whirled to the southeast and laid in ruins the town of Alma, nine miles away. It is reported that Alma is almost utterly destroyed and that several people have been certainly killed, while many are missing.

INDIANS ON THE WARPATH.

Seminoles Reported to Be Killing and Raiding.

There is an uprising in the Seminole nation. Two hundred and fifty braves went on the warpath Tuesday and left a trail of blood and ashes. The Indians are seeking to avenge the recent burning of Lincoln McGeisey and Palmer Simpson, two Indians of the Seminole tribe who were accused of murdering Mrs. Simmons at Maud postoffice, in Oklahoma.

The redskins went to Maud and massacred twenty-five men, women and children of the homesteaders. After killing every white person they could find they fired the town and it is in ashes. Many of the victims were scalped by the savages, and other bodies were otherwise mutilated according to Indian traditions. The redskins then marched on Earlsboro, O. T., swearing vengeance on every white, regardless of age, sex or condition. Their march through the country was marked at every point by bloodshed and fire. The Earlsboro inhabitants had been warned and a train conveyed every woman and child to Dallas. A train was dispatched bound for the scene of the reported massacre under orders from Federal Judge Springer and having on board all the available deputy marshals under command of Capt. Brady. The Secretary of War was wired to order troops from Fort Reno. The general officers of the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf road ordered out a special train from Shawnee bearing volunteers armed with Winchesters to intercept the Indians and prevent further bloodshed. There is general alarm throughout the Southwest and grave fears are entertained for homesteaders on the border.

YOUNG GIRL MURDERED.

Her Stepmother Confesses the Crime at the Coroner's Inquest.

Louise Wollert, 12 years old, was murdered in her own home at Algonquin, Ill., Tuesday morning. Her step-mother, Mrs. Christian Wollert, at first said a tramp had shot the girl. She said he called and asked for breakfast and when Louise turned to ask her mother if she could feed him he shot her in the back. This was at first believed, but the woman's actions and lack of grief aroused suspicions. Finally, while the coroner's inquest was in progress, she confessed to the murder. She would not at first give any motive, but little by little it was drawn from her that she wanted the girl out of the way because she feared her testimony in a suit for divorce now pending. The girl had two bullets in her back and one in the right arm, and another had grazed her temple. It was evident from the appearance of things and the blood marks on the floor that a struggle had occurred. After shooting the girl Mrs. Wollert, it is believed, set fire to a mattress with the intention of burning the house. The woman was taken to Woodstock and lodged in jail.

GROWING WHEAT SOLD FOR 75.

Kentucky Farmer Makes a Contract for Summer Delivery of Crop.

The Kentucky farmers believe that the next wheat crop will bring a high price, but one was found who was willing to take 75 cents a bushel for his growing crop, to be delivered after thrashing next summer. He found a purchaser in a milling firm. The farmer is Jerry C. Caldwell of Boyle County, who has 400 acres in fine growing wheat. Anderson and Spillman, local millers, bought the wheat.

CONGRESS

Two hours of Saturday's session of the House were devoted to the civil service debate, during which Messrs. Corliss (Rep., Mich.), Hepburn (Rep., Iowa), and Clarke (Rep., N. H.) addressed the House in opposition to the law as it now stands. The remainder of the session was consumed by the friends of the late Representative Wright of Massachusetts in eulogy of his memory. The Senate was not in session.

During Monday's session of the House the opponents of the civil service law had much the best of the debate, so far as the number of those engaging in it were concerned. Nine of the eleven speakers were of the opposition. The friends of the law are very anxious to shut off further debate, and in this will have the co-operation of Speaker Reed and the Rules Committee. Those who participated in the debate were: In opposition to the law, Messrs. Cooney (Dem., Mo.), Dorr (Rep., W. V.), Cox (Dem., Tenn), Little (Dem., Ark.), Brumm (Rep., Pa.), Cowherd (Dem., Mo.), Sulloway (Rep., N. H.), Low (Rep., N. Y.), and in the defense of the law Messrs. McCall (Rep., Mass.), and Parker (Rep., N. J.). In the Senate a resolution looking to the filtration of the water used in the city of Washington caused Senator Hale, before it was referred to the District of Columbia Committee, to say that in no part of the United States was there a city whose citizens are so imposed upon and abused as to the water supply as are the citizens of Washington. At 12:50 p. m. the Senate went into executive session to consider the Hawaiian treaty, and at 3:45 adjourned.

In the House on Tuesday the civil service debate ended very tamely. There was not even a vote on the appropriation in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill for the commission upon which the debate was based. The Republicans who are seeking to modify or repeal the law, decided to let the debate come to a close, but it required the casting vote of the speaker to accomplish this—125 to 126. Mr. Bailey, the Democratic leader, made a clear statement of the minority position, which indicates that the minority will vote to repeal, but not to modify the law. The principal speech of the day was made by Mr. Brosius, chairman of the Civil Service Committee, who defended the law in a two hours' speech. In the Senate, Senator Davis took the floor and proceeded to deliver a set speech in support of the Hawaiian annexation treaty. His speech was accepted as practically the committee's report upon the treaty. Mr. Allen introduced and secured the adoption of a resolution calling upon the President for information in his possession relative to the boundary line between Venezuela and British Guiana, and to inform the Senate whether the United States now has any clerks or other employes at work upon the Venezuelan boundary question.

In the House on Wednesday an urgent deficiency bill carrying $1,741,843 was passed. One of the items authorizing a further expenditure of $250,000 for the Soldiers' Home at Danville, Ill., for which $150,000 was appropriated in the last sundry civil bill, was used by Mr. De Armond (Dem., Mo.) as a basis for a bitter personal attack upon Chairman Cannon, whose home is at Danville. His motion to strike out the item was defeated without division. There was a lively debate over the provision in the bill requiring the owners of bullion hereafter to pay the cost of transporting bullion from assay offices to the mints. The motion to strike out the proviso was then defeated—125 to 110. Mr. Hitt from the Foreign Affairs Committee reported the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. In the Senate Mr. Chandler of the Committee on Naval Affairs secured the passage of a resolution asking the Secretary of the Navy to furnish a list of the active officers of the navy in each corps, together with those who are at sea, on shore duty and on waiting orders. The Senate then went into executive session and Mr. Davis concluded his speech on the Hawaiian treaty.

On Thursday in the House consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill was completed in committee of the whole, and then the House adjourned upon the motion of those opposed to the printing of another edition of the famous "horse book." There was the annual fight over the question of free seed distribution to the farmers, but the effort to strike out the appropriation ($130,000) failed as usual, the majority against it Thursday being 136. One of the important amendments adopted provided for the inspection of horse meat for export purposes in the same way that the meat of cattle and other animals is now inspected. Among the measures reported in the Senate was the pension appropriation bill. It was placed on the calendar at the conclusion of the morning business. The immigration bill was then taken up, and Mr. Caffery was recognized for a speech in opposition to the measure. The eulogies in memory of the late Senator Isham G. Harris of Tennessee, which were to have been presented, were postponed at the request of Senator Bate on account of the absence of his colleague, Senator Turley. They will not be offered until after the election of a Senator by the Legislature of Tennessee. At the conclusion of Mr. Caffrey's speech the Senate went into executive session.

Beats the Gold Cure.

A German doctor has started a theory that most drunkards can be cured by a very simple and pleasant course of treatment—namely, by eating apples at every meal. Apples, if eaten in large quantities, possess properties which entirely do away with the craving that all confirmed drunkards have for drink.

DEATH OF MAJOR HANDY.

United States Commissioner to the French Exposition Passes Away.

Major Moses P. Handy died at noon Saturday at Hotel Bon Air, Augusta, Ga. Major Handy was stricken with the illness which ended with his death while he was preparing to leave Paris for America, after completing his work as commissioner to the exposition. When he got to New York he succumbed, but pulled himself together and came to Chicago. In Chicago he appeared to regain vitality, but his pride and interest in his mission led him to plunge into the work of preparing his report. It was no surprise to his friends to hear that he had succumbed while on his way to Washington, congestion of the lungs and kidneys increasing the gravity of the attack. He was removed to Georgia, where he lost strength gradually, and while his friends hoped to the end that his courage would save him, they were warned that the chances were all against his recovery. The remains were taken to Berlin, Md., for interment.

Major Handy was born in Virginia, his father being a prominent Methodist clergyman. While under age he entered the Confederate service and served with gallantry during the closing months of the war. He was employed by the New York Tribune as special correspondent during the Cuban troubles, and won distinction by his report of the Virginius massacre.

Later he became managing editor of the Philadelphia Times, and subsequently the editor of the Philadelphia Daily News. He moved to Chicago in 1893 to accept the position of chief of the bureau of publicity and promotion of the World's Columbian Exposition.

At the close of the fair he went to New York and engaged in literary work and newspaper correspondence for a year. He returned to Chicago as editor of the Times-Herald in 1895, when the paper was purchased by H. H. Kohlsaat. Last year Major Handy was appointed by President McKinley as special commissioner to the Paris exposition, where he rendered valuable service.

INDIANS IN A FRENZY.

Enraged Seminoles Likely to Take the Warpath.

A bloody uprising of the Seminole Indians is imminent. An alarming state of rioting and hatred exists owing to the burning at the stake by whites of two members of the tribe. Unless immediate steps are taken by the United States authorities the Indians may go on the warpath. Both the Indians who were burned came from respectable Seminole families, and their fearful fate has aroused their friends and relatives to frenzy.

The crime which led to the burning of the two men was committed on last Thursday. Marcus McGeisey was the owner of some property. On his land lived a white family named Simmons. During the absence of the husband on Thursday McGeisey went to the Simmons cabin and asked for a drink of water. Mrs. Simmons was at home with her four small children. The Indian was given the water and he then asked for a saddle. On being refused McGeisey seized the woman, who had her baby in her arms, and dragged her out of the house. When the woman attempted to run away the Indian seized a Winchester rifle and dealt her a deadly blow on the head, crushing the skull. The woman died instantly.

The feeling was so bitter that the crowd would not be satisfied with the ordinary method of lynching, and it was voted to burn them at the stake. The victims were accordingly chained to an oak tree. Fence rails and dry wood were then piled high above them, and in a few minutes the Indians were wrapped in roaring flames, while the timbers crackled beneath their feet. Never a word did the Indians utter while being roasted alive. They apparently saw that they were powerless to resist and endured their lot like stoics. The crowd was composed of not over thirty men, and the work was done in a quiet but thoroughly determined manner. According to late information the mob's work is not yet finished, and will only be completed when four more Indians have been dealt with in the same manner as McGeisey and Simpson.

Engineer Mysteriously Slain in His Cab—Killed by a Slot Machine—Attempt to Rob a Freight Train—Murderers Sentenced to Imprisonment.

Engineer Slain in His Cab.

S. H. Gipe, an engineer employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, died very mysteriously in his cab on the Union tracks at Indianapolis. When found he was dead from bruises on his body and at the base of the brain, and a deep gash was also cut in his throat. The fireman said that he was on his own side of the cab and did not know that Gipe was hurt till he failed to answer signals.

Fatal Slot Machine.

Jacob Slusser, a guest of Hotel Neufer at Goshen, met a singular fate. The hotel gas meter is controlled by a coin in the slot attachment. Slusser went to bed, leaving the gas in his room lighted, and while he slept the pressure on the illuminant became exhausted. When the hotel attendants dropped the necessary coin into the meter the pressure filled Slusser's room with the poisonous vapor.

PROGRESS AND DECAY.

The topmost glacier heavenward climbs,
The fountains dashing leap on high,
The dark briar forest's leafy shade,
The lofty pines in lowly glade,
Rear upward to the sky.
All Nature higher longs to rise,
And so must I.

The winds are sweeping loud and free,
Afar, the changing icebergs freeze,
The mighty ocean's throbbing breast
Beats loud, above her dead at rest,
And stormy rivers swell the seas.
But should not man be striving more
Than such as these?

The mightiest rock by lightning struck
Will shake, and quiv'ring fragments fly,
The grandest trees will fall some day,
And human hopes, and loves, decay.
All in a fallen world must die,
And lay their proud heads in the dust,
And so must I.

AGATHA'S WEDDING.

By John Walker Harrington.

The day that Agatha's engagement was announced Mrs. Pennington's school was in turmoil of excitement. Melicent was in charge, for Agatha was at the dressmaker's, and Mrs. Pennington had put on her best black bonnet and hastened out to tell the news to her relatives and friends. Intelligence of this sort is best made public at once.

"I'm so glad to hear Agatha is to be married," said Judge Bryson's daughter, a red faced girl who was always saying the wrong things. "I wish I might hear of your engagement, Miss Pennington.

Melicent Pennington flushed angrily, and threw back her thing shoulders. There was a compressed look about her lips.

"Do not concern yourself, my dear," she said. "I could have been married long before I was your age."

Everybody who knew the Penningtons had heard of Melicent's proposal of marriage. It was her first and her last. She was traveling in Europe, and in a Paris pension she met a German count who proposed to her, after a frenzied courtship of two weeks. Melicent was then but sixteen years old. Mrs. Pennington was fond of saying: "Melicent had such a carriage. She looked as though she were twenty."

The head of the house of Pennington—Pater, the daughters called him—set his foot down squarely. No child of his should marry a titled foreigner; the count was a mere fortune hunter. Pater had no fortune worth speaking of, but that made no difference. What Pater said was right, and Melicent sent the young member of the nobility away.

"It's just as well," she often said. "I find my ideals are changing as I grow older. I shall never marry until I meet a man as good as Pater."

Melicent waited fourteen long years, but the paragon never came. Her cheeks were not as plump as they had been, and her features were becoming angular.

Pater fell down the steps of his house one night, six years before, and a few days later died from the effects of the shock.

"He was a good fellow," the world said. "He was kind to his family, anyway."

Affairs had not gone well with the Penningtons since then. Barring a law library, a few outstanding claims, and a house with a mortgage on it, the father left little. The house—and the unsatisfied mortgage—were about all that remained after the debts were paid.

"Think how much worse it might have been, Mater dear," said Melicent to her mother, after it was all over. "So long as Aggie doesn't feel how hard it is, I shall be satisfied."

Mrs. Pennington and Melicent believed that young girls lacked the power to think, to observe, and to study, and they issued their theories in the form of a four page pamphlet, which they mailed to the families whom they had known in the days of their prosperity, and to most of the pewholders of St. Sebastian's. And thus it was that the Pennington School of Observation for Young Girls was established.

This institution occupied the parlor and the second floor of the mortgaged house. The house was in a Harlem street, lined by two brownstone shells pierced with holes. Some of the holes had glass over them, and the others had doors, behind which gleamed rows of brass letter boxes. Before the era of flat building came, houses surrounded by lawns filled the street, but the homes of the Harlem cliff dwellers crowded out the old mansions. Pater bought the house years before, but in a time of financial stress—his money affairs nearly always went wrong—he sold the land on either side. In the deed it was mentioned that only private houses were to be erected there; but as soon as Pater was gone the insidious work of the flat builder began, and the Penningtons' house was shut in on both sides. It was useless to lament over the loss of light from their side windows. The house, wedged in between huge structures of brick and mortar, was the only private dwelling which remained in all that street.

Mrs. Pennington taught sciences, languages, and the art of thinking; Melicent inculcated the principles of mathematics and music; and Agatha, a red faced, freckled girl of twenty, who went to the art school, was instructress in free hand drawing.

"Agatha is so different from Melicent," everybody said. "She never will have the carriage her sister has."

The younger woman came home one day with her face beaming.

"Mr. de Vere will call tomorrow evening," she said. "I suppose you have no objection, Mater?"

"When I was your age," began Melicent—and then she stopped. "I—I know several artists," she concluded lamely.

"I'm aware of what you were about to say," Agatha retorted. "Well, he may not have long mustachios like your German count, but, at all events, he's not after Pater's money."

"Forgive me, Agatha," said Melicent. "I spoke before I thought."

Having nothing to forgive, Agatha was magnanimous. She even asked Melicent to lend her her silk dress, to wear on the following evening.

"I am so glad," said Melicent, when Agatha came into her room one night, several months later, and told how "he" had proposed at last. "I know you will be very happy."

"Thank you," remarked Agatha.

Melicent told Mater the next morning at the breakfast table. She did not wish to disturb her rest with such startling intelligence.

"I do so want Agatha to have a beautiful wedding," said Melicent.

"I don't know," Mrs. Pennington rejoined, reaching for the patent malt preparation which seemed to serve her in place of food—"I don't know where the money's coming from, Mellie."

Agatha, who always arose an hour later than the rest of the household, was asleep up stairs.

"But we must make the child happy," insisted Melicent.

Then came days of scrimping and saving.

The two youngsters whose parents had sent them from the West to become boarding pupils of the School of Observation looked dolefully at each other across the morning repast. The soupmeat of the day before had been converted into hash. The coffee seemed principally grounds. The oranges were small and shriveled. One of the youngsters had the temerity to ask for a poached egg one morning, and the injured air with which Melicent refused it still lingers in her memory. Melicent and her mother partook of the same frugal fare; but there always was a bit of steak or a nice chop for Agatha.

"Mater," said Melicent, one evening, "we might sell that ormolu clock uncle gave me."

The ormula timepiece went to a dealer in antiques, and several heirlooms of guinea gold found their way to a smelting shop down town.

Packages of all kind were being delivered at the Pennington house now; but the neighbors did not notice that almost as many packages left that house as came into it. Harlem cliff dwellers are not very curious.

"What are you doing to do with that mahogany table?" asked the Bryson girl, who was always about at the wrong time.

"It is to be repolished," replied Melicent calmly.

The School of Observation for Young Girls began to show alarming symptoms of disintegration. The girl with the red hair suddenly announced that her parents had decided to send her to a seminary in Fifth Avenue, Melicent held up her hands to observe, to think, and to study, with no higher ideals before her than French lessons, deportment, and dancing? The backward child, who never could get her lessons, went home crying one day, because Melicent had grown impatient when she translated vouleur as a bird, and she did not return.

"It seems to me, Mellie," said Agatha, several days later, "you and Mater are neglecting the school dreadfully. You seem to think that Mr. de Vere is going to marry the whole family. Please don't get that impression, or the first thing we know he'll break off the engagement."

Melicent bent over the wedding dress she was making for Agatha, and said not a word.

"That wasn't exactly a pleasant thing to talk about," Agatha, told herself, after she had left the room; "but Richard insisted on the matter being definitely understood."

In the weeks which followed, Melicent worked bravely to keep that handful of pupils together. She spent the greater part of the night in toiling upon Agatha's wedding down.

"It's a labor of love," she said. "I was afraid I was getting selfish."

While the cliff dwellers on either side of the Pennington house were asleep, the little, old fashioned sewing machine buzzed until long after midnight. By the light of a kerosene lamp—for gas was considered too expensive—Melicent toiled and toiled over the white satin and the ornaments of pearl. Her eyes were red and swollen when she finally ceased work and crept up to her little room under the roof.

Week in and week out Mater and Melicent labored upon that wonderful trousseau; that is, Melicent did the actual work, and Mrs. Pennington directed matters. Then, one morning, Melicent came down bearing in her hands yards and yards of creamy Spanish lace.

"It is not likely that I shall need it, Mater," she said simply, as she handed over the flimsy fabric to her mother.

"When your great aunt gave it to you, Mellie," exclaimed Mrs. Pennington, "she said that it was to be worn on your wedding day!"

Melicent walked over to the window—darkened by the dreary wall of the adjoining flat.

"I shall give it to Agatha," she said. Then she turned and went hastily from the room. Agatha, who met her on the stairs, noticed that she was weeping.

The wedding invitations followed as closely as possible upon the heels of the announcement. Four months is considered a short time. They seemed a century to Agatha; but to Mater and Melicent they were an age. The proprietors of the Pennington School of Observation for Young Girls missed the tuition fee of the youngsters from the West, and they felt the loss of the board money most keenly. Manay a time they wished that the red haired girl would come back. The interest on the mortgage stared them in the face.

"I often wish," remarked Agatha, after a family council, "that Pater had been more of a financier."

"His was a lovely character," Melicent rejoined. "I wish every day that I were more like him."

Heralded by paragraphs in the society columns of the Sunday newspapers, by bits of poetry and engraved at Tiffany's, and by the gossips of St. Sebastian's, the wedding came at last. It was in June, but shortly after the Commencement of the School of Observation for Young Girls.

The Commencement that year was a meager affair. It was also the last. There were two graduates, and the little room in the building of the Young Men's Christian Association was barely filled. Two or three vestrymen from St. Sebastian's, and several of the eminent professional men to whom Mrs. Pennington had referred in her circular "by permission," occupied places of honor.

Several English sparrows, as though to hail the bridal day with matin song, perched upon the area rail of the Pennington house on the morning of June 10, in the year of our Lord eighteen ninety five. The doors of the basement and the lower hall of the old house were wide open. The florist's men hurried in and out. The caterer's assistants busied themselves in the kitchen. Delivery wagons were driven hastily up to the curb and as hastily driven away again. The women cliff dwellers looked in astonishment at the sight. Some of them remembered that day, perhaps only the year before when their fathers' houses presented such a scene and the great doors were opened wide.

Two society reporters—society reporters always seem to go in pairs—came up the stoop, and for fifteen minutes held an animated conversation with Melicent. They gathered all the details of the ceremony, the names of the prominent guests, the manner in which the bride was dressed, and a description of the decorations.

"It's worth about three sticks," remarked the man with the tweeds, afterwards. "Connected with swell people, you know. Poor as church mice themselves, though."

"House is nicely decorated," remarked he in the gray suit. "I suppose some of their rich relatives must have attended to that."

The young woman from another paper, who came later, described the whole affair as "a beautiful home wedding"—a phrase which had been used before. It this case it was a felicitous one.

The old parlors looked like a garden and the stairway was a veritable path of flowers. The musicians were concealed behind a thicket of palms. The woman reporter did not forget to mention that there were "rare exotics banked with flowers."

The clock pointed to high noon, and the musicians played the wedding march. A rustle of silks and satins was heard upon the stairs. The house was darkened, and jets of gas took the place of the midday sun.

"Isn't she lovely?" simpered the girl in lavender.

Under the spell of satin, of old lace, and of orange blossoms, Agatha Pennington seemed almost beautiful. There was an air of womanliness and sweetness about her which they of St. Sebastian's had never noticed before. The tall tortoiseshell comb which her great grandmother had worn upon her bridal day was upon the bride's head, and a string of pearls, brought from Florence two generations before, encircled her neck. Young De Vere seemed dazed.

First of the bridesmaids was Melicent Pennington, in plain white, with a brooch of old gold at her throat.

"Poor Mellie's beginning to fade," whispered the girl in lavender to the tall young man at her side.

"She's a good woman," the man answered; he could think of nothing else more gallant to say.

And when all was over and the guests had gone, when caterer, florist, and orchestra leader had been paid, Mater and Melicent sat together in the front parlor among the flowers.

"That offer of a position in the conservatory of music came none too soon," said Melicent. "It means twelve hundred dollars a year."

"Yes," replied the mother, "it is fortunate, indeed. The house will have to go, but perhaps we may be able to save a little from the wreck. If she school had only been a success!"

"I know of the loveliest flat," Melicent said—"only eighteen dollars a month! With what furniture we have left, we can fit it up beautifully. And then, there is my salary."

"It has been an awful expense," sighed Mrs. Pennington, as she looked about her. "How did we ever manage to meet it?"

"But wasn't it a beautiful wedding?" asked Melicent, as she arose and laid her hand tenderly upon the older woman's shoulder.

INDIAN'S KEEN VISION.

They Can Distinguish Objects Which the White Man Cannot See.

During the progress of an exploration in Central Brazil, Dr. Hans Meyer paid particular attention to the senses of the Indians, especially their sight. He noticed, as others had done before him, that an Indian hunter can see many things that a white man cannot; he can follow the course of a fish in turbulent waters and hit it with an arrow; he can spy an animal in the thicket that to our eyes seems impenetrable; he can see in the ground and grass and follow tracks of man and animals that to us are invisible.

The popular explanation of these phenomena has hitherto been simply that savages have a sharper sense than we have. But Dr. Carl Ranke, who joined Dr. Meyer in the expedition, went deeper into the question. He examined the eyes of some of the men and found, to his surprise, that there was hardly any difference between their direct powers of sight and ours What so greatly increased their keensightedness was their superior practice and familiarity in accommodating their vision to different distances. Besides this focussing facility, which is of immense importance, the Indian has another hardly less valuable advantage, in that he accustoms himself not to look at a landscape as a whole, but to give his individual attention to a particular detail.

Ranke also declares that the shortsightedness so prevalent in civilized countries is not a disease or a failing, but a salutary adaptation of the eyes to conditions of life that require constant work at close range.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Biggest Bibles.

Probably the largest Bible in the world, as regards its dimensions, is the property of a German lady living in Manchester. The book is 2 feet 6 inches in length and nearly the same in width. A foot line on each page, in quaint vermillion characters, reads: "This is a history." This unique Bible, which is more than 200 years old, contains a number of curious old illustrations depicting the various sacred events recorded therein.

Another bulky Bible is the property of a Mr. J. Bell of Manchester. The book has been embellished from time to time with appropriate pictures and photographs until it now contains more than 10,000 illustrations, and extends to ninety-one volumes.—Tit-Bits.

GOWNS AND GOWNING

WOMEN GIVE MUCH ATTENTION TO WHAT THEY WEAR.

Brief Glances at Fancies Feminine, Frivolous, Mayhap, and Yet Offered in the Hope that the Reading Prove Restful to Wearied Womankind

Gossip from Gay Gotham.

New York correspondence:

IN contrast to the plainness that now dominates most outdoor rigs, is much of elegance in finish, which, if not actually on the inside in the shape of linings, has the effect of being part of a concealed garment or accessory. Fifteen years ago mothers used to say: "It's vulgar to make a show of elegance outside, at the expense of the finish inside." Mothers now need give no such advice, for the tendency is all to suggest elegance, delicacy and beauty of linings, petticoats, etc., in piquant contrast to a rather plain severity of exterior. Consider the street gowns of the present, gowns to be worn with unelaborate headwear; they will be, four times out of five, of cloth. The skirt will be plain, and the bodice almost severe, except at such portion as seems to be a display of the lining. In other words, all the elaboration of the bodice will be expended upon the revers that turn away from the throat, purporting to display lining, and upon the under blouse or chemise that shows at the opening of the outside bodice. In the same way the lining of the skirt will be of dainty silk or satin, and the least lifting of it will disclose not only its lining, but the edge of a dainty petticoat.

Even in outer jackets this trick is apparent, and an example of this placing of it is shown with the initial. The severely cut, simply braided garment turned back in revers and showed the under bodice, which at such a point should be either gay of color or delicate of material. In this instance it was bright red satin with collar to match, in contrast to mouse gray cloth in the jacket.

This treatment was given to the dress at the right in the first large picture, a rig that was intended for calling. It was of dark emerald smooth cloth, the skirt perfectly plain but lined with marigold yellow satin. The blouse jacket was belted by a white satin band jeweled with great uncut emeralds set in dull silver. From the waist line the blouse spread in wide revers, which showed the white satin lining of the blouse. The portion of the satin thus exposed was jeweled to match the belt with all sizes of brilliant stones, in green, turquoise and cut jet. The inside blouse showing at the opening was delicate tissue in gray over marigold, a soft bow was bunched at the throat, and the cuffs were faced back to match the revers. This dress is not considered an elaborate one, yet even where revers do not turn back so far and when only a small portion of the blouse is opened, the facing of the revers may with propriety be white satin, though the cloth is a demure brown or mouse color. The latter shade was employed for the companion gown to the one just described. Sleeves are rarely left plain at the wrist, but the funnel cuff is not as often seen as in the earlier gowns of the season. Cuffs usually turn back and in ornamentation follow the suggestion of throat or rever finish. If there is no cuff, then there is more or less elaborate braiding, and often a bit of the material with which the gown is lined. Sleeves are all long, setting well down on the hand, and hiding even the first button of the glove.

It is hard to understand why, when the Russian blouse was offered to women a few years ago, they would have none of it, yet now that there is another chance at it, they wonder however in the world they were comfortable without it. Perhaps this is because when offered last time it came as a sudden and violent change from the tight-fitting rigs women had been putting themselves into, and fashion will not allow itself to be whirled into sudden contrasts, but for the past four years women have been getting used to loose fronts and the like. The blouse just now is much less baggy and is much better shaped than when first offered. There is not so much contrast between full blouse and flat skirts, and the skirts are in some cases really fluted, though almost always they are entirely separate from the blouse, that all thickness at the waist may be avoided. Almost all blouses appear to open over what seems to be an under vest or chemisette, but of these a large proportion really does open over a complete underwaist, which is finished to "show" when the blouse is taken off.

This is quite the arrangement to which the once popular blazer jacket conformed, and as to jackets, they are by no means driven from the field by the popularity of blouses. The woman with a handsome figure and a picturesque carriage may still put herself into a jacket fitting perfectly and to the figure all around. Yet the fashion of elaborately faced revers holds in the jacket as in the blouse, though the under bodice shown is rather severe under the jacket. A linen collar is hardly ever displayed with the blouse; it is almost inevitable with the jacket, and something in the way of a waistcoat is always seen with a jacket costume.

Woman President.

Miss Rose C. Swart, the new President of the Wisconsin State Teachers' Association, is a native of Pennsylvania, but came to Wisconsin with her parents when a child, locating at Racine. The first teaching Miss Swart ever did was at a little cross-roads school in that country. Afterward she taught in the graded schools of Elkhorn, Janesville and Madison. While teaching at Madison she was offered the position at the Oshkosh normal. There she first taught in the primary department, but for the last thirteen years she has had charge of the practice work at the normal. Miss Swart is a great favorite with Wisconsin teachers. Last year she came within a very few votes of being elected President of the association. This year her friends started in time, and as soon as it was announced her name would be presented for the office teachers from all over the State flocked to her standard. Professor Cheever of the Milwaukee normal, whose name had been mentioned, let it be known that he would not be a candidate against Miss Swart, and Professor Mayne, when he arrived in Milwaukee and found that he was slated as a candidate, would not hear of such a thing so long as Miss Swart was in the field.

Foolish Excess of Discipline.

The practice in some public schools of requiring the children, when moving in a body, to observe more than the military rigidity of line, with penalties for looking in other than a prescribed direction, or for lifting the hand to allay a facial irritation, reaches a climax in the San Francisco schools. There, the boys, when lined up in front of the school, awaiting the tap of the bell, are required to stand with their arms folded across their chests, exactly in the prison attitude. When they move it is with the prison lockstep, and between rows of nails driven into the sidewalk, and woe be to the unlucky youth who steps over the line. The criticism of the method comes from a detective. The boys, he claims, are acquiring a habit which in later years will be a source of annoyance and a cause of suspicion. Discharged convicts, the detective asserts, frequently resume the prison habit of the lockstep and the folded arms when their minds are preoccupied, and to the veteran police officer the motion and the attitude are as distinctive as the striped suit.—New York Post.

Baby Gone to School.

The baby has gone to school; ah, me!
What will mother do,
With never a call to button or pin,
Or tie a little shoe?
How can she keep herself busy all day,
With the little "hindering thing" away?

Another basket to fill with lunch,
Another "good-by" to say,
And the mother stands at the door to see
Her baby march away,
And turns with a sigh that is half relief
And half a something akin to grief.

She thinks of a possible future morn
When the children, one by one,
Will go from their home out into the world,
To battle with life alone,
And not even the baby be left to cheer
The desolate home of that future year.

She picks up garments here and there,
Thrown down in careless haste,
And tries to think how it would seem
If nothing were displaced.
If the house were always still as this,
How could she bear the loneliness?

WILL WALK OVER THE OCEAN.

A Bostonian Expects to Accomplish This Feat Next Summer.

Capt. William C. Oldrieve, of Boston, makes announcement of a remarkable intention. He says he will walk across the Atlantic ocean next summer. He will begin his journey on July 4, and will be accompanied by Capt. William A. Andrews, famous for reason of his voyage across the Atlantic in a small boat. Oldrieve will sleep and eat in Andrews' boat.

The seagoing shoes of Mr. Oldrieve are the most wonderful part of the whole affair. They are really a pair of cedar boxes five feet long, with fins on the bottom and sides. They are very light and are capable of sustaining 140 pounds, but as Oldrieve weighs only 130 they are as good to him as a steamer's deck. In each of these wooden shoes the water walker's feet are thrust deep down, and a rubber garter-like affair is fastened to the leg, thus effectually keeping out the water. Rubber boots reaching to the thigh are also worn. When thus equipped Oldrieve is able to walk many miles and to travel over choppy seas, and even the heavy swell of the ocean.

His theory of midocean walking is to slide down the side of a big swell and wait for the next one to lift him up. In this way he says it really requires less exertion to walk on water far out at sea than it does in a sheltered bay. He thinks he will be able to walk from 500 to 1,000 miles across the Atlantic in a period of 40 to 90 days. As the course taken will be in the path of steamships, he expects to speak many passing vessels and send back letters written while walking in midocean to his friends in Boston.

BEACON IN A FOG.

London Policemen to Be Topped Off with an Electric Light.

One who has never encountered a London fog has no conception of just what it is, but it is a fact that it frequently happens that a person will get lost trying to find his way across the street. In such a position one is liable to be ground under the wheels of many vehicles feeling their way through the almost impenentrable mist. A proposition is now being considered to top off the policeman at the "crossings" with an electric light fixed on his helmet. The glass is of a peculiar reddish tint, which shade is said to shine out a greater distance through the fog than any other color. This will be perceptible when the policeman himself is out of sight, and will act also as a guide, as he stands at his post in the middle of two busy thoroughfares, to the stranded wayfarer, just as the coast light does to the tempest-tossed vessel. It will also be a means of preventing the running down of policemen, as has occurred several times, by wagons. The light will be supplied by batteries carried in the coat pocket.

How He Won Her.

Fast he held her hand in his'n,
In a sort of love-locked prison,
While he told the burning story of the love that rent his breast,
And the maiden sat and listened,
While her eyes with triumph glistened,
As his all-consuming passion he in trembling tones confessed.
But she tenderly repulsed him.
How her words with pain convulsed him,
But he'd often heard that fainting heart ne'er won fair lady yet.
And with eyes upon that beacon,
Hoping that she might yet weaken,
Every point of her objection he with valiant vigor met.

Yet the maid was unrelenting,
Gave no token of repenting,
Though the burning words he uttered seemed to almost singe her ears!
To his every plea emphatic,
She would shake her curl-topped attic,
And his feeling overcame him till he almost burst in tears;
Then a thrill of hope ran through him
As a happy thought came to him,
And the bells of joy within him rang a wild and merry peal
As she fell upon his bosom,
Hugged him as in fear she'd lose him—
He had promised that his bridal gift would be a chainless wheel.

SOMETHING HE FORGOT.

When Mr. Jenkins went to his bedroom at half past 1, it was with the determination of going to sleep, and with another determination that he would not be interviewed by Mrs. Jenkins. So, as soon as he had entered the door and deposited his lamp upon the dressing table he commenced to make his speech:

"I locked the front door. I put the chain on. I pulled the key out a little bit. The dog is inside. I put the kitten out. I emptied the drip pan of the refrigerator. The cook took the silver to bed with her. I put a cane under the knob of the back hall door. I put the fastenings over the bath room window. The parlor fire has coal on.

I put the cake box back in the closet. I did not drink all the milk. It is not going to rain. Nobody gave me any message for you. I posted your letter as soon as I got to town. Your mother did not call at the office. Nobody died that we are interested in. Did not hear of a marriage or engagement. I was very busy at the office making out bills. I have hung my clothes over chair-backs. I want a new laid egg for breakfast. I think that is all, and I will now put out the light."

Mr. Jenkins felt that he had heard against all inquiry, and a triumphant smile was upon his face as he took hold of the gas tap, and sighted a line for the bed, when he was earthquaked by the query from Mrs. Jenkins, "Why didn't you take off your hat?"

A YOUNG GIRL

There is a young lady in one of our neighboring towns who has peculiarities. She has a habit of walking on her feet and never takes a step without moving. When quite young she contracted the habit of eating, which grew upon her until now everything she eats goes to her stomach, and every time she drinks she swallows. It is also noticed that the longer she lives the older she grows, and that her form is much larger than when a child. Ever since childhood she has shown a disposition to talk when she speaks, until now it is impossible for her to speak without saying something. She wears a No. 4 shoe, and when she puts it on she always puts her foot in it.

THE POST IS RIGHT

The Columbia City Daily Post in speaking of the Harry Colerick resolution at the late democratic meeting at Ft. Wayne, adds;

That, was a brilliant move at Fort Wayne, in which the committeeman was asked to pledge himself to support a platform to be framed, and a candidate for the presidency to be nominated, after his term of office has expired It makes loyal democrats weary to listen to the mad ravings of men whose past political record is as spotted as a leopard.

MAY BUY NEW LANDS

The Chocktaw and the Chickasaw Indians who have for a generation or more been located in the Indian Territory, now talk of moving away. They have had an agent look up a large tract of land in Old Mexico, with a view to buying. They have suffered so much from sickness since coming to the present location from their old homes further south, that they think they must get a new location. They want four or five million acres, and have the money to pay for it.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

Dr S B. Johnston has just received a finely engraved certificate of stock in the Mt. Auburn Cemetery at Chicago But it is not the fine work we speak of, but the fine figures, which show he has $1200 in the corporation, which is now a gilt edge property. The capital stock is a million and the cemetery is one of the finest pieces of property in that section. The Doctor several years ago, took stock in a land improvement company there and kept his assessments all paid up, and a few years ago, a part of their land was used to make the grounds of the cemetery. He now has, in addition to the stock above mentioned, still four residence lots left of his original purchase, and these are now quite valuable. He has had recent offers for them, and inquiries as to his price, but he considers it too good to let go at present. We are pleased to report his good fortune. The Doctor, especially admires the name "Mt. Auburn," which he believes his son-in-law in Chicago, Mr. Pierson, originally suggested to the company. The cemetery lies in the beautiful territory between Riverside and the City and is near the Burlington railroad,

Vigor & Verdicts

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR fulfills all the promises made for it, is the verdict of those who have tried it.

Ayer's

"I have sold AYER'S HAIR VIGOR for fifteen years and do not know of a single case where it did not give entire satisfaction."—F. M. GROVE, Pannsdale, Ala.

Hair

"When disease caused my hair to fall out, I found AYER'S HAIR VIGOR a most excellent preparation and one that does all that is claimed for it."—L. RUSH, Connellsville, Pa.

Vigor

"AYER'S HAIR VIGOR does all that is claimed for it. It restored my hair, which was fast becoming gray, back to its natural color—dark brown."—W. H. HASELHOFF, Paterson, N. J.

Did It

"My head became full of dandruff, and after a time my hair began to fall out. The use of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR stopped the falling out and made the scalp clean and healthy."—MRS. C. M. AYRES, Mount Airy, Ga.

Weak Lungs

If you have coughed and coughed until the lining membrane of your throat and lungs is inflamed,

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil will soothe, strengthen and probably cure. The cod-liver oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues. The glycerine soothes and heals them. The hypophosphites of lime and soda impart tone and vigor. Don't neglect these coughs. One bottle of the Emulsion may do more for you now than ten can do later on. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

DON'T RUSH

Mark Canter over in Ohio claims to have an oil well, and now St. Joe wants one. It would be well not to get excited over all these possibilities There may be oil. We know for a fact that here at Auburn we have gas, and in abundance, of extra fine quality. The trouble is, it lies so deep, that it costs too much to get at it. St. Joe may get gas or oil or both, but there is no concealing the fact that they must go deep for it. These products are found only in what is called the "Trenton rock" a peculiar bed rock of limestone. At Auburn we struck this rock at over 1900 feet deep. That means a heavy expense. In the better Indiana gas belt, a few counties south of us, they get Trenton rock by going down 800 or 900 feet. That reduces the expense accordingly, and they can afford to dig wells and keep them cleaned out and still make a good profit on the gas or oil. Here in Auburn, we put down three wells, each one was a good one, which cannot be said of all the wells in the big gas belt. But when we came to count the cost, we found that to keep the wells cleaned properly so they would keep up their flow, would entail a cost their that added to the great expense of putting in the well that it would not pay. Auburn has a plenty of gas, way down deep, and hard to get at. We might add, that borings in Northern Indiana, show that way down several thousand feet, we have a nice vein or layer of fine marble. But through this fact exists, it will not pay anyone to waste money in quarrying for marble. So it will be well for parties in this section to weigh all the chances before investing.

WM. H. LEAS, Administrator.

VICK'S RAMBLERS.

Last year's novelties brought a pure white and also a yellow Rambler rose, which have proved perfectly hardy and quite as strong bloomers as the crimson. No climbing plant will give better satisfaction for the piazza and they can be trained to make a wonderfully beautiful hedge or screen. Last season one of these plants sold for fifty cents, but this year James Vick's Sons of Rochester, N. Y., offer one each of the white, yellow and crimson Ramblers for only forty cents. Vick's Garden and Floral Guide, an elegant work of 120 large pages, the best ever sent out by this house, will be mailed free upon application to all interested in a good garden.

THE NEW INDUSTRY

Over at Columbia City they have been having experts go over the books of county officers and the Daily Post has this to say of it:

The experts finished up terms of the Treasurer Gross and Auditor Souder Thursday and were given an order on the county treasury for $346 66, making the total paid them to date $1,040. They are getting along swimmingly.

HANNA OF OHIO.

Marcus A. Hanna was yesterday elected to represent Ohio in the United Senate for both the short term and the long term. The short term comes first to fill out the rest of John Sherman's six years, a part of which Hanna has already filled by appointment last spring by Gov. Bushnell. But this appointment by the governor could last only till the legislature met, which they must elect a man to fill out the rest of it. This short term or remainder lasts till March 4, 1899. Then will begin the long term, or full term of six years. The legislature might have given the short term to one man and the long term to another and this is often done in cases like this. But there was such a bitter fight that when the Hanna Republicans found they had a majority of one, they concluded to give Hanna both terms. This gives him the office for over seven years and two months, besides what he has already had. The example is a bad one, but it was expected to be so none of Hanna's friends could get a majority. Hanna himself has no qualifications for the office as far as anyone has ever noticed. But he had made himself solid with the political wire pullers and office seekers, because he is recognized as the man closest to McKinley from whom for the present "all offices flow." He also had to a certain extent, the gratitude and admiration of his party in a general way, for they looked on him as the man who had furnished the sinews of war, which he rightly applied, and at the right time had pulled McKinley through and made him president. But there were an abundance of other republicans, just as loyal to their party, who, however, looked on the methods of Hanna, as very undesirable and not to be tolerated. They felt that the men who had been helping win victories heretofore, when Hanna was working only to pile up wealth for himself, were at least as worthy of preferment as the man who had suddenly come out of counting room and furnished the money for one campaign. They also felt that he could not properly represent a great state in the greatest legislative body on earth, the senate of the United States. They felt that some higher qualities should be possessed by a Senator than the accidental ability to make himself a political boss by questionable methods. But Hanna had even exceeded these questionable methods. Presuming on his great pull with the president he had ridden openly and rough shod, over the best and ablest republicans of the state. He had first demanded the temporary appointment as Senator, when Sherman resigned to become secretary of state, and Gov. Bushnell greatly against his better judgment gave way to these imperious demands because they seemed to be backed by popular sentiment. He no doubt hoped that a few months in the senate would satisfy Hanna's ambition, especially as Hanna must himself soon become aware of his own inability to rank with the senate's other members. But the Governor was mistaken. Hanna was not qualified to see the difference between himself and a score or two of such men as Edmunds, Cullom, and Turpie. Besides the president gave him nearly all the Ohio patronage to deal out to his friends, and this power he used in a way to render himself obnoxious to the better and more numerous element of his party. He ordered the thrusting aside of trusted leaders in the state and put in their places, his own especial friends without regard to experience or qualification. And in the face of all the opposition his course aroused he asked to be returned to the Senate. And he was not modest enough to ask to merely fill out the other 14 months of John Sherman's term but he wanted the six year term beyond. And he has got all he asked for. It is a pitiable spectacle of one of the greatest states in the Union passing into the absolute control of a vulgar and remorseless boss, whose only known element of greatness is his ability to raise and use campaign funds. The episode adds another disgrace to Ohio, the other two notable cases being the election of Payne and of Bryce, by the democrats. But the worst feature after all is its effect on the not very enviable reputation of the United States Senate. That body should be and has been the highest as well as the ablest legislative body in the world, in either recent or ancient times. The most famous legislators of the old world and of the old days, would have found their teachers and masters in the Senate of the United States. But in recent years, a great misfortune has fallen on our Senate. Wealthy men, having derived from their wealth all the other honors and pleasures possible, turned as a final resort to the Senate and a seat therein as the only possible honor yet unpurchased by their wealth. A place in the Senate would round out their successes. There was no thought of any benefit to the country by statesmenship they did not claim or by counsels they knew they were not able to give. They asked and received this high place for themselves and themselves alone. So by degrees, the Senate has received many of these men—millionaires in gold, but small, very small units in ability, until there is danger that the once proud Senate will degenerate into a "Millionaires' Club," and men of brains will gradually disappear from its seats. The election of Hanna is one of these most discouraging occurrences, and the long years he has to serve will go that far to prevent any change for the better.

MOTHER GOOSE UP TO DATE

Sing a song of pedigree, a fellow full of rye; four and twenty scrapers dancing in his eye; when his eye was opened he shouted for his life, wasn't he a pretty chump to go before his wife? His hat was in the parlor underneath a chair, his boots were in the hallway, his coat was on the stair; his trousers in the kitchen, his collar on the shelf; but he hasn't any notion where he was himself. When the morn was breaking some one heard him call, his head was in the ice box, which was the best of all.

FORMER AUBURN PASTOR

THE POWER OF GOLD

Is Limited—The Power of Health is Unlimited—Both Rich and Poor May Have Health by Using

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The rich need health to enjoy their riches. The poor doubly so to prevent greater poverty. Rich is he who has health, however poor in money. To be both poor and sickly is the extreme of poverty.

As all physical power, both mental and muscular, depends on the condition of the nerves, they should be strong and healthy. If strong, obey natures laws and keep them so. If weak and sickly, restore them to healthy action by using Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, which is a specific for sick nerves.

Don't treat your stomach, liver, kidneys or blood, but look well to your nerves and they will correct the troublesome symptoms of all the organs. Read what Wm. McCutchen, Bucyrus, Ohio, says:

"My trouble was sleeplessness, caused, probably, by too close application to my business. I could feel that lack of sleep was surely undermining my general health. I tried several kinds of medicine advertised to cure such troubles, but they did me no good. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was recommended. I knew it would cure me after I had taken the first dose. Natural, and refreshing sleep restored the activity of both brain and body, and I was soon well."

Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer does not stimulate the nerves to unusual action. It arrests the waste of nerve tissue and builds up the frame work of health.

INSTALLED OFFICERS.

The Rebekahs elected their officers last evening for the coming year. The following is the list:

Mrs. S. B. Johnston, Noble Grand;
Mrs. Robert McDougall, Vice-Grand;
Mrs. A. B. Richards, Recording Sec'y;
Mrs. Clara McClellan, Financial "
Miss Libbie Hosler, Treasurer;
Mrs. Mary McIntaffer, Warden;
Miss Lucy Markley, Conductor;
Mrs. P. L. Bishop, Chaplain;
Mrs. Fischler, Inside Guard;
Mrs. W. H. Rakestraw, Outside Guard.

THAT WABASH TRAIN.

The Columbia City Daily Post has the following to say concerning the Wabash train which forgets to stop at Auburn.

"There is considerable complaining all along the line at the late action of the Wabash Railway Co. in having westbound passenger train No. 5 pass through a number of towns without stopping. It seems to have been the most depended upon of all the trains for local passenger traffic, being the only westbound morning train. Butler, Auburn, Auburn Junction, Churubusco, Collins and South Whitley are thus left out and a loud howl is going up. It is hardly a fair deal to those towns."

FROM THE MARCH FLOOD.

A mail sack full of letters, etc. has been fished up out of the river at Danville, Ark., and sent on to the Dead Letter office. It had been in the water since last March, having been lost in the great floods of that month. There are several hundred ordinary letters, some others have receipts in, two contain promissory notes, several have money orders, one has in it a set of false teeth, there were $11.59 in cash, and in various letters were $283.21 in checks. All the letters that can be identified are being returned to the owners.

AFTER MANY YEARS

It has been many years since W. B. Brown entered on a career as salesman for various lines of farming implements and then rounded this out by adding the full business of general hardware. As far as we have been able to judge of another man's business, he has been uniformly successful. We do not pretend to say he has done all this alone, for he has always had admirable partners and business associates. But altogether, he has had the most widely distributed range of business in his line. And it is not saying too much, to assert that his success, has been the result of close attention to business, honesty in dealing and the cheerful disposition that entered into all his intercourse with those he met. He probably had the most extensive acquaintance of any business man in the county, which of itself was an advantage few others possess to such a degree. We do not know into what line of business he will now turn his attention, but feel sure he will not be idle long The remaining partners will go on with the regular business as heretofore, and both being able and experienced business men, we look to see them continue in the front rank of Auburn's commercial houses.

NOT FOR EVERYTHING

But if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, you will find Swamp-Root just the remedy you need People are not apt to get anxious about their health soon enough. If you are "not quite well" or "half sick" have you ever thought that your kidneys may be the cause of your sickness?

It is easy to tell by setting aside your urine for twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy conditisn of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder need doctoring.

There is satisfaction in knowing that the great remedy Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, fulfills every wish in relieving weak or diseased kidneys and all forms of bladder and urinary troubles. Not only does Swamp-Root give new life and activity to the kidneys—the cause of trouble, but by treating the kidneys it acts as a tonic for the entire constitution. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar, or by mentioning Auburn COURIER and sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton New York you may have a sample bottle of this great discovery sent to you free by mail.

PLEASANT PARTY.

Thomas Stoy gave a nice party to his young friends, including his young lady friends, on Saturday evening, at the residence of Charlie Wyatt in East Auburn. There was an enjoyable social time and extra fine music by Mrs. John Kruger, who is not only a good musician but a sweet singer with a remarkably fine voice. She added greatly to the evening's enjoyment. Then there was a lovely lunch, such as is always enjoyable. Altogether, Mr. Stoy made himself solid with the young people, who agree that he and Mr. Wyatt's people are good entertainers. Among those present were:

Dr. and Mrs. Hoffman,
Geo. Hurni, Pearl Andrews,
Harvey Moss, Mollie Doll,
Roy Hull, Ida Smith,
Wm. Hiler, Clara Harris,
Claude Link, Kittie Carmer,
R. G. Thacker, Frank Nelson, Mrs. John Kruger and Miss Pearl Wyatt in whose honor the party was given. She was the recipient of a fine gold pen given by those present.

LEARNING TO SKATE.

A little flip from Dixie Land
While traveling up north,
Once though the ice it looked so grand,
He'd learn to "skate" thenceforth.

He got a pair with glistening mien,
With runners nice and sharp,
With just enough grease on the twain
To make his resolve warp.

When fastened tightly to his feet,
He sallied forth to war;
To have a solid rock for seat
Before he had gone far.

He tried with all his power of might
To keep upon his legs,
But every stroke brought new delight
For all the watching wags.

One foot behind and one in front,
Or both up in the air;
With something underneath so blunt
It felt like grim despair.

Some wished to hold him up, but no;
He'd learn himself or die:
The latter would have soon been, so
Put it down a lie.

He swore, he raved, he stood, he fell,
To get up once again,
To wipe the sweat or maybe—well
He had a trifle pain.

The ice around where he had been,
Was deftly, swept and clean,
And where the boys long after then
Would mockingly careen.

He left the ice at boiling heat,
Which suits his southern clime;
To note his skating life repeats
Until the end of time.

He swore by all he ever knew
It wasn't very much;
Or if it was, it's just as true,
'Twas not quite the top-notch.

"That if he lived a hundred years,
If 'twas not yet too late;
He'd hang to life with all its tears,
And never try to skate."

An Open Letter to Mothers

We are asserting in the courts our right to the exclusive use of the word "Castoria," and "Pitcher's Castoria," as our Trade Mark. I, Dr. Samuel Pitcher, of Hyannis, Massachusetts, was the originator of "Pitcher's Castoria," the same that has borne and does now bear the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on every wrapper. This is the original "Pitcher's Castoria" which has been used in the homes of the mothers of America for over thirty years. Look carefully at the wrapper and see that it is the kind you have always bought, and has the signature of Chas H. Fletcher on the wrapper. No one has authority from me to use my name except The Centaur Company of which Chas. H. Fletcher is President.

WIT OF A LAPORTE LAD

Laporte Argus.)

A philanthropic lady of this city took a little German boy into her home to share the Christmas she had prepared for her own little son. The little child was speechless before the wonders of a Christmas he had never so much as dreamed of. When bed time came the kind lady tucked him into a cot beside her own little boy and knelt to pray enthusiastically in German. The little host stood by in his nightgown listening curiously to the indistinguishable lingo, when presently he snickered aloud. His mother softly laid her hand over his mouth and shook her head reprovingly. "But," remonstrated her boy, still smiling, "Just listen to him; he thinks God is Dutch."

Without A Rival.

As a positive cure for sprains, bruises, and pains of all kinds, Salvation Oil has no equal. Mrs. Frank Juif, 518 Gratiot Ave., Detroit, Mich., writes: "I used Salvation Oil in my family and can say it has no rival as a liniment; it certainly cures pains. I sprained my ankle and it cured me and since then I have always used it for any pains and bruises." Salvation Oil is sold for only 25 cents. No other remedy will do the work as promptly.

NOT A CANDIDATE

(Angola Magnet.)

Many Magnet readers will regret Judge Roby's decision to retire from the office of Circuit Judge, as announced in a letter which follows. His impartiality and fearless discharge of duty command the respect and admiration of people generally, regardless of party, most of whom would be pleased no doubt, to have him remain upon the bench in this District. Judge Roby writes:

AUBURN, IND., Jan. 13, 1898.

HON ORVILLE CARVER, Angola.

DEAR SIR:—In answer to yours of recent date, I beg to say, that I have no doubt I might be nominated to succeed myself, without substantial opposition if I should be a candidate, and also that I am entirely untrammeled, as to such candidacy, having made no promise nor intimation to any person at any time thereto.

My financial interests do not prompt me to hold the place six years longer The work is very light, and it is tasteful, but it is not more to my liking than active practice.

My purpose is to leave the business of the courts of this circuit, at expiration of my present term, in as good condition as is possible, and to have established a few precedents which will operate in the public interest for some time, whoever may be Judge.

To hold an important office is in itself nothing; but there may be some honor in discharging official duties with efficient integrity. Whatever credit it may be possible for me to deserve in connection with the Circuit Judgeship, will be as well deserved at the expiration of my present term, as after a longer period. I wish to complete the term free from political entanglements, and am therefore quite willing to announce my position at this time. I intend to devote my best efforts to public service until November 16th, 1898, and at that time to resume the practice of law in this District.

With great and continued regard, I am, very truly,

FRANK S. ROBY

"Too much money in the country"—
That's what some folks say;
Wish they'd please locate it for us—
Send it down this way!
If they've got it, and don't prize it,
Reckon we could utilize it!

"Too much money in the country"—
Talkin' jest like that!
Wish they'd tell us in a whisper
Where that money's at!
If they'll tell us where they hide it
We'll be willing to divide it!

"Too much money in the country
Everywhere you walk!"
Wish they'd stop their tongues a minute
Let that money talk!
If they've got it, and don't prize it,
Reckon we could utilize it!

"Rheumatism crippled me for years. I could not walk. I tried many physicians without benefit. On the advice of a friend I tried your medicine. I was completely cured by three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

A KLONDYE STRIKE

The Alaska gold fields have just had their first labor troubles, a strike to hold the wages paid last summer for mining and other labor. A letter dated early in December. says:

The labor strike was adjusted without much trouble and the prevailing rate of wages is $10 a day, though some of the mine owners are paying $1.50 an hour. Those who are receiving the lower wages are not skilled miners. Men who have before worked in drift mining and understand the labor have no trouble in earning $15 a day. It was not to this class of men that many of the owners objected to paying last year's wages, but it was to the unskilled men, many of whom knew absolutely nothing about the work and were the loudest in their howls against the socalled reduction in wages. A pretense is still made in keeping up the organization to prevent the reduction, but outside the officers very few men take any interest in the matter and are contented to take $10 a day. It is estimated that there are about 2,000 mine wage workers in the Klondike and about as many more men are developing their own mines or are working lays on shares for others, Laborers have no difficulty in getting employment providing the applicant has a winter's supply of provisions, otherwise it is impossible. At the rate at which the stores sold goods there is no place in the world where a day's wages will buy as much provisions as in the Klondike.

The day I left Dawson I had breakfast in the Royal Restaurant. The meal consisted of a small dish of mush, bacon, a small moose steak, and bread, and the price was $3.50, From a sign hanging over the counter, I copied the price list. It reads:

Meals	$3 50
Coffee, tea or chocolate	50
Sandwiches	75
Boston baked beans	1 00
Pie and coffee	1 00
Ham and eggs	5 00
Porterhouse steak	5 00
Cove oysters fried and ham and eggs	9 00

The Future of England in India.

"Only by blood and tears are nations saved." The agitation has, however, left behind it a legacy of heart-burning and class hatred, and has widened a gulf which it must be the wish of every lover of humanity to bridge That will be bridged, as far as external symtoms are concerned, is not at all improbable; but, unless the causes which conspire to produce it be grappled with England will find her Eastern possessions a source of ever-growing weakness and anxiety. Her first duty is "debellaae superbos"—to restore implicit obedience to her rule; her next, to direct an impartial inquiry into the social and political conditions which menace its duration The cautery must be applied with an unsparing hand; but those charged with the duty of reorganization must remember that men can be governed only by exciting their sympathy or their fears.—From "Undercurrents in Indian Political Life," by F. H. Skrine, in Harper's Magazine for February

FIRST TRAIN ON LAKE SHORE

(Laporte Argus.)

"Well do I remember the first train that passed through South Bend on the Lake Shore" said an old citizen. "The opening of the road for business was a great event and one that was of vast interest to everyone in the town. Long before the time fixed for the arrival of the first train, which was to be late in the afternoon, the young men had gathered a pile of tar-barrels near the station in preparation for a demonstration of joy and a crowd of citizens gathered there to witness the affair. I was not married then and I took two young ladies in my buggy and drove to the scene. After waiting a little while we heard a rumbling noise proceeding from the trestle bridge a short distance off and all supposed it was the expected train, but it turned out to be only a hand car and the train did not come until two hours later. The boys and young men kept adding to the pile of barrels and boxes, bringing barrels partly filled with tar, and the crowd constantly grew larger, so when the train finally arrived the bon-fire was much larger, and the noise greater than if it had reached there on time. That was in the autumn of 1851."

THE ECHOES THEREOF.

The Dispatch is quite abusive in its article defending "Prof" McKay, and goes out of its way to abuse thd editor of the COURIER and Mr. Lochner. This might be expected, but we object to its bare untruthfulness. It says, "The COURIER did printing for this company and advertised for them in its columns, and took their money, of course." The COURIER did no printing for them and took no money. The only thing we did was to set five lines of a local notice, which the "professor" handed in. The rest of his notice was thrown into the waste basket, as it somehow looked suspicious. The free local was the usual courtesy we give the Opera House. This article in the Dispatch and another in it "communicated" are on the same plan. Both complain because that show was driven out of the county. Both complain that women and children are likely to have their moral ideas vitiated because that show was driven out. The same arguments would hold good in case of a horse thief or a rape. Yet our authorities and our people are wicked enough to punish that kind of criminals, even if the public trials do vitiate young minds It will not pay to waste much time on these articles. The COURIER has the courage of its convictions, and believes and says, that a show whose dialogues were too coarse and immoral for any place outside of a bawdy house should be driven out. The Dispatch in effect, takes the opposite view. Has it the ourage of its convictions to come out squarely and openly, and say it thinks such shows should be passed by in silence or go unpunished? Where do you stand? We say, both to the Dispatch and its anonymous writer that they evidently think that the cure for these evil shows is to have more of them and to treat them with kindness and respect. The COURIER, thinks that the cure for these evils, is to have less of them, or none at all, if possible. And anyone who reads these articles in the Dispatch, will see at once, that the writers thereof have laid themselves open to the suspicion that they enjoy just that kind of a show.

LOOKED LIKE McKINLEY.

"Ben Ralter, a Chicago horseman well known here," says the LaPorte Herald, "was in town Monday trying to make a trade with Abe Sommerfield for Harry Noble, Jr. When wearing his silk tile Ben resembles President McKinley and is often taken for that distinguised man. During the recent Chicago horse show Ben had occasion to visit the barber shop in the building, and while in the barber's chair someone started the report that McKinley was in the shop. Soon the room was crowded by the curious and Ben received every attention. The barber called him McKinley and asked all manner of questions, but Ben never let on that he was any other than the 'real thing.' He was shaved, shampooed, perfumed and lavished with attentions, and when through, the happy tonsorsal artist refused to take a cent in payment, saying it was remuneration enough to have shaved the president. The crowd followed the innocent victim around so much that he had to leave the building and change his head gear."

MORE TROUBLE.

Word comes from Ft. Wayne that C. E. Everett is in more trouble. Having got to an extent clear of the difficulties of a week ago, he was in shape to have a rest. But this week, he again struck trouble. It appears that Mr. Miner, of the Garrett Herald, had in April 1896, given Everett, $50 to apply on a debt Miner owed and that Everett never paid it over.

Mr. Miner's account of the affairs is to the effect that in 1895 Mr. Miner was running a republican paper, and was favoring Everett for candidate for governor. He afterwards went to Ft. Wayne to raise some money he needed. He got Everett to secure the money for him, and Mrs. Maggie McCullough lent Miner the money $225, for which were given several notes signed by Mr. Miner. When the first note became due, Mr. Miner sent the money for its payment to Mr. Everett and dismissed the matter from his mind. When the second note became due and the first still remained unpaid, Mrs. McCulloch wrote to Mr. Miner, requesting a settlement. Mr. Miner sent the amount of the second note, $50, to Mr. Everett for the payment of the note. The matter then ran along for some time and still Mrs. McCulloch received no money. She then wrote to Mr. Miner, saying that if a settlement were not effected immediately, she would proceed against him. Mr. Miner came to the city and succeeded in having Mr. Everett liquidate to the amount of the first note. Mr. Miner said that Mr. Everette acknowledged to him at that time that he had appropriated the money for his own use, having been pressed for funds. Recently, Mr. Miner claims to have received another notice from Mrs. McCulloch, to the effect that the $50 note was still unpaid.

From this it appears that now Everett will have to fix up the Miner notes, or will be pushed. He has been arrested and had to give bonds again.

MRS. SHAFFER DEAD.

Mary E. wife of C. C. Shaffer, died this forenoon at 10:45 after a long illness. Her death had been expected at any hour for a day or two past, and her physicians conceded nothing could be done for her but to make her remaining hours as comfortable as possible. There will be brief services at the house on Monday at 2 p. m. and they will go on the 3:10 train to Bluffton. Funeral services will be held at the home of her daughter at Liberty Center on Tuesday and the interment will be in the cemetery near there. Great sympathy is felt by all, for the bereaved family. Mrs. Shaffer had lived here but little over a year, yet her friendly and sweet disposition had endeared her to all who met her. No higher compliment to her loveliness of character can be given, than the words of a lady acquaintance, who said a few days ago "I feel that I am better and happier for having made her acquaintance."

FROM JEFFERSON BARRACKS.

Not long ago, the DAILY had a note that Will Clark had joined the regular army. Then he rather expected to go into the cavalry, and at the barracks, these men have to be trained several months for that service, before being sent to the regiment. But it appears that the scarcity of heavy artillery to man our new fortifications, is taking recruits mainly into that branch of the service. Will had to have a recommand to get into the service at all, as great care is now being taken as to the kind of men accepted. So he wrote to Dr Nusbaum at this place and asked him to write a letter of recommend. This the Doctor did, and we have seen the letter Will wrote thanking him for the favor. He also says "I go to Key west, Florida, from here to enter the heavy artillery." So we will not be surprised to hear of Will handling a big gun to help Uncle Sam in case we get into trouble over Cuba.

A STRANGE FISH.

Is Without Scales and Its Head Resembles a Horse's.

One of the wonders of the deep is the fish the carcass of which the crew of the schooner William Churchill, now at Beacham's shipyard, foot of Warren avenue, strung up on the masthead, so that all who passed that way might see it. Captain Isaac Barker is master of the vessel and Luther Pierce is mate. They came here to load coal for Pawtucket, R. I. The crew threw out a tow line while lying off Cape Charles lightship, near Cape Charles, and, when they drew it in, among other specimens of the finny tribe was a long animal being, which looked like a bar of polished silver. It was a beautiful sight in the moonlight, and its large eyes shone with a bright white light. When the fish—if it be a fish—was landed it became a puzzle, as yet unsolved, to name its genus.

In almost every point the fish is peculiarly formed. It is without scales, like an eel, and is exactly four feet long. Its head bears some resemblance to a horse's, and is about seven inches long. The rounded mouth and the bony nose are something never before seen by the seamen. The eyes are circular, and the size of a silver quarter.

But the most remarkable point about the fish's head is its mouth. There are four upper and two lower teeth, which are very similar to those of a dog. These teeth are in front. There is a full row in the upper and in the lower jaw, and the lower jaw slightly protrudes from the upper when the mouth is closed. The mouth has a vicious appearance. The nearest resemblance the head of the freak has to a fish is to that of a pickerel. The tendency of it is to taper to a point.

To be further extraordinary, the body of this curiosity does not terminate in a tail, like that of other fishes, but gradually narrows down from a height of four inches and a thickness of one and three-fourths inches to a point, without speaking absolutely geometrically. The fin, too, is a record-breaker. It extends the whole length of the wonder, and in life it stood perfectly vertical. The captain says that the formation of the backbone resembles that of a shark.

In short, the animal has the appearance of horse, a dog, an eel, a shark and a pickerel, and Captain Barker, no doubt, will not be blamed if he tags the specimen with this sign:

"What is it?"—Baltimore American.

DREAMER AND SCHEMER.

Napoleon Thought He Could Win Glory in Mexico.

Mr. Cornelius Stevenson contributes an article entitled "An Imperial Dream" to the Century. It deals with the French intervention in Mexico. Mr. Stevenson says:

When the Mexican empire was planned our civil war had been raging for nearly two years. From the standpoint of the French rulers, the moment seemed auspicious for France to interfere in American affairs. The establishment of a great Latin empire, founded under French protection and developed in the interest of France, which must necessarily derive the principal benefit of the stupendous wealth which Mexico held ready to pour into the lap of French capitalists—of an empire which in the West might put a limit to the supremacy of the United States, as well as counterbalance the British supremacy in the East, thus opposing a formidable check to the encroachments of the Anglo-Saxon race in the interest of the Latin nations—such was Napoleon's plan, and I have been told by one who was close to the imperial family at that time the Emperor himself fondly regarded it as "the conception of his reign."

Napoleon III. labored under the disadvantage of reigning beneath the shadow of a great personality, which, consciously or unconsciously, he ever strove to emulate. But however clever he may be, the man who, anxious to appear, or even to be, great, forces fate and creates impossible situations that he may act a leading part before the world, is only a schemer. This is the key to the character of Napoleon III., and to his failures. He looked far away and dreamed of universal achievements, when at home, at his very door, were the threatening issues he should have mastered. The story is told of him that one evening, at the Tuileries, when the imperial party were playing games, chance brought to the Emperor the question, "What is your favorite occupation?" to which he answered, "To seek the solution of unsolvable problems." It is also related that in his younger days a favorite axiom of his was: "Follow the ideas of your time, they carry you along; struggle against them, they overcome you; precede them, they support you." True enough; but only on condition that you will not mistake the shrill chorus of a few interested courtiers and speculators for the voice of your time, nor imagine that you precede your generation because you stand alone. He dreamed of far-away glory, and his flatterers told him his dreams were prophetic.

PEARLS AND PEARL SHELLS.

Treasures that Are Taken from Indian Ocean and Persian Gulf.

In St. Nicholas Captain H. D. Smith, of the United States revenue cutter service tells of his experiences, "Hunting for Shells," from the island of Ceylon to the Dry Tortugas. Captain Smith says:

Pearl shells are valuable, and fine specimens are hard to obtain. They are found in the Treamotee, Grabier and Trihuel group of islands. The choicest come from Macassar. These are the white edged shells, worth $800 a ton, and from these the finest pearl buttons are manufactured.

The most celebrated pearl fisheries lie near the coast of Ceylon, the Persian gulf, and in the waters of Java and Sumatra.

The Australian coast in the neighborhood of Shanks bay and at Roebuck bay furnishes some very large shells, some of them weighing from two to three pounds each. The fisheries of Baja, gulf of California, are very rich, France controlling the gems procured there.

The meat of the pearl oyster is readily bought by the Chinamen, who dry the leathery little bivalves or seal them up in cans and ship them to their countrymen in San Francisco. The pearl shells readily sell upon the spot at from $1.50 to $5 per pound.

Pearls and tears have for ages been associated, and the magic virtues of the pearl were held in high esteem in early times, as they are to-day with the East Indians.

It is said that Queen Margaret Tudor, consort of James IV., of Scotland, previous to the battle of Flodden Field, had many presentiments of the disastrous issue of that conflict, owing to a dream she had three nights in succession, that the jewels and sparkling coronets were suddenly turned into pearls, which the superstitious believe were a sign of coming widowhood and of tears.

Pearls are of various colors, and in India the red pearls were highly prized by the Buddhists, who used them in adorning their temples. Pearls are formed to protect the shellfish. They are due to a secretion of shelly substance around some irritating particle, and their composition is the same as that of mother of pearl.

Pertinent Question.

"It is absurd to say that marriage is a failure," asserted the lawyer's daughter.

"Why so?" demanded the young man who was ready to try it and see.

"Because," she explained, "if it were a receiver would have been appointed long ago, and none ever has been. At least I never heard of him if there is one."

The question was thereupon regarded as settled.—Chicago Post.

SASHES AND SKIRTS.

THESE ARTICLES NOW DEMAND CAREFUL ATTENTION.

The Girlish Is Again in Great Vogue and It Is Used with Many Modifications—Some Pretty Substitutes—Three Skirts Described and Pictured.

Girlishness Succeeds Dash.

New York correspondence:

RUNES and prisms are again the secret practice of rosy lips, that their expression may match the gown worn, and the feature of the evening or dancing dress that is most characteristically ingenuous is its sash. All sorts of lovely materials come now by the yard, made in series of little ruffles. The sort of thing that would mean hours of dressmaker work, even with a machine, is now in place with a rush, a bang, and a row or two of stitching. The following materials are but a few of the newest in the available list:

Black net ruffled with little frills of black net spangled with gold is just a half-yard wide, the little frills running across the width, and makes an adorable sash with the loops made of plain black net. Such a sash has to be made up, of course, and the fancy just now is for the regular tie sash. White net is covered with ruffles of white chiffon, pleated closely, and then the edge of each ruffle is finished with narrow lace, set on after the pleating of the frill. Liberty silk is frilled with chiffon, edged with baby ribbon set on every frill. There is a look of elaboration about all these sorts, and the height of ingenuousness is reached by a plainer kind—one like that pictured beside the initial, for instance. This was light pink silk, the dress itself being white silk.

In all of the befrilled sashes the frill is pleated closely, and the edging is set on after the frilling. Whole skirts are made of such frilled material, and it takes an artist to match the frills. The material is so wide that the width makes the length of the skirt, the frills running lengthwise, is used, but the effect is not so swagger as that produced by fitting narrow widths into a much gored skirt, the frills all matching. Sashes of the dress goods, too, elaborated with chiffon or ribbon, or with both, are sometimes quite as highly wrought as are the pleated and frilled sorts. In the second picture, which presents a dancing dress of turquoise blue corded silk, the handsome sash was was of the silk covered with white figured chiffon, and banded at end and sides with black velvet ribbon to harmonize with the gown's trimming. This skirt was trimmed at the knees with two deep, box-pleated flounces of white chiffon and black ribbon heading. Three smaller ruffles garnished the hips. The bodice had a square cutout, and below the bust were two deep ruffles. Bands of the ribbon were placed across the bust and started from shoulders to the waist line, ending below the knees on the skirt. The gathered sleeves were turquoise blue figured chiffon, and the belt consisted of two bands of the ribbon ending at the back with the sash already described.

THREE SATISFACTORY SUBSTITUTES FOR THE SASH.

SASHED GIRLISHLY.

While there is general use of sashes tying in back and reaching nearly to the hem of the skirt, there are other ways a-plenty to finish the waist of a dancing dress acceptably. Three very tasteful dresses are put in one picture here, and it will be seen that no one of them has a sash. Little ribbon ties are also in vogue; some of them pass once about the waist, tying at the side, the loops set up and down, at once studied and careless; again ribbon is draped elaborately about the waist, binding the waist closely in the first tie, and then looping loosely about the hips, with bows swinging well down toward the hem of the skirt. Some gowns are cut with the old-time overdress idea in view, and the back of the overdress is lifted short and divided into a pair of ends that tie with sash effect at the back. These are the three types pictured.

Don't be persuaded that all skirts are trimmed; they are not. Street skirts are mostly plain, though they may be embellished with braiding, and party and house gowns have skirts plain or not, exactly as each wearer likes. Accordion-pleated materials are used for skirting, the lines of the pleats falling unbroken by drapery or trimming, and materials showing figure or stripe present no other ornamentation. Here are a plain skirt of blue and white striped silk and another of accordion-pleated light blue taffeta ornamented only by its blue ribbon belt finish. A sash, bow or looping of ribbon about the waist may break the severity of a skirt without counting as skirt trimming.

A CUT HAVING MANY EXACTIONS.

When the overskirt idea is carried out it often appears over a perfectly plain skirt, and may be cut in curved apron effect, in deep points or even slashed into several long points. Lace is set about the edge, or often the entire overdress is a series of frills, lace, chiffon or ribbon being used. Sometimes the overskirt is merely one in effect, and is really an elaborate trimming of the skirt, but where the overdress is really a separate garment, then often the skirt over which it is worn is intended for wear without it, and when so worn is, though unornamented, quite as much the vogue as before. The one pictured here was of the former type, and a most elaborate trimming it made, its rich white lace being edged with white feather trimming, lace and feathers being employed elsewhere as indicated. The dress fabric was green satin.

The woman with slender figure and slightly sloping hips may be out of fashion in these days, but she can wear a princess gown and make the rest of us envious. The princess gown should only be attempted by the right figure, and when the right goods is at your disposal. It demands rich material, heavy lustrous silk, glossy satin, goods richly figured. Rich orange satin was the fabric of the one sketched here. The sweep from bust to hem of skirt demands an exquisite surface. Often some slight relief here emphasizes the grace of the cut and obscures its trying quality. A soft sash knot at the bust, the ends hanging nearly to the hem of the skirt, is a good device, or rich lace may be made to hang from the left side almost at the cut-out to well below the knee, as in this picture. Use nothing but fine material. An evening gown of another type may be faked, but the princess must bear inspection. So must she who wears it.

Parson's Wrath Was Roused.

The Atlanta Constitution tells how a minister got even with a mean man, who had invited him to dinner. The mean man had plenty of money, but he didn't spend it on his table, which on that occasion showed but scant fare. "Parson," said the mean man, "times are hard an' groceries high; but, sich as it is, you're welcome. Will you ax a blessin'?" "I will," replied the parson; "fold your hands." And then he said: "Lord, make us thankful for what we are about to receive—for these greens without bacon, this bread without salt, this coffee without sugar, and after we have received it give thy servant strength to get home in time for dinner."

How Deaths Occur.

It is a pretty well-known fact that most of the deaths that occur on the field of battle result from bleeding to death before surgical aid arrives. The French Government has under consideration a scheme for tattooing the soldiers of the French army with a certain mark over each artery, so that a wounded man would be able to stanch the flow of blood himself and thus increase his chance of living.

Kansas City has over 2,800 telephones and the largest telephone exchange, proportionate to its size, of any city in the union.

CLOCK'S PART IN A TRAGEDY.

Ancient Kentucky Timepiece with Which Goes a Gruesome Story.

Seven miles east of Bardstown, Ky., in what is known as the Beech Grove neighborhood, dwells Nathan Colerain, a widower of advanced years, and his maiden sister, who is now past middle life. The Colerain residence is an old-fashioned, unpretentious farmhouse.

THE OLD CLOCK.

Miss Patsy Colerain, or "Aunt Patsy," as she is familiarly known to her neighbors and friends, is a woman of refinement, bearing traces of youthful beauty. She is quiet and unobtrusive and has not gone beyond the pale of her own yard for over thirty years. There is a tragic history connected with her estrangement from the world.

In the spacious hall of the Colerain homestead stands a clock, an old-fashioned affair of the "grandfather" species. This timepiece is over a century old and is a quaint-looking object. The pendulum has been motionless and the elaborately carved brass hands have never moved since a fateful night in the year 1864.

THE COLERAIN RESIDENCE.

Miss Colerain was engaged to Reuben Morehead, a young Kentuckian who in April, 1864, wore the blue uniform. Being in the vicinity of his sweetheart's house Morehead stole across the "debatable land" to visit her. It was a rainy night and while the lovers were together a band of guerillas, headed by the notorious Munday, came up and surrounded the house. At the first alarm Morehead opened the door of the clock case and squeezed in. But he left his hat and gloves in the room and these telltales were seen. The guerrillas hunted high and low. Finally one of them opened the clock door and Morehead was discovered. They shot him to death. Since then the clock has marked the hour of his murder.

"OLD PUT'S" BIRTHPLACE.

Bronze Tablet Affixed to the Historic House at Danvers, Mass.

To remember Israel Putnam a bronze tablet has been placed on a corner of the house in which he was born in Danvers, Mass., the dedication exercises having been held by General Putnam Chapter, D. A. R., under whose direction the tablet was put in place.

Owing to the season the outdoor exercises were as brief as possible, but those held in the town hall of Danvers were most elaborate. The members of the local chapter of the D. A. R. were assisted by a number of prominent members of the order from other cities, among whom was Mrs. Donald McLean, of New York.

The inscription on the tablet is in large raised letters the whole surrounded by a heavy border. It reads:

Here Was Born
GEN. ISRAEL PUTNAM,
Jan. 7, 1718.

Erected by the
Gen. Israel Putnam Chapter,
Daughters of the American Revolution,
1897.

General Putnam was born in Danvers, Jan. 7, 1718, in the house now standing, which has been enlarged several times, and is still in an excellent state of preservation. The original structure was erected in 1641, and it was in a chamber of this section that Putnam was born.

The first proprietor of the house was Thomas Putnam, grandfather of Gen. Israel Putnam. Thomas Putnam's second wife was Mary Veren, widow of Nathaniel Veren, a wealthy merchant of Salem. Their only child was Joseph, who inherited the homestead.

Joseph married Elizabeth Porter, daughter of Israel and Elizabeth (Hathorne) Porter. From this marriage sprang the famous soldier.

STEAMER STRUCK BY A WHALE.

Sea Monster Frightens the Charmer's Crew Off Vancouver.

The passengers on the little steamer Charmer, running between Vancouver and Victoria, had a fright and a novel experience which they will not soon forget. F. P. Stinson, a passenger who was on board, says: "We were bowling merrily along between the Sand heads and Plumper pass at a good rate, and every one was on deck enjoying the weather. Suddenly someone called out, 'See the whale!' And, sure enough, a good-sized one was discerned on the port bow a short distance off. He was enjoying himself immensely, rolling sportively in and out, spouting and diving to his heart's content. Suddenly he disappeared and was out of sight so long that we lost interest in him and gave up looking for him. A few minutes later we felt a sharp shock which shook the entire ship and threw several passengers to the deck. Someone cried out that we had struck. Others exclaimed that she had sprung a leak, and the greatest excitement followed. Women fainted, and men ran this way and that. The engineer stopped his engines, and this seemed to confirm the story that we had struck a hidden ledge. At the same time we felt an ominous grating under the keel. I was on a boat going to Alaska nine years ago which went on a rock, and the sound was identical with what I heard this time. I was sure that a rock had been grazed—a thought hardly consistent with the fact that the old veteran skipper, Captain Rudlin, was on board.

"Finally the passengers became calmer, and the ship's people began an investigation. There was no rock in the vicinity. They knew every foot of the water there. The signal to start was given and we moved off again. Those on deck watched attentively the wake of the ship, until astern of the vessel the 'rock' loomed up in the form of the big sea monster, who lay on the surface as if stunned by the blow. He struck, in rising from one of his dives, almost under the wheelhouse, and then had allowed the steamer to drag almost its whole length over him."—Chicago Chronicle.

OLDEST RAILWAY MAN.

He Is a Character and Possesses a Wonderful Memory.

The oldest railway man in New England if not in the country is Waterman Brown, who, though 80 years old, is still employed at Woburn, Mass., as gate tender, having been employed by the Lowell road sixty-six years. He lost an arm in an accident while firing on the road in 1850. He is eccentric and is so renowned as a collector of curiosities that people all over New England send him presents of queer things. Among the curiosities he has is a bit of the first rail laid on the Lowell road in 1834. He has a model of the Stephenson, the first locomotive, and he owns the first engine bell ever made. He has 400 circus tickets in a trunk. They were given to him in the last thirty years and he never used them.

It was only a few weeks ago that Mr. Brown received a small box containing a solid silver elephant, arranged with a pin to fasten it to his lapel. In the box was a note, unmistakably written by a woman.

He was told the other day that there would be an assistant to help him soon and that then whoever was in charge must be there every minute right at the gate. "Railroading is getting too nice for me," he said. "I have to be here from 5 in the morning to 11 at night and Sundays. I can eat my dinner in just seven minutes. I have my cap right by the chair where I can get it and the house is right over there side of the track."

His memory, especially concerning the history of the road, is wonderful. He said:

"I guess people don't know that the Boston and Lowell railroad was built more to carry freight than for passengers. You see it was this way: In 1834, I guess it was, two men were driving around in a buggy. They were looking over the ground with an idea to build a fifty-foot macadam road from Boston to Lowell, to team cotton over. The old canal wouldn't accommodate all of it even then. Well, just about that time they got wind of the engine Stephenson had made and they turned to that instead of their macadam road. But I ran the first gravel train, yes (laughing), you can say that I ran the first gravel train on the road with oxen."—Chicago Chronicle.

HORSE OF THE PRAIRIE.

How the Patient Animal Is Utilized in Lonely Places.

Of the more or less native horse of the prairie, the horse of the fields, the patient creature with its foal, tender and even compassionate, and the modern horse of civilization, one of the best records is to be found in the collection of drawings by Frederic Remington. Away in the wilds of Arizona or Idaho or Wyoming, Remington carried the pencil of a magician, and brought back records of the keenest personal value. To turn his pages is to live a life amid the immense solitudes of the prairies, where the horse, in all his sturdiness, his muscular strength, and his elasticity of step, seems to be something of an aboriginal. The picture of a "squaw horse" accompanying this article is a copy of one of the Remington masterpieces, and needs no verbal explanation.

THE SQUAW HORSE.

Fiction's Treatment of the Rich.

A grievance that has been treated very injudiciously in many works of fiction is the relation of the rich to the poor. Absolutely false ideas as to how the rich get their wealth, and what they do with it when they get it, have been persistently floated by novelists, for whom (as for the journalist) a millionaire is always fair game. It is not worth while to expend any sympathy upon the millionaires in this matter, as they can struggle along under a considerable weight of vituperation; but the rest of us cannot afford to be put continually in a false attitude toward wealth. Hatred or envy of the rich is not a pleasant companion for our leisure hours, and the poorer we are the less pleasant company it is likely to be. It interferes with our working to the best advantage, and cuts us off from opportunities of accumulating the very wealth that might ease our pains.—"Droch" in Ladies' Home Journal.

QUESTION OF MUSCLE.

Pretty Neck and Shoulders Will Come from Exercise.

"A pretty neck is only a matter of muscle," said a young woman to her two chums, who were admiring the marble-hued softness of her shoulders as the three sat dressed for the hop at Narragansett Pier. "I never look at the pictures of Sandow or John L. Sullivan without thinking how lovely they would look in evening dress—I mean girl's evening dress, of course."

"Oh, horrors! Virginia, what an absurdity. Think of a prize fighter in low neck and short sleeves!"

"I don't wonder that you laugh, but you'll be more surprised when I tell you that it was just that absurd idea that led me to try developing my neck. It was the summer before I came out; I was to be a debutante the next winter. My neck was so thin that my collar bones grinned at me every time I looked in the glass. Imagine a debutante with collar bones!"

The others looked the dismay that the speaker expected, and she went on:

"Now, this is all I did, and if you do the same for ten minutes night and morning you will notice a difference in a month.

"If you examine closely the pictures of Sullivan or any of those prize fighters you will notice that they usually carry their heads with the chin forced back close to the neck. If you try to do this you will find that your head straightens up as if you had a stiff neck and your chest rises an inch or so. Of course it will be mostly the bones that rise, but don't be frightened at the ghostly apparition. Just keep pushing your head back as far as possible without bending the neck, always keeping the chin in.

"Then turn the head around to the right and left as far as it will go, with the chin in the same position. The hardest exercise is to throw the head back and bring it forward with a jerk until the chin fairly slaps the chest. It is one of the prize fighter's favorite exercises to develop the muscles of his neck, and I thought I might as well try to cover my bones in the same way. Anyway, it's very simple. It certainly does no harm to try it, and in any case I have my own experience as testimony to its efficacy.

"In taking the exercises it is a good plan to draw a deep breath and hold it as long as possible while turning the head from side to side or pushing it back."

Here are some of the military exercises which girls who want to reduce the waist without tight lacing, or who object to wearing corsets at all, may try to advantage, confident that, if persisted in, these are bound to make the waist longer and more slender:

1. Stand straight with arms at sides and palms to the front; then raise the arms up over the top of the head until the thumbs touch, and drop slowly down again.

2. Hold the arms straight out in front of you, palms down, and then move each around gradually to the side and back again, keeping them on the same level.

3. Stand with the arms stretched as far apart as possible, making a perfect cross with the body, and describe small circles with each arm, using the shoulder as center.

The exercise of slapping the backs of the hands together behind the back is good for both small waist and full neck, but it is so common that it is hardly worth mentioning.—New York Herald.

A Pointed Question.

The great question whether the use of forks is understood in Chicago having been happily settled in Paris, it may be asked in seriousness whether forks are not too much used in Chicago and everywhere else. Not that anybody wants to use the knife for conveying food to the mouth, but might not the teaspoon as a part of the dinner equipment be a little more prominent?

People of breeding train their children to eat peas, for instance, with a fork, tabooing the spoon, for no apparent reason other than that its use would simplify and facilitate the operation. On the same principle they ought to eat their peas with chopsticks, as a Chinaman could easily do. So with certain kinds of pie and pastry. The relish is marred by the loss of juices too thin for the fork to carry. Yet the man who values his social reputation must not ask for a spoon.

The proper use of the silver fork might be better understood if it were regarded as a modified shovel with limitations imposed by its slits. For solids it is an excellent shovel. For liquids it is naturally a failure.

The countryman who on his first visit to a city hotel asked the waiter for a spoon with no slits in it was no legitimate subject for ridicule. He was an impartial critic, being without the prejudice of habit or tradition.

Biography.

The chief use of biography consists in the noble models of character in which it abounds. Our great forefathers still live among us in the records of their lives, as well as in the acts they have done, and which live also, still sit by us at table, and hold us by the hand, furnishing examples for our benefit, which we must still study, admire and imitate. Indeed, whoever has left behind him the record of a noble life, has bequeathed to posterity an enduring source of good, for it lives as a model for others to form themselves by in all time to come; still breathing fresh life into us, helping us to reproduce his life anew, and to illustrate his character in other forms.

Curious Siamese Decoration.

His majesty of Siam is liberal with his orders. He recently gave an Italian painter (for painting one of his wives from a photograph) "the Grand Cross of the Siamese Crown." It is rather a large order. "This cross," said his majesty, graciously, "will entitle you to marry twelve wives. It is a distinction I seldom confer, so I hope you will soon make good use of it."

Mistress—"O, Bridget, Bridget! What an awful numskull you are! You've put the potatoes on the table with the skins on, right in front of our visitors, too. You—you—what shall I call you?" Bridget (affably)—"Call me Agnes, if ye loike, mum; 'tis me other name."—New York World.

Work of Women and Dogs.

No one who is not familiar with the matter can form any idea of the amount of labor performed in Europe by women and dogs. It is estimated that women and dogs, harnessed together, do more hauling of goods in Germany than the railways and all other methods of conveyance put together. Hundreds of small wagons can be seen any day in the year throughout Saxony, on all the roads leading to and from Dresden, each having a dog on the near side harnessed instead of a horse, while instead of the off horse, a woman trudges uncomplainingly along with her left hand grasping the center pole to give it direction, with the strap round her shoulder or arm through a loop attacked to the wagon-axle. Very large loads are thus transported in all sorts of weather on the good roads of the empire.

WHERE HARD TIMES ARE NOT KNOWN.

Described by a St. Paul Paper as the New Star of Liberty.

A correspondent, in a communication to this paper, says during the past few months so much has been said and written of Western Canada, and the new provinces forming it, he has been led to give the subject some inquiry, and he has been shown letters written to the Canadian Government from delegates sent out by friends to inspect the country.

One of these delegates who was sent to Western Canada says: "In undertaking to give a description I fear I shall not be able to give it justice, for I hardly know where to begin or when to end. For a plea for my judgment, I will assume, for an illustration, the experience of a man who went from place to place in search of a wife, and finding so many of good qualities and attractions, was unable to determine which to choose, so in looking for a home in Western Canada I like the country well, and two of my boys are going this fall (they have since gone, and each has a homestead), where I am satisfied they will do well. The lands which I have seen are far superior in every respect and beyond my expectations. Lakes and streams to be found in all districts abound with innumerable kinds of water fowl, while fish are very abundant. On all sides we see innumerable stacks of grain, proving beyond doubt the fertility of the soil. On either side of the track can be seen in addition to the grain herds of cattle, horses and flocks of sheep. I have traveled over a great portion of the Western States and I have seen nothing to compare with this country. One hundred and sixty acres of land are given free to actual settlers, and I saw cases where as high as $20 per acre had been cleared in one year. I do not wish to advise anyone, but as for myself I shall leave as soon as I can arrange my affairs." The agents of the Canadian Government are now at work organizing excursion parties, and the Department of the Interior at Ottawa, Canada, will be pleased to supply the information to those who are not within reach of an agent.

GLOBE SIGHTS.

When a woman fails to "take on" at a funeral, her friends say that her self-control is wonderful; that she shows but little of the deep emotion stirring her soul.

Though every widow says a great deal about her late husband's goodness, the truth is that if she meets him in heaven, the surprise of seeing him there will cause her to drop dead a second time.

A wedding makes money for the probate judge, the grocer, the dry goods merchant, the caterer, and all merchants who sell articles suitable for gifts. As this prosperity is caused at an expense of trouble to only two hearts, let the number of marriages increase.

What great possibilities in the woman who has never entertained! She can criticise everybody, make fun of every party, and no one can criticise her. It is such a well defended position that we wonder more women don't remain secure in it, instead of rushing out to give parties, and getting abused for it.

Descriptions of receptions and parties as they appear in newspapers are invariably criticised, although every precaution is taken to represent them as agreeably and truthfully as possible. Mrs. D. W. Dinwiddie's reception yesterday afternoon was an exact counterpart of similar functions given by Atchison society every few days. We give as truthful a representation as possible: Mrs. Dinwiddie received in her wedding gown, originally a white satin, which had been made over with the new shade of geranium velvet. Mrs. Dinwiddie was assisted by Mrs. John Thomas Thompkins, who wore the same organdie gown which has been so frequently described in these columns. Great surprise was manifested, quietly, among the guests to find the Misses Skylark also receiving. Mrs. Dinwiddie barely knows them (so her guests remarked after they left)), but their social standing is so high, and their gowns always so pretty, that she allowed the bounds of mere acquaintanceship to be overstepped for this occasion. In the parlor were three palms, and a few straggling roses were in a vase on the piano. The dining-room was decorated with the conventional smilax and ribbon, trained from the hanging lamp to the table. Miss Kyern and her guest Miss DeSmythe served the coffee, which was cold. In the back parlor, Mrs. G. Y. Dalrymple dispensed the warm and melted ices. Miss Raisee Fallair and Miss Sara Ainsie officiated at the punch bowl, where the red lemonade was voted better than usual. Nine or ten violets were scattered on the table, and the effect was striking. Considerable regret was expressed that Miss Mae Chainey's services could not be procured, as she is always a drawing card at receptions, because of her spicy gossip. Mrs. Dinwiddie used the remainder of her refreshments at a whist party last night.

ODDEST OF ALL PETS.

Known as the Peba and Is the Latest Society Pet.

The summer girl has discovered a new fad. Not long ago it was the delight of this mysterious young lady to attach a large, sprawling beetle to a tiny gold chain and let it play at will around her throat and shoulders. But she wearied of that in a short time, when it no longer caused comment, and now she has taken up with an entirely new species of animal pet.

The little animal is about the size of a rat, and is called a peba. Do not feel alarmed if you do not know what a peba is, as few people are wiser on this subject than you are. The queer-looking little pet is some relation to an armadillo—second cousin, so the dealers say. It is imported from South America, and, as may be surmised, fancy prices are asked for it, extra fine specimens bringing as high as $100 each.

The peba is a harmless little thing, and will seldom show fight, and is slow to anger. When roughly handled it will coil up in a little ball, and its hide is covered with hard little scales, that make an armor something like the kind worn when knights were bold and barons held their sway, and is very hard to penetrate. It likes to be fondled, and the summer girl can carry it around with her anywhere and it will never attempt to escape.

Mr. Charles G. Clifford, collector of customs at the port of Galveston, Tex., owns one. He says it is as playful as a kitten. He feeds it on roaches, flies and condensed milk, and it is rapidly growing fat.—Philadelphia Times.

Facts About 1898.

The year 1898 began and will end on Saturday.

It will have six eclipses, of which only January 7 and December 27 will be visible to North America.

Lincoln's birthday will fall on Saturday and Washington's birthday on Tuesday; Decoration Day and Fourth of July on Monday and Christmas on Sunday.

Labor Day will be September 5. Thanksgiving should be November 24.

First Sunday in Lent, February 27; Palm Sunday, April 3; Easter Sunday, April 10.

The Hebrew year 5659 will begin at sunset of Friday, September 16.

On July 4 the 123d year of American independence will begin.

The four seasons will begin on these days in 1898: Spring, March 20; summer, June 21; autumn, Sept. 22; winter, December 21.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Parts We Play.

"It may be true that all the world's a stage," said the gloomy man, "but the statement that the men are players is gross flattery in most cases."

"What would you call them?"

"Supes. About 999 in every 1,000 are just plain, ordinary, everyday supes, who are not even entitled to be enumerated among the members of the company supporting the star."—Chicago Post.

MET A SWIFT HUMILIATION.

An Arrogant Father Humbled by His 12-Year-Old Son.

"It is an everlasting and incontrovertible fact," remarked the undersized man, "that pride goes before a fall. I used to have some doubts on the subject, but they have all been swept away by the events of this afternoon."

"It was a sudden conversion?"

"Yes, but it was a complete one. I am not in the habit of gloating over the misfortunes of others, but I must confess that a great wave of satisfaction went over me when I saw the proud structure of self-esteem which Fortins has been rearing all these years totter and tumble to the dust."

"Has he met with difficulty?"

"Yes. And it did me good to see how he got red in the face and then turned pale when he realized the position."

"He has a haughty manner. You see, he is a self-made man, and, as a consequence, takes especial pride in his success. Reverses cannot fail to go hard with him."

"This one did."

"You were with him when the blow fell. And instead of sympathizing with him you turn around and exult in his misery."

"Well, if you want to put it in that kind of language, it's what I'm doing. He had been talking loud and had succeeded in convincing me that I didn't know much and that what I did know wasn't of any account. He had been laying down the law on every question that came up for conversation and showing me where all the theories I had ever formed about anything from politics to boiling an egg were totally wrong. Then came the crash, the awful instant in which what seemed to be a tower of strength proved as flimsy and perishable as the decoration on a wedding cake!"

"The blow came in the shape of a telegram?"

"No. It was delivered by one of his own family. He had just settled in his chair with his thumbs in the armholes of his vest, to enjoy my silent embarrassment, when his 12-year-old son came into the room with a lot of things he wanted his father to tell him about the siege of Troy, the battle of Thermopylae and to extract the cube root."

A Woman's Invention.

Miss Jennie Wertheimer, of Cincinnati, has made a fortune by dint of her inventive talent. Three years ago she hit upon a scheme of commercial paper which would effectually exclude all possibility of raising amounts of checks, forging names or otherwise tampering with their face value. Many days she spent, with vigils of the night to perfect the system. She patented a private check system for the benefit of bankers and a plan of commercial paper which will make attempts at forgery futile. The principal feature of her invention lies in the form and composition of the draft. From the top of the note to the name in favor of whom the amount is made out the paper material has the usual thickness. But from that point it becomes as thin and transparent as tissue paper. At the same time the paper preserves its strength and durability. If the note has been tampered with in any way this will be shown by holding the paper up to the light. Miss Wertheimer sent to thirty paper manufacturers throughout the United States before she could get one able to work out her ideas. She has been offered the interest on $80,000 for the period of twenty years, and at the expiration of that time the capital is to be turned over to her.

Knocked Out.

It knocks out all calculations of attending to business in the right way for a day when we wake up in the morning sore and stiff. The disappointment lies in going to bed all right and waking up all wrong. There is a short and sure way out of it. Go to bed after a good rub with St. Jacobs Oil and you wake up all right; soreness and stiffness all gone. So sure is this that men much exposed in changeful weather keep a bottle of it on the mantel for use at night to make sure of going to work in good fix.

Stretching the Truth.

Stranger (in Arkansas)—So the poor fellow swore that he didn't steal the horse, and after you'd lynched him you found out he'd told the truth about it?

Storekeeper—Yes; and the coroner was right smart puzzled for a spell what kind of a verdict to bring in, but he finally called it "a case of stretching the truth" and let it go at that.—Judge.

Struck One.

"Oh, Jack, I am so terrified when there is lightning."

"Get under the bed and it will never touch you."

"But we have folding beds."

"Very thing. Chance for you to shut up."—Truth.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

CHRONIC RHEUMATISM.

From the Industrial News, Jackson, Mich.

The subject of this sketch is fifty-six years of age, and actively engaged in farming. When seventeen years old he hurt his shoulder, and a few years after commenced to have rheumatic pains in it. On taking a slight cold or the least strain, the trouble would start and he would suffer the most excruciating pains.

He suffered for over thirty years, and the last decade has suffered so much that he was unable to do any work. To this, frequent dizzy spells were added, making him almost a helpless invalid.

In all Sorts of Weather.

He tried the best physicians and used several specific rheumatism cures without being benefited. About one year and six months ago he read in this paper of a case somewhat similar to his which was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and concluded to try this remedy.

After taking the first box he felt somewhat better, and after using three boxes the pains entirely disappeared, the dizziness left him, and he has now for over a year been entirely free from all his former trouble and enjoys better health than he he has had since his boyhood.

He is loud in his praises of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and will gladly corroborate the above statements. His postoffice address is Lorenzo Neeley, Horton, Jackson County, Michigan.

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves are contained, in a condensed form, in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. All druggists sell them.

Power of the Heart.

The human heart is practically a force pump about six inches in length and four inches in diameter. It beats seventy times per minute, 4,200 per hour, 100,800 times per day, and 36,792,000 times per year, and 2,575,440,000 times in seventy years, which is man's appointed three score years and ten." At each of these beats it forces 2½ ounces of blood through the system, 175 ounces per minute, 656¼ pounds per hour, or 7.03 tons per day. All the blood in the body, which is about 30 pounds, passes through the heart every three minutes. The little organ pumps every day what is equal to lifting 122 tons one foot high or one ton 122 feet high—that is one ton to the top of a forty-yard mill chimney. During the seventy years of a man's life this marvelous pump, without a single moment's rest, night or day, discharges the enormous quantity of 178,850 tons of human blood.

BEWARE OF MORPHINE.

Mrs. Pinkham's Urgent Appeal to Suffering Women.

She Asks Them to Seek Permanent Cures and Not Mere Temporary Relief From Pain.

Special forms of suffering lead many a woman to acquire the morphine habit.

One of these forms of suffering is a dull, persistent pain in the side, accompanied by heat and throbbing. There is disinclination to work, because work only increases the pain.

This is only one symptom of a chain of troubles; she has others she cannot bear to confide to her physician, for fear of an examination, the terror of all sensitive, modest women.

The physician, meantime, knows her condition, but cannot combat her shrinking terror. He yields to her supplication for something to relieve the pain. He gives her a few morphine tablets, with very grave caution as to their use. Foolish woman! She thinks morphine will help her right along; she becomes its slave!

A wise and a generous physician had such a case; he told his patient he could do nothing for her, as she was too nervous to undergo an examination. In despair, she went to visit a friend. She said to her, "Don't give yourself up; just go to the nearest druggist's and buy a bottle of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will build you up. You will begin to feel better with the first bottle." She did so, and after the fifth bottle her health was re-established. Here is her own letter about it:

"I was very miserable; was so weak that I could hardly get around the house, could not do any work without feeling tired out. My monthly periods had stopped and I was so tired and nervous all of the time. I was troubled very much with falling of the womb and bearing-down pains. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; I have taken five bottles, and think it is the best medicine I ever used. Now I can work, and feel like myself. I used to be troubled greatly with my head, but I have had no bad headaches or palpitation of the heart, womb trouble or bearing-down pains, since I commenced to take Mrs. Pinkham's medicine. I gladly recommend the Vegetable Compound to every suffering woman. The use of one bottle will prove what it can do."—MRS. LUCY PEASLEY, Derby, Center, Vt.

This is what a prominent physician says: "I have given my own children the benefit of very careful study in the matter of absolute cleanliness in bottle feeding. I have studied the so-called easily-cleaned nursing bottles, and I long ago came to the conclusion that a little Pearline would render ordinary nursing bottles the safest utensils of them all. I firmly believe that children properly fed and cleanly fed will avoid the majority of the difficulties which they encounter during the first two years of life. I believe that if every feeding bottle was washed with Pearline, many innocent lives would be saved."

Surely, this is a matter to interest every mother. Nothing so thoroughly cleanses as Pearline.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana Post Office as Second-Class Matter.

THURSDAY.....January 27, 1898.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

The meeting of the democratic committeemen for the election of a county chairman, vice-chairman, secretary and treasurer will be held in the second story of the COURIER office on at 1 p. m. All are requested to be present. If any townsnip or precinct failed to elect a new committeeman last Saturday, the old member is expected to attend until new ones are chosen. Let all come, as the meeting is important.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 29, 1898,

W. J. FREDERICK,
Chairman.

THE CAUCUS.

Saturday afternoon, January 22, the caucuses called by Chairman Frederick were held. That of Union convened in the office of the county surveyor. Dr. Nusbaum was made president and D. M. Link secretary. A motion was made by C. M. Brown that we select four committeemen from each precinct instead of two, as heretofore. After considerable discussion, this was adopted. These committeemen were named as far as possible, informally, by the voters present from that precinct, though some were named by others. After being named, the meeting voted on them. The following are the new members of the committee.

PRECINCT NO. 1.

Ora Brandon, Arnold Blodgett Henry A. Winslow, Charley Prickett.

PRECINCT NO 2.

Fred Kring, Frank Lahnum, R. S. S. Reed, Calvin Kutzner.

PRECINCT NO. 3.

Geo. Baxter, Geo. Moss, John Luttman, Ed Freygang.

PRECINCT NO. 4.

Ed. Metcalf, Milo Husselman, O. P. Myers, Geo. Morr.

PRECINCT NO. 5.

D. T. Smith, C. A. Picker, Perry Long, Samuel Brandon.

Adjourned without a day. But there is a meeting of the committee on Saturday of this week, Jan. 29 in Auburn for the election of a county chairman.

It will be seen by the list of names, that members have been chosen from both parties that were united in '96. This is as it should be, as they are united in support of the same principles. A committee to select a room for meeting Jan. 29 was selected by the chairman. They are: Geo. Lanning, D. M. Link and O. P. Myers. There was a large attendance in spite of the storm.

At Ashley the meeting was in Frank Sellers' office. There were several stirring speeches, after which Warren A. Austin was elected committeeman. The other precinct met at the Center of Smithfield and Geo. May was made committeeman.

The republicans had their caucus at the same time and place but only the faithful Bill Kennedy came.

A. F. Cornelius writes that Troy township elected Roy Williams for committeeman. It is a good idea to give these young men a chance.

For Concord, the meeting was at Squire Woodcox's office, when James May, for the west, Will Curle, east, were chosen.

The Newville democrats met at the Center and elected D. J. Blair of Newville for their committeeman. The report from there speaks highly of Mr. Blair and says they are there all for Bryan and free silver.

At Jackson Center Wm. Carr was made chairman of the meeting and W. H. McCrory secretary. W. D. Miller was nominated and elected committeeman.

ST. JOE.

Oil well boom seems to have collapsed.

Orangeville had a big boom last Saturday. Adam Chubb's sale was the attraction.

H. M. Widney north of town is finding an extensive green house in fact is just putting on the finishing touches and we presume Mervin, will soon have 1898, vegetables to tickle the palates of the St. Joeites.

Rev. Clark of the Christian church preached one of his very best sermons at the Christian church last Sunday night and was listened to by a very large and attentive audience.

Ralph Cole and family of Garrett visited over Sunday with the family of Simon Wineland and other friends.

BRUTAL WRETCH

Crazy With Bug Juice Nearly Killed His Mother and Sisters.

Ed Bevington, the 18-year-old son of Mrs. Jas. Bevington, a widow of Hicksville, O., went home at noon Friday in a drunken fit and cruelly beat his mother and two sisters.

On entering the house with no word of warning, knocked down his mother then whipped her until she lay in a helpless heap upon the floor.

This did not satisfy the drunken man so when his two sisters came in he locked the door and proceeded to beat them, only in a more brutal manner. After finishing his deadly work he left the house and went up town, avoiding the crowd. A neighbor lady Mrs. Gessinger, attracted by the cries for help, called at the Bevington house, and there found the three helpless women lying face downwards on the parlor floor. She at once summoned help to care for the wounded family, also to look after the drunken son, and in less than two hours the boy who had so brutally treated his helpless mother was in the hands of Sheriff Eiser.

Just as the county official was taking him to the jail, Bevington unexpectedly dealt him a severe blow which rendered him senseless, and thus made good his escape. The city marshal, with a large posse of deputies were on his track and Saturday evening he was recaptured and taken to Defiance and placed in jail. The mother and daughters have recovered, but they are very seriously injured.

CUT HIS FINGERS

Will Rohrabaugh an employe of the Kiblinger factory met with a painful accident this morning. He was working a planer and got his finger too close and a part of it was sliced off. Dr. Stamets dressed the wound assisted by Dr. Baxter.

HE IS CRAZY.

This morning Sheriff Stroh and Marshal Potter went down near New Era after Surley Rickey, who it is reported is mentally unbalanced. He sits up nights and with a double barreled shot gun watches for someone, who he imagines is trying to break into his house.

They returned to the city about noon with their prisoner and he was taken to jail, to await further action.

THE SAD DETAILS.

A COURIER reporter learnt from S. P. Imhoff, the sad details of the death of Irvin Imhoff, as noted in Monday's DAILY. His home was at Mansfield, and he was on a freight train between Mansfield and Fremont, Ohio when the brake took a sudden hard hold of wheels and caused what trainmen call "car combustion," and threw him off the top of car landing on his back with his feet and ankles across one of the rails. The rest of the train crew soon discovered that one of their cars was partially wrecked and also that Mr. Imhoff was not with them. The train was backed up and he was found and taken to Fremont where his feet and ankles were amputated and his wife sent for. He regained consciousness after the operation and taking his watch in his hand waited patiently for the train that was to bring his wife. When the time arrived and she did not come he was told that the train was late. He immediately laid down his watch, straightened himself out and expired. His remains were brought to Waterloo Monday for interment. It is seldom one hears a more pathetic story of these railway accidents that have become so common. He is said to have been a young man of promise.

A 99-Cent Horse.

Ed Fox held the lucky number, 99 that drew the horse which was raffled off at Joe Pfefferl's lunch room last evening. The numbers sold, were at the rate of a cent a number, a very common plan. Thus, the first ticket sold was 1 cent, the second 2 cents, and so on. Ed bought the 99th ticket and so it cost him 99 cents. It is said the horse is not so bad an animal and that Ed has an offer of $20 for it. Some men are born lucky.

Coronado Beach

We have received a lovely pamphlet from Charles Eckhart, devoted to the grand resort on the Pacific, Coronado Beach, near San Diego. It is one of the most noted resorts in the world and probably one of the most enchanting. This book contains many views of the big hotel, the grounds, the bay etc, and make it plain that Mr. and Mrs Eckhart are having an enjoyable winter, going through places like this.

PRESIDENT DOLE.

Of The Hawaiian Republic Passed Through Auburn.

Tuesday's Daily.

President Dole of the Hawaiian Republic, passed through Auburn today on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad train No. 8, at 2:30 p. m. en route to Washington, where they will arrive at 11:50 a. m. Wednesday. The party occupied one of the Baltimore & Ohio, official cars, and was under the personal escort of Mr. T. W. Cridler, third assistant secretary of state, and Major Heisland, military attache of President McKinley. During the journey the party will pass through the thickly settled portion of Ohio, making brief stops at such points as Defiance, Tiffin, Mansfield, Newark, Zanesville, etc. Wednesday morning they will pass through the historic battlefield country along the Potomac River between Cumberland and Washington. The party was escorted over the line by representatives of the Baltimore & Ohio passenger department.

OBITUARY.

Jacob I. Frager was born Aug. 7, 1818 died Jan, 19, 1898. Aged 79 years, 5 months, and 12 days.

He was a native of Columbiana Co., Ohio. When he was four years of age his parents moved to Stark county, O, where he grew to manhood. He was married to Lydia Spangler, Oct. 14 1839. The next year he entered a forty-acre tract of land in Williams county, Ohio, and in 1841 they moved upon it and began the struggles and privations of a pioneer life. There was born to them five sons and three daughters, Manley, Elias S., Josiah B., Leander, Wm. W., John W., and Harriet M., Mary L., and Martha M. The latter departed this life in 1883. His five sons reside in the state of Kansas, one daughter in Minnesota, and Mrs. Mary L. Daniels in DeKalb Co. Ind. In 1878 he was bereft of his faithful wife and he groped along in great loneliness until in the year 1888 he was married to Margaret Smith who survives him. Over twenty years ago he moved upon the farm just north of John Campbell's and some five years later to his last residence in Waterloo. He has ever been known among us as a man of sterling, worth, irreproachable character, of indomitable will and great industry. That relentless disease, cancer of the stomach attacked him over two years ago and conquered after a fierce struggle He was a devout man to the end, having been confirmed in the Reformed church in October 1839. There being no organization near, he was a constant and welcome worshiper with other denominations, whose ministers found an open house and generous hand ever ready at Father Frager's. Thus the end of a long journey was finished. Last Sabbath at the M. E. church his funeral was largely attended, conducted by Rev Eclougher assisted by Revs. Butler and Zechiel. Several members of the Spangler family from Williams county Ohio, followed the remains to the Waterloo cemetery.

LET NO MAN

Put Asunder That Which God Has Joined Together.

Clerk Long has issued marriage permits to the following persons since Jan. 1: Jas. A. Steele and Nora P. Tappen; A. L. Ober and Eesie Cocarower; W. Gump and Lona Widmer; Geo, Felty and Geneva Bevier; Geo. E. Harverstock and Mabel Treck; Julia H. Hill Hulda Widmer; John Ulm and Minnie Tustison.

BAD FALL.

Geo. Swander stepped through a hole in the sidewalk just east of the Central House, a little before noon and nearly broke his leg below the knee. D. W. Jenner, the proprietor of the hotel, with Jesse Hurni and Nathan Johnson, came to the rescue. He was put on a handsled and taken into the hotel, and then Jenner got a team, Mr. Kutzner's we believe, who took him home. Swander thought the limb was broken. Dr. Hines was sent for and attended him.

GAS MEETING

There will be a meeting of all citizens interested in putting down another gas well, on Tuesday evening of next week, Feb. 1. All our people are earnestly requested to turn out and help to get the matter started. Meeting will be held at 8 p. m.

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railway. Notice to Stockholders

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railway Company, for the election of seven directors to serve for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may be presented at the meeting, will be held at the General Office of the Company, in Grand Rapids, Kent county, Michigan, on Wednesday, March 2nd, 1898, at ten o'clock a. m. Books for the transfer of stock will be closed from February 20th, 1898, until after the meeting.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

THEY ARE WHOPPERS.

Mr. and Mrs. John Newman Weigh 602 Pounds.

About ten miles south of Lagrange on a pleasant farm lives Mr. and Mrs J. W. Newman the heaviest married couple in this or adjoining states.

The family consists of three sons and three daughters, whose aggregate weight is nearly 2000 pounds, and one of the daughters is over six feet high. None of the children weigh less than 200 pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Newman are 66 and 57 years of age, respectively. Mr. Newman weighs 292 pounds, while his better half weighs 18 pounds more. Mr and Mrs. Newman moved there from Stark Co., Ohio, when children. The carriage used by them, ordered for their special use and drawn by a handsome pair of bay horses, is a novel affair. The wheels are low, and the running gear is extra strong.

The family is as well known throughout that vicinity for its warm hospitality, sociability and geniality as for its weight. Mr. Newman is a veteran of the late war.

ASHLEYS FUTURE.

The future of the town of Ashley is not very bright if we may judge by the newspaper reports. There is a bare possibility that the shops will be removed to Montpelier. The Fort Wayne Sentinel says:

When the new station building of the Wabash, at Montpelier, Ohio, is completed, the trainmaster who is now located at Ashley will transfer his headquarters to Montpelier, The trains on the Eel River branch will then be handled from the latter place instead of Peru.

OBITUARY.

Irvin S. Imhoff was born in DeKalb county, Ind., Nov., 26, 1873; died in Fremont, O., Jan. 22, 1898; aged 24 years, 1 month, 26 days.

He grew to manhood in and about Waterloo, residing with his father, Theo. E. Imhoff. He was married to Jessie McEuterfer, Aug 30, 1896. Soon after he moved with his wife to Massillon, Ohio, and was employed as a brakeman on the Wheeling & Lake Erie R. R. and was highly esteemed as an efficient man. He lost his life in a wreck while on his run at Fremont, O. His young wife and babe, Lynn Adelbert, eight weeks old, survive to mourn the early widowhood and orphan's life. He was a tender and affectionate husband and father, full of hope and industry. The remains arrived in Waterloo Monday p. m. accompanied by the sad wife and sister. The funeral was held at the U. B. church conducted by Rev Yager, assisted by Revs. Butler, Erlougher and Zechiel, and the burial took place in the Waterloo cemetery.

The funeral in spite of adverse conditions, was largely attended, 312 persons viewed the remains, aside from the immediate friends and relatives, who numbered 40 more. The pall bearers were: Wm Rose, Geo Crooks, Ellsworth Montavon, Ed. Wareham, P. Becker, A. P. Bartholomew, chosen from the Odd Fellows, who had charge of the closing exercises and at the grave.

COMING HOME.

D. D. Moody Has Sent For His Home Clothes.

Mrs. D. D. Moody who has been out in the country for a time, with her people, was in town Saturday having received a letter from Mr. Moody, asking to have his clothes sent to him at Michigan City. He expects to be home on Saturday of next week, Feb. 5. He was sent up on March 6, a year ago and gets a month of "good time" for having conducted himself properly. That brings his stay to Feb. 6, but as that day is Sunday, he will be liberated Saturday. Mr. Moody will at once resume the practice of law in Auburn for which purpose his son Alta is preparing on office and will have it fitted up ready for him. His well known ability and general popularity with his patrons, will no doubt bring him business. No one believes he was an intentional criminal, but that his trouble was caused by his reckless business habits. We hope this severe experience has resulted in his adopting better business habits and careful application to his profession. In this way he can, and we hope will, secure the confidence of our people and his own future success. We believe in giving every man a good chance to redeem himself.

A HEALTHY WIFE.

Writes of Dr. Hartman's Free Home Treatment

Mrs. F. M. Badgett, 819 New street, Knoxville, Tenn., writes a letter for publication, which she desires all her suffering sisters to read. She writes: "When I was 16 years old, I suffered with female weakness of the worst kind and spent all I had trying to get cured. I tried several of the best physicians, but they all failed to cure me. I gave all hope of recovery. Finally Dr. Hartman's treatment was recommended to me by my teacher, who also lent me the money to get medicine which Dr. Hartman prescribed. I took the treatment and it cured me. I am now a healthy woman, weighing 194 pounds, and I owe it all to Dr. Hartman's treatment. I am sure I would not be living now if it had not been for his treatment. I cannot help recommending it to all sufferers, and will answer all inquring letters."

Any woman wishing to apply for Dr. Hartman's free home treatment has only to send age, symptoms, duration of disease, when the doctor will prescribe the proper treatment. The medicine can be obtained by each patient at the nearest drugstore. Each woman should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on the diseases peculiar to women, called "Health and Beauty." Sent free to any woman by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

What Wives Should Remember.

(Boston Globe)

That Adam was made first.
That "he pays the freight."
That "blessed are the meek."
That nine men in ten detest gossip.
That all angels are not of your sex.
That confidence begets confidences.
That men sometimes have "nerves."
That there should be no place like home.
That it takes two to prolong a family jar.
That the least said is the soonest mended
That with all his faults you love him still.
That you should have no secrets from him.
That husbands have troubles of their own.
That he's "all right" when you know him.
That woman's best weapon is her ak 1234.
That home is more than half what you make it
That he is just as anxious to get rich as you are.
That wives are unusully favored in this country.
That his typewriter cannot help it if she is pretty.
That he likes to hear that the baby is his dead image.
That six pairs of slippers are enough for any man.
That a man likes neatness in your attire at all times.
That candy in the excess is worse than rum in underation.
That you should not run up bills without his knowledge.
That "a baby in the house is well-spring of pleasure."
That she who puts on the gloves should know how to spar.
That he is not in love with every woman he glances at.
That it is policy to let him believe he is "lord and master."
That your relationship is closer to him than to your mother.
That prompt and pointed answer does not turn away wrath.

A Croup Cure

is what many a mother is looking for; something absolutely safe and reliable, that will disarm her terror of that dread rattling, strangling cough, so fearful to the mother, so fatal to the child. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a croup cure that can be relied on. Thousands say so.

MRS. W. J. DICKSON ("Stanford Eveleth") writes from Truro, N. S.:—

"That terror of mothers, the startling, croupy cough, never alarmed me so long as I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house."

"We have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in our family for years. Once when our boy had a severe attack of croup, we thought that he would die. But we broke up the attack by using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

R. H. COX, Plancheville, La.

is put up in half-size bottles at half price—50 cents.

That he does not get sleepy the same moment that you do.

That there are letter drop-boxes on the near-by corners.

That you should not expect him to light the fire in the morning.

That you can't keep books, and there is no use of your trying.

That he expects you to look your best when you go out with him.

That it does not improve his razor to use it for chiropodical purposes.

That househunting is not reckoned by the average man as a pastime.

That 8 p. m. is 60 minutes past 7 o'clock, not 15 minutes to 9.

A $10 BILL.

(Philadelphia Record)

Anamusing incident occurred a few days ago at Broad street station. An old gentleman, while passing through the waiting room, stopped and picked up a ten-dollar note from the floor and quickly put it in his trousers pocket.

A young man near by noticing this, at once claimed the money as his, but the old gentleman's opinion on that point was somewhat different, and a heated argument ensued. The matter was explained to a ticket agent at the window, who referred the two disputants to the head agent to settle the question of ownership. They were ushered into the private office of the arbiter. After a lively discussion the old gentleman finally became indignant and, drawing his hand from his pocket, he threw the note on the desk, exclaiming. "Here, take the old ten dollars!" As the agent was unfolding the note a large smile overspread his features, and he showed them it was not a ten dollar note at all, but an advertisement of a leading house in this city. The young man's face flushed scarlet, and looking neither right nor left, he uncermoniously rushed from the office through the depot, and disappeared.

THE INGALL'S LECTURE.

The Juniors should feel proud of the number and quality of their audience. It was a lecture to call out the thoughtful and the student, and those who came were richly repaid for braving the rather forbidding weather. Mr. Ingalls is just what we have all seen in his pictures and read in his speeches. He was the same thin, intellectual man we had learned to know by sight and his speech was a masterful and scholarly one. It was strong and the strength of his voice and force of delivery surprised and pleased all as they watched the frail body standing upright with martial bearing and dealing out his thoughts with that energy that showed he was in earnest and that carried conviction to all who listened. He had thought deeply on living economic and political subjects, and was able to give his conclusions with the clearness and force of a trained and able statesman. The lecture was rather long in point of minutes on the clock but altogether too short for most of the listeners. He dealt largely with the great questions now arising among the American people chiefly with reference to American citizenship and the rights and opportunities of Americans, in the struggle for life and success in life He said that two great ideas underlie all our national policy, equal rights to all and equal opportunities to all. He went on to show that while some of these seem to be now denied us, yet in the main, the man who failed to profit by his opportunities was himself largely to blame. There was much subject for thought in what he said, and all through there was a quiet vien of sparking wit that added spice to it all. Let the Juniors rejoice at the success of this second lecture.

Growth of Greenlanders.

Greenlanders get their growth when about 23 years old. The oldest persons known are about 60 years of age. Every person has a sack for telling his age and each sunrise (once a year) a bone is put into his sack.

SHE IS GONE

About three weeks ago Mrs. George Balts and her children quietly packed their goods and left for parts unknown —to many Auburn people. She writes back that her children are in school and have a large school room, fully three times larger than the Auburn school room. Her property interests here were placed in the hands of a neighbor who will carefully look after it for her. Her reason for leaving Auburn was on account of domestic trouble, the particulars of which most of readers are familiar.

Yes.

A bicycle has been invented in which the sprocket revolves faster than the pedals. That is to say, the machine goes one and one-half times as fast as the man who rides it. If you can see into this proposition, you know more than we do.—Ex.

COURT.

Hon. J. D. Ferrall, of Lagrange has been occupying the bench this week, the chief cases being that of Lockhart vs Kline and Osborn, and the divorce between Ed Webb and his wife.

The Lockhart-Kline case is brought to settle an old account. It seems that many years ago in 1880 and 1881, Lockhart bought lumber etc of Kline & Osborn, and at settlement, Lockhart took a note for the balance due him of $500. This note he afterwards sold to the Kinney Bank but did not full settle with the bank for some years. Then Mrs. Lockhare, who owned an interest in the old Opera House at Waterloo, traded her interest to the bank and took the note. She now sues for the $500. Mr. Lockhart also claims that Kline and Osborn owe him still more, on a running account, which he says may bring the sum due him up to $1000 or $1200. On the other hand Kline & Osborn claim that when they gave that note, that it was to settle in full all they owed Lockhart. And the also say they think he owes them. It is a jury trial. Lockhart's attorneys are Judge McBride and Shuman and Pomeroy. The attorneys for Kline and Osborn are J. E. & J. H Rose. It makes a pretty hot fight.

MRS. MISER DEAD.

G. S. McCord of the Schaab Furniture Co. reports Mrs. John Miser living near Chris Buss' north of town died having passed away at 12 o'clock last night. The funeral services are Thursday at 10 a. m.

Thursday's Daily.

—Miss Bertha Shaffer was over from Garrett today.

—J. K. Stafford and Mr. Patterson of St. Joe were in the city to day.

—Mrs. A. J. Ralston and Mrs. Mary McDowell are at Angola, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott and other friends

—Goshen has young men, who steal the jewelry of dining room girls. The long advertised "meanest man" must look to his laurels.

—Nappanee has a new postmaster, though the retiring officer had two years yet to serve. But as in case of Leighty and the pension agency, the new man was hungry and couldn't wait.

—We hear a good many compliments to attorneys Pomeroy and Baxter for the fight they made in the show case, both before Justice Walborn and before Judge Roby. They held on to Prof. McKay till they got his scalp.

—Don't annoy others by your coughing, and risk your life by neglecting a cold. Our Minute Cough Cure cures coughs, colds, croup, grippe and all throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord sells it, —Since Dr. Schlatter, over in Switzerland, removed a woman's stomach, and she still lives, others have been trying the same experiment. Two surgeons in this country have performed similar operations. If this fad keeps up, it will soon be that no man's stomach will be safe.

—Children and adults tortured by burns, scalds, injuries, eczema or skin diseases may secure instant relief by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is the great Pile remedy. By H. B. McCord.

—Whooping cough is the most distressing malady; but its duratian can be cut short by the use of One Minute Cough Cure, which is also the best known remedy for croup and all lung and bronchial troubles. For sale by McCord.

—James Kannel, a merchant of Metz Steuben county, is missing. He leaves aver $1000 indebtedness. His stock of merchandise was valued at $6000 but was sold for $4000 before he left. Reports are that he has been living a fast life and that a woman was the cause.

—What pleasure is there in life with a headache, constipation and billousness? Thousands experience them who could become perfectly healthy by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. By H. B. McCord.

—Tuesday evening, Miss Stella Tarney, entertained the other teachers of the public schools, at the home of Mrs. Zorah Shaffer. It is not necessary to say it was a very enjoyable affair. Miss Tarney though one of the youngest, has a already shown herself a worthy co-worker in our corps of able instructors.

—After yeaes of untold suffering from piles, B W. Pursell of Knitersville, Pa., was cured by using a single box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema, rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this remedy. For sale by H. McCord

—L. E. Lane has returned from Chicago, where he has been negotiating for the sale of his patent starching machine. He has already, a chance to sell valuable territory. People who are versed in this kind of work, say his starching machine is a grand thing and will revolutionize laundry work. We hope to see him reap solid benefit rom it.

A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created—they are the ant, the bee and DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the last being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

—L. E. Lane came home from Chicago yesterday noon. He was near by when that building was wrecked by an explosion of natural gas, in fact too near to be comfortable for a few minutes. The whole front of the building was blown out, and of course there was a good deal of damage done inside, as the building was a large restaurant. The police at once formed a line around the front of the building and kept the crowd back, so that but little could be seen, but it is estimated that the loss is near $15,000. Luckily no lives were lost.

—We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter orbetter way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung trouble that can follow neglected colds. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—The Hicksville Independent gives the particulars concerning the B. & O. wreck as follows: "A broken rail on the B. & O. just east of the river bridge at St. Joe was the cause of about thirteen loaded box cars being thrown from the track and piled up in wild disorder early Tuesday morning. Fortunately no one was injured. Bert Patterson, of the firm of Patterson Bro's. & Olds, was in the caboose, coming from St. Joe to Hicksville, and as that car did not leave the track, Mr. Patterson is inclined to think that it was his weight that held it on the rails He probably has no desire to become mixed up in another such scene,"

—A boy at Warsaw, slipped on the ice and fell on the point of his lead pencil. He bled to death. Pencils are also said to be alive with deadly microbes and a certain city has talked of putting up a $1400 furnace in which to roast their school pencils, including slate pencils, each night. Truly, we are beset by dangers. We are glad we got through school before the microbes got us. But then, if we believe half that the friends of "Prof." McKay are telling the COURIER man is too tough for a microbe to tackle.

—John Brown, of Arcola, was run down and killed by a Pennsylvania passenger train yesterday morning.

—Neat and up-to-date work, at fair prices has made the COURIER job rooms popular. We had to have two extra hands this week.

—Mrs. A. L. Garfield of Eaton Rapids Mich. is visiting the family of James Griswold. She is an old acquaintance of theirs.

—James Griswold was 79 yesterday. But he is still in pretty good heart and health for a man of his years. Many will not reach the same limit in any shape.

—The Hotel Bradford is becoming quite popular with the traveling public and from the large list of names on the register, we judge that Landloed Ralston is enjoying prosperity.

—W. B. Brown has a position as traveling agent over twenty-four counties in this part of Indiana and Ohio, for the McCormick people. It is considered a responsible position and very desirable. It will take all his time.

—Judge McClellan was in the bank yesterday for the first time in about five weeks. He is slowly gaining strength and we hope may be fully restored to health. The trained nurse who has attended him was discharged several days ago.

—Harry Stafford writes the COURIER from Galatea Ohio, that all moves well with him. He says a man from that section, Mr. Garvin, has come to Auburn to see about drilling for gas or oil. He recommends him as an excellent man, and thoroughly reliable. That is the kiad of a man we want, if we make any further efforts in this line.

—W. C. Patterson of St. Joe was here yesterday and we had the good fortune to meet him. It required a second look to recall the name that belongs with the familiar face. Will used to be one of our teachers some seventeen or eighteen years ago, and has made his life a success. He is now the cashier of the St. Joe Bank, and a member of the "Big 4" drygoods house They also have a store at Hicksville, and we are glad to note are doing well all around. As we understand it, the "Big 4" is now only "3," the members now being M. E. Olds, and W. C. and Bert Patterson. If we are right in this, then there is reason for the "solid" appearance of the boys, as each must represent 1-3 of one of the original members. How is it?

—At the lecture last evening we noticed many people from the country, who had come in to hear this noted man. Among them were A. B. Walsworth and wife, J. Y. W. McClellan and wife, and D. T. Smith. People in the country, can have nearly as good a chance to hear lectures, shows, etc., as if they lived in town. And they find it pays to take these things in.

At the recent poultry show at Columbia City one man exhibited two opossums that he had caught somewhere. One night the "varmints" got loose and went for the chickens, and before they could be made to stop, one was killed. The other was placed under a barrel and in the morning was found dead. Or, perhaps he was only "possuming," and came to life again after he had been thrown away. Such things have happened with these cute animals.

—The stationery printed in this office is giving universal satisfaction. Last week we printed a thousand statements for a man, and by their aid he has already collected a small fortune. Two months ago a young man bought some paper and envelopes to use in writing to his sweetheart—he's married now. Another young man forged the name of a friend on a check printed here Another young man stole some of our paper to make cigaretts with—he died. A malden lady bought some paper to curl her hair on. She's got a beau now By using our stationery persons can collect old accounts, tell fortunes, make rain, change the color of their hair, have their teeth extracted without pain, find out the name of their future husband or wife, be successful in business, triumph over your enemies and be elected to office.

—Judge McClellan is up and looking even better than before. He thinks he is in better condition than he has been in for 15 years.

Saturday's Daily.

—Dr. D. J. Swarts and Dr. F. M Hines went to Waterloo at noon, to attend an autopsy. Dr. Darby of Waterloo had written to them that the death of Jacob Frazer furnished the subject for a very interesting autopsy. We did not learn particulars but presume the doctors can give more when they return.

—Don't grope in the dark. Take the bandage of preconceived prejudice from your eyes. Let your palate tell you whad is good rather than your grocer. Taste FOX'S XXXX Square Wafer Butter Crackers and be your own judge.

—Harry Draggoo starts for a three months' trip soutu next week. He expects to spend a part of the winter in Old Mexico. It will be a delightful trip for winter.

—Dr. Matheny and Mrs. E. J. Beaty went to Fort Wayne today, where the latter will have her eye operated on by Dr. Wheelock.

—I. H. Groh, of Ricland, has thanks for recent favors.

—Mrs. Barns went on the noon train to Angola where she will visit a few days with Mrs. C. H. Jackson, Mrs. Harry Scott and other friends.

—Mrs. M. A. High, of Jackson was a caller today. She is now making a specialty of fine farm butter and is delivering it to their customers here.

—The little boy of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Patterson, had an arm sprained this morning. Mrs. Patterson dressing the little one, and a sleeve that was too tight caused the trouble. It has been properly treated, and will not likely prove serious.

—Our old friend Barney Dearborn sends in his subscription to '99 and has thanks. Though he has been afflicted many years, he never loses his grip on business principles.

—Now, the story comes from Chicago, that H. H. Holmes the wholesale murderer was not hanged in Philadelphia last year but that a corpse was jerked instead, while he hustled off to South America. We are sorry to hear it. And the story is thin.

—A chemist at Alexandria, this state has invented a plan by which limestone can be made into and valuable wool. And just to think, Auburn has no limestone!

—Cal Hosler, wife and son, Jesse, of Fort Wayne, came up today and are guests of the family of Wm. Buss, and Miss Libbie Hosler. The ladies are sisters to Mr. Hosler

—E. H. Gilbert and G. W. Hutton have letters in the postoffice which have not been called for.

Monday's Daily.

—Mrs. George Bishop jr is among those who are under the doctors care.

—Extra copies of the Delinquent tax list may be had at the COURIER office for 5 cents.

—Jonas Miller, at Millersburg, will soon start for Seattle, to be ready when spring opens to go to the Klondyke mines.

—Indianapolis has a curfew law that went into effect last week. When the factory whistles blow at 8 o'clock in the evening, the boys and girls scamper for home.

—Middleburg, in Elkhart county is going to put down a well for oil. They have formed a company and let the contract to put one down 1400 feet, and see what they can get.

—Ed Koons was in the city over Sunday, the guests of his parents and friends. Ed has a good position with a big clothing, boot and shoe establishment at Garrett.

—A letter this morning from Will Clark states that he will be stationed at Fort Levenworth, Kan., 20th Infantry and adds, "I like the service very well, but cannot do without the old trustworthy COURIER."

—Father Edward Kœnig of the Catholic church died at Ft. Wayne Saturday. The funeral will be at that place on Tuesday at 9 a. m. He was a native of Westphalia and came here in 1865 and for many years pastor of St. Paul's church. His age was about 70.

—Whenever you know of any social event of any kind, we should be pleased to have you tell us all about it. There is scarcely an evening that there are not from one to half a dozen such events which are not mentioned by us for the good reason that we know nothing of them. We will very much appreciate the kindness of anyone who will inform us of all such at any time.

—Goshen Democrat:—A stone was thrown through one of the windows of a sleeping car No. 10 Tuesday afternoon, as it passed a point just east of town. Conductor M. W. Morgan wired from Goshen stating that the act was committed by a small boy. Claim Agent Beck and Officer Miller went out to Allendale, but were unable to find any trace of the lad.

—Expert Ernst has made his report to the county board at Goshen. He says the auditor's books are all right, and he found nothing out of the way except a shortage of $740 in the county's school fund principal. This he thinks was caused by clerical errors that happened some years ago, and does not in any way effect the present office.

—B. F. Pence, of Concord, was a caller today.

—We are sorry to learn that the little child of Oliver Pipes, at Garrett is dead.

—Mrs. Julia E. M. Hodge united with the M. E. church by letter last evening.

—Mrs. H. H. Hilgeman and daughter Gertrude of Ft. Wayne are here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Korff and sister, Mrs. J. Schlink.

—J. W. Wilson of Mansfield, Ohio and Henry Kline of Corunna were the guests over Sunday in the family of M. Kline.

—Saturday was the total eclipse of the sun. It was visible only in Southern Asia, but the skies were clear and favorable.

—Lewis Crays, of Kansas is in the city visiting his cousin A. J. Burk. He has for the past three months been visiting friends at Waterloo and Ashley.

—Mrs. John W. Baxter has almost fully recovered, from her recent long sickness and was able to attend church last night. We are glad to note this.

—Geo. D. Saxton a brother of President McKinley's wife, has just had a judgment of $30,000 against him for alienating the affections of another man's wife. He is a wealthy resident of Canton, and able to pay the money.

—Kalamazoo now comes to the front with a lost or missing man. His business affairs are all straight and yet he has been gone about two months. Auburn never has had such cases. The people here like the place too well to run away and leave it.

—The Garrett Herald heard that the DAILY COURIER lost 57 subscribers by taking the right side in that show matter. She truth is, and our books show it that we lost exactly 5. And our books also show that we gained much more than we lost.

—Al. Bevard of Garrett met with a serious runaway on our streets last week. His buggy was completely wrecked and the harness was considerably damaged and the horse injured, The smashup took place on north Main street.

—The Sunday Cincinnati Enquirer contained a picture of Auburn's big elm tree which stands between Main and Jackson sts, near Mrs. Burk's residence, together with an interesting writeup.

—The remains of Mrs. C. C. Shaffer were taken to Bluffton on the 3:05 train this afternoon. A large number of our people accompanied the friends to the depot. The funeral will be tomorrow from she home of her daughter.

—There was a splendid meeting conducted at the jail yesterday afternoon and one person who has been seeking the Lord at the Lutheran church was converted in the meeting at the jail. These meetings are resulting in much good.

—Another microbe has been discovered. It is the little bug that causes whooping cough. The next microbe we shall ask to have cornered is the fool bug that gives boys a taste for cigarettes. Trot him out and let every sensible man take a shot at him.

—Charlie Speer, W. F. C. Francis, Mike Kiplikger, R. M. Lockhart, Chas. Voss and James Wenrick were down from Waterloo today. We think they were witnesses in a trial. Mr. Wenrick is still suffering from lameness caused by a hurt last fall.

—A band of Christian crusaders under command of Capt. C. S. Rennells of Michigan has begun a series of gospel meetings at Waterloo. They have rented the Reformed church, for some years abandoned, and expect to remain there several months. The band consists of twelve members.

—Judge McBride is here from Indianapolis as attorney in a case brought by Mrs. R. M. Lockhart of Waterloo, against Crain and others. The Judge's people are well. Bert, at Cincinnati has been promoted to a higher clerkship. He is employed by a fast line transportation Co.

—Our people will remember Rev. T. C. Smith, former pastor of the Baptist church in Auburn and will learn with regret the death of his daughter, Frances, at Roger Williams University, at Nashville, Tenn. She was a member of the faculty of the University and had been employed there some time. Her death was rather sudden. She was a young lady of high promise and her untimely death comes as a heavy blow to a large circle of friends.

—A young man who gave his name as James Johnson was arrested at Fort Wayne yesterday. When searched at the police station a valuable gold watch was found on him. The fellow said he was a press-feeder and gave the name of James Johnson. He acknowledged that the watch did not belong to him. but had been given by a friend to sell. Johnson says he was to meet his friend, the owner of the watch, in either Fort Wayne or Auburn. He was sent to jail for twenty days for vagranoy, and so we need not look for him in Auburn.

—J. M. Weber, the south end lumber dealer is getting his new sheds nearly completed. No where in this section of the state can there be found a building which is more complete for the purpose for which it was built. Mr. Weber has a thorough knowledge of the lumber business and as soon as his new stock of building material arrives and is placed in the sheds he will have something to offer to those who contemplate building, which, for first-class in quality and low in price, has never before been offered. He has erected a building which is not only convenient, but is a credit to the town. It is a magnificent structure and well built.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Loutzeohuser were callers at the COURIER block on business yesterday.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Miss Zoe Sommers returned last evening from Ft. Wayne.

—The first early ships to the Klondyke start from Seattle Feb. 5.

—FOUND on South Main-st on Saturday a pair of spectacles. Owner call here.

—Snow fell six feet deep in the streets at Petoskey, Mich. Sunday night.

—Miss Ada Gfeller of Waterloo is visiting her aunt Mrs. Mary McEntarfer a few days.

—Geo. Weeks was down from Edon a few hours this afternoon. He made us his usual welcome visit.

—Surveyor Krontz is sufficiently posted on the duties of his office now, that he is doing the work alone.

—Rev. Meese will contine his meeting at the Lockwood church this week. He has been meeting with fair success —Antwerp is anjoying an epidemic of turkey stealing. The thieves were caught and made to whack up.

—J. William Wagoner was over from Garrett yesterday looking after some business matters.

—W. W. Stimely went up to Ashley last night. He is working up the new Ashley-Hudson-Pleasant Lake-Angola telephone line.

—BORN:—A son to Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Rohm last night. Reported by Dr. Buchtel. Mrs. Rohm will be remembered as Miss Dora Bowen.

—Saturday was Chinese New Year. On that day they pay all their debts and start anew. That is better than the American plan of "swearing off."

—Congress is trying to pass a bill, that any woman who marries a veteran after this, shall never have a pension. That looks pretty thin.

—The senate will "call up for vote" on Thursday. Teller's resolution to pay the bonds in silver. It may pass the senate but probably not the House.

—Chicago has the old roller skate craze. They started Sunday forenoon, in a contest to skate twelve hours without stopping.

—The new hay barn of Jerry Carmer at the Lake Shore is quite convenient for storing hay when cars cannot be had. The barn was erected a few weeks ago.

—John Groscop is recovering from a very severe case of Iretis a dangerous eye trouble, under the care of Dr. I O. Buchtel.

—Mrs. Frank Eckhart who has been quite sick is improving under Dr. Nusbaum's care and her contemplated trip to California has been postponed —Arthur Nelson who has been attending school at Angola returned to his home today. He lives near St. Joe.

—L. J. Miller our veteran grain buyer has an option on 10,000 bushels May wheat @ 92 cents which he will let go of when the proper time arrives.

—Judge Roby yesterday morning bought the residence property of the late Jane Tefft estate which has been in court for some time. The consideration was $1200. This is one of the most desirable sites for a home of any we know of off Main street. The Judge will probably erect a handsome dwelling here this summer. The sale was made by the First National Bank who held the mortgages.

—Charles McClellan, A. C. and Ed Robbins started today for Rhinelander, Wis., where they will look up the advisability of locating the Defiance elm hoop and stave factory. The industrious people of that city, are very anxious that they should locate a mill there and state that there is an abundance of timber. Their trip up there is to investigate the latter statement.

—Drs. Baxter and Thompson together with J. P.'s Walborn and Walters held an insanity inquest for Surley Rickey this a. m. at the jail and from the answer given to questions asked by the doctors they decided his place was in the asylum. He said his name was G. F. H. Brown, that he was stolen when a child, that if his mother had lived she would have been the second queen of England, and that he never had a wife and children which plainly shows he is mentally unbalanced.

Children unconsciously say cute things, Charlie Rafter has one of this kind. The other day their little girl, got naughty, and the mother had to punish the little one. While her tears were still fresh her papa came in and asked what was the matter. She answered that mamma had just punished her. "What for?" asked papa. "For Jesus sake, amen," came the answer, with a little sob.

—The revival services at the Lutheran church are continuing with increased interest twenty-five have professed faith in Christ. The subject for this evening will be, "Too Late: Matt. 25: 10-12. An invitation is extended to all. Revival services are held in our church not only for the purpose of gaining members, but more expressly for the purpose of lifting men and women to a higher life, and thus improving the morals of our town. Let every christian be interested in these services

—Miss Lillie Fell came near meeting with a serious accident. She was lighting a fire when the brimstone from the match flew into the wool of an outing flannel wrapper which she had on. Quick as a flash it ran up her arm, and with a stroke of the other hand she smothered the flames about as quickly. It might have resulted in a painful accident.

—40 acres taken on foreclosure for sale at what owner has in it ½ down, balance 6 per cent. No trade.

CIRCLING THE GLOBE

CONCISE HISTORY OF SEVEN DAYS' DOINGS.

Intelligence by Electric Wire from Every Quarter of the Civilized World, Embracing Foreign Affairs and Home Happenings.

The Cuban Capital Falls.

Havana special: According to information from Spanish sources, Gen. Castellano being aware that the insurrent Government was established at Esperanza, in buildings constructed by the insurgents, seventeen leagues from Puerto Principe, proceeded in that direction with 2,500 infantry, 400 cavalry and two field cannon. After three days' trying march, he forced a difficult position on the fourth day, and overcame the obstinate resistance of 1,000 insurgents, destroying and burning the houses at Esperanza, including the insurgent government buildings. The next day Gen. Castellano engaged the re-united insurgents, 2,500 strong, near Esperanza. He routed them after two hours' combat. The insurgent loss is believed to be numerous, but owing to the density of the woods, it is difficult according to the Spanish account, to ascertain the full extent of the defeat.

Murderer Merry Guilty.

In the case of Christian Merry, the Chicago peddler, charged with wife murder, the jury returned a verdict finding him guilty. Smith, his alleged accomplice, was found not guilty. When the verdict was read Smith jumped to his feet and shouted for joy, but Judge Horton sternly commanded him to sit down. "Bring me a warrant," said the Judge. "I want this man rearrested as an accessory to the murder after the fact and I want him indicted by the grand jury." This had the effect of cooling Smith's spirits, but he soon recovered them and looked pityingly down on his fellow prisoner. "Chris, old boy, I'm sorry for you," he said as he held out his hand to Merry. "Cheer up, may be things won't be so bad after all. Congratulate me any way on my end of it." But Merry was in a daze and holding out his hand mechanically remained silent.

Horrible Fate.

A horrible fate intercepted W. C. Hoge of Neveda, Mo., on his journey home to meet his wife, with whom he was about to become reconciled. He fell under a Memphis freight train at Fulton and his clothes and portions of his body were found at Liberal, Mo., three miles distant. He was mutilated beyond description, but was identified by an affectionate letter from his wife pleading with him to stop his dissipation and return to her under promise that she would dismiss a pending divorce suit. As much of the body as could be gathered in a basket has been sent to his wife at Nevada.

Looks Like War.

Victoria (B. C.) special: Orders have been received at Esquimault by Rear Admiral Palliser from the admiralty instructing him to have every vessel in his fleet ready to start for China on forty-eight hours' notice. Immediately all was bustle around the dock yards, the crews of the different vessels being busily engaged rushing coal and provisions on board. Then came an order for her Majesty's ship Pheasant to start on her trip across the Pacific at once, she being nearer ready than the others.

Thrilling Escape.

The British steamship Stockholm City arrived at Newport News, Va., from Manchester with saloon, cabin, bridge, wheelhouse, and all woodwork amidship burned. Officers and crew are almost naked, having lost most of their clothing. The fire started in the bunkers, and many times it looked as if the ship and all on board were doomed. The loss to the vessel is $50,000.

Four Were Killed.

The British steamer Mareca, Capt. Land, which arrived at Cork on January 8, from Baltimore, and was bound for Newport, is ashore west of St. Govens Head, southwest coast of Wales. Thirteen of the crew are safely landed, but four were killed on board the steamer from some cause, and six who left in a boat are missing.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Jan. 24.—Fanny Rice in "At the French Ball."
Jan. 25.—Joe Murphy, "Kerry Gow."
Jan. 27.—"The Hearthstone."
Jan. 31.—"Under the Red Robe."

Disastrous Fire.

The Harrison Block and several other establishments at Spencer, Ind., were destroyed by fire. The loss was $30,000. The entire town was threatened for a time.

Fatal Explosion.

By the explosion of an engine boiler on a farm near Galesburg, Ill., Oscar and Stephen Anderson were killed and Lloyd and Will Meadows seriously injured.

Mormon Missionaries.

A band of 200 Mormon missionaries has invaded the border counties of Virginia and North Carolina. The farmers don't like the proselyting families, and have served notice on the elders to leave. No violence has been offered.

Express Office Robbed.

At Amsterdam, N. Y., the office of the American Express Company was robbed and Benjamin F. Oliver, the agent, assaulted. The robbers secured $572. No details are known, as Oliver was unconscious and badly injured.

Robbins Weds Too Often.

Burr Robbins, the Toledo aeronaut, has been sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary for bigamy. He has several names, and, according to his own confession, a greater number of wives. He has confessed to eight marriages. The last one was the one which caused his trouble.

Mrs. Curtis is Divorced.

Marian R. Curtis of Kansas City, Mo., was granted a divorce from Millard C. Curtis, the defaulting assistant cashier of the American National Bank, and given the custody of their boy. Curtis was a club and society man, and absconded in March, 1892, owing the bank $12,000.

CHECKED BY MILD WEATHER.

Distributive Trade Rather Quiet and Prices Steady or Rising.

Bradstreet's commercial review says: "Distributive trade remains rather quiet, mild weather throughout the country tending to check distribution of winter goods. Prices generally remain steady or tend upward, except for some grades of iron, and orders for spring trade where received are encouraging. A feature of the week was the placing of an order by one railroad for 100,000 tons of steel rails, with smaller orders, aggregating in the neighborhood of 25,000 tons more. Pig iron production is now at an unprecedented rate, the furnace capacity being estimated at 1,000,000 tons a month. Anthracite coal production, it is hoped in that trade, will be restricted sufficiently to allow of the advance of 20 to 40 cents a ton being maintained. Weather has been disappointing at the Northwest, but an improvement in the demand developed at some centers as the week advanced. The rush to Alaska has already begun on the Pacific coast. The recent falling off in wheat exports prove to have been due to the usual holiday quieting and not to any falling off of demand from abroad. The total export of wheat (flour included as wheat) from the United States and Canada for this week amounted to 5,135,166 bushels, against 3,481,000 bushels last week. Corn exports for the week show a gain of 1,000,000 bushels, amounting to 4,641,000 bushels, against 3,455,000 bushels last week."

GRIEVANCES OF RAILROAD MEN.

Brotherhoods Confer with the Officials at Cincinnati.

Delegations of the brotherhoods of railroad men to the number of forty from all branches of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad and another delegation from all divisions of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad gathered in Cincinnati. The committee of the former road called first at the office of Superintendent Galloway of that road. The visit was followed by a secret session at the hall. The railroad division superintendents went to Cincinnati the previous day and with Galloway held a secret conference. Their decision did not suit the railroad employes. The men involved are engineers, conductors, firemen and freight handlers. They number at least 1,000. The engineers and firemen want pay for working overtime. They also demand that men be promoted or given favorable positions according to term of service and efficiency. The freight handlers object to being paid by the day, about 90 cents. The division superintendents have decided to effect this tonnage method of payment Feb. 15. The railroad men also demand that the blacklist be lifted from the American Railway Union. The delegation to the Big Four will call on M. E. Ingalls, president.

Wife of Whisky-Loving Miner Caused a Sensation in an Arizona Saloon.

While the Cabinet saloon in Prescott, A. T., was crowded with hundreds of people Mrs. Bell, the wife of a mining man, entered with a babe in her arms and, placing it on the bar, left it there with this farewell: "The father of this child deserted me and my babe, caring more for whisky than for either of us. I wish to tender now his child, so that his appetite may be gratified to the extent of the deposit." There was a rush for the youngster, seventy-five men coming forward to ask for the waif. The probate judge was called in to settle the controversy and took charge of the child.

To Traverse Canadian Snows.

There is a strong movement on foot at Toronto, Canada, in the interests of the James Bay Railway scheme, and a large deputation has waited upon the Ontario Government with the object of securing aid in building a railway from Toronto to Sudbury, and from thence north to James bay. It is unanimously admitted that in the interests of western Ontario this road is an absolute necessity. Speaking upon the subject, J. W. Tyrrell of the Dominion geological survey, who has spent years in exploring the region about Hudson bay for the Canadian Government, sad that any communicating line north from the Canadian Pacific Railway to the Hudson bay country must redound to the interests of Ontario by bringing down a large amount of trade. He referred to the official reports as to the immense value of the whaling grounds, now used almost exclusively by American whalers. When it is considered that a single white whale in oil and bone is valued at from $10,000 to $20,000, it is not difficult to conceive the possibilities of a successful whaling voyage. The wealth of the Hudson Bay company was in itself an evidence of the wealth of that region in furs also.

Maker of Bogus Coin.

Acting Chief Brackett of the treasury secret service at Washington has received word that Agent Harris of the bureau had captured, after eight months of hard work, one of the most skillful and dangerous counterfeiters of silver dollars in the country. The capture was made near Armond, in the central part of California, and the man, who gave his name as J. W. Richardson, was taken red-handed, surrounded by the materials of his work. With him were captured steel dies, a press, a corrugated collar, a furnace, a lump of nugget silver and some coins. He has confessed that he made the dies and did all the work himself. A curious thing about the case is that the dollars he made are 99 per cent pure silver and their intrinsic value is greater than the genuine coins. The workmanship is fine, and the difficult milling is perfectly done. The silver used was evidently smelted in California, as it contains a trace of gold, and it was this fact that first made the officers search for the counterfeiters in that State.

Fire at McKeesport, Pa.

The Yester block, a large office building in McKeesport, Pa., was destroyed by fire. The block was erected two years ago at a cost of $100,000. The first floor was occupied by Yester's jewelry store and the loss to the stock will reach $40,000. Bedell's gentlemen's furnishing store will lose $10,000.

Measure Will Bar Americans.

The Ontario legislature has passed a bill providing that no persons shall be employed in the construction of subsidized railways in Ontario who are subjects of any country which has an alien labor law which practically excludes Canadians from employment on public or other works therein.

Kyburz Saw Gold Discovered.

Samuel E. Kyburz, who arrived at Sutter's Fort Oct. 18, 1846, died at Shingle Springs, Cal. Kyburz was in the employ of Sutter, and guided Marshall to the famous sawmill site on the south fork of the American river, where gold was first discovered in California.

The amount of property which went up in smoke and flame last year was $100,824,500, the lowest record since 1883.

How Dreyfus Was Convicted.

With every show of authority the Pall Mall Gazette of London prints prominently an article purporting to give the inwardness of the Dreyfus case and explains that the document, in addition to the Bordereau on which the Government found the prisoner guilty, was obtained in the following manner from the German military attache, Von Funke: Nine or ten months before the arrest of Dreyfus Von Funke was suddenly removed from his post. The explanation of his removal throws a curious light on the Dreyfus case and explains in some measure the attitude of the Government. When his predecessor, Baron von Huene, left Paris he handed Von Funke a list of persons in France who were in relation with the German intelligence department, enjoining him never to let it out of his own hands. Von Funke carried the document in a leather bag around his neck. Shortly after entering upon his duties, an incident occurred whereby a woman of ill repute obtained the document and took it to the foreign office, where it was hastily photographed and returned to her, she returning it to Von Funke, who, in the meanwhile, had discovered his loss and, like the honest soldier and attache, hastened to inform the German Government of his mishap, hence his recall. Curiously enough, the woman refused compensation, though a large sum was offered her. With the photograph of the document the French Government went deliberately to work, and I am assured on authority that it leaves no room for doubt that the name of Dreyfus appeared on it, but it being a common name, in both Germany and France, suspicion did not immediately fall on the officer subsequently condemned. Later it served as confirmatory evidence.

MAY USE LAKE SHIPS.

The Government is Making Inquiries of Vessel Owners of Toledo.

Lieut. A. T. Ovenshine, Fourteenth Infantry, U. S. A., was in Toledo, O., securing data concerning the sail and steam ships in Toledo harbor, with special regard to their practicability for use as transports for troops. The lieutenant was acting for the War Department at Washington and simply completed negotiations that have been pending for several days between the War Department and the Pennsylvania Railroad. He took the names of some twenty-five Toledo vessels and twenty tugs, together with full information as to the capacity of each for carrying troops and supplies, and the length of time it would require to fit each for sea duty. Lieut. Ovenshine enjoined secrecy upon all the parties with whom he conferred. It is supposed that the action of the department indicates the possibility of intervention in behalf of Cuba at a very early period. Should a necessity arise it would be possible to use lake craft to take troops direct to Cuba from Toledo.

THEY ASK AN OUTLET.

Merchants and Farmers of the Texan Southwest Want a Railway.

Citizens of Texas, southern Kansas, northeastern Oklahoma and Indian territory are determined to have a shorter railway line to St. Louis. They have constructed twelve miles of track from Henrietta, Tex., without 1 cent of working capital. Stock was issued to a number of farmers and merchants, who paid for it by work upon the roadbed. The farmers in many instances worked themselves, while the merchants hired teamsters to take their places in constructing the roadbed. When completed the road will run from Henrietta, Tex., through southern Kansas, northeastern Oklahoma and Indian territory to a point east of Chetopa, Kan., on the Southern Kansas line. This road will connect with the Gulf and the Brazos railway at Henrietta and will afford direct communication with the ports of Velasco and Galveston. Merchants and farmers along the line of the proposed road are endeavoring to secure the co-operation of the St. Louis business men.

Plays on Mouth Organ While Bullet Is Cut from His Arm.

Leo Veshey, a 5-year-old boy, while playing with a crowd of youngsters at the corner of Third and Locust streets, in St. Louis, was shot in the arm with a cat rifle. He was taken to the city dispensary, where Dr. Johnson probed for and removed the ball. While the surgeon was performing the operation the boy held a mouth organ in his other hand and played "All Coons Look Alike to Me."

Postoffice Burglars Escape.

James Murphy, George Woodruff and George Gordon, postoffice burglars, have made their escape from the Federal penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kan. The men dropped behind the other prisoners in coming out to breakfast and taking advantage of a heavy fog, scaled a twenty-foot wall by means of a rope ladder and were gone some time before they were missed. All three of them were convicted in Montana of breaking into postoffices.

CUBAN DEBATE ENDED

DISCUSSION CAUSES A HOT TIME IN THE HOUSE.

Speaker Reed and Congressman Bailey Clash on Veracity—Attempt to Spring the Belligerency Resolution Defeated—Bayonets Bring Calm in Havana.

Turmoil in the House.

All day Wednesday the question of granting belligerent rights to the Cuban insurgents was argued in the House, but as on the preceding day the minority hurled itself against a stone wall. On the only vote taken Wednesday—a motion designed to overrule the decision of the Speaker and direct the Committee on Foreign Affairs to report without further delay the Cuban resolution passed by the Senate at the last session—the Republicans stood solid and voted to sustain the chair.

The galleries were banked to the doors, and there was considerable excitement throughout the early part of the session when the members of the minority were successively pressing all sorts of amendments bearing on the Cuban question for the purpose of embarrassing the majority. During the general debate Chairman Hitt of the Foreign Affairs Committee made an impressive speech of less than an hour, explaining at length the situation which made action by Congress inadvisable. He asserted that the President must assume the responsibility of any action which might eventuate in the war and appealed to both sides of the chamber to patriotically support the executive if a crisis shall come.

A sensational ending marked the third and last day of the debate. Speaker Reed, in unqualified words, stamped as false an assertion made by Congressman Bailey, the floor leader of the Democrats, and turmoil ensued.

Notice was given Wednesday by Mr. Williams (dem., Miss.) that at the conclusion of the debate Thursday a motion would be made to recommit the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, the basis of dispute, with instructions. Thursday when the motion was made by Mr. Bailey it was ruled out of order by Speaker Reed. Mr. Bailey thereupon startled the House by affirming that he had a private understanding with the Speaker by which a vote should be taken directly on the motion to recommit. This the Speaker emphatically denied, and these two leaders of their respective parties in the House, with white faces and voices shaken by emotion, set their statements each against the other, while the galleries looked on in breathless amazement and the members were in an uproar. Mr. Smith of Michigan, who said he was present, corroborated the Speaker's side of the case.

The result of the Speaker's position was that an appeal was taken from his decision, and by a strict party vote the appeal was laid on the table—168 to 114—the Democrats and Populists, as on the two previous day, voting against the solid Republican strength.

The debate Thursday was not as interesting as on either of the two preceding days. The features were a characteristic speech by Champ Clark of Missouri, a strong appeal for conservatism from Mr. Johnson (rep., Ind.), and a presentation of the result of his observations in Cuba during his recent trip to the island from Mr. King (dem., Utah).

De Lome Fears a Crisis.

Senor Dupuy de Lome, the Spanish minister, fears the debate in the House of Representatives may cause a crisis. Thursday he called at the State Department, and for over an hour was closeted with Judge Day, the assistant secretary. He expressed extreme regret over the speeches made by the Congressmen, and especially that of Mr. Hitt, which, he said, might inflame the Spanish populace to some overt act, such as driving Minister Woodford and the United States consuls from Spain before such demonstrations could be checked by the Spanish Government.

"Expressing extreme regret" is the diplomatic mode of making a protest without bringing about an international complication. The Spanish minister was apprehensive particularly of the effect of Mr. Hitt's speech, because of the prominent position he occupied as chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. He pointed out to Judge Day that because of the excitement in Spain over the Cuban question, the reports of such utterances as that of Mr. Hitt would have the effect of further stirring up the people. He also regretted extremely the unusual activity in the navy yards. The manufacture of guns, ammunition and other utensils of war is being pushed along more rapidly than for years, and Senor de Lome told Judge Day that his people could not regard this activity otherwise than preparation for war, in anticipation of some radical move on the part of this Government. He explained to Judge Day that, while he personally knew the feeling of the administration to be friendly, the people of his country had to take the talk in Congress and the reports of the activity at the navy yards at their face value, and that his information would go for nothing with them.

BAYONETS BRING CALM.

Military Force Quells the Spirit of Revolt in Havana.

Advices say that absolute calm now reigns in Havana, and it is difficult to realize that a few days ago the city was apparently on the verge of a revolution. Although the rioting was practically over on Friday night, troops continued to be poured into the city Sunday. Gen. Bernal arrived from Pinar del Rio on that morning with a force estimated at 2,000 men and bivouacked in the railroad yards, in Prado, where most of the forces still remain. About the same time a column of 1,000 cavalry rode in and found quarters in the Cuartel de la Fuerza. In Cuba street, on the artillery wharf, batteries of field artillery were planted in position to rake Cuba and Chacon streets. It is estimated that fully 12,000 were in the city, in addition to the regular garrison.

There was much speculation as to the cause of such extraordinary precautions, in view of the fact that the city was apparently tranquil. The usual parade of the volunteer palace guard in the Prado was permitted, but a cordon of regulars kept the crowd at a distance, permitting no one to approach the volunteers or to cross the park.

There is no question that the bitterest feeling against Gen. Blanco and autonomy is entertained in conservative circles and among the volunteers and in the army. The volunteer officers are open in expressions of hostility, and the regulars are no less hostile, but are generally more guarded in their utterances.

A regular officer said that Gen. Blanco would have to go, and if the regulars are ordered to fire on the volunteers or people he believed they would refuse to obey.

Several officers and men have notified Gen. Blanco that if he continues to spend money to win over rebel chiefs instead of paying the troops they will take matters into their own hands. Long arrears of pay are still due to the soldiers, and great dissatisfaction is caused thereby.

CHIEF OF GOTHAM POLICE.

John McCullagh Is at the Head of the Force in the Big Metropolis.

The police commissioners of New York City have appointed Acting Chief John McCullagh chief of police of the big metropolis. McCullagh is a solid citizen of comfortable fortune, who has been upon the force since 1870. In 1872 he was made roundsman. He was advanced to sergeant in 1876 and to captain in 1883. McCullagh became a conspicuous member of the department as captain of the sixth precinct, where he fought the evils of Chinatown and the remnants of the notorious Whyo gang.

FIND FLAWS IN SYSTEM.

Senators Believe Changes Are Needed in the Postoffice Department.

During the investigation of the civil service by the Senate committee, Chief Clerk Bailey of the chief examiner's office, civil service commission, advised a general reclassification of the Government offices. The present grouping, he declared, was accidental, based on salaries, while he believed it should be based on the kind of work done.

The debate over the letter carriers service continued at some length, Hoar strongly appealing for additional appropriation to prevent a reduction in deliveries. Allison, chairman of the Appropriation Committee, expressed the opinion that there was a defect in the administration of the free delivery system, that the appropriation was either not equally divided between cities or that the Postmaster General's estimates to Congress were too small.

Wolcott said that he desired to call the Senate's attention to the real basis of the trouble with the financial affairs of the Postoffice Department. "It is well understood," said he, "that second class mail in this country absorbs 65 per cent of the expenses of the Postoffice Department and supplies only about 3 per cent of the revenues. This is the serious point of this discussion and if Congress should enact into law a measure relating to second class mail matter which can be laid before Congress a recurrence of the present difficulty will be obviated." Wolcott then called attention to the opposition of the publishers of New England to the enactment of the bill restricting second class matter.

Allen of Nebraska thought the great point involved in the discussion of the postoffice finances was the charge that there was an annual leakage of from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 on account of underweighing mail matter.

QUEEN OF THE GOLDEN WEST.

Miss Klevesahl Has the Post of Honor in an Francisco's Jubilee.

San Francisco is about to celebrate the jubilee of the discovery of gold in California. The festivities will be on an elaborate scale. In connection with this event Miss Minnie Klevesahl has been proclaimed "Queen of the Golden West." She is one of California's most beautiful native daughters. She was born in San Francisco about 20 years ago and has grown up to womanhood in the glorious climate. She has the bright beauty that life in the ozone and oxygen of the coast confers on California women, and she is most popular among the young people of the metropolis of the Golden State. Miss Klevesahl is a half blonde. Her eyes are dark blue and she has a head of beautiful brown hair.

NO MORE NEW STATES.

New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Arizona Must Wait Awhile.

The House Committee on Territories has been considering the Arizona, Oklahoma and New Mexico statehood bills for several days and will probably be ready to make a report next Friday. These territories have sent strong delegations to Washington to plead for statehood, but it is more than likely that the urging will be in vain, for the committee seems disposed to make adverse reports on all three bills. It is felt in Congress that a mistake was made in admitting two or three Western territories into the sisterhood of States, and that a further mistake might be committed by taking in either New Mexico, Oklahoma or Arizona at this time. Nevada, with a voting population of less than ten thousand, is perpetually an example ever in view to deter Congress from being too hasty in matters of this kind.

DENVER'S WAR IS ENDED.

Big Stores Abandon Their Fight Against the Newspapers.

After a fight lasting nine days, the advertising department stores of Denver which attempted to dictate rates to the local daily papers, made an unconditional surrender. The lesson of the last ten days is a clear demonstration of the value of advertising, for during that time the big stores were empty, and clerks were employed to scrub floors and windows in a vain effort to find work to keep them going during business hours. A number of small concerns that took advantage of the boycott to begin advertising found immediate results, one house having to call for the police to keep back the crowds, while the large places were practically empty.

CONGRESS

Two hours of Saturday were devoted to general debate in the House on the army appropriation bill, and the remainder of the day to eulogizing the life and public services of the late Representative Seth W. Milliken of Maine, who served for fourteen years in the lower branch of Congress. The Senate was not in session.

Monday was District of Columbia day in the House, but only three bills of local importance were passed. The remainder of the session was devoted to further consideration of the army appropriation bill. The debate was particularly notable for a vigorous speech by Mr. McClellan of New York, a son of Gen. George B. McClellan, attacking the present army organization as obsolete and inefficient. Mr. Lewis of Washington also made a speech that attracted attention, in denunciation of trusts, which, he declared, were threatening the liberties of the country. The consideration of the army appropriation bill was not completed. Quite unexpectedly Senator Hanna appeared at the opening session in the Senate. Mr. Foraker, the senior Senator from Ohio, presented Mr. Hanna's credentials for the remainder of Mr. Sherman's term, which will expire March 4, 1899, and asked that the oath of office be administered to him. Mr. Foraker escorted his colleague to the desk, where Vice-President Hobart administered the oath. Senator Wolcott delivered a speech explaining the work of the bimetallic commission. By a vote of 45 to 28 the immigration bill was passed. The rest of the day was devoted to consideration of bills on the calendar.

Cuba had a hearing in the House on Tuesday, and for a time it looked as if parliamentary precedents would be set aside and the Senate resolution recognizing the insurgents as belligerents would be attached as a rider to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. Mr. De Armond, a Missouri Democrat, precipitated the issue by offering the resolution as an amendment, but a point of order against it was sustained. Mr. De Armond appealed, urging the Republicans who had professed friendship for the struggling Cubans to override the decision of the chair as the only chance of securing action on the proposition. Mr. Bailey, the leader of the minority, and other Democrats joined in the appeal. The excitement became intense, but the appeals of Mr. Dingley, the floor leader of the majority, as well as other Republican leaders, to their associates not to join in the program, succeeded. Before the diplomatic bill came up the army bill was passed. In the Senate practically the only business accomplished was the passing of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill. The measure as finally passed by the Senate carries $1,013,810. The Teller resolution providing that bonds of the United States may be paid in standard silver dollars was favorably reported by a majority of the Finance Committee, and notice was given that it would be called up at an early date. An effort was made to fix a time for the final vote on the pending census bill, but was abandoned.

All day long on Wednesday the question of granting belligerent rights to the Cuban insurgents was argued in the House, but the minority hurled itself against a stone wall. On the only vote taken—a motion designed to overrule the decision of the speaker and direct the Committee on Foreign Affairs to report without further delay the Cuban resolution passed by the Senate at the last session—the Republicans stood solid and voted to sustain the chair. In the Senate a joint resolution providing for the appointment of a commission to make a survey of a ship canal from the lower part of Lake Michigan to the Wabash river was offered by Mr. Turpie (Ind.) and referred to the Committee on Commerce. Mr. Chandler presented and secured the passage of a resolution directing the Committee on Interstate Commerce to inquire whether the fund provided for in rules 16 and 17 of the Joint Traffic Association is lawfully in existence; to examine the details of its expenditure, as to whether or not it had been expended for lawful purposes, and whether any illegal or improper use of the funds could be prohibited and punished by law.

On Thursday the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill was passed by the House after a day of debate on the Cuban question. Mr. Dingley made a speech relative to wage reductions in the cotton industry, in which he showed that the tariff question has nothing to do with them. In the Senate Mr. Teller's resolution that bonds be paid in silver as well as gold was taken up by a vote of 41 to 25, and, after debate, was made unfinished business. Mr. Pettigrew secured the passage of a resolution directing the Secretary of the Interior and the Attorney General to inform the Senate what steps the Government had taken concerning the killing of a woman in Oklahoma territory by Seminole Indians and the burning of two Seminole Indians in the same territory. The resolution inquiring of the Postmaster General what action was necessary to maintain the excellence of the postal free delivery service was agreed to. Mr. Tillman's resolution extending the authority of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee relative to the investigation of the giving by railroads of transportation for any other consideration than cash was also passed.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Wheat Prospects in the State—Inhuman Parents Left a Baby in an Empty House—Farmer Who Thinks He Is the Devil—Gas Explosion.

Indiana Wheat Crop.

Deputy State Statistician Will Egnew of Wabash is receiving reports from the township trustees over the State relating to the acreage of wheat sown last fall. Nearly all of the ninety-two counties have been heard from and show that the acreage is practically the same as was sown in 1896. Many farmers who did not intend to put out wheat sowed as late as Nov. 1, owing to the warm autumn. The reports also show that, while the plant does not look as strong and healthy as it did last winter, its condition has improved since the drouth of the fall months, and the statistician thinks the crop will be a fair one next summer.

Crazy Over Religion.

Nathan B. Davis, a farmer near Columbus, has gone raving mad over religion and imagines he is the devil. He is of a large, muscular build, and it is almost impossible to keep him from killing himself and everybody he sees. The other night he broke his bindings and severely injured two of the seven attendants before he was subdued.

Parents Desert a Baby.

George B. Howe and wife, well-known residents of Jackson township, living on a rented farm, have disappeared, leaving a 2-year-old child in the deserted house. It was not discovered for two days, when its weak wail attracted the attention of passing neighbors. The child was nearly dead for want of food.

Bostic Killed by the Cars.

William Bostic, aged 56, living near the Wabash river, while attempting to cross the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad track at Farmersburg, was caught by a train and instantly killed. Bostic leaves a wife and large family.

Hurt by an Explosion.

An explosion caused by a leak in gas connection wrecked the Sheridan brick works at Sheridan. Three persons were injured and the property loss will amount to $5,000.

Takes Her Husband's Life.

"Link" Mitchell, a farm hand employed nine miles west of Indianapolis, was shot and killed by his wife. He was about to strike her with a stick of wood.

Evans Johnson, an aged gunsmith of Carthage, came near dying from nitric acid poisoning. He bought a bottle of nitric acid for gun polishing and a bottle of cough medicine for a cold. He got them mixed and in the dark took a dose from the bottle containing acid.

Charles Smith, a glass blower whose home is somewhere in Pennsylvania, was found dead in his bed at Redkey. Smith and a few of his friends were drinking pretty heavily the day before, and wound up by eating two to three cans apiece of tomatoes, and as a result he ruptured a blood vessel while trying to unload them.

A company of Elwood capitalists has been organized and will erect a sugar beet plant in that city. Sugar beets will be cultivated this year and the farmers' crops are being contracted for at the rate of $4 per ton. Tests made last year show that twenty-five tons can be raised to the acre in the soil around Elwood.

At a secret session of the Indiana Federation of Labor held in Anderson, at the suggestion of the Indiana Labor Commission an organization of all labor organizations in the State was effected for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear on Geib & Kauffmann of Washington, who locked out 300 coal miners last May and imported negroes from the South.

THE HAPPIEST HEART.

Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Ay, none shall nail so high his name
Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,
And left to Heaven the rest.

A NEW MEXICAN EPISODE.

BY CLAIRE POTTER.

The sun shone hotly on Anita ranch, which lay like a small excrescence on the dun-colored earth. The adobe house, the fences, the corral, all wore the sun-baked shade of the level ground. The silence was not a strange and dreamy thing, as is usual in solitude; 'twas a hot, fierce, aggressive silence, which seemed to challenge disturbance. No bee or flying thing buzzed in the air, and, as far as eye could reach, no shade came between the fiery sun and the flat gray mesa.

The wind, always defiant, blew bravely across the sagebrush, carrying with him the remonstrant breath of the sun, who protested against the persistent rivalry and would not give him full sway. Their competition gave life to the cattle on the range, to the suffering cowboys, and to the small group of people on the ranch-house portel.

The sloping roof gave shelter from the sun's rays, and the wide-open doors through the long hall caught every whiff of the erratic wind as he, still warring with the sun, blew here and there.

A low hammock occupied the most shaded spot, and in it swung a girl. Her face was dark and small and her little head was covered with a thick, short crop of black curls; her eyes were very large and darkly gray. All else about her was small—the tan-colored shoes, the slender hands, the scarlet mouth—and she took but a speck of room in the wide hammock, forming a piquant contrast to the two men beside her. They were both tall and athletically built; their skins were of the same color as the house and earth, with a liberal dash of added red. One was pronouncedly dark; the other blue of eye and yellow of hair. Even before they spoke they were proclaimed Englishmen. The darker one, Frank Farringden, turned toward the girl and said:

"Well, Jack, when did Harry say he'd come up from Santa Fe? With that fuss over at Ortegas, and Slawson, the manager, gone, you'll be left quite alone, won't you?"

"Oh, yes; but only for two nights. My [illegible] is coming back on Saturday; there's no one to bother."

The girl put one toe to the floor and swung forward, showing the "gun" which graced the carved Mexican belt. This belt held together the corduroy skirt and white duck blouse; a scarlet silk scarf was knotted around the brown throat, and a large, heavily buckled sombrero lay on the floor beside her. Looking out over the mesa, she said:

"The sun seems to be standing still out there. You should have visited your cousin earlier, Captain Charteris. I'm afraid you'll take back lurid accounts of his adopted land."

The Captain replied with the deep, mellow voice of his country:

"Well, really, Miss Delancey, the country is beastly bad; but Frank seems to find the people all right."

"The people!"—a pleased mockery in the shrill American voice. "That must mean us, for we are really the only people about here. Well, Harry, is a nice boy, but Slawson and Augusta Victoria can't be called social ornaments. Then there's myself; but I—— Now, Captain Charteris," rising in the hammock and swinging forward directly in front of him, "will you tell me if I am different from English girls—very much worse, I mean? Now please tell; I want to know truly and honestly."

"Oh, really, Miss Delancey, girls are about all alike, you know, only English girls are more kept in the background, and that sort of thing."

"But, Captain Charteris, if an English girl lost her father and mother when she was only three, and had had to live out here with her brother, because he wouldn't live anywhere else, and she wasn't—well, wasn't real deadly strong herself, would she have been very different from me?"

There was an appealing earnestness in the high voice and a breathless interest in the dark eyes. Charteris looked at her with cool admiration, replying that he would answer her question at another time. She sank back half-dissatisfied and hummed a song.

When the sun showed the first symptoms of descending the men mounted their horses and rode away. Farringden turned in the saddle and called to the girl, "We'll stop with the mail on our way home."

* * * * * *

How different was the old adobe hours later, when the sun had given place to his fair rival, the moon. The hot grayness had all gone, and the parched, unlovely earth looked cool and soft in the clear light. The sagebrush and cactus plants were temporarily given a tint of silvery green, and the wind, fickle fellow, seemed conquered by the gentle moon, for hand in hand they searched every nook and corner, blessing all living things as they went. The portel seemed another spot, as it lay in a flood of milky rays; the chairs, the table, the dusty hammock—all seemed freshly covered with shining satin. The girl was in the same position, but the corduroy gown had given place to a white one, and the scarlet kerchief had pale to rose. The rebellious hair had been smoothed until it lay in dusky rings about the face which the moonlight had whitened, and the tender rays turned to pink the two scarlet spots—were they of expectation?—which burned beneath the glowing eyes. The sombrero's place on the floor was taken by a mandolin, which slipped from the hands of its owner as she started from her lazy swinging in the hammock, her accustomed ear having heard the pressure of horses' hoofs against the hard ground long, long before the riders could be seen. Listening more intently she soon knew there was but one horse, one rider. The expectancy was ended when Capt. Charteris slid from his horse, tied it at the gate, and walked toward the house, idly swinging the leather mail bag as he came. Once under the portel, he threw his hat on the floor and sank into a low chair beside the girl.

"Poor Frank went on to catch the train for Santa Fe. Your brother wrote and urged it. Bah! it's a nasty ride from Ortegas!"

The man broke the silence.

"Sing something—something Spanish."

Jack played a soft chord on the mandolin and sang a tender serenade. As she finished he leaned over her and said gently:

"You shall have the answer to the question of this afternoon now. How can I compare you to other women, you who are so strangely different, so intoxicatingly charming?" He leaned nearer and took, unrebuked, the tanned fingers in his own. "You are the result of this strange life and climate, and I—oh, you know how I feel! You have shown your power over me since you first raised those eyes to my face; and when I hear you sing, then—then you know you hold me, soul and body, as no woman ever did before. You know it, don't you, Jack?"

Unclosing her eyes as from a dream of bliss, she laid her hand lovingly upon his shoulder.

"You don't understand me, Captain Charteris. I suppose I am not like other girls, and it takes a long, long time to understand me."

Charteris hid a smile with his hand. The pleading voice was in his ears, the red mouth near him, the eyes shining unconscious love in his face, and the moonlight, the wind, the echoes of the song roused his slow senses, and putting his arm around her he whispered in his melting voice:

"Jack, do you love me?"

There was no shyness in her rapt face, as she drew nearer and murmured:

"Oh, yes; yes, I do love you, and I was so afraid you would never understand."

The smile grew broader on the Englishman's face as he ardently kissed her, and the mistaken moon incautiously threw a glamor of tenderness into the steely eyes, while the vibrating little creature, with her head on his heart, accepted the moon's soft blandishments, and worshiped on.

The intense stillness of the summer night seemed to ask for music, and Jack drew the mandolin toward her, playing slowly that sweetest Spanish air "Media Noebe." While her fingers were on the strings, Charteris, after whispering "Carissima, querida chiquita" in her willing ear and again kissing her, strolled to the gate and mounted his horse. She sat still, a bright bit of color in the vivid moonlight; and as he rode away, waving his hat as he went, she played with all the strength in her quick hands, sending after him a flood of melody which sounded in his ears long, long after the agile broncho had borne him from view.

She slept to dream over the last act of her life, and awoke to redream it as she wandered restlessly about the house or swung in the hammock. Harry and Farringden would not return for two days.

"Surely Harcourt," she wispered the name blushingly to herself, "would come again."

Seeking shelter from the heat in the long hall, her eye fell on the forgotten mail bag; for occupation she unstrapped it.

There were no letters for the Anita ranch, but several for Farringden, and a London newspaper which had been opened, read and refolded. She aimlessly unfolded it, glancing over it uncomprehendingly until a penciled paragraph attracted her eye. This read: "The marriage arranged last winter between Captain Harcourt Dene Clifford Charteris and Lady Evelyn Maud Branksworth will be consummated on June 20 at St. George's, Hanover Square. This marriage will be an exceedingly important social event, owing to the prominence of both bride and groom, the former being the second daughter of the Earl of Alwyn and the latter the prospective heir of his uncle, Lord Walforth, of Walforth House, Surrey. Captain Charteris will shortly return from the American Southwest, where his long stay has completely restored his health." The paper was still firmly grasped in her stiffening fingers. She did not change her position; the brown face turned a sallower shade, and the eyes had a glowing fierceness. She neither cried nor spoke, but mechanically refolded the paper and replaced it in the bag.

Night came again; the moon came back to the old portel, and with the wind played a sweet duo in the accustomed way. But there was no appreciative grace in the heart of the small creature who sat here. With windburned face and raging heart she looked out over the broad stretch of prairies where only last night all had seemed a vision of beauty. Suddenly she leaned back her head and called, sharply, "Augusta Victoria!"

A slib-like Missouri girl, the domestic pivot of the ranch, appeared in response.

"Well, Miss Jack?"

The black head lowered, and the tan heel struck the floor several times before the question came:

"What was Jose up here for this afternoon, and why did he slink away around the corral, or," quickly lifting her head and looking into Augusta Victoria's eyes, "is he still here?"

"No, he ain't here now; but you know Jose and me are keepin' company; so why shouldn't he be here?"

"No reason; only he seemed to act queer, and I am sure I heard him mention—mention Captain Charteris's name."

"Well, yes, he might 'av," uneasily shifting her lank weight from one flat foot to the other.

Jack arose, went over to Augusta Victoria, and grasped her firmly by the shoulder.

"You know I have never trusted Jose, and now I know there is something wrong. Tell me—tell me, or I—well, you know what I can do."

"Oh, dear Miss Jack, save him!—save Jose! save us all!"

Hurriedly, disconnectedly, she told the trembling little woman before her the story. Charteris had had a quarrel with Mexicans on the lower Pecos; that in saving his own life he had shot his assailant; that the dead man was a cousin to Jose, who, with his brothers were all left to right the wrong. That they were to meet at Ortegas, and were going to Farringden's ranch, where Charteris was alone; that the settlement would be short, and that—oh, dear, oh!—they had already started.

Without a word Jack rushed, hatless, for the corral. Her own little broncho, Lorita, was soon girthed, and they were off over the mesa, the startled horse fairly maddened as the heavy end of the quirt struck her tender flanks with repeated blows. Her gentle mistress seemed turned into a demon, as mile after mile they flew—not by the trail, but over the range, where quicksands lurked, and prairie dogs' holes were traps to the galloping horse's feet. On they went, the mare goaded to frenzy by the shrill voice and raining blows. The Farringden ranch lights were in sight, and Jack, her heart a triphammer in her side, gave a final shout to speed Lorita on, but a treacherous hole caught one of the horse's slender legs, breaking it, and throwing the little broncho in an agony of pain to the ground, where her rider lay, unhurt. Without a glance at her dearly loved horse, Jack sprang to her feet and rushed like a coyote over the ground.

The altitude exhausted her feeble lungs, and when she stumbled across the doorway of Farringden's ranch speech had almost left her. The curtain was up, and Charteris sat by the table, under a swinging lamp, writing. With one swift movement she pulled down the treacherous shade, threw herself upon his breast and stretched out her arms protecting around him, as, listening to every wind-breath, she gasped:

"Come with me—there is no time to talk."

Seeing determined negation in his face, she continued:

"There is not a moment to lose. Jose Gonzales and his brothers are behind me. They are fierce with pulque and revenge. Come, come!"

"Never! I'll face the cowardly Mexicans!"

"Harcourt,"—a deep wail of despairing passion in her voice—"I love you, dearest, with all the life God has given me, and I beg of you, for the sake of your hope and mine in Heaven to listen to me." Her shielding arms were again around him, and fifty kisses were pressed on his lips. "Harcourt, sweetheart, do my will just this once—this once!" And he obeyed.

Through the rear door of the house they went. With her hand locked in his, they rushed toward the canon, Jack guiding the rebellious Englishman. At length she stopped. "I can go no further," and pulling the red kerchief from her neck she held it to her lips.

"What shall I do with you, Harcourt? They will kill you!"

He took the hand at her side. 'Twas red with blood.

The galloping horses and excited Spanish voices reached them as Jack rushed into the clear light.

"Jose Gonzales, is that you?"

"Si, senorita."

The girl advanced to where the three horsemen had reined and talked earnestly in Spanish. The voices were first high and fierce, then low and pleading, finally soft and consenting, as they slowly turned and rode away. She walked back to Charteris.

"Come!" she said. How differently the voice from an hour before! She said no more, but started forward. Charteris followed.

"Jack," he called—"dear little Jack—" you have saved my life and I am a coward."

"Don't speak to me," she replied, bitterly. "Saddle me a horse. I'll wait for it inside."

Two horses were soon tied at the gate, and he entered the room where Jack stood, not as she had so short a time before, panting, glowing, reckless, the embodiment of love and bravery, but instead, a pallid, sombre-eyed woman, whose strange quiet was a terror to the man before her.

"They have given you your life," she said, "because I promised them that in the early morning you would go. I told them this; they believed me; you must go."

"Yes, I will go; but you—you who have risked your precious life—have brought on this fearful thing," pointing to the blood-stained hand. "What shall I do for you?"

"I am past help," recklessly. "God is good; he has sent this—if not enough, the stream in the canon will be a roaring torrent in May."

She started toward the gate, he swiftly following.

"Jack, Jack, let me go with you!"

"No; but you can go across the range," pointing southward, "and shoot Lorita—I couldn't do that," covering her eyes with her trembling fingers.

She mounted; he followed, and they rode slowly toward the trail.

"Jack," he whispered tenderly, "why have you given me my life and turned it to bitterness like this?"

She rode nearer and laid her hand on the horn of his saddle.

"Do not dare to follow me. Shoot Lorita quickly and kindly. With her will die your memory of these days. I have read the London Times, and I loved you."

When Harry Delancy returned to the Anita ranch the weeping Augusta Victoria met him in the portel. A rude emblem of black swung from the door knob and inside the house the little mistress lay still and silent, at rest forever. "The old trouble" and the new one had ended all.

The London Times announced that on June 20 at St. George's, Hanover Square, were married Captain Harcourt Dene Clifford Charteris and Lady Evelyn Maud Barksworth.—McClure's Monthly.

A grammar school in Ohio has been closed because of a free fight. The superintendent and principal came to blows, the scholars and townspeople took sides, and now the people are so busy fighting that they haven't time to think of education.

CUTTING AN ICE CROP.

HOW THE FROZEN BLOCKS ARE HARVESTED.

Storehouses Are Great Barn-like Structures—How the Ice Is Cut, Rafted from the "Field" and Hoisted Into Its Cold Quarters.

A Winter Industry.

Common as ice is of one kind and another, not all the persons who use it in summer have seen it cut in winter. In a cold day the ice man gets rich, and nothing can be more to his liking than the chilly blasts of December, the zero efforts of January. All about the great cities and trade distributing centers are located favorable spots for cutting ice, and a sight of a great storehouse with a capacity of 90,000 tons, average blocks of 220 pounds, the machinery, the large number of men employed to cut this immense harvest, interests and startles the person taking it for the first time.

Usually some small lake is selected as the harvesting spot, and here, as soon as a cold snap gives a steely surface to the ice, the superintendent of the ice houses takes all the men he can find work for, and apportions them their tasks. The average with gangs about such fields as those contiguous to Chicago, is, say, 100 men, and they cut about 100,000 tons of ice in three weeks.

First in the force are the scrapers. These men have an appliance about the size of an ordinary express wagon box. It proceeds sidewise, and tipped up in such manner as to carry the snow along with it. Its nether edge is provided with a steel plate, so that the ice is scraped perfectly clear of snow. The snow is banked up in great ridges, as nearly out of the way as possible. Then come the markers. A man with an eye for a line stretches a rope from one to two furlongs in length, and pushes a hand-marker along beside it, till there is a distinct line scratched across the surface of the ice. Then a man with a "plow" comes along, a boy leading his horse, and he follows the line scratched in the ice, sending the steel of his plowshares as deeply into the ice as he can.

PLOWING AND CUTTING ICE.

Turning about at the farther end, he comes back, cutting deeper, and a third time deeper still, till he has cut perhaps half way through the ice. While he is deepening his first incision another man follows with a marker, setting its guide in the initial groove, and marking a second groove twenty-two inches from the first.

The first ice is cut nearest the icehouses. After that the men cut farther and farther away. But the distance is never so great that one man cannot drive 200 cakes of ice from the field to the houses. He can, with little waste of time, take the greater raft—20 by 60 cakes, and containing 1,200 blocks—down the canal to the houses. If the ice plow has been driven too deep the raft will break into smaller bodies by striking on the edges of the channel now and then. That adds to the labor of the men slightly. But the saw has done very little. Its only use has been to cut the field up into rafts of the required size, either 10 by 30 cakes or 20 by 60 cakes.

Arrived in the neighborhood of the houses, the men go aboard the raft with bars and by striking here and there in the lines cut by the plows separate the raft into smaller sections, each two blocks wide. These rafts are sent forward again and as they come to the foot of the incline up which the blocks must travel to the house another man goes along and cuts the float into separate blocks, a slight blow of the needle bar or "spud" being sufficient to separate them.

STORING THE ICE.

An icehouse is simply a great, barn-like structure with declining arms reaching down into the edge of the water. This is the same wherever you see them. These arms are the chutes up which the ice blocks are conveyed for storing in the houses. In smaller affairs the ice is hoisted by horse power. In the larger, great engines drive endless chains which pass down under the water and rise at the foot of the wooden incline. The ice blocks, now separated, are driven forward upon them, and the links of the chain, as they rise, catch the blocks and carry them up to the levels where they are wanted.

It takes a good deal of judgment to feed the chain properly. The blocks must come forward fast enough to keep the elevator in constant business. And it must not come so swiftly as to clog it. It must be two cakes wide all the time, and the cakes must be advanced singly at the last. When the links of the endless chain catch the cakes of ice and carry them up the incline, it drops them over a little ridge and they at once start down a slower slope to the doors of the icehouse. This latter incline, a very gentle declivity, is supplied with tracks on which the blocks can run smoothly. Half way down to the house there is a divide, and the two men at the place where the endless chain delivers the blocks, direct the course of the ice, as to the right or the left. Each is armed with a pike, with a beard to it like the beard of a boatsook. And when a bad piece comes along—one broken or otherwise undesirable—the men snatch it from the track, if they have time, and shoot it over the ends of the scaffolding and down to the ground.

Along the extensive side of the house are built platforms at different elevations, with doors opening upon them from the houses. The tracks on which the ice blocks travel are laid on these platforms, and at each of the doors a man is stationed with a short boat hook or pike pole, which he uses in capturing a block here and there from the screaming stream that hurtles past him and turns in the door, where it shoots down another incline to the workmen who are placing the ice in position.

The speed of the ice blocks as they approach the door is amazing. The force of one would be something like the blow of a cable car. The man at the door does not try to handle the cakes with anything like an arbitrary force. He whacks his pike beard into the block near a corner, and, yielding slightly, manages to turn it till the force of its own momentum swings it around, and it leaves the platform track, plunges through the door and descends like an avalanche to the levels below.

Down in the icehouse there are other men, sitting at the side of the runway down which the blocks are hurled. They take such of the blocks as they can reach in time and drag them from the track and shoot them to this side or that of the great room. There men are awaiting the ice with poles and each block is placed in regular order till the great floor of the house is filled. Then another layer is placed on the first and a third on the second and so on, till the house is filled.

There is no sawdust between the layers, as there used to be, when ice was put up in the country. If the men stopped to make that provision they wouldn't get the crop in the warehouses till after the first of May. And every one knows that is no time to cut ice. All the provision made against melting is the stuffings of shavings and sawdust in the double walls of the building and the layers of hay that cover the whole.

The pay is all the way from $1 to $1.75 a day, depending on the class of work done. Most of the men in the houses and on the field, laborers, work for $1 a day to $1.25. In former years the wages were not so much of a temptation, but this winter there have been very few other means of income in the country, and then there are a good many men about the towns out of work and willing to get a bit of spending money from a little odd work. In the large ice fields the men live in a big boarding-house which stands a few hundred feet from the icehouse, a long, yellow, barnlike structure, maintained by the company, in which the 300 or 400 employes are housed and fed. For the long, toilsome hours in which they labor on the ice fields or along the chutes the men get 12 and 12½ cents an hour, all except the men working with the tongs in the cars, who get 15 cents an hour. Out of this money they are obliged to pay their board in the big roomy structure. In the evening the day shift lie about in the smoking-room an hour or so before turning in, but as their day begins again at 7 o'clock in the morning and they must be through breakfast and ready to work by that hour they spend little time running around at night.

Sixteen inches of ice is considered a little too thick by the ice men. Twelve or fourteen is thick enough for them. The average buyer considers a cake to weigh, roughly, 200 pounds. And when he gets a cake he expects 200 pounds. But he makes no allowance for the excess where the thickness is greater than is required for that weight. Besides that, the larger blocks are much more difficult to handle.

Ice 14 inches thick will overrun 200 pounds a little. And every added inch of thickness, when the blocks are 22 inches square, means the addition of 15 pounds to the cake. Much of the ice cut this winter is 18 inches thick. That means, with this size of cake, 270 pounds. Which is more than the ice man likes to sell for 200.

There are some blocks of ice so clear that a person can "read through them," but ice six inches thick would offer a pretty effectual barrier to the gleaner of news if he read through from top to bottom. Average ice is clear enough to offer little obstacle if one reads through from side to side. It is 22 inches square. And the eye can easily distinguish fairly fine print through those twenty-two inches. But, though it is only sixteen inches thick no one would pretend the second time that he could read through it from the upper to the nether side.

A little computation shows that ice sometimes pays better than wheat. A strip of ground 10 by 16 rods will embrace an acre. Off that surface, covered with water, frozen to a depth of fourteen or more inches, 12,960 cakes of ice, each twenty-two inches square, could be harvested. That means 645 tons. Even at the price received at the icehouse the selling price of the ice would be more than many a man's whole farm is worth.

Certainly it is more than the average value of any acre in any farm in Illinois.

Sea Water.

On a bright, sunny day visitors are often puzzled at the numerous colors visible on the surface of the sea. There will, perhaps, be some four or five streaks of green, blue, yellow, black and so forth, making the water appear as though it were painted in color-stripes of mathematical precision.

To the initiated these several stripes have their meaning. They are nearly all produced by the character of the ocean bed, and, as a rule, are only seen in close proximity to land.

If you see a deep blue or green patch, you may label it deep water, the blue usually being deeper than the green. A yellowish tint signifies a sandy bottom, and, if it is very pronounced, indicates a shoal or sandbar.

Black indicates rocks, although seaweed or cloud shadows will sometimes produce a similar effect.

On the east coast it is no uncommon thing to see a patch of bright red, where the sun has reflected the color of the deep brown sand on the surface.

Where the bottom is muddy, as on the Essex coast, a streak of bright silver-gray is often seen.

Many people who can not claim intimacy with the sea imagine these colors are in the sea water itself, whereas its intrinsic tint is bluish-green.—Answers.

Bridges.

A primitive notion existed among the Romans and other races that a bridge was an offence and injury to the river god, as it saved people from being drowned while fording or swimming across, and robbed the deity of a certain number of victims which were his due. For many centuries in Rome propitiatory offerings of human victims were made every year to the Tiber; men and women were drowned by being bound and flung from the wooden Sublician bridge, which, till nearly the end of the Republican period, was the one and only bridge across the Tiber in Rome.

Rafflng for Them.

So long ago as 1625 a sporting parson existed, and one who thought that religion could be made more popular by a little excitement; to this end he established a raffle for six Bibles each year. The clergyman who was so far eccentric, left in his will a sufficient sum of money for the yearly purchase of Testaments to be won by dice. Only a few days ago the ancient ceremony was carried through, and twelve children threw dice, six of whom ran the chance of winning a Bible. A vicar, a curate and two church wardens watched over the proceedings.

New Railroad Policy.

There was a collision on the Danish state railroad near Copenhagen some time ago in which forty persons were killed and seventy wounded. The railroad at once admitted that it was to blame, and instead of fighting claims for damages, has appointed a committee to settle with the claimants what will be fair compensation, so as to avoid having the claims brought into the courts.

Every woman knows some man who would be immensely rich instead of poog, if "he had his wife's energy."

SCIENCE OF A COAL FIRE.

Here Are a Few Simple Rules Founded on General Principles.

WHEN people begin to burn hard coal, says Good Housekeeping, they usually go through a series of perplexities and mishaps which may be escaped by observing a few simple rules founded on general principles. Gas escapes from the fire into the rooms of the house; explosions and the bursting of flame and smoke into one's face upon opening the door of the stove or heater need not occur; the escape of gas up the chimney should not be allowed, as this is a serious loss of fuel. First. As soon as a suitable quantity of good kindlings are burning so as to produce a good flame apply coal enough to make a base for the fire after the kindlings shall have been consumed, but not enough to smother the flame. The heat beneath freshly applied coal generates gas; a flame supported by a small direct draft of air should come at once in contact with this gas, then a blue flame will creep over the surface of the coal and the gas will be burned, greatly economizing the fuel and saving the annoyances referred to above. The next application of coal should be made as soon as that first applied is well ignited, and with the same precaution as to quantity.

By covering the fire all out of sight a reservoir of gas is obtained, filling the open space above the coal; some of this gas may escape into the house, some of it may pass up the chimney and be lost, but when the fire has burned up through the freshly applied coal and comes in contact with this reservoir of gas the most natural thing in the world under the circumstances is an explosion, which is the cause of fire and smoke bursting into one's face on opening the door onto the fire at this critical time.

For heating purposes best results are obtained by keeping a liberal quantity of coal burning, regulating the heat by the draft. To run the heater with only one application of coal per day will usually result in a shivering for the first few hours, with the evils of an atmosphere polluted with gas while the dull fire is warming up the coal, and then in having more heat than is desirable, an economy of care and labor at the expense of fuel, comfort and health.

YOUNGEST TRICK RIDER.

Six-Year-Old Berlin Boy Gives Remarkable Wheel Exhibitions.

The youngest trick rider in the world is said to be Master Arthur Czekowski, a 6-year-old Berlin boy, who has already given exhibitions in the German theaters.

"Little Arthur," as he is called, fell into the trick-riding habit by accident, so to speak. His father was an acrobat and juggler, but had no intention of having his son follow in his footsteps. One day, however, before the small boy was out of his bibs and skirts he astonished his parents by his mimicry of his father's feats. He developed such an astonishing ability, both as a gymnast and a mimic, that it occurred to his father about a year ago to make him a trick bicyclist. The youngster has succeeded so remarkably that all Berlin raves over his performances.

YOUNGEST OF TRICK RIDERS.

NAPOLEON'S CHAIR OF STATE.

Was Once an Elaborate Affair, but Is Faded and Tarnished Now.

In one of the Paris museums interesting for its personal relics of great Frenchmen are some mementos of Napoleon. There are carpets he trod upon, tapestries on which his eyes rested, chairs in which he took his ease, and some in which it must have been extremely difficult for him to find ease. Here is one of those—a chair of state. It was of violet velvet once, but it has grown greenish with years. It was embroidered with silver, but the silver is tarnished and blackened with age.

FADED AND TARNISHED NOW.

Tea Names Have Meaning.

"Pekoe," in the Canton dialect, means "white hair," and for this kind of tea the very youngest leaves of all are gathered, so young that the white down of babyhood is still upon them—whence their name. "Congo" means "labor;" considerable trouble and pains are taken in its preparation at Amoy, and these are perpetuated in its name. "Bohea" is named after a range of hills in Fo-Kien; "Souchong" expresses no sentiment, but a bold fact, being Cantonese for "the small kind;" "Hyson" signifies "flourishing spring."

I, the undersigned, Auditor in and for the County of DeKalb, State of Indiana, do hereby certify, that the foregoing is a true and complete list of all the lands and town lots in said county returned delinquent for the taxes for the year 1896, with the delinquent tax, penalty and interest, and also the tax for the year 1897, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Notice is therefore hereby given that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon or due from the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn in said county, on the second Monday in February, A D 1898, (the same being the 14th day of said month), unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a m. on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale.

FRANK A. BORST, AUDITOR.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 17, 1898. By M. BOLAND, Deputy.

What is Scott's Emulsion?

It is a strengthening food and tonic, remarkable in its flesh-forming properties. It contains Cod-Liver Oil emulsified or partially digested, combined with the well-known and highly prized Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, so that their potency is materially increased.

What Will It Do?

It will arrest loss of flesh and restore to a normal condition the infant, the child and the adult. It will enrich the blood of the anemic; will stop the cough, heal the irritation of the throat and lungs, and cure incipient consumption. We make this statement because the experience of twenty-five years has proven it in tens of thousands of cases. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.

CRUSHED BY THE TRAIN

Word comes from Waterloo that Irvin Imhoff, son of Theodore Imhoff of that place was crushed under a coal car near Mansfield Saturday morning. Both legs were crushed and had to be amputated and he was not able to rally, but died shortly after. He was brought back to Waterloo today, and the funeral will be tomorrow. About a year ago, he married Jessie, a daughter of A. L. McEntarffer, of Waterloo who with a month old child survive him. He was a brakeman on the Lake Erie and Wheeling road.

NOT THE LAW.

At the December session of our commissioners the Burford man and other foreign printers got around our board and made them believe they ought to obey an old 1875 law, instead of the latter 1895 law. The former law allowed the board to let the entire job of county printing. The latter law gives each county officer the control of what is to be used in his own office. This is a very sensible way. But these outside sharks having had the pick and bulk of all DeKalb's work for so many years did not propose to give it up. And they got the job, leaving the 8 or 10 home printers sucking their thumbs.

But now comes a decision that seems to overturn the Burford idea of law. It is a case in court in Wabash county. We quote the report in full:

Judge Shively, of the Wabash Circuit Court, last week rendered a decision that will be of interest to newspaper men over the State. The Plain Dealer company, of that city, two years ago entered into a contract with the Board of Commissioners of the county for doing all the legal advertising at a stipulated rate, the condition being that the Plain Dealer should receive all the work. It failed to get all the printing and in rendering a bill for printing the delinquent tax list last year, charged the full legal rate, though its contract was for only half. The commissioners refused to allow more than the contract price and the Plain Dealer company appealed. Judge Shively, in rendering his decision, held that the auditor could place the printing where he chose, regardless of any contract made by the commissioners, and that the contract was void: and further, that if such a contract had a legal existence, the commissioners, by failing to give the Plain Dealer company all the work, vitiated the agreement. The point of the decision is that the Board of Commissioners can not make a contract which obliges county officers to place their work with the house that is a party to the contract, even if the latter proposes to do the work for a lower rate than that fixed by law.

WORTHY TRIBUTE

To Dr. Wheeler and the Product of His Life's Labor and Research.

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

If you seek for a reason for the unquestionable popularity of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, you learn that it is due wholly to the merit of the preparation in making sick nerves strong and vigorous and through them the organs active and healthy.

It has reached the pinnacle of success in the science of medicine and is without a rival. This fact is proven by the thousands who have regained health by it after thorough tests, and failures of other Nervines, Compounds and Sarsaparillas.

No claim is made for Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer that is not accompanied by convincing evidence. In this case Geo. S. Beck, River Styx, O., furnishes the proof. He says: "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is certainly a wonderful remedy. Less than one bottle cured my wife of sleeplessness and nervousness of a very serious nature. I, myself, had a very uncomfortable time from the effect of LaGripp, which was an aggravating nervous trouble. Sometimes I felt as if I would rather be dead than alive to endure it. One bottle of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cured me and I gained twenty-five pounds in a very short time. I could add several pages to this stating the merits of the remedy from my own observation. I would not be without it in my house if possible to get it."

It is a specific for sick nerves.

The Elkhart Commissioners.

For some months, there have been charges made against the commissioners of Elkhart county, that they took bribes from favored bridge builders, and then paid these bridge men back by allowing them claims for "extra work." Now, one of the partners of the bridge concern, appears to have got tired of it and comes out with the following sworn statement as to how it was done.

STATE OF INDIANA, County of Elkhart, } ss.

Personally appeared before the undersigned, a notary public within and for the county and state aforesaid, John A. Brumbaugh, who, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that up to and prior to March, 1897, he was a partner with Frank Brumbaugh in the business of constructing and erecting bridges, principally for Elkhart county. That said firm paid in commissions for obtaining work from said county commissioners: the following, to-wit:

April 27, 1895	8	50 00
June, 1894		130 00
September, 1895		50 00
September, 1895 (page 48)		100 00
September, 1895		200 00
October, 1895 (page 64)		100 00
March, 1896		50 00
December, 1865 (page 78)		400 00
January, 1896		50 00

As shown by books of said firm $1,080 00

That to the best of the belief of this affiant the most of said money was paid to E. W. Kinnison, county commissioner, for his vote as commissioner on the board. That this affiant showed the amount, to-wit, $1,080.00, to said E. W. Kinnison and Kinnison admitted to this affiant that he received money, but not that amount. That just prior to the election of 1896 there was $300 drawn from said firm by Frank Brumbaugh and the same was paid to Chas. Walley and E. W. Kinnison in equal amounts, to be used by the said Walley and Kinnison to defray their election expenses. That the two bills presented to the board of county commissioners for extras on the Ft. Wayne road bridge, in the city of Goshen, was to be $1,600 and was so presented, but the same was raised to $1,750 by some person to this affiant unknown, and to this affiant, but $1,500 was reported as paid by the county commissioners.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 6th day of September, 1897.

NOT FOR EVERYTHING

But if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, you will find Swamp-Root just the remedy you need. People are not apt to get anxious about their health soon enough. If you are "not quite well" or "half sick" have you ever thought that your kidneys may be the cause of your sickness?

It is easy to tell by setting aside your urine for twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder need doctoring.

There is satisfaction in knowing that the great remedy Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, fulfills every wish in relieving weak or diseased kidneys and all forms of bladder and urinary troubles. Not only does Swamp-Root give new life and activity to the kidneys—the cause of trouble, but by treating the kidneys it acts as a tonic for the entire constitution. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar, or by mentioning Auburn COURIER and sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton New York you may have a sample bottle of this great discovery sent to you free by mail.

Free of Charge to Sufferers.

Cut this out and take it to your druggist and get a a sample bottle free of Dr. King's New Discovery, for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. They do not ask you to buy before trying. This will show you the great merits of this truly wonderful remedy, and show you what can be accomplished by the regular size bottle. This is no experiment, and would be disastrous to the proprietors, did they not know it would invariably cure. Many of the best physicians are now using it in their practice with great results, and are relying on it in most severe cases. It is guaranteed. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Regular size 50 cents and $1.00.

A Life Saved.

Marvelous cures of throat and lung affections are made daily by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Miss Annie Swan, Petersburg, Va., writes: "My brother was attacked by a bad cough and cold, and it was thought he had consumption. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup was used, and to our great surprise it made him well and hearty. There is no better cure in the world than this Syrup." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents.

SHALL WE TRY?

A gentleman from Ohio, Thomas Garvin of VanBuren that state was here this week and called on Dr. Swarts and others interested in further explorations for gas and oil. He is the man Harry Stafford spoke of in his letter from Galatea, Ohio, as being an experienced man in the gas and oil business, especially in putting down wells. He has followed this for the past twelve years, have been doing that work for the Standard Oil Co. He brings large experience to the work and has brought the business to such a system that he can put down a well for about half what they cost us when we bored ours. It would be a good idea for our our people to get together and see what can be done. If we can benefit our interests by putting down more wells, we ought to get about it before waiting too long. We know we have the gas.

A Timely Friend.

With perfect propriety may we call that excellent remedy, Salvation Oil, a timely friend. This liniment rapidly cures rheumatism, neuralgia and pains, when other remedies fail. Mr. Jno. M. Hall, Ashland, Va., writes: "I suffered with rheumatism in the ankle and the muscles connected therewith. Salvation Oil at once relieved the soreness, reduced the swelling, and cured the pain. No other liniment that I ever used did me so much good."

FOOTED UP

What are called "crimes of the rail" in the year of 1897 makes a startlingly large record when footed up. The number of trains held up way thirty. Two passengers were killed and five wounded; two robbers were killed and three wounded. Ten stages were robbed during the year, with a casualty list of two passengers killed, three wounded. One stage robber was killed and one wounded. In these forty holdups the casulties to passengers were twelve; to the robber, seven. Train robberies occurred in seventeen states and territories, including four in Texas, three each in Ohio and Missouri, and two each in Alabama. Oregon, Illinois, Indian Territory, Indiana and New Mexico. One each took place in Arizona, Tennesse, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Colorado, California, Minnesota and Virginia. All the stage robberies were in the far west. The exhibit is one inviting the attention of legislators.

LIKE THE CHICORA

The big lake steamer city of Duluth struck, on a bar Tuesday night at St. Joe, Mich., and became a total wreck by morning. It was only 300 feet from shore, and the passenger were all saved but one, who died from exposure in getting ashore in the icy water. The vessel was a winter freighter, and was filled with oats. These got wet after she struck the bar, and swelled so as to burst the vessel open. Then the waves finished her. It was Jan. 23, 1895, that the Chicora and her 30 passers all went down near the same place

Something to Know.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centers in the stomach, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion, and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. THEY FLEW.

Fisk and Fillips Flew Forward Forcibly Full Fifteen Feet, Flopping Further.

Attorney C. M. Phillips and Royal J. Fisk of Waterloo came over here this morning on court business. They were in a road cart and found several chuck holes and more of slippery, icy places. But they got along very safely till they reached the sharp turn in the road at the north end of Main-st in Auburn when in a hurry around the bend, the horse slipped on the ice. Fisk went sailing out of the cart and forward over the horse's head in a way that would make Pennington's airship turn green with envy. Phillips was more modest and did not try to go so far, or he would have been neck and neck with Fisk. He at once organized a relief expedition to search for the lost Fisk airship and after some search he discovered a fringe of white whiskers circling a red round face. It looked like the arctic sun at midnight. But a little rubbing with snow brought back the original blushes. The horse had stood still, after getting up. He was paralyzed to see things shooting over his back. Fisk rode on into town and as a COURIER reporter saw him whirling around Garrett's grocery heading for the feed stable, he was able to smile a friendly recognition. Phillips had got out up the street somewhere or possibly he had not been able to get in again, and so came into town triumphantly all by his lonesome. And further, deponent saith not.

TOOK A TUMBLE

John T. Picker took a tumble yesterday which might have resulted very seriously. He was loading a car with short lumber at the Body factory and had a board running from the pile to the car door, the iron sill at the car door was covered with ice and as he was making a trip into the car and just stepped onto the board. It shot from under him and he pitched down head first striking the front of his chin on one of the cast iron door guides, glanced off and lit on his head and snoulders on the sharp corner of a tie. He was badly shaken up, had three teeth loosened and received a scalp wound from the corner of the tie. It was lucky for him that he broke the force of the fall with his chin.

COURT.

Very Interesting Cases Come Up Before Judge Ferrall.

The Lockhart-Kline trial was concluded last evening and was given to the jury when court adjourned for supper, with the understanding there was to be court in the evening. The jury were out from 5 p. m. to 4:30 this morning when court was called, brought in a verdict in favor of the defendant. That is that Kline and Osborn do not owe Lockhart anything.

When court convened at 7 last evening, the case of Mrs. Ed. Webb for divorce was called up. It proves to be a very disagreeable affair. Mrs. Webb wants a divorce and alimony. Mr. Webb could stand the divorce, but he don't think she should have alimony. So he fights the case. A general statement is about all that is fit to give in a newspaper. It seems that each has accused the other with improper conduct in regard to the other sex, and it really looks as if each had some cause. And when each began to find out how things were going on, each made vigorous objections. Then came quarrels and hard words, and according to Mrs. Webb's testimony, blows followed on some occasions. And indirectly the trouble worked its way out into the neighborhood, and especially among the Maccabee people against whom it is claimed Webb had made sweeping charges.

With this preface our readers can understand why so much interest is taken in the case, and why the court room has been fairly well filled all the week, expecting this case would come on as soon as the Lockhart case was out of the way. But the latter case dragged on for the first three days, but as already noted the Webb case followed it last evening. The court room was full and when the witnesses were called to stand up and be sworn, it seemed as if the whole audience arose in a body and Clerk Long made about fifty able-bodied people "throw up their hands" in one order. Then Judge Ferrall gave them a talk and told them to go out by themselves, and not talk about this thing. When they filed slowly by the COURIER reporters, to go into the witness room, it was a wonder, how they would all squeeze into the space reserved for that purpose. And it was noticed that several ladies well known and respectable, were apparently sorry they had to come.

Rose & Rose were Webb's attorneys and John Baxter was attorney for Mrs. Webb. Some witnesses were called to prove her residence and then the case began. Mrs. Webb was called first and it is from her testimony that we gather most of the facts hinted at in this article. They did not get half through with her, when the judge saw how it was likely to be, a long drawn out, and not edifying case, and the inevitable result was already plain. So he told the attorneys they could settle this among themselves as well as he could He was free to say he thought the only point to be considered was the disposal of the children and he thought that they should not be separated from either parent, but both should have a chance to see the children no matter who got them. So he stopped the case and set it aside while he took up the jury case of Boyer vs Smith a case from Waterloo involved in the settlement of the estate of the late Adam Boyer. The witnesses in the Webb case were directed to remain at their homes or near by, to be ready in case the matter should again be brought up. It will probably be a good thing if the public shall be spared the further airing of this case.

The case between Baliss Boyer and Archie Smith of Waterloo occupied the time of judge and jury yesterday, and was closed and given to the jury before supper time. It took them about half an hour to decide it, and they sealed up their verdict and waited till this morning. When court met morning, they gave the judge the sealed verdict. It was in favor of the defendant, Smith. Judge Ferrall then discharged the jury and called up again the divorce case of Webb. He made statements in regard to the case and its probable outcome and as to his belief that the children should not be separated from each other or from the parents, very much as he did on Wednesday, and asked the attorneys if they did not think they and the parties could settle the matter without bringing the case up in court again. But they thought not. So as he had to be home tomorrow, Saturday, and believed it could not be tried and finished in one day, he had it continued over till next term of court. He will go home we suppose at noon.

Judge Roby then took the bench and adjourned court until Monday forenoon.

LATER:—Judge Adair stopped here this forenoon on his way home from Albion to Columbia City, and the parties induced him to take hold of the Webb case and try it. It is now going on again.

IMPORTANT DECISION

Supreme Court Says DeKalb Surveyor is Right

Some years ago when C. E. VanAuken was surveyor, he had to reclean the Cameron joint ditch. The petition for it was filed in this county, and the work ordered by our commissioners. Mr. VanAuken took his help and surveyed it, and as the ditch was partly in Steuben county, he went on and finished that part also, and then asked the Steuben commissioners to pay their share of the work. Other counties had done so, but in this case he was refused, claiming their own surveyor should do the work in Steuben. VanAuken brought a mandamus suit against them by his attorney, James H. Rose, and the latter, stood up against a number of Steuben's best attorneys and in their own court, beat them. It was then appealed to the supreme court, and that court decides that the circuit court of Angola was right and affirms its decision and orders that the Steuben auditor draw a warrant to pay the repairs on that part of the ditch in Steuben county. The supreme court says that the county that orders a ditch made has authority to keep it in repair, even when it goes over into another county. Mr. VanAuken and Mr. Rose have a right to feel jubilant over this decision.

PENLAND FREE.

Newt. Penland, who got in trouble last year has finished "doing time," and was liberated today. This sharp air must have struck him unpleasantly after his long confinement in a warm brick building with handsome ornaments on like our jail. MUST PAY DOG TAX.

Commencing April 1st the township assessor must collect dog tax when he makes the assessment. Many persons have heretofore kept numerous canines and never paid a cent of tax. If any person is detected trying to conceal his dog he can be brought before a justice and fined in any sum not less than five nor to exceed twenty dollars.

The assessor is required to give all persons a receipt at the time they pay him the cash, and this receipt relieves you of paying again until the next regular assessment.

GARRETT INSTALLATION.

The ladies of the Auburn Maccabees went over to Garrett last evening to help install the officers of the lodge at that place. They are skilled workmen in this line and after it was over, an extended literary and miscellaneous programme was given by the Garrett ladies who displayed great talent in this line. There were several short speeches by visiting Sir Knights, and then a splendid lunch was served. All unite in saying they had a good time.

Among those who went from Auburn were:

Mesdames Shugers, Dills, Imhoff, Loveland, Clark, Wilson, Cupp, Swazee, McClellan, McDonald. Campbell, Strebe, Crawl, Cochran, Myers, Brownell, Potter, Maxwell, Miss Sidel and Miss Clum.

City of Duluth May Be Saved.

Chicago special: Word was received by the Graham & Morton Transportation Company from St. Joseph, indicating that much of the cargo of the ill-fated steamer City of Duluth and the wrecked vessel itself may be saved. During the day the portion of the cargo stored on the main deck was taken off in safety. Much of the grain carried by the boat will also be landed without great loss. The boat still hangs on the bar at the mercy of the waves, but the officials of the company believe if she can be unloaded without going to pieces it will be possible to tow her into dry dock for repairs. Every effort is now being directed to that end.

Particulars of Gen. Arenguren's Death.

The New York Herald's Havana correspondent gives these details of the killing of Gen. Nester Arenguren, the Cuban insurgent leader:

"Arenguren, with a small band, was surprised in a well concealed hut in the Tapaste Hills by the Rena Battalion under command of Col. Benedicto. The insurgent General was seated at a table writing when the Spaniards surrounded the house. At the first volley several of the rebel band fled, but Arenguren with four others, was shot."

Russia's Offer to China.

The report that Russia has offered China a loan on the same terms as Great Britain is confirmed. It is announced in a special dispatch from Pekin that, after Russia had offered China a loan on the same terms as Great Britain, China invited Russia to guarantee to defend her against the possible displeasure of Great Britain. Russia, it appears, was evasive in her reply, but a similar guarantee asked of Great Britain against Russia was promptly agreed to.

A $200,000 Fire.

Fire greatly damaged the Ewart Building, Chicago. The flames were discovered within a few moments after the 500 employes of the various tenants had left the building. The building, which is owned by W. L. Ewart, is valued at $150,000, and is damaged $75,000. The rest of the loss was divided among eight concerns occupying the building, swelling the loss to $200,000 all told. Fully insured.

Who Is Thomas H. Mew?

A hobo arrested at Fort Wayne recently had a gold watch in his possession having the above name engraved on it, other marks which the owner will be asked to identify. This man will be held twenty days to give officers an opportunity to locate this watch, which is no doubt stolen property. Address communications to H. A. Gorsline, Superintendent of Police, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Rich Find of Gold.

Returns have been received of an assay of samples of gold ore from the new gold fields in Gillespie County, Texas. The assay shows that there is $15,150 worth of gold to each ton of ore taken from the mines. This makes the property in Texas highly valuable and there may be much speculation in these gold fields. The projectors did not imagine that the ore was so valuable.

Two Officers Killed.

A special from Fort Smith, Ark., says: Passengers from Indian Territory bring word of the shooting and killing of United States Marshal Beck and Deputy Hess and the serious wounding of Deputy Bussey, at Inola, I. T., by Will Miller and Joseph Phelps, whisky peddlers.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Feb. 1.—Mathews and Bulger, "At Gay Coney Island."

Feb. 3.—Hoyt's "A Stranger in New York."

Feb. 5.—"Great Diamond Robbery."

Aged Women Tortured.

At Monongahela City, Pa., four masked men entered the residence of Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson and Miss Jane Wilson, each almost 70 years of age. They tortured the old women in a horrible manner and compelled them to reveal the hiding place of $10. The fiends escaped.

Dinner Party Held Up.

While Joseph Mason was entertaining two ladies and gentlemen friends at a little dinner at Chicago, three masked burglars invaded the dining room and relieved the quartet of $125 and jewelry valued at $80.

Spain To Increase Her Navy.

London special: The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail says the Government will ask the next Cortes to vote £8,000,000 for strengthening the navy.

Coming Nearer to Us.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Daily News says: It has been decided that the whole Spanish fleet shall concentrate at Havana, though not immediately, unless circumstances demand.

She Leaves $1,000,000.

Mrs. Sarah C. Deming died at Terre Haute, Ind., Wednesday. She leaves an estate valued at $1,000,000. One of her sisters is Mrs. John P. Usher of Lawrence, Kan., widow of President Lincoln's Secretary of the Interior.

Caught on a Trestle.

Two young women and two men, while returning home from church started to cross a trestle at Columbus, O. When about half way over they heard a train. Three of the party escaped by jumping, but Mrs. Stephen Anderson seemed paralyzed by fear and was killed.

British Cruiser Disabled.

While lying at anchor in the harbor of Chemulpo, Coren, one of the drains of the British cruiser Narcissus choked up and burst, starting a plate and allowing an in-rush of water. Word was passed to stand by to abandon ship, but the danger of sinking was averted.

ADJOURNS COURT TO FIGHT.

Missouri Jurisprudence Exemplified in Milan, Mo., by Justice Parr.

Justice of the Peace Parr of Milan, Mo., is always willing to support his legal opinions with his muscle. During the progress of a trial a bench warrant was issued for John M. Clapp, an attorney, who was charged with contempt. Justice Parr sentenced Clapp to five hours in the county jail, but later modified the sentence to a fine, which was paid. Clapp, burning under the punishment inflicted by the court, continued to make irritating comments during the progress of the trial. Justice Parr ordered Clapp to take a seat. To this Clapp retorted by requesting Parr to adjourn court for two minutes so that the judge and lawyer might be on the same footing. To the surprise of spectators Justice Parr immediately adjourned court and, seizing an iron poker, assailed Clapp. The two men exchanged blows, but were separated before serious injury could be inflicted by either. Clapp was led from the room and Justice Parr returned to the bench, called court to order and proceeded with the trial.

GOING TO SEEK FOR GOLD.

Small Fleet on the Way from New York to Alaska Around the Horn.

At least half a dozen steamships are now on the way from New York to the Yukon, carrying gold-seekers. A small fleet of sailing vessels has the same destination and the same class of passengers. Among the steamers making long voyages around Cape Horn are the Cottage City and the Curacao, formerly of the Maine Steamship line, which were purchased by Senator Perkins of California and associates, to form part of the fleet that the transportation company in which he is interested, and which will operate between San Francisco or Seattle and St. Michael. The steamer Morgan City has been fitted in the Erie basin for a trip to Alaska, and the Gloucester fishing schooner Nellie G. Thurston, which left New York in December, is now—or should be—in the south Pacific. She has fifteen passengers. Several other vessels have sailed, and there are yet others fitting out for the long voyage.

HOLD-UP MAN IN HIS OFFICE.

Self-Possession of Judge Madill of St. Louis Thwarts a Robber.

Judge George A. Madill, president of the Union Trust Company, was sitting in his private office at St. Louis at noon, when a slim, smooth-faced, spectacled young man walked into the banker's presence and demanded $5,000. He mentioned that he was in a hurry. Judge Madill was looking into the barrel of a pistol which the visitor had thrust into his face and for a moment did not reply. Then he said: "Put up that revolver, sir. There is no need for violence; take a seat, sir." Rising to his feet, he said to his strange visitor: "Five thousand dollars is a great deal of money, but I will go and get it for you. Sit here until I return." The judge walked out of his private office, called two detectives and the young man is now in jail. He evidently was disconcerted by the banker's coolness and became badly rattled.

INSURANCE SUIT SETTLED.

New York Life Pays the Claim of Mrs. Sadie Hillmon at Topeka.

The famous Hillmon insurance case, which has been fought through five trials, has been settled at Topeka, Kan., so far as the claim against the New York Life Insurance Company is concerned. Hillmon was insured in this company for $10,000, but upon what basis the compromise was made cannot be ascertained, as the attorneys on both sides absolutely refuse to talk. One report has it that Mrs. Hillmon receives the full amount of her claim, $10,000, and interest amounting to $11,000.

Most Encouraging Prospect.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "With a volume of business remarkable for the time of year, 38 per cent larger than a year ago and 10.4 per cent larger than in 1892, in payments through clearing houses, it is not discouraging that one or two industries are lagging. The demand for most goods is more heavy for the season, manufacturing works are better employed and orders booked and in prospect for the future are more encouraging than at this season in any other year of which equally definite records exist. Exports of products continue surprisingly heavy in spite of some rise in prices. Treasury receipts from customs were larger in twenty days of January than in the entire month of October or November, and apprehension regarding the monetary future is no longer felt outside of speculative circles. Failures are considerably smaller than were ever known at this season. Railroad earnings in January thus far reported have been 17.6 per cent larger than last year and 10.3 per cent larger than in 1892. Just when unprecedented production of pig iron was causing weakness, extraordinary demand for finished products appears. For this season, at least, the general demand is beyond precedent, including 150,000 tons of steel rails for the week and 1,200,000 already this year. The great strike of operatives in cotton mills of New England seems as convenient to mill owners, with their heavy stocks unsold, as if they had ordered it. Probably it will last long enough to work off stocks, and the print cloth market is already about 1 per cent stronger, while a slight advance is noted in some other cotton goods. With very stagnant markets for wood, the sales amount to only 5,395,200 pounds at the three chief cities. Failures for the week have been 374 in the United States, against 409 last year, and 53 in Canada, against 65 last year."

Historic Building in Peril.

With a deafening crash a portion of the east wing of the old state house at Philadelphia, Pa., fell. No harm was done to the historic building, as the arches which collapsed were not connected with it, a section of the wing next to the east wall of Independence hall having been torn out under the restoration plans now being carried out. The accident was due to the exposed state of the building.

Wages Reduced Again.

The employes of the Wheeling steel plant in Benwood, W. Va., about 500 in number, have been notified of a second reduction in wages within twelve months. The present reduction affects the laborers, and runs from 12 to 25 per cent. The tonnage men say they will not accept. The reduction is to take effect Feb. 21.

Bitten by a Tarantula.

James Hemmingway, a Missouri Pacific brakeman, has just been discharged from the company's hospital at Sedalia after four months' treatment for a tarantula bite. On the night of Sept. 9 Hemmingway touched a tarantula and was bitten on the right hand. The member was amputated twenty-nine times.

Scores Die by Fire.

Fifty or more lives have been lost by a fire which broke out at Spokane, Wash. The flames were in the Great Eastern block in Riverside avenue. It was a vast six-story structure, the upper floors of which were occupied by about a hundred roomers. The loss will amount to $225,000 or more.

Sea Will Join Sea.

The New York Herald's correspondent with the Nicaraguan canal commission advises from Managua: The canal commission here cabled to Washington as follows: "The canal of Nicaragua is practicable for less than three-quarters of the original estimate. Four and one-half to six and one-half years are required to build it. Four thousand eight hundred laborers are needed to commence work. These should be divided into four groups—2,200 between Rio San Juan and Castillo, 1,800 between Corinto and Momotombo, and 800 in Managua. This number of men should be doubled within three months." This reply was received by the commission: "A company in Ohio and New York has been duly formed to engage men from Puerto Barrios, Jamaica, Belize and Nicaragua." The Herald's correspondent adds that each of the 13 engineers with the commission represents a big syndicate, all fighting to get the contract, but the Ohio and New York millionaires have secured it. The Washington correspondent of the Herald says that the above cablegram is interpreted there to mean that the Maritime Canal Company, anticipating a favorable report from the Walker commission as to the feasibility of the project, and of subsequent favorable action by Congress, has men on the ground prepared to begin the work of construction immediately.

KILLED ON A TRESTLE.

Woman and Child Run Down by a Train Near St. Louis.

At St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. Lizzie King and her neighbor's son, Frank Carey, 12 years old, were run down by the north-bound Burlington express. The remains of the lad were mangled and the woman was frightfully maimed and injured. They were crossing a high trestle over Highland creek, making their way slowly over the ice-covered timbers, when they heard the shriek of a locomotive whistle. A train was upon them. Mrs. King jumped. While the lad watched her, horrified, the engine struck him. He was dead when picked up.

SEIZED BY BRITISH GUNBOAT.

Supposed Baluchistan Insurgent Craft Captured in Gulf of Oman.

The British gunboat Lapwing has seized the steamer Baluchistan off Muscat, Gulf of Oman, and her cargo of arms and ammunition has been confiscated. The seizure of the steamer tends to explain the mystery as to whence the Afridis secured their latest style British rifles. The arms were shipped to a dozen different Russian firms.

Recovers Her Lost Child.

A pathetic case reached a climax in the police court at Omaha, Neb., when a baby girl was restored to the mother, who had mourned her as dead. Mrs. Bertha Loomis was obliged to break up her home and work out. She sent her daughter, Pearl, to Mrs. Kate Neary, who lives near Lyons, Neb. Mrs. Loomis was to pay $2 a month. Several installments were paid, but after a time they lapsed. The mother went to Lyons for her child. She was told that Pearl had died. Mrs. Loomis was shown a grave with a rough headboard above it. Recently she received a call from Mrs. Neary, who demanded $5 due her for the keeping of the little girl, and then followed her demands with the announcement that Pearl was not dead, but was in the city with a friend. Police Matron Bennett agreed to accompany Mrs. Loomis to the place; the money was paid and the child restored.

Believes Animals Are Immortal.

"I believe that animals are immortal," said the Rev. S. P. Sprecher of the Euclid Avenue Presbyterian Church of Cleveland. The statement was made in answer to a large number of inquiries which had been received by Dr. Sprecher during the last few days, which were prompted by a sermon he recently delivered on the subject of "Physical Evidence of Future Life." Dr. Sprecher gave it as his belief that the life in the animal is immortal, but that the animal itself may not have reached a state of sufficient development to possess a soul.

Three Killed in a Race.

A fight between whites and negroes took place near Natchez, Miss., and three were killed, one white man and two negroes. A large party of whites went heavily armed to the assistance of the murdered white man's friends. The negroes retreated toward the interior.

Saves Innocent Man.

Angelo Carbone is in a cell at Sing Sing, N. Y., awaiting the execution of a death sentence for the murder of Natalo Bregno, in New York, while Alexander Ciaramello, the guilty man, is in a cell at Baltimore, Md. The latter has confessed his crime.

Fatal Collision of Trains.

Train No. 17 of the Atlantic Coast Line from New York to Florida, and train No. 52, local from Charleston, collided eighty miles west of Charleston, S. C. Two men were killed and a number were injured. The collision was caused by a confusion of orders.

Colorado's Large Corporation Fee.

With its capital stock placed at $136,000,000, it cost the reorganized Union Pacific Railway just $20,402.50 to incorporate under the laws of Colorado. The fee is the largest ever received at the Secretary of State's office.

Chosen to Succeed Gorman.

At Annapolis, Md., Louis E. McComas was elected United States Senator, to succeed Arthur P. Gorman, one the tenth ballot.

WARSHIP TO HAVANA

MAINE IS ORDERED TO THE CUBAN CAPITAL.

It Is Simply a Precautionary Measure to Protect Americans—Congress Delighted with the Plan, Which In No Sense Is a Provocation to War.

No Menace in the Move.

The battleship Maine has been ordered to Havana. Other American warships will drop in there from time to time. The warships go to make friendly calls, after many years of staying away for fear of rousing the suspicions of Spain. The police sometimes make friendly calls at houses that are under suspicion, but they are always ready to show their authority if necessary. So it will be with Uncle Sam's callers at Havana. They go with their best clothes, but the bunkers are filled with shot and shell, and with enough men on board to man every gun.

If Spain receives these friendly callers in a friendly manner, they can drink tea, salute and depart. Uncle Sam has not waited for invitations. The warships will call at Havana whether they are welcome or not. They will call as the right of a friendly power, entitled to enter every port in time of peace.

A Washington correspondent says there has been no international reason why our navy should have kept away from Cuban waters for the last two or three years. President Cleveland took extraordinary care not to offend Spain by allowing warships to appear in Cuban waters without invitation. That policy has been followed until now, and the situation in Cuba has grown worse until to-day not only American citizens and American officials in Havana are in danger, but Gen. Blanco himself is not safe from his own army.

That policy has been changed, and orders were sent to Admiral Sicard that the Maine should call at Havana. It will be only a friendly call if the situation in Havana warrants that interpretation. It will be a call for business, if necessary.

The reports from Gen. Lee have not been encouraging since the outbreak a week ago. Havana is a smoldering volcano, ready to break out at any moment. Anarchy is the greatest danger, and anarchy produced by Spanish soldiers. Gen. Lee's reports make it almost imperative that warships should be near enough to protect Americans. Strict orders were given not to allow the forces from the Maine to land, unless necessary. They will not go into the city for pleasure. When they go it will be for business.

The New York World's Washington correspondent says that the battleship Maine was ordered to Havana in response to a cablegram from Consul General Lee. He asserts that after 6 o'clock Monday night three cipher dispatches from Gen. Lee were received at the State Department, translated, and sent to Judge Day, who took them to the dinner given by Judge McKenna. At that dinner all the members of the cabinet except Gen. Alger were present, and a consultation, practically a cabinet meeting, was held to consider the situation in Cuba. After returning to the executive mansion the President ordered direct telegraphic connection between there and Key West.

The news that at last an American vessel is to be stationed at Havana was enthusiastically received in Washington. This move is obviously popular, since it offers protection to our citizens and interests, and puts us in the field in case events should require the presence there of a strong force of American marines with big guns to back them. No well-informed man in Washington expects war as the direct outgrowth of such a trifling thing as the dispatch of a naval vessel to guard American interests in Havana. Nor does any well-informed man believe the Cuban problem is to be solved in any other way than by virtue of the force and prestige of this Government behind a demand that the war stop, the starving be fed and the homeless be sheltered, with the United States as an admitted and most potent factor in the reconstruction of the Government of the island. The next move of the United States is likely to take this form.

BROWN ADMITS GUILT.

Preacher Confesses Immoral Conduct to the Bay Conference.

Bay conference, the ruling body of the Congregational Church in San Francisco, met and expelled Rev. Charles O. Brown, the unfrocked minister, who was afterward given a church in Chicago. A sensation was caused by a confession and a plea for mercy from Rev. Mr. Brown. He was present and said the accusation against him was true. He said he had turned utterly and with abhorrence from his sins long before he was publicly accused. Brown says he was overcome with remorse on his way East to accept the Chicago pulpit, and then wrote out a confession, but after being kindly received in Chicago he reconsidered this determination. The committee considered the confession and reported unanimously in favor of dropping Brown from the roll. Brown still has friends in the conference and they were in favor of treating him leniently in view of his repentance. Brown sent his resignation to his Chicago church. It is his intention, so he declares, to preach upon street corners and in the slums.

FINE VIEWS OF THE ECLIPSE.

Astronomers at Bombay Enjoy Very Favorable Conditions.

At Bombay, India, the total eclipse of the sun was accompanied by a rapid fall of temperature. An earthy smell pervaded the air, and the scene resembled a landscape under a wintry English sun. The duration of totality was two minutes, with a marvelous corona of pale silver and blue. The conditions were favorable at both Prof. Sir Norman Lockyer's camp, near Viziadroog (on the Malabar coast), and at Prof. Campbell's camp, near Jour. The native astrologers predicted terrible calamities. The natives swarmed to devotional exercises, and there was general fasting, but no great alarm. The Nizam of Hyderabad liberated fifty prisoners, giving each a gift of money and clothes.

MEET TO URGE REFORM.

National Monetary Conference Called to Order in Indianapolis.

The monetary conference which opened in Indianapolis Tuesday afternoon was the result of a movement started by the Indianapolis Board of Trade a little more than one year ago. This commercial body took upon itself the inauguration of a movement whose primary purpose was monetary reform. Without any assurance that the object of its endeavor would be realized in a national sense, the Board of Trade issued invitations to commercial organizations of the central west, which brought together the nucleus on which Tuesday's national convention rests.

The cities sending representatives to the first conference were Cincinnati, Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus, Grand Rapids, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Louisville, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Toledo. This conference determined to call a general convention of the trade and commercial organizations of the country, to meet in Indianapolis Jan. 12, 1897, to consider the currency question in a non-partisan way. In response to this call there assembled in Indianapolis on the date named 300 delegates, representing the business interests of 108 cities in 27 States.

Following the instructions of this convention a committee of eleven was selected to formulate a currency reform plan. After months of evidence and discussion in Washington this committee completed its report, which was made public Jan. 3. Tuesday's convention, which was much larger than the first, was called for the purpose of submitting the plan and securing its adoption. The convention was welcomed to the State by Gov. James A. Mount. Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa presided, and C. Stuart Patterson submitted the report of the committee of election.

CONGRESS

In the House on Friday there was a parliamentary struggle over the bill for the relief of the book publishing company of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. By shrewd maneuvering its opponents succeeded in preventing action. Previous to the consideration of this bill the House passed the bill to extend the public land laws of the United States to the territory of Alaska and to grant a general railroad right of way through the territory. The urgent deficiency bill was sent to conference after the silver forces, with some outside aid, had succeeded in concurring in the Senate amendment striking from the bill the provision requiring the depositors of bullion at Government assay offices to pay the cost of transportation to the mints. In the Senate the resolution of Mr. Allen asking the Secretary of the Interior for papers concerning the dismissal from the pension office of Mrs. M. E. Roberts was referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment, after considerable debate. The Senate spent most of the day in executive session.

Some bills of minor importance were passed by the House on Saturday and the remainder of the day was devoted to general debate on the Indian appropriation bill. That the Cuban question is still uppermost in the minds of the members was evinced during this debate, much of which was devoted to it. Mr. Hitt, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, submitted a privileged report from his committee, recommending the passage of a resolution of inquiry, requesting the State Department to transmit to the House all information in its possession relative to the military execution of Col. Ruiz, a Spanish envoy to the insurgent camp of Aranguren. The resolution was adopted without division. In the Senate after a speech by Mr. Stewart in favor of the Teller silver resolution, consideration of bills on the private calendar was begun and a number were passed.

In the House on Monday a couple of hours were devoted to business relating to the District of Columbia, and the remainder of the day was occupied with the Indian appropriation bill. A lively debate was precipitated by an allusion made by Mr. Simpson (Pop., Kan.) to an alleged interview with the President on the subject of immigration. Mr. Grosvenor took occasion to express the opinion that the President had never used some of the language imputed to him, and the debate drifted into a general discussion of our industrial conditions. In the Senate proposed annexation of Hawaii was somewhat extensively reviewed by Mr. Morgan of Alabama while speaking to a question of personal privilege. One of the features of the session was an elaborate speech by Mr. Turpie of Indiana in support of the Teller resolution. The pension appropriation bill was debated for nearly three hours, but was not passed, the Senate adjourning pending the disposal of a point of order made against an amendment offered by Mr. Allen of Nebraska to the pending bill.

Under the parliamentary fiction of discussing the Indian appropriation bill, the House devoted almost the entire day Tuesday to a political debate in which the main question was whether prosperity had come to the country as a result of the advent of the present administration. Mr. Smith, the delegate from Arizona, made an attack on the system of educating the Indians, and Mr. Walker moved to strike out the appropriation for the Carlisle school. No vote was taken on the motion. A bill was passed granting American register to the foreign built steamer Navajo. In the Senate the session was characterized by a heated, almost acrimonious, discussion of the financial question. For nearly four hours the Teller resolution was under consideration, the principal speeches being made by Mr. Allison (Iowa), Mr. Berry (Arkansas) and Mr. Hoar (Massachusetts).

Consideration of the Indian appropriation bill consumed the entire day in the House on Wednesday. The debate was chiefly on extraneous subjects. The motion to strike out the appropriation for the Carlisle Indian school was defeated after considerable debate, 29 to 65. Ten pages of the bill were disposed of. The conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was adopted. In the Senate the day was spent in a discussion of the Teller silver resolution.

The Indian appropriation bill was passed by the House on Thursday and the political debate which had been raging since Monday was transferred to the District of Columbia bill, which followed it. The only two important changes made in the Indian bill as passed were the elimination of the provisions for the leasing of the gilsonite mineral lands of the Kiowa, Comanche, Apache and Wichita reservations, both of which went out on points of order. The features of the debate Thursday were the speeches of Mr. Hartman (silver Republican, Mont.), in denunciation of the financial policy of the administration, and of Mr. Dolliver (Republican, Iowa), in reply to the general attacks of the opposition. In the Senate the day was spent in debate on the Teller resolution.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Failure of a Denominational College—Railroad Is Tied Up by Strikers—Woman Poisons Her Babe and Stabs Herself to Death—One Life Lost.

A College Fails.

Hartsville university, an old and at one time a leading educational institution of Indiana, made an assignment. The entire property of the college, which is estimated to be worth $75,000, has been conveyed to A. D. Galbraith, as assignee. The liabilities as far as known amount to double the assets. The failure was due to the factional fight in the United Brethren Church, by which the institution was controlled.

Dead in a Cistern.

Willis G. Neff, postmaster of Greencastle, was found in a cistern in the rear room of his office. He had left his home telling his family that he was going down town awhile. His wife became uneasy, and with her daughter and George G. Morris, went to the postoffice. Here Morris, going into the room, found the postmaster's cane near the cistern, from which the heavy iron lid had been removed. Summoning an undertaker, the men threw a light into the cistern and there discovered Mr. Neff's body floating in ten feet of water. He had evidently been dead about an hour when found. Indications point to a carefully planned suicide for which there is no known reason.

Strikers Tie Up a Railroad.

The employes of the Chicago and Southeastern Railway Company's shops located in Lebanon went out on a strike again. This is the eighth time these men have struck since Jan. 1, 1897. The company is eight months behind with their wages. The men notified Master Mechanic Haltman of their intention to remain out until all the delinquency is forthcoming. All freight trains have been abandoned. An application for a receiver for the company has been filed.

Two Men Killed in a Wreck.

Two men lost their lives, two were badly hurt and property to the extent of $25,000 was destroyed in a wreck which occurred on the Belt and Terminal Railway at New Albany. The accident was due to the weakening of a trestle sixteen feet high by the storm raging at the time. The train, composed of an engine and several cars, was hurled into the river, the engine striking and sinking a coal barge in its descent.

Woman Seeks Death.

Mrs. Seth Coffman, who lived in Greenville township, near New Albany, committed suicide by cutting her throat with a kitchen knife. Before committing the deed she attempted to end the life of her infant child, who slept in its cradle in an adjoining room. She poured a large dose of laudanum down its throat, and left it to its fate. No cause is assigned for the suicide.

One Death in Spencer Fire.

The losses by the fire at Spencer reach $35,000. To add to the gloom which prevailed there the dead body of Lincoln Dickerson was found in the ruins.

The citizens were incensed against Nace because of his treatment of a young man who came for his father, who was intoxicated, to take him home. Over 200 kegs of beer were destroyed.

"BEAR YE ONE ANOTHER'S BURDENS."

If any little word of ours
  Can make one life the brighter,
If any little song of ours
  Can make one heart the lighter,
God help us speak that little word,
  And take our bit of singing,
And drop it in some lonely vale,
  To set the echoes ringing.

If any little love of ours
  Can make one life the sweeter,
If any little care of ours
  Can make one step the fleeter,
If any little help may ease
  The burden of another,
God give us love and care and strength
  To help along each other.

If any watchful thought of ours
  Can make some work the stronger,
If any cheery smile of ours
  Can make its brightness longer,
Then let us speak that thought to-day
  With tender eyes a-glowing,
So God may grant some weary one
  Shall reap from our glad sowing.

FOR LOVE OF HER.

BY HOWARD HAZELL.

It was a lovely summer evening in Zermatt. Dinner was just over at the huge Monte Rosa Hotel, and groups of visitors were settling themselves in the chairs outside, to enjoy the beauty of the sunset, and the more mundane pleasures of black coffee and cigars. On the little raised terrace on the opposite side of the road a merry party of five English people were seated round one of the little iron tables. Perched on an uncomfortable wooden seat and solemnly smoking a big cigar was Robert Barton, who was more noted for the first-class peaks he had climbed than for the briefs he had held in the law courts. Facing him sat his friend, George Pollard, a rising young journalist, who was trying to make a rough pencil sketch of Barton's sunburned face. The party was completed by Bert Jeffreys, who was studying for the ministry, and his two sisters.

They were evidently not newcomers in the valley, for their faces were burnt to a rich red color that proved that they had made many excursions above the snow-line. For three weeks they had climbed, scrambled and picknicked on the mountains; occasionally Barton had left them to make some big ascent, but this year he seemed to find greater pleasure in short excursions, in which the sisters were included, than in ascending any of the towering peaks that surrounded the valley. Pollard, though he assured them that he had come to Zermatt with the intention of doing nothing as gracefully as possible, was, however, sufficiently energetic to undertake any excursion which the elder Miss Jeffreys attempted. When Pollard entered the hotel three weeks previously and found that Barton had come the day before, they both said it was a strange coincidence, as each had made other plans. But the coincidence was easily explained by Miss Jeffreys' presence at the hotel, and though neither mentioned it, each knew the loadstone that had drawn them to that secluded valley.

The incurable laziness of Pollard had often been discussed, and the genial journalist was being chafed again for refusing to climb even one peak before he left the valley.

"Look here, Pollard," said Barton, suddenly bringing his eyes down from the smoke rings he was making, "we are not going to let you go back to London until you have done something in the way of a peak."

"Why should you trouble yourself about me, Barton? I came here to please myself and not to please you."

"But my dear fellow," said Jeffreys, "have you no ambition, no pride, no soul above a beaten, dusty mule track? Even my sisters have climbed more than you have."

"I've been to the top of Gornergrat," protested Pollard, "and that is over ten thousand feet."

"Yes, but you seem to have forgotten that you had a mule most of the way," laughed Barton.

"Then I have been on several glaciers, and up to some of the club huts," he persisted, striving to defend himself.

"But that was only because we made you do it, Mr. Pollard," said the elder Miss Jeffreys. "You cannot leave Zermatt until you have used your new ice-pick on some peak."

"I am not to blame for having bought it. Barton made me get it. That is the drawback of having an Alpine clubman for a chum; he always thinks you can enjoy yourself only when climbing up impossible mountains."

"But what have you really used it for?" protested Miss Jeffreys.

"Well, I have dug up a lot of flowers for you."

"That is merely a degradation to a self-respecting ice-pick. What else have you done with it?"

There was a moment's pause and then he replied:

"I ran the sharp end into my hand the day I bought it, and last night I killed a cockroach in my room with the other end."

A roar of laughter greeted this answer, and Barton complained in an aggrieved voice:

"No wonder I could not go to sleep when you were stabbing at that creature over my head."

"I thought you might hear me. The beetle was very nimble, and I am not used to such work," answered Pollard.

"Well, that absolutely settles the matter," Jeffreys urged. "You must conquer something bigger than a cockroach with your ice-axe."

"Why not go up the Unter-Gabelhorn with us to-morrow?" asked the younger Miss Jeffreys, who was more absorbed in watching the red glow die out on the mountains than in listening to the conversation.

"That's a good idea. Barton is going to try and do the Monte Rosa from here, to-morrow," added Jeffreys. "So if you come with us we shall be a partie carree."

"The Law on Monte Rosa, and Journalism and the Church on the Unter-Gabelhorn!" interrupted Barton.

"But we are going with Bert, too," added Miss Jeffreys.

"Then beauty will be on the Unter-Gabelhorn," replied Barton, rising to make a profund bow; but he quickly sat down with more force than was agreeable, as Jeffreys tugged his coat.

"Well, for the first time I wos't be lazy on a holiday. At what unearthly hour do we start?" asked Pollard.

"There's Kaufmann standing over there, isn't it? We'll ask him," said Jeffreys.

One of the shadowy figures standing a few paces off in the street came to them with a quiet "Good evenings, gentlemen."

"Dat is goot. It iss a very nice climb. We must go by four o'clock," he answered in the slow speech of one not used to the language.

"Is it very steep and is there much snow?" asked Pollard.

"Der iss a long couloir, when I goes first and makes steps so," the guide answered, kicking at the little terrace on which they sat to explain his meaning. "Den the rocks iss not hardt, und der view is wundershon. How one says that in English? Ah, peautiful. It iss yery peautiful," repeated the guide, proud of his increased vocabulary.

"There will be four of us, Kaufmann. Had we better have another guide?" asked Jeffreys.

"Yes, dat iss better. My brother can come. We make two parties; one lady, one gentleman, and one guide. It iss very goot so."

"All right, Kaufmann, then we shall be ready to-morrow morning," Jeffreys answered, and with mutual salutations the guide went to his chalet, and all except Pollard entered the hotel. He shifted to a more comfortable chair, for the cool evening had driven most of the visitors into the hotel; and as he filled his pipe his thoughts went back to his arrival at Zermatt. He came hoping to ask Mary Jeffreys to be his wife, but somehow he had never dared to ask her. He saw now, only too plainly, that she loved Barton, and that she had looked upon him as a welcome addition to the party and not as a lover. There were still ten days before he was expected home, but he had determined to return at once and forget her as much as possible in the restless hurry of his life. He was in a very melancholy frame of mind when the church clock struck ten, and recalled him from his brown study. He found that his pipe was out and remembered that he would have to start in six hours for his first peak.

The morning was glorious. The sun was lighting the rocky peak of the Matterhorn, and was slowly creeping down the side of the valley. One or two guides were already outside of the hotel, and Kaufmann was busy putting sandwiches and wine, snow-gaiters and all the impedimenta of a climber's outfit into a couple of rucksacks. The air was frosty, and the party started at a brisk pace, that soon moderated when they left the village and turned up the steep mountain side. The two guides tramped on steadily ahead, and those behind, after a few vain attempts at conversation, relapsed into silence and saved their breath for the task before them. Slowly they climbed toward the sunlit heights, and when they felt the first warm rays of the sun there was a general sigh of relief. But the heat was soon found to be more trying than the frosty cold below, and all extra wraps were thrown off and heaped upon the pile on the guides' backs. Near the foot of the steep couloir that led straight into the heart of the mountain the rucksacks were taken off and a second breakfast was eaten while the ropes were being uncoiled. When the snow-gaiters had been buckled on and the ropes carefully fastened they started up the slope. Kaufmann tied the rope to his waist and led the way, the elder Miss Pollard came in the middle, and Pollard was fastened to the end of that rope. The younger Kaufman, with Jeffreys and his sister roped in the same way, made up the second party. The couloir was steep and the snow covered with a hard skin of ice, and progress was necessarily slow, as Kaufmann kicked step after step in the shining slope. The sun had not entered this gully and the cold seemed intense by comparison with the sunshine they had just quitted.

The two guides chose slightly different routes up the couloir, to avoid showering the loose snow on those below, and it soon became a race as to which should reach the little snowy col which glistened above them between two rocky peaks. Slowly the elder Kaufmann drew ahead of his brother, so that Jeffreys and his sister had only struggled some two-thirds of the way up the gully when they heard a shout of victory and derision from above and saw the first three silhouetted against the sky.

For a few moments they stood looking at the magnificent view beneath them. To their right was a little rocky peak, and in front and beneath rolled the Trift glacier. The sky was cloudless, and where they stood at the top of the gully the sun shone brightly upon them. To their left was the smooth ridge that ended the snow slope they had just climbed, and on the far side rose a steep face of rock, up which lay the track to the summit.

"We must go, or when we climbs we makes stones fall on my brother," Kaufmann said, as soon as they had regained their breath; and he carefully walked across the little col, probing each step with the long handle of his ice-axe before he advanced. "You must go in my steps always," he said, half turning torward Miss Jeffreys, who was following him. "Dis iss a cornice here—all snow, no rock below," and he drove his axe deeply into the snow to his right, to show where the dangerous ledge of snow overhung the precipice beneath. "Rock here," he added, pointing in front of him, "hold de rope tight." And once more he went forward.

Pollard followed behind, treading in the guide's footsteps, and holding the rope tightly, so that it id not trail in the snow between him and Miss Jeffreys. He was about half-way across, and Kaufmann had already begun to climb the rocks in front of them, when he suddenly felt himself beginning to sink. He glanced down and saw a dark crack open in the snow on his left and stretch some distance toward his companions. In an instant he guessed he was on the fatal ledge of snow, and that it had given way beneath him. Instinctively he tried to step forward toward the firmer snow as he shrieked, "Kaufmann, I'm falling."

He had a momentary glimpse of Miss Jeffrey's horror-stricken face, and then he felt himself falling, falling, as in a dream. He was suddenly stopped with a jerk that seemed to cut him in two, and he found himself dangling by the waist over the awful space beneath. For a moment he heard nothing but the soft hissing sound of snow sliding over snow, and felt gentle blows as lumps fell from the broken edge above. Dazed and shaken by the fall, he dreamily watched the pellets of snow flying through the air and his hat floating slowly downward to the glacier beneath him, and he wondered if it would be pleasant for him to float down in that easy way. He suddenly realized his position, when he heard Kaufmann cry out:

"Mein Gott! Er ist todt!"

Then the horror of the abyss beneath him seized his mind, and he struggled to lay hold of the rope by which he was hanging. Looking up he saw Miss Jeffreys lying on the edge of the broken cornice, helplessly fixed in that position by his weight, which was dragging her down with him to the certain death which awaited them on the ice beneath.

"Kaufmann," shrieked Pollard, "can't you pull us up? I am powerless."

"Ach, nein! Climb on de rope. I hold de rocks an' I shall slip soon. My brother iss far down." And he gave a loud cry for help, which echoed in the rocks and down the gully. Pollard seized the rope and slowly began to pull himself up a few inches. But the rope was small and wet and he could not grip it with his benumbed fingers.

"I can't climb up," he cried, despairingly to the guide. "Where are the others?"

"My brother come in four or five minutes, but I slip before; I no stand well." And once more he shouted to his brother, who was plunging furiously up the slope.

"Mary," suddenly called out Pollard, dropping all social formalities in his extreme peril, "can you pull me up?"

"No, I can't. I am held down in the snow and can't move," she answered in a terrified voice. "I can see Kaufmann slipping. It will be all over before the others come."

Pollard dared not look down. The space was so immense that it made him dizzy. Suddenly he felt the rope give and then stop.

"I slip soon now," gasped Kaufmann.

"Mary," Pollard called out with a ring of determination in his voice, "listen to me. When you go down tell them it was not Kaufmann's fault. It's an accident. I've long wanted to tell you how I love you, and to prove my love to you. I can show you now."

Even as he spoke he began to cut furiously at the rope above him with his ice-axe. Already the red strand, woven into the centre of the Alpine rope, was showing, and the thought flashed into his mind that it was not the rope he was cutting, but the thread of his own life, and that another blow would separate him from love and hope, and all that he held dear.

"I knew you loved me and I pitied you," cried the helpless woman. "It's too late now. Why give me any messages? We shall all die together. O Robert! Robert!" she sobbed in despair.

"Tell my mother how it happened," answered Pollard. "Tell Barton I never hated him, although I knew he would win you." Then raising his voice he called: "Are they coming Kaufmann?"

"No; two minutes—and I slip now," he called back.

"Hold on, then," he shouted back, bravely; and in a lower voice, "Good-bye, my love!"

Another tremor in the cord and suddenly the strain was taken off. Kaufman gave a gasp of relief, while the woman half buried in the snow shrieked with terror. Cautiously the guide made his position firm and dragged her toward him. Then he saw that the rope from her waist was hanging loosely over the edge, and in a horror-stricken voice, he asked: "Where is de Herr?"

Hysterical sobs were his only answer, and as he drew the loose rope toward him and saw the frayed ends, he muttered in amazement, "Gott in Himmel! He cut de rope himself!" and he reverently raised his hat and crossed himself.

An Englishman and his wife always come to Zermatt each summer, sometimes only for a day, but they never leave without laying a wreath on that grave. In the early spring, when the first flowers have blossomed in some sheltered nook, a little bunch is always on this spot; and even late in autumn, when the snow is low upon the mountain side, the little Kaufmanns try to find a tender nosegay to place upon the grave of the "good gentleman who fell to save our father."—Nickell Magazine.

Buying By Sample.

A certain gentleman in this town is the proud possessor of a remarkably red nose. The term proud is used advisedly, as the owner is continually relating stories having a bearing on the brilliant hue of his nasal treasure. The following is one of them: He was in Exeter one afternoon, and having completed his business, was amusing himself by an inspection of the shop windows.

While admiring some ties in a certain window, and considering whether he should speculate or not, a little girl came out of the establishment, and finally caught him by the sleeve.

"Please will you come into the shop with me, only for a minute?" she asked.

"Certainly," answered the gentleman, following her at once. Arrived at the counter, the little one astonished everybody by remarking: "Theer, miss, muvver wants a ribbon the same color as this gentleman's nose."

Maine's Biggest Tree.

On the banks of the Androscoggin, in Maine, is a tree which rivals some of California's redwoods in size. The circumference, four feet from the ground, is 23 feet, diameter 7 feet. About six feet from the ground there are seven branches radiating from its trunk, which are from 18 inches to 24 inches in diameter. The branches spread over a space of ground 270 feet in circumference, or 90 feet in diameter. Where the branches leave the trunks of the tree, about seven feet from the ground, there has been erected a band stand, which seats twenty-five persons.

One ounce of permanganate of potash will make a bucketful of disinfectant.

One of the most practical ideas in connection with the relief of the miners in the Klondike region is that of the employment of reindeer in the expedition. As announced in a recent dispatch from Washington, the Government has taken this matter in hand, as well as the control of the entire expedition. Secretary Alger has made a requisition on William Akellman, the Federal reindeer herder, for 600 of the useful animals for immediate use. Condensation of foodstuffs makes it possible for the authorities to send large amounts with little comparative expense. The tractability and faithfulness of the animals render the undertaking one of much less difficulty than would be the case under any other circumstances. When it is remembered that each of the 600 reindeer can haul 200 pounds, the value of the proposed service cannot be overestimated. The sturdy little animals will easily haul sledges and cargoes over glaciers and through mountain passes when horses would be absolutely useless.

Reindeer are small animals, compared to the other families. They are usually a trifle over four feet in stature, have short bodies, compactly put together, and strong, short legs, which carry them over the ground at a very rapid rate. The Laps say these beasts of burden can trot along hauling a sledge loaded with 200 pounds at the rate of from nine to ten miles an hour, and maintain this speed for many hours without apparent fatigue. They are nimble and sure-footed as the chamois, have the endurance of the burro and lack the obstinacy of the latter capricious brute. All the conditions which environ the proposed expedition are to their liking, so that nature seems to have designated them as the means of relieving the sufferers.

HAND SHADOWS.

Remarkable Pictures that May Be Made by Silhouetting.

It is not too much to say that the pastime of making hand shadows is as universal as light itself. The Chinese practiced it thousands of years ago; and it flourishes at the Egyptian Hall to-day. That there is money in shadows, as well as in more substantial commodities, will be testified by Mr. David Devant, the eminent ombromaneur. The apparatus is not elaborate—merely a powerful arc light of 2,000 candle-power, whose beam passes through a small circular opening on to a sheet of ticket-writer's holland. Occasionally some little property—a pipe, a piece of cardboard, or what-not—is used for adventitious effect; but for the most part the "artist" uses his hands simply and solely. What is more, the arc lamp can be dispensed with, and almost equally amusing results produced by the aid of a clothes-horse, a sheet, and a candle. If an oil lamp is used, care must be taken to turn it so that the edge of the flame is toward the sheet; otherwise the shadows will be blurred and hazy.

No one who has not actually seen a professional entertainment of this kind can form an idea of the amusement that may be derived from these hand shadows. Of course, the pictures largely depend for their effect upon incessant movement; yet so cleverly are the figures rendered, that even this series of "still" photographs bears powerful testimony to the skill of the artist.

The "British bulldog" (see illustration) is a capital example of unaided handwork. His ferocity on the screen is extraordinary. He advances threateningly, albeit with the unsteady gait of his kind; and his terrible eye rolls in fearsome style by a truly ingenious finger-tip movement on the part of the shadowgraphist. As Mr. Devant's hands enter the illuminated disc they are quite separate, all the fingers being extended. The operator then proceeds dexterously to "mold' his subject, but in such a manner that all may behold the clever evolution of the finger. The placing of the hands and the disposition of each finger are swiftly seen by an intelligent audience, who appreciate this method far more than they would the instantaneous appearance of perfect figures.

But to proceed. In another of our illustrations we have a singularly ingenious representation of a swan, no "property" of any kind being used—unless one so describes Mr. Devant's own head. The photograph scarcely requires explanation. The stately bird, here shown, well maintains its ancient and familiar traditions. The long, graceful neck comes back in sinuous curves that the plumage (Mr. Devant's hair) may be preened and pecked; and the stiff little tale waggles in pleasurable anticipation as the swan dives beneath the surface of the supposed lake. Finally, the bird sails out of the disc by the simple process of Mr. Devant inclining himself gradually forward.

Turn we now for a moment to M. Trewey, of the Crystal Palace, whose capital bull is shown; this, as you may see, is a wholly unassisted hand shadow. When about to produce a new figure, M. Trewey takes a seat between his light and the screen, and then commences to practice patiently and persistently, introducing tentatively delicate little lines here and there, and trying various motions that he has previously noted mentally while studying the living prototype.

beard being produced in a remarkably ingenious fashion by the fingers of one hand extended downward.

One of the most effective of these shadow portraits is that of Sir Henry Irving. The long hair is very cleverly indicated, while a slightly protruding finger-tip produces on the sheet the effect of the pince-nez. Of course, as we have remarked before, hand shadow pictures cannot be judged when stationary. For each and every one of them is designed a certain marvelously appropriate movement; and even the great personages whose portraits ap-

The King Came.

At the Brussels exposition a few days ago King Leopold of Belgium, wishing to examine more closely a certain American machine, left his suite and stepped into the booth where the machine was installed. He requested the man in charge to explain its mechanism to him. Not noticing the royal escort a few yards away, the attendant took his Majesty for some high official. He explained in detail the working of his machine, and dwelt upon its points of excellence. "And, sir," he added, "the King himself is coming to see it before long." Without betraying his identity, King Leopold smilingly thanked the American and withdrew. He seemed much amused, when relating the incident to those who accompanied him, at the idea of an exhibitor who was expecting the King at the very moment when the King was leaving him.

Persons Who Live in Glass Houses Shouldn't Throw Stones.

They tell a story about a young man who was lately married that is funny enough to print, but the unfortunate part of it all is the names cannot be given, for some older persons are mixed up in the complications, and they would be mad as the dickens to see their names in print.

The young man is a bright young rascal and fond of a joke, and a drink occasionally. In fact, he would take three or four if opportunity was favorable. It came to pass that opportunity was favorable one day, and he took several drinks. Then he went to see the pride of his heart, a charming young lady to whom he was engaged. Her papa came home in the evening and discovered the young man in his deplorable condition. He lectured him in the severest way imaginable, and sent him home. But he didn't forbid him the house.

In the course of a few days the young man called and tendered to his sweetheart the most ample apology for his breach of etiquette. Later in the evening, in fact, about the quitting hour, the old gentleman came home from a little sitting, where he had lost some money, and gained a jag of symmetrical proportions. He was affable to the boy, and would in all probability have apologized for his rudeness a few nights before had the young man not anticipated him.

"What do you mean by coming home to the bosom of your family at this hour of the night, and in this condition?" said the boy. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself. I want you to understand that such conduct is not permissible in this house, and that the members of this family are not accustomed to see men in the condition you are in. You had better go where you came from, and spend the balance of the evening." And thus he continued reproducing as near as possible the words which had been hurled at his swimming head a few nights previously.

The old man was in a fury. Then he did order the young man out and for keeps. The engagement was off and for good. But nobody concerned in the story died from a broken heart, or anything of that kind. They married in due time, other partners, of course, and lived happily ever afterward.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribute.

THE FIRST LIFEBOAT.

Very Different from the Complicated Vessel of To-Day.

The story of the lifeboat remains to be written. To do so now would be premature, inasmuch as, notwithstanding the large amount of ingenuity which has been lavished on the designing of a vessel which shall prove satisfactory, the thing desired yet remains to be achieved. The first lifeboat was, curiously enough, devised by a landsman, one Lionel Lukin, a coachbuilder of Dunmow, in Essex, England. This man had lost some relatives in the foundering of a vessel at sea, and he set about designing a vessel which should be unsinkable. Among those who took up the problem where Lukin left it was one Henry Greathead, a boatbuilder of South Shields, who worked continuously at the subject, and an order for the construction of what is practically the first specially constructed lifeboat was given to Greathead in 1805.

THE FIRST LIFEBOAT.

The first lifeboat was 36 feet long, and possessed a beam of 10 feet. It was rowed by 10 oars, double-banked, and it was the first vessel built in which the main features of all lifeboats were found. Thus, the stem and stern were alike, it had a curved keel, and it bulged greatly amidships.

Every time we see a woman, we thank the Lord that we are not compelled to wear a ribbon collar.

When a man wants a cigar he never wants it very bad.

FUNNY FINISH TO A FEUD.

Ormondes and Desmonds Had Quarreled for Six Centuries.

It is seldom in this workaday age that one encounters a genuine family feud inherited from sire to son through no less than six centuries. Such a feud actually existed in the dominions of Queen Victoria until a short time ago, and its final settlement was brought about by the ingeniousness of a boy of 9.

The two leading Anglo-Irish families in Ireland had long been the FitzGeralds and the Butlers. From being comrades in arms of the invading Strongbow they became by degrees rival baronS and fierce contestants for the vice sovereignty of their adopted country. In the wars of the roses the Butlers sided with the white rose of Lancaster, the FitzGeralds with the red rose of York. Factions gathered around the two great houses and the bitter feud brought forth death and bloodshed from as early as 1250 down to the Williamite wars. The Butlers, whose chief had obtained the dignity of Earl of Ormonde, succeeded in crushing the power of the elder branch of the FitzGeralds, Earls of Desmond. It is told of a warlike Desmond that while being borne prisoner on the locked shields of his feudal foe's clansmen the Butlers taunted him with the bitter words:

"Where is now the proud FitzGerald?"

To which the indomitable earl answered:

"FitzGerald is where he ought to be—on the necks of the Butlers."

This proud reply will give an idea of the intensity of the strife.

Now, it happened that her majesty's Irish viceroy gave a garden party in the viceregal lodge at Dublin, and thither were bidden by accident the Marquis of Ormonde, head of the Butler family (familiar to the Americans through his yachting interests), and the little Duke of Leinster, boyish chieftain of the house of FitzGerald. With the duke, who was not quite 9 years of age, came his widowed mother, one of the beautiful Duncombe sisters.

The Duchess of Leinster lost sight of her son for a space, and in going to look for the lad found him engaged in earnest conversation with a tall, elderly gentleman, in whom she was surprised to recognize the Marquis of Ormonde. What was her horror when, on approaching nearer, she distinctly heard the youthful Geraldine remark in somewhat slangy phrase:

"Well, I suppose I ought to punch your head on account of the feud; but I say, you know, you're too jolly decent a chap for that. Can't we shake hands and call it square?"

With the utmost gravity Lord Ormonde grasped the small hand of his hereditary foe, and when the amused mother came to congratulate them on the happy settlement of 600 years of bitterness she found young hopeful perched, like his famous ancestor, on the neck of the Butler.

Thus ended a feud, undoubtedly one of the oldest and possibly the bloodiest in the world.

WIFE OF TAMMANY'S CHIEF.

Mrs. Richard Croker a Good Mother and a Devout Church Woman.

Wherever American newspapers are read, Richard Croker's name is known in connection with Greater New York's first municipal campaign, but the Tammany leader in the role of husband and father and head of a household is a character quite unfamiliar to the public. In these roles he is described as "delightfully old-fashioned."

It was twenty-four years ago that Richard Croker and Miss Elizabeth Fraser were married. She was 19 years old and a beauty. He was 28 and was always referred to as a "promising young man." It was a love match, the surest foundation for a happy home. They commenced life on a humble scale. Mrs. Croker was a favorite in the neighborhood. She has not lost a whit of her early charm of manner.

She went to early mass then and she does so still. Her hand soothed many a fevered brow in those days. She is still charitable still keenly sympathetic. She is still a handsome woman. She is tall and well proportioned. Her features are delicate and regular. Her eyes are dark, with finely arched brows. Her hair is black. Her cheeks have the hue of health.

Early in September, when the political campaign was opened, Mr. Croker left the home on 74th street and took up his residence at a hotel. This move by the chief of Tammany is a mark of consideration toward his family and servants. Mrs. Croker is an indulgent wife and housekeeper. "Mrs. Croker doesn't know the name of the County Clerk nor Sheriff and I am glad of it," her famous husband has been heard to say, and the mere mention of women in politics brings a frown to his brow.

Echoes.

In a cave in the Pantheon, at Rome, the guide, by striking the flap of his coat, makes a noise equal to a twelve-pound cannon's report. The singularity is noticed, in a lesser degree, in the Mammoth cave in Kentucky. In the cave of Smellin, near Viborg, in Finland, a cat or dog thrown in will make a screaming echo, lasting some minutes. Fingal's cave, on the isle of Staffa, has also an abnormally developed echo.

A good word might be said in favor of congress gaiters, but shoes with tongues should be able to speak for themselves.

You can't put enough clothes on a worthless man to disguise him.

PASSED AWAY!

Auburn Sadly Mourns the Loss Of Her Most Prominent Citizen,

C. A. O. McCLELLAN

The Distinguished Jurist and Statesman.

AN ACTIVE LIFE HAS CLOSED

He Passed Peacefully to the Great Beyond at 11:45 Last Night.

Charles A. O. McClellan was born at Ashland, Ohio, May 25, 1835, his parents being Wm. and Eliza Wiggins McClellan, who were natives of New Jersey. He received such education as the limited schools of the day afforded, but the foundation thus laid was sufficient for one of his active mind and energetic disposition. The knowledge so gained was supplemented by valuable business experience in assisting his father and added to this, his natural taste and aptitude for grasping and mastering life's varied questions, insured him that success in business and social life, that so fully came to him, as the years grew apace. So at nineteen he was engaged in special work of teaching penmanship and pen drawing, and in this way he added to his opportunities and became a thorough scholar in the common branches. In 1856 he came to Auburn and was employed as deputy in the office of the auditor, M. F. Pierce, who was a relative. In the intervals of this work he turned his attention to the law, which he decided should be his life profession And it might be said that from this time his life was devoted to this work. Nov. 10, 1859, he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Long, daughter of Samuel D. and Matilda Long, then residents of Auburn. And the two thus happily united began life's serious business with strong hearts and willing hands. Without means other than his own natural resources and ability, he soon made himself prominent in his profession, in general business and in social life. That his business ability was great is evidenced by his success, being for some years, and at the time of his death president of the First National Bank in Auburn and owner of the DeKalb bank at Waterloo besides have other large property interests. His career as a lawyer and jurist were no less eminent. In January 1863 he became associated in the practice of law, with Judge James I. Best, now of Minneapolis, and even then the leading attorneys of Northeastern, Indiana. The two men made a masterly combination and were like the two halves of a well developed brain, each supporting and supplementing the other. The firm of "Best & McClellan" became widely known and popular, And when Judge Best removed to Minneapolis, Mr. McClellan continued the business alone doing the greater part of his work unaided till the close of the great McIntosh trial last fall when he had called back Judge Best to assist in what he felt to be one of the greatest legal struggles of his life. In this trial his whole soul and energy were enlisted and to its wearing and excitement, the beginning of his final sickness may possibly have some connection. At the triumphant conclusion of that case he found himself in failing health, and soon for a time as he supposed, laid aside his work, and at the urgent orders of his physicians, Drs. D. J. & Vesta M. Swartz gave up all work. The December term of court the first in a generation, missed his familiar form. Under the watchful care of his physicians and a devoted wife and children he was finally so far improved that he was able to be about a little each day, and high hopes were felt that he might recover. Yesterday, he was unusually well and was about the house, in his office, and the bank and even went to the cellar to see about fixing the heater. When he retired at the usual hour he was apparently in the best of condition. But about 11:15 he was suddenly taken with heart failure and though help was summoned at once by telephone and messenger he sank away without a struggle as one passing into gentle sleep, breathing his last at 11-45. His family, those in Auburn were present, reaching his bedside as he was sinking away.

Judge McClellan as already said, had always been a prominent figure in the county. He had moved from Auburn to Waterloo in 1861 and it was his work largely that made the first map of DeKalb county, the substance of which is in all our more recent maps. Associated with him in this was Hon. Eli B. Gerber, now a prominent citizen of Ligonier. When the Jackson & Saginaw railroad, now the Lake Shore Branch, was just started he was one of the leading spirits and afterwards for many years a director and helped to shape its policy and secure its success. We remember in the great strike that came on the roads about 18 years ago, hearing him give as a reason for no strike on the Jackson Branch. "We give all our profits to our employes anyway, and they know it. We have not reduced their wages as the other roads have. Our men will not strike." And they did not. In 1868 he and Judge Best built the Star Mills at Waterloo, costing about $18,000 the most complete flouring mills in the county. Its destruction by fire a few years later entailed a heavy loss. In 873, he started the DeKalb Bank and in 1878 became associated as an officer in the First National Bank and since 1882 has been its president an office to which he was again elected at the recent annual meeting. He moved to Auburn in 1883 and since then has been identified with many of the chief business interests here, including the Snyder Wagon Company. He has always been prominent in Masonic circles, and had climbed high in the branches of that ancient and honored order.

Judge McClellan was always a pronounced democrat. In 1860 he was one of the two U. S. Census marshals who took the census of DeKalb county. He served as district committeeman for two years.

In February 1879, he was appointed by Gov. Williams, judge of the 40th circuit, a new one provided for in a bill introduced by Hon. S. S. Shutt then in the legislature, as a temporary means to relieve the increasing business in court, which under Judge Tousley had fallen behind. It left Tousley with only Noble county, while Judge McClellan had DeKalb and Steuben with G. B. Adams, of Angola prosecutor. The circuit and office expired by the terms of the law, Oct. 1, 1880.

In 1888, his party selected him as an opponent in the race for congress, against the popular J. R. White, who had two years before carried the district. The race for the nomination was a warm one, his opponents being P. S. O'Rourke, M. V. B. Spencer, R. C. Bell, C. K. Greene and W. F. McNagny. On the 14th ballott, the vote was McClellan 51 votes as against 28 for O'Rourke and 18 for McNagny, each having a fraction over. At the election his majority over White was 1311. Two years later his majority over J. N. Babcock was 4050, the largest plurality ever given in the district. At the end of his second term, he refused to be again a candidate, though his friends greatly desired him to remain in Congress. He was under no obligation to retire, but his party had been giving but two terms, and he felt it his duty to obey what had seemed to be their plan. His work in congress had been in the highest degree satisfactory. He had been while in congress, the Indiana member of the National Democratic Congressional committee composed of the most eminent men of his party in congrees. It was with regret that many party leaders saw him retire. Since then his life and his work have been among us. He was always active in all public enterprises, and was liberal all occasions. He was a faithful friend and true without faltering, to what he believed his duty. The writer remembers a conversation with him occasioned by the active and aggressive part he was taking in a matter that it was feared would make him some trouble in his second election to congress. He listened a moment, and then said with earnest firmness. "But I know I am right. And if it hurts me, I don't care." That ended it. The increased majority at the election showed that his course was sustained.

A life as active as his cannot have its full history in an article like this. Much more might be said. Auburn and DeKalb county have suffered a loss in the death of its most eminent citizen and business circles one of their ablest men.

All the members of Judge McClellan's immediate family survive him, his faithful wife who has been constantly at his side and always with him since his first failing health a month or two ago. She was alone with him when the final struggle came, and barely had time to call help over the telephones. The children are, the son Charles and daughters, Mrs. Jennie Garwood and Mrs. Della Siver. These all, and especially the little grand-children will feel the loss of one who loved and cherished them unceasingly.

The funeral wil be at the Presbyterian church in Auburn, Friday, Feb. 4 1 p. m. and interment at Waterloo.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

For the Taxpayers of DeKalb County.

BY THE DEPUTY AUDITOR M. BOLAND.

Who Is Constantly Enlightning Taxpayers On Important Matters.

EDITOR COURIER,

SIR:—I herewith submit a few facts and figures that I believe will be interesting reading to the tax payers of the several townships and towns in the county and would kindly ask you to publish the same. The following table shows the number of polls and dogs assessed in each township and town. The value of all taxable property in each township and town. The taxable value of railroad, telegraph, telephone, express and palace car companies in each township and town. The rate on each one hundred dollars valuation and the rate on each poll in each township and town. It also shows the amount of taxes each township will pay for all purposes if all the taxes are collected. It further shows the amount of delinquent taxes in each township and town.

The town of Auburn and city of Garrett collect their corporation taxes through the county treasurer, which accounts for the rate of taxation in these two places being so much more than the other towns.

In addition to the levy in Waterloo shown in the above table there is a corporation levy of 75 cents on each one hundred dollars and 50 cents on each poll making their total levy $2 31 on each one hundred, and $2.75 on each poll, also in addition to the levy in Butler shown in the above table there is a corporation levy of 95 cents on each one hundred dollars making their total levy $2.67 on each one hundred dollars valuation and $1.00 on each poll. The total number of polls assessed in the county is 4593. Total number of dogs assessed is 1615.

The total taxable valuation of all property in the county is $12,890,605.00 of which amount $2,576,770 00 is assessed against the railroads, telephones, express and palace car companies.

The total amount to be collected in taxes on the above valuation is $211,290.93 of which amount the railroads, etc will pay $38,737.45.

Should the present levy of taxes and the delinquent taxes of 1896 and former years be paid in full we would collect during the present year $236,178 60 but taxes are never all paid. While the treasurer is always collecting old delinquent taxes it is impossible to collect all. so that the amount of taxes delinquent each year is about the same.

Out of the above amount of $211,290.93 if all is paid the county will receive for county purposes $64,882.51, the balance is for state and township purposes.

A great many people have an idea that the county commissioners make the levy for all our taxes but this is not correct. The levy made by the commissioners this year is 50½ cents on each $100.00, the balance is levied by the state officers and township trustees For example the levy in Butler township is $1.36 on $100. and $1.50 on each poll. The commissioners levy for county purposes is 50½ cents, the state levy is 29½ cents on a $100.00 and $1.00 on each poll, the trustees levy for township purposes is 56 cents on a $100.00 and 50 cents on a poll. It will be seen by this example that by deducting 50½ cents and 29½ cents, or a total of 80 cents on a $100.00 and 1.00 on a poll from the total rate of taxation in each township you can tell what amount your trustee has levied for the running expenses of your township.

By reference to the table you will see that Auburn's taxable valuation is the largest in the county. Concord township which includes St. Joe and Spencerville is next and Wilmington township outside of Butler, is next each of the three amounting to more than one million dollars. Other interesting facts will be seen by a careful study of the table. All of which is respectfully submitted,

Will it cure you? It has cured thousands like you. Why not you?

COUNTY MEETING

Democrats Elect a New Chairman and Other Officers

The regular meeting of the democratic committeemen of the county, was held at Auburn, Saturday, Jan. 29, 1898, as called by Chairman Frederick It was held in the rooms over the COURIER office, at first in the front room, but as the attendance was very large, they moved into the adjoining room, the Armory of the Epworth Guards. Here they were called to order by Chairman Fredericks who in a brief speech alluded to the work done in the past, and the work of the future. J. Wm. Wagner, county secretary was present, and the report of the past two years was read. The townships were then called to see how many were represented. All responded but Stafford, and its vote was afterwards cast by a proxy. Roy Williams, committeeman for Troy, had to go home on an early train and his vote was also cast by a proxy. It was decided, that as usual, any voter present from a township whose committeeman was not at the meeting, might cast the vote of his township.

Announcements for county chairman for the coming two years, next declared in order. Dr. Nusbaum nominated C. C. Walter, J. N. Boyle nominated M. E. Gardner. There being no further nominations, the chairman appointed Eli Mutzfeldt and E. P. Fitzgerald for tellers. And it was also understood that as usual each precinct should have one vote. The election of chairman was decided on the first ballot. Union cast its 5 votes for Walter. Wilmington and Keyser each cast its full 6 votes for Gardner. All other townships were so scattered or name not announced that the vote could not be recorded in detail. The result was Gardner 18 and Walter 19. At first it was thought there had been a mistake, but when they remembered that the county now had 37 precincts, it was seen the vote was right, and Walter was declared elected. A vice chairman was next chosen. Joseph Link, of Auburn, named M. E. Gardner and his election was made by acclamation. Mr. Walter not being present, Mr. Frederick called Mr. Gardner to the chair. The work of the meeting was then concluded. Milo Husselman and D. M. Link were nominated for secretary. Mr. Link declined and Mr. Husselman was chosen by acclamation. H. K. Leas, of Waterloo was unanimously chosen for treasurer. Motion by Fredericks, carried that executive committee be not chosen till after the county convention. After some remarks by Mr. Frederick and several others, the meeting adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman. The attendance was greater than usual and the best of feeling prevailed.

ARRESTED HERE.

About seven o'clock last evening Wabash Agent Zent received a telegram from Mr. Allhouse of Cone, Mich. to arrest a young man who was on the west bound Wabash passenger train, stating that he was wanted at Cone, for breaking into a store and stealing $50. Marshal Potter was summoned and the train was fairly held up. A young man wearing a prince albert coat, high collar, and a Christian Endeavor badge was sized up as the victim. Several messages were sent back and forth when the authorities at Cone asked for the prisoner's name, Marshal Potter sent it and a reply came at once ordering his release ashe was the son of the storekeeper. The young man was brought up town and stopped at the Hollister, and this morning he went to the Junction on his way to Chicago, enroute to Colorado. His father offered to send him more money, but this the lad refused.

THE OLD HORSE.

Many people here and in Waterloo. will remember the Minnich family, that many years ago moved from Waterloo to Pierceton. Several years ago the eldest son, F. V. B. Minnich moved to Goshen. Here is a story that will be read with interest. It is taken from the Pierceton Record.

We see by the Goshen Times that the old family horse of the Minnich family has had some hard luck. The Minnich's are old Pierceton people and the information about the old horse "Ned" will be interesting. This old horse had been in the family for years.

He was the horse that knew no faults and the girls and mother always felt safe when Ned was hitched to the family buggy. He had grown grey about the eyes and his back was bent with the weight of his growing years, while his once agile step was changed to one of faltering and care. He was beloved by the whole family and Mr. Minnich was anxious to secure for him a home that he might spend his last days in ease and comfort. Hiram Cooper agreed to give him such a home on hi farm on the Haw Patch and so he was sent there. Now it seems that he got into the hands of some traders and finally into the hands of one Moses Ceupp, who drove him from Shipshewana to Goshen this morning.

Mr. Minnich was passing along the street when he noticed a poor, old foot sore horse on the street that showed signs of recognizing Mr. Minnich. He stopped and called his name. The old horse showed such unmistakable signs of recognition that the owner was questioned and finally Mr. Minnich became convinced that it was none other than Ned. He asked for the return of the horse and being refused a writ of attachment was sued out in Justice Hattle's court for the possession of the old servant. His once glossy coat was changed to staring and straggly hair. No shoes protected his aged feet and they were worn to the quick. His intelligence was left and to that he will owe future good care in the warm stable of his former owner.

COURT.

When court opened Monday morning the divorce case between Catherine Denison and her husband, Wm. Denison was called up, but Judge Roby refused to consider it, as the two years required by law, had not passed yet. So he told her she must wait. The two years since the husband left her will not expire till next August.

The case of Martha E. Love vs James Love was dismissed at defendant's costs.

Phebe Knox was divorced from James Knox and given custody of the children, the latter being permitted to visit their father when it does not interfere with school.

Andrew S. Casebeer was divorced from Mary J. Casebeer. As Mr. C. is 92 years old, we think he might have saved some expense and ill feeling by postponing his case a short time.

Arley L. Olds vs Peter Teutsch administrator estate of W. J. Olds, commissioners file report showing partition of land, and were allowed $10 each) and attorney fee was fixed at $30 Approved and partition ordered.

The Tri-State B. & L. Association vs Thos Niver and J. Sechler, judgment for plaintiff.

In the case of Elliott vs Elliott for divorce. Mrs. Elliott was given the divorce with right to resume her former name of Sarah Hosack.

In the petition of Stephen Likens for annulment of marriage with Margaret Boyer, also known as Likens, judgment was in his favor and marriage declared void and canceled at plaintiff's cost.

Monday afternoon the divorce case of Davis vs Davis was brought on and Mrs. Davis got a divorce and $350 alimony and custody of the child Russell.

GOOD IDEA.

Congressman Robinson has made a vigorous attack on some of the loose methods that Uncle Sam permits on the part of his hired help. He is fighting against paying employes a days wages for seven hours work and then allow them a month lay off each year, and also, if occasion happens, allow them 60 days sick leave, if themselves or a friend should be sick. He figures that in this way Uncle Sam loses about a quarter of the services that he pays for. He shows, that in the different departments, from a third to a half, have been granted "sick leave" during the past year. He believes if the climate were not so unhealthy, more work could be easily done, and needed work, such as in pension matters would not be so far behind as it now is. We believe it no more than fair that all employes do a fair and proper amount of work for their wages.

PAY OF TEACHERS.

Chicago has been having a discussion as to teachers' wages, the teachers with low salaries have asked a raise, and called attention to the fact that many of the teachers in higher positions, but easier work got more, and that even desk clerks in the educational departments were better paid. Mayor Harrison takes sides with them. Here is what he said and it will pay all to study it.

The salary of the grade teacher should be raised. The board pays its office people more liberally than it does the hard-working women who are giving their lives to the children of the city. I think a great injustite is being done. They seem entitled, on the showing they have made, to the increase in salary which they have asked. It is clearly the duty of the board to devise meaps for granting this just request. I shall ask the council to pass resolution indorsing the increase. It has always been possible around the board to increase any other salary which came up for consideration. It is time to reward the people who do the hardest and most faithful work.

OBITUARY.

Sarah Treesh was born in Stark county Ohio, Aug. 10, 1837, and departed this life Jan. 25, 1898, aged 58 years, 5 months and 15 days. She was united in marriage to John Miser Oct. 1, 1857. and moved to her home in Richland township, in which she died. Sister Miser was the mother of ten children, six sons and four daughters. Three sons and one daughter have gone before, six remain to mourn. She leaves a kind and affectionate husband, five brothers and five sisters, several grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn, what to them is loss, but to her is eternal gain. Sister Miser united with the Lutheran church at the age of 17 and remained a faithful member of the same until death.

The funeral services were conducted in the German Reformed church near her home, the sermon being preached by Rev. E E. Campbell of the Lutheran church, from the text "My Lord and My God," John 20: 28, followed by Rev. Stover, one of Sister Miser's old friends and neighbers.

A Peerless Liniment.

As a pain destroyer and cure for rheumatism, Salvation Oil is the peer of all liniments. Mr. Wm. H. Brown, proprietor of Striebinger House, Cleveland, O., writes: "I suffered from rheumatism for twelve years and my last attack kept me in bed, unable to walk. I used Salvation Oil and soon was up and about. As a pain destroyer this liniment has no equal." Salvation Oil is sold everywhere for 25 cents. Try it and be convinced.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

AFFECTS EVERY ORGAN.

Does That Most Dreadful of Diseases--Chronic Catarrh.

Over half of the people have catarrh n some form or another, and yet probably not a tenth of these people know that their disease is catarrh. One person says he has Bright's disease; another liver complaint; another consumption; another female complaint. These people would be very much surprised to hear that they were all suffering with chronic catarrh; but it is so, nevertheless. Each one of these troubles, and a great many more, are simply catarrh; that is, chronic inflammation of the mucous lining o whichever organ is affected. Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other location. This is why Pe-ru-na has become so justly famous in the cure of catarrhal diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Pe-ru-na does not palliate; it cures.

Dr. Hartman has recently compiled into book form several of his lectures on chronic catarrh, which he has delivered at different times at the Surgical Hotel. This book is called "Winter Catarrh," and will be sent free of charge on application to The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

OBITUARY.

William J. son of Mr. and Mrs. Balentine was born in DeKalb Co, April 14, 1897 and departed this life on Jan. 22, 1898, aged 9 months and 8 days. William leaves a father, mother and two brothers to mourn his early departure. The funeral services were held at Cedar Creek conducted by Rev. Steckley of Garrett. Interment in the cemetery Northwest of Cedar Creek.

KILLED BY A TRAIN

The west bound B. & O. train of last evening, that reaches the Junction at 8:53, struck and killed a man just the other side of Welker. Our informant is a traveling man, Mr. H. B. Mills, who was on the train. It appears that three men were walking on the track a little ways east of Welker. They had probably been drinking some, and the one, who was struck, and whose name the others gave as John Sandoe, had apparently been drinking a good deal. They say he had been having some trouble with a woman and seemed discouraged. Then called his attention to the approaching train, but he resented their words of warning, and instead of stepping off the track seemed to throw himself toward the engine. The engineer whistled but had not time to stop the train. The man was struck and thrown about 30 feet from the track. As soon as the train could be stopped it was backed about half a mile to where the two men and their prostrate companion were. The poor fellow looked like a bundle of clothes lying there limp and lifeless. Mr. Mills and the baggageman and mail clerk got him into the car, but could do nothing for him. A physician on the train, was called in, but he could not find any sign of life. The blow probably killed him at once. He said the man appeared to be a foreigner. The men said his home was in North Baltimore, and so he was brought on and put off there. Mr. Mills thinks each train should be provided with appliances to aid the unfortunate in cases of such accidents.

BUTLER.

The social event of the week has been the marriage of Prof. Kimmel to one of of his fair lady teachers Miss Florence Abrahams. It is said that Miss Abrams enjoys the enviable distinction of being the best teacher in the school, hence the Prof. may be pardoned in his choice out of seven or eight fair Hoosier girls

The blind trio, held the boards at the M. E. church last Friday night. Their musical talent for blind people seemed almost wonderful.

C K. Baxter of Central Kansas, and his excellent, wife are making a general visit among their DeKalb Co. friends. Mr. Baxter is well known to a great many of our people from his long connection with the Waterloo Press.

Miss Lizzie Champion has so recovered as to be about the house again.

James Campbell has so far recovered from her recent illness as to be able to come to town.

Robert Sanson, a well known former citizen of Butler, more recently of Richland township, was buried at Butler last week.

Mrs. Orla Campbell, of Indianapolis is visiting her parents at Waterloo and her husband's friends at Butler.

The M. E. Sunday school seems to be on the up grade since the advent of Dr. Kester as superintendent.

Charlie Campbell returned to Indianapolis the first of the week.

COUNTY EXAMINATIONS.

The various townships of the county, will hold examinations for common school graduates on three different Saturdays. The first will be Feb. 19 the second March 19, and the third April 16. They are held either at the center school or at the school most convenient for the applicants to reach. The trustee is generally assisted by one of the teachers, but the papers are sent to the county superintendant for grading. And he issues the diplomas to those who succeed. It makes him a great deal of hard work, but it is a valuable part of the school system.

Thursday's Daily.

—Dr. Baxter was called to Waterloo this forenoon on professional business.

—James Triplet of Waterloo, is another of our prompt payers who has put his subscription to the COURIER way ahead.

—Don't annoy others by your coughing, and risk your life by neglecting a cold. Our Minute Cough Cure cures coughs, colds, croup, grippe and all throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord sells it, —Mart sheets had a break down while hauling hay this morning and was compelled to let his wagon occupy the middle of the road on West Seventh street.

—Children and adults tortured by burns, scalds, injuries, eczema or skin eiseases may secure instant relief by DeWttt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is the great Pile remedy. By H. B. McCord.

—Contractor Werntz is getting the iron work on the ground for the New Seventh street bridge but the Lord only knows when he will have it completed as it has progressed very slowly.

—Whooping cough is the most distressing malady; but its duratian can be cut short by the use of One Minute Cough Cure, which is also the best known remedy for croup and all lung and bronchial troubles. For sale by McCord.

—The burning question in Auburn now is, "Where is Small?" Not Sam Small but our own little Small. It is freely stated that he has been too, too irresistible in certain quarters, and has suddenly vanished. Why he should leave Auburn where he was so decidedly popular, we don't know.

—What pleasure is there in life with a headache, constipation and biliousness? Thousands experience them who could become perfectly healthy by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. By H. B. McCord.

—Mrs. A. J. Ralston and Mrs. J. A. Barns came back from Angola last evening, after several days most pleasantly passed with friends there, including the families of C. H. Jackson and H. K. Scott. The ladies of Auburn always have nice visits with their Angola and Albion friends.

—After yeaes of untold suffering from piles, B W. Pursell of Knitersvalle, Pa., was cursd by using a single box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema, rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this remedy. For sale by H. McCord —The Boston express on the Lake Shore road was last week hauled from Toledo to Sandusky, fifty-eight miles. in fifty-six minutes, the train consisting of eight cars. A tumbler of water was set on the table and filled and in running that distance, and at that speed not a drop was spilled from the glass, so smooth was the track.

A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief, after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Miss Margaret R. Carver, principal of the Albion High School, has accepted a position as teacher in the Girls' High school at Naini Tali, India, and will enter upon her duties in a few months. She has contracted for five years' service.

It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For ale by Robbins & McCord, tf

—Rev. T. M. Guild drove down to Lockwood church last night and was accompanied by J. C. Lochner of the COURIER. Mr. Guild preached a very interessing sermon for Rev. Meese who is conducting a revival effort there. He took entire charge of the meeting and was successful in bringing forward one lady and happily converting her before the meeting close. There seems to be a number of persons there under conviction and we believe that the assistance of some special sermons would result in great good. Rev. Guild may drive down to the meeting again Friday evening.

—The Wabash river is too be stocked with a now kind of bass, the Monthorough variety. They are said to be fine.

—Let the children learn their letters before you send them to the grocers. Teach them how to spell "Fox" and impress upon them the importance of getting what you send them for. Learn them to lisp "Fox" XXXX Wafers" when you send them for crackers.

—Dr. D. N. Fitch has bought the residence property of the late Mrs. Abright, the consideration being $1,500, which surely is cheap enough. He bought it of Dr. Alvord, Mrs. Abright's relative at Peru, under whose treatment she had been for some time.

—Hicksville News:—There is one thing in the case of Editor Miner, of the Garrett Herald, and Charles Everett, of Ft. Wayne, that is hard for a newspaper man to understand, and that is: How in the name of reason did a newspaper man come to have fifty dollars to send to anybody all at one time?

—The Elkhart county commissioners have employed a new expert to go over the county records. He charges $5 a day. But the citizens desire to have Mr. Ernst also employed, to go over the books with him. They say this should be done in the interest of fair play.

—The Waterloo Press has a very good picture of the late J. I. Frager. The Press is showing a considerable enterprise in this direction.

—Wm. Henry Harrison Dennis, a Nappanee attorney has been disbarred from practice in courts. And now his name is simply Dennis.

—Cut rates to the Klondyke are exciting the railroads now: They are already giving tickets at about one cent a mile. Chicago to Seattle is a little over 2,200 miles and tickets have been sold at $22.50. The regular rates are, on limited trains $71.50, on first class trains $61.50 and second-class, $51.50. By next June a man can get to Seattle pretty cheap.

Saturday's Daily.

—Judge McBride left for his home in Indianapolis this morning.

Among our callers today were W. Betz, Abram Sherck and Uncle Henry Shull, J. W. Ferguson and his little son Justus.

—Wheat took a rise yesterday of 2¼ cents and L. J. Miller could have sold his holdings for an advance of $500 or $600.

—Garrett Herald:—The Auburn COURIER reports increased patrons and hopeful prospects ahead. This pleases us as Bro, Barns has all along devoted his best efforts at lowest living rates to his patrons and that city. The DAILY COURIER has pulled through and become a permanent fixture amid storms and adversity and will stem the tide for years to come. It may not be making big profits but it will live and grow and in time be the pride of many who now traduce it.

—Miss Margaret Ford has received an invitation from Westminster Seminary to attend a Piano Recital at Ft. Wayne, Feb. 1st. This treat is extended to their many friends by Miss Sharp and Mrs. Wells and is to be given at the Ft. Wayne club, by Mrs. Enid Strasburg-Myers of Berlin, Germany assisted by Mrs. Jennie Hay Ormsby of Ft. Wayne.

—Gus Mead is just getting over a serious accident that happened a week ago. He was out in the country with G. I. Patterson, and when he went to hitch the team it got frightened and jumped, knocking him over and dragging him awhile. His face and one side of his body were badly bruised but no bones were broken.

—The Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. elected the following offices today. R. S. S. Reed, Pres.; John Sheffer, Vice-Pres.; W. F. C. Francis, Sec'y.; James McClellan, Treas.

Geo. Clark, a veteran living in Decatur Co., this state, has fallen heir to half the estate of a wealthy relative in Colorada. Clark is the last survivor of the twelve union soldiers who were left ashore on a little island in the Mississippi on the night of December 31, 1863, the terrible "cold new years" our older people well remember. Four staid in the boat and floated ashore and were saved. The eight on the island dug holes in the sand for shelter, and tried every means to keep warm. But five were frozen by morning, one died a few days after they were rescued. The seventh lived till about two years ago, so that Clark is the only survivor of that terrible bliz zard.

—Mrs. Henry Beck, of Whitley Co., is visiting the family of John Sheffer in the country. She is a sister of H. C. Shull of this place. Her many friends will learn with regret, that she has lost the use of one eye and the other has been injured. It was caused by a flying piece of wire. Her little boy was cutting up wire with a pair of wire cutters he had picked up, and the pieces flew into her eye.

—Wednesday there was a terrible storm of hail near Berrien Springs, Mich, where T. C. Elson lives. Hail as large as marbles came down in great sheets for several minutes. A good deal of damage was done to fruit trees, windows etc. It is the worst hail storm they have had since 1875.

—The oldest house in America has just been sold to a man who wishes to preserve it. It is the old Spanish building erected at San Augustine, Florida, in 1565. Its walls are made of "coquina" a sort of concrete formed of concrete formed of sea shells and cement or mortor.

—C. H. Triplet, of Waterloo, and Roy Williams, of Troy, were here to day and both paid up to '99. Mr. Williams is a son of Leveret Williams one of the pioneers of his section.

—John Anthony who married E. D. Raub's daughter has bought a farm in Hancock Co. Ohio, and they will soon move there. It is a farm formerly owned by Mr. Bosseman, a brother of Uncle Henry Shull's first wife.

—Letters in the postoffice are for Miss Minnie Seabren, and D. A. Crawford, W. C. Carmer, J. F. Myers, Seymore Smith, Frank Thiller, C. E. Wonreth.

—Samuel Osbun got a chance to do the COURIER a favor yesterday. He lives a little this side of Jackson Center, and has been a patron of this office many years.

—South Dakota has a queer artesian well at lower Brule Agency. It has quit spouting water, and now pushes up blue clay the size of its 6 inch pipe. No cause is understood.

—The Hamilton Hustler is close to the danger line. Many a man has been sued for $10,000 damages for a smaller affront than publishing such a picture as the Hustler has of Evangelist Patterson.

—Elias Fisher, of Altona, has thanks for cash paid on subscription.

—Wm. E. Crane of Butler one of the committeemen, was a caller today.

—Among our callers today were N. A. and T. F. Lung of Butler township, sons of Samuel Lung. The former is the committeeman for his township.

MUTUAL LIFE 18

TORONTO.

—Mrs. S. J. Zimmerman met with quite a painful accident Sunday. She was coming down from the porch at E. Casebeer's when she slipped. At the same time she was carrying Mrs. Patterson's baby but fortunately it was not injured in the fall. Mrs. Zimmerman's bruises were quite severe.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Delapp, were up to Jonesville over Sunday visiting relatives. While there they met Dr. A. N. Coates, formerly of this place, but now of West Unity. Doc is married and had his bride with him for a visit with his brother who lives there. Mr. and Mrs. DeLapp were favorably impressed with Mrs. Coates. The Doctor is thinking some of going to Lima, Ohio, to locate, where Geo. McKay is. The two young men were friends here. They also attended the meetings of W. W. Lamport who is pastor of the M. E. church there.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Charley Hague has received an appointment as Inspector of switch boards for the Central Union telephone company. His business will be to visit the different cities where exchanges are in operation and make any needed repairs This is a good appointment and we are glad to hear of Charley's success. He has made a good man for the Bell company.

GAS MEETING.

The meeting was called to order in the court room last evening as it was found the jury room would not hold the crowd. On motion of Dr. Swarts, G. W. Lackey was made chairman. He made a brief speech and then R. H. Weamer of the Gazette was elected secretary. Mr. McNamara, of Ohio, was than called on to make a speech, as did also, Mr. Garvin, of Ohio, later on. Both spoke to the same effect. They believed we had gas here and that the old wells would not have become unprofitable had they been properly cased and then kept in proper shape. They claimed we can now put down such wells at about half the cost and even at the old price they should have been profitable There were talks by Mr. Lackey, C. C. Shaffer, J. C. Henry, R. H. Weamer, Dr. Swarts, Judge Roby and others. A telephone from Dr. Nusbaum said he would subscribe $100 and furnish land. On motion a committee was appointed by the chair, to solicit stock. Dr. Swarts and I. O. Bachtel were named but the list was not completed. Stock to the amount of $500 was taken. Mr. Garvin will take $100 if he gets the work to do, and then if we get a good well, he will buy more stock in it. It is believed that $2500 will put down a good well. The old ones cost about $3800 or more. It looks now as if our people would take hold of it and make it go. If we succeed, it would be a grand thing for us. J. H. Pyle and his son from east of town were present.

A HAY RACK PARTY.

A number of Auburn's young people went up into Smithfield last evening, to call on Miss Mayme Buckley, who is teaching at the school near the Catholic church there. Miss Buckley, boards at Mr. Gfeller's and they called on her there and spent a very pleasant evening. They forgot it was sleighing and took a wagon and hayrack, which is the next best thing to a sleighride. The party were, Messrs Jaeger, Thacker, Little, Nelson, Boland, Borst, Buckley and Dr. J. H. Johnston. The ladies were Mae Rose, Georgie Zimmerman, Maggie Buckley, Lela Morse, Elsie and Gertie Caruth, Lydia Hallam and Cecile Bishop.

Converts at the Jail.

The W. C. T. U. have been holding meetings at the jail each Sunda at 2:30 for the benefit of the prisoners. At first the prisoners did not appea to take much interest but eventually they have entered into the meetings with great earnestness. Several have been converted, among the number being young Reed, accused of breaking into Hartman's house in Fairfield, John Shilling, who went to jail for refusing to pay the damages assessed against him in the case brought by Miss Pointa, and Jesse Covington, who stole Geo Boland's bicycle. His time will expire in a few days. These men take an active part in the meetings, pray, sing and speak. They hold prayer meetings each evening, in which all take an interest. The attendance on Sunday afternoons is quite large, as many as fifty outside friends being present in some cases. Bert Casebeer led the exercises last Sunday. A society is now being formed to assist these young men, when they are released. Some one will take them home, or find a home for them till they get employment or till they can go to their own homes. This is a good plan and mays save some from falling deeper into criminal ways.

CONSOLIDATED.

It looked natural yesterday to see boys carrying wood up the long stairways at the old COURIER rooms in the Kiblinger block. The explanation was the bands were moving in.

So at last the two Auburn bands, the Military Band and the Trumpet Note Band had each given up its organization and united to form the great, new Auburn Band. The new association assumed the debts of the old ones, $471.5 for the Military Band and $72.55 for the Trumpet Note Band. But it gets all the instruments and property of both bands so that its net debt is not more than $150. This leaves it to start almost free of debt. Besides it has about $500 of the new stock taken and at an early date steps will be taken to secure more subscriptions. This will no doubt be liberally taken by our citizens, for the town will take pride in having the largest and best band in the state. There was quite a love feast when the matter was finally decided. Milo Calkin will be the leader of the new band, but we understand that Mr. Niles will continue as a member, which all will be glad to hear.

—H. M. LaFollette, once the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for this state is again in trouble. He was arrested last week on a matter growing out of an old debt.

—The Junior Guards will give a magic lantern show in their hall over the COURIER office. Friday evening of this week. Come all and help the boys in endeavors to do right. Admittance 5 and 10 cents.

JOHN H. WEAVER, Manager.

—Hicksville News:—Martin Barnhart, a laborer living near Pioneer, was killed br a falling tree on Tuesday of last week. He leaves a wife and eight young children in destitute circumstances.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

PROTECTION AND PROSPERITY.

New England rallied to the support of the Republican party at the Presidential election of 1896, and cast its electoral votes for the "advance agent of prosperity."

New England is now getting a sample of the kind of prosperity heralded by the advance agent. No doubt a large majority of the 125,000 operatives of the cotton mills who are now suffering a cut in wages of from 10 to 12 per cent., voted for McKinley. Perhaps they should not be blamed for this, as they were coerced by the mill managers and promised good times and increased pay if the Republican ticket should win.

How truthful these promises were is now being demonstrated, and the cause of this disaster is the very measure which the Republicans asserted would bring about prosperity. In discussing this phase of the question the New York Journal says:

"Whatever explanation may be given of the present situation of the cotton industry of New England, it is certain that increased 'protection' is doing it no good. What is called protection restricts its market, tends to over-production and lower prices by hothouse competition at home, and the more it gets of this kind of 'fostering' the worse off are those employed in it."

There can be no doubt that this view of the situation is correct, but will the operatives of the New England cotton mills recognize that fact? Will they realize that they have been made the victims of a gigantic confidence game, and will they, with a spirit of self-preservation, turn away from the Republican party and espouse the cause of Democracy?

This is the important question which is pressing upon the minds of the wage-workers all over the United States. Upon its correct answer rests the future of the masses in this country.

Labor has a true friend in Democracy and a bitter enemy in the Republican party. The latter is the servant of the trusts, and the trusts grow rich and flourish at the expense of the people. There is only one party great enough to hope for victory in a struggle against the trusts, and that party is Democratic. Every vote cast for any other party organized to befriend labor is a vote thrown away, and every vote cast for the Republican party is a vote to impoverish and enslave the masses. Cannot the wage-earners see this? It is as simple and clear as it is true.

"Conciliation with an Ax."

It is alleged that the administrati[illegible] has given Mark Hanna a gentle hi[illegible] to curb his tongue in the matter [illegible] threats against Ohio Republicans opposed to his election as Senator. McKinley is not at all anxious that the split in the Republican party of the Buckeye State should be made any wider than it is now. Kurtz has exhibited such a show of strength that alarm is felt by the occupant of the Presidential chair, and Hanna's curses, it is feared, may work mischief to the President's plans for a renomination.

It would never do for Ohio Republicans to refuse a united support to McKinley in 1900, and therefore Hanna is cautioned to modify his expressions of rage. This will be a severe dose for Hanna to swallow, and in the long run he will manage to get even with his enemies with a result which will be anything but pleasing to the administration. Hanna believes in "conciliation with an ax." He has no idea of what the word diplomacy means, and if the fight in Ohio does not wax fierce and dangerous all the portents of the present will have proved misleading.

Knives are sharpening for the conflict. Charges and counter-charges of bribery and bad faith are made. Bushnell is threatened with an investigation; Foraker is abused and the merry war is merrilly progressing. "Good luck to the man with the longest knife," and "a plague on both their houses," say the people.—Chicago Dispatch.

Mark Hanna's Victory.

Hanna won! He has won a glorious victory. He is re-elected United States Senator from Ohio by the magnificent majority of one! He was entitled to eight, but even the Ohio Republicans are growing ashamed of Hanna. He is a great catch for the Republican party. It shows what principle will do when backed up by enough boodle. It also shows how dignified a President we have, when he stood at the receiver of a long-distance telephone, keeping the wire hot in Mark's interest.

This is indeed a free government when heaven and earth and the powers of darkness are turned loose to compass his election, and then some of our Republican friends are pleased to call it a great triumph of manhood! The President and his entire official pie counter were moved to help Mark. No stone was left unturned to win this victory of manhood.

O, yes; that was a glorious victory. It was so stupendous that it will turn Ohio Democratic at next fall's Congressional elections. It will bring the Republican party into worse dishonor. It will brand every man who voted for him, against his wishes, a hireling. It will make the next President Democratic. No Democrat has any reason to feel discouraged. The political skies never looked brighter than at this moment.

Mark Hanna's election is a great vindication for the Republican administration, but it cost Mark Hanna a barrel of money to make 'er vindicate. Only his transcendent, his overpowering abilities pulled Mark Hanna through. Mark comes high, but he is cheap at any price. His election makes Democratic success so much surer next fall. A glorious victory like that is worth more than 100,000 votes. Give us more glorious Mark Hanna victories.—Washington (Iowa) Democrat.

Bitter Lesson to New England.

Whatever explanation may be given of the present situation of the cotton industry of New England, it is certain that increased "protection" is doing it no good. What is called protection restricts its markets, tends to overproduction and lower prices by hothouse competition at home, and the more it gets of this kind of "fostering" the worse off are those employed in it. This lesson the operatives of Fall River, New Bedford, Lowell and Lawrence are just now having pressed home, and if the claim of the mill owners that they are forced by the conditions of business to reduce wages is justified they ought to lay to heart the same lesson.—New York Journal.

McKenna's Bad Break.

Attorney General McKenna's nauseating dispatch of congratulation to Hanna was well calculated to please Hanna and the President, who has nominated him to be a Supreme Court Justice of the United States, but it is said to have had a bad effect upon the Democratic side of the Senate chamber. In the end it may prove to have imperiled his confirmation. Democratic Senators cannot be much blamed for being sickened. McKenna may think that Hanna is virtue incarnate, but that only shows what sort of a man McKenna is.—Springfield, Mass., Republican.

All in the Interest of Protection.

The pension expansion is necessary because the soldier vote is necessary to protection. River and harbor and public buildings jobs are necessary to keep doubtful Congressional districts in line for protection. And all the other jobbery of the Nicaragua canal, Hawaiian annexation and the like are necessary to keep the influential promoters friendly to the party of protection. Truly we are a famous country. When the merit of all questions must be subordinated to the necessity of burdening ourselves with the protective tariff.—Utica Observer.

McKinley's Humiliating Position.

The speech of Senator Wolcott leaves the President in an uncertain and uncomplimentary position. It represents him as being opposed to the financial policy of Secretary Gage, and opposed consequently to the whole currency reform movement. He is simply being used by Messrs. Wolcott and Chandler as a club publicly to maul Mr. Gage in particular and the whole currency reform movement in general, and amid the laughter and applause of the galleries. Mr. Gage can stand it, but can the President?—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

In keeping with the infernal policy of "protecting" the trusts, we are sowing the wind. It is inevitable that we shall have to reap the whirlwind.—Kansas City Times.

Millions that Might Be Saved.

How little seriousness there is in the disposition of Congress to curb expenditure and bring it within the measure of income is shown by the failure of the attempt to adopt a paying rate for the carriage of second-class postal matter. Here is $20,000,000 per year as good as thrown away. A few interested publishers who profit by the government largess are more influential in shaping the action of Congress than is any regard for the public welfare.—Philadelphia Record.

Ohio's Blasphemous Boss.

Hanna's blasphemous message was a coarse plagiarism of President Garfield's famous speech, which was called forth by a terrible panic. There was nothing sacrilegious in the latter's inspired assertion of a relation between our glorious government and our God. It was left to a vulgar boss, exulting over a narrow escape from defeat, to suggest a connection between God's reign and the survival of a corrupt political party.—Kansas City Times.

Modesty Taking [illegible]econd Place.

In his thrilling telegram, "God reigns and the Republican party still lives," Mark Hanna paid the Almighty a neat compliment in allowing the fact of divine existence to take the precedence over the second proposition.—Kansas City Times.

Brief Comment.

The tidal wave of McKinley prosperity in New England is the largest and thickest and saltiest and wettest ever known in that section.—Atlanta Constitution.

The McKenna victory in the Judiciary Committee and the Hanna victory in the Ohio Legislature will rejoice all the trusts and all the organized grabbers of the country.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mark Hanna has returned to Washington to resume the work of running the administration which was interrupted for a season by circumstances over which, by the judicious use of influence, he finally secured the necessary control.—Lafayette, Ind., Journal.

Oklahoma has unanimously declared in favor of Statehood and as she has the requisite population her petition is a reasonable one. But her politics is inclined toward Democracy and the powers that be are Republican, so Oklahoma will undoubtedly be obliged to wait.—Manchester, N. H., Union.

Doubtless the spirit of warfare is still hot in the breasts of the Ohio Republicans, but we would advise the successful side to beware of carrying on the struggle by measures based on the conviction that the Republican vote in that State is so large that it needs reducing.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE PEOPLE'S MONEY

Republicans Not Honest.

The Republicans do not discuss the money question honestly. They misrepresent facts and distort statistics. The contraction of the money of the country is the object cited in declaring for the gold standard.

They contend that we now have six hundred millions of gold in the country. It cannot be shown that there is anything like that amount in the United States. Treasury officials make a statement showing something like $400,000,000, and then estimate $200,000,000.

For the life of them they cannot conceive of such an amount being within reach. They point to the money lying idle in the banks, and tell us that the trouble is there is too much money in the country. It is idle because the money of the country is being hoarded, and it is not being used in the purchase of anything that represents the productive capacity of the country.

That is the only reason why money is hoarded and why the banks have it in their vaults. Under suitable conditions this vast sum would be invested.

The Republicans tell us that we cannot absorb any more silver, and to prove it they distort and misuse figures. France, it is said, now has about four hundred millions of silver. The reports of the director of our mint in 1893 show that that country had seven hundred millions of silver. Mr. McLaine, our former minister to France, stated that he had no doubt that the silver in circulation in that country aggregated one thousand millions.

It would be impossible for any man to show where France has lost as large an amount of silver from her circulation as claimed by the treasury officials of the United States. If France can absorb silver to this extent, why cannot this country add to her circulation by issuing more silver? There is no reason why we should not, and the financial problem will never be solved until we do.—Senator H. M. Teller.

Silver in India.

The Indian government, in its answer to the proposition to join with the United States and France in the free coinage of silver and gold at 15½ to 1, makes this very important admission: "India has, since 1893, passed through a period of serious tension and embarrassment, alike to trade and to the government." This "embarrassment to trade" has been due to falls in the average of prices and the dislocation of the par of exchange with the other silver-using countries, and the advantages given to English manufactures through the restored par of exchange with India.

Compare the foregoing evils which India has experienced with the conditions which have prevailed in the other silver-using countries. In Japan there have been rising prices and good times to the producing classes until the creditor class secured the adoption of the gold standard of falling prices. In Mexico there have been rising prices, a bounty on exports, and as a consequence a grand era of prosperity. This contrast is an object lesson which is not being lost upon the producing classes of the United States.

They did not all see these things in 1896, for these facts were denied by the gold standard advocates; but the prosperity which those advocates promised has proved to be a prosperity for those only who are benefited by falls in the average of prices, and this excludes the producing classes—95 per cent of the population.

Substitute for Money.

Just now a certain class of politicians and newspapers are calling attention to the increased volume of bank deposits as an evidence of an abundant supply of money. The inference to be drawn from these statements is that however much the industrial classes may be suffering, some cause other than a scarcity of money must be found; so persistently paraded as an evidence of returning prosperity that many people are almost persuaded that there is nothing wrong with our currency system after all.

A little inquiry that any one can make for himself will reveal the fact that nine men out of ten think bank deposits are money. Bank deposits are not money to the extent of 25 per cent., and of that small proportion nearly the whole of it is credit currency. The cold facts as compiled by the comptroller of the currency of the United States for Iowa are as follows: Gold, 1.8 per cent.; silver, 2.4 per cent.; currency, 17.5 per cent.; checks, 78 per cent. Surely here is a study for "honest money gold standard people."

Is there anything strikingly "sound" in this inverted pyramid with its base less than 2 per cent. of the volume of credit? Bank deposits to the extent of 78 per cent. are not money at all, but "substitutes" for money, and so designated by the comptroller.

Women Who Seldom Speak.

There are several communities of silent monks, as, for instance, the Trappists, but these are not at all surprising in comparison with a community of silent women, such as are to be found in the convent near Biarritz. These silencieuses, or silent sisters, never speak except to their mother superior, and then only upon necessary business. When they are at meals a book is read, and every Friday they eat their dinners kneeling. If one of the sisters lose her father or mother she is not told of the loss. The mother superior simply assembles the community, and says, "The mother or father of one of you is dead." In this way the silent women cease to have individual interest in anything or anything to talk about. Seven hours are spent in prayer and the rest of the day in cultivating gardens and doing different kinds of laborious work. They wear white flannel clothes with a cross of black on their backs when at work on week days. On Sundays and festivals they wear black.

Pitcairn Island now contains 120 inhabitants, the descendants of the well-known English mutineers and Tahitian women. Only forty of the inhabitants are men.

Glasgow has a population of nearly 1,000,000 and has only 494 doctors.

BIG CANAL PROJECT.

WATERWAY FROM THE MISSISSIPPI TO THE ATLANTIC.

Senator Thurston Proposes to Invest Postal Savings Bank Funds in Interest Bearing Canal Bonds—The Canal Should Accommodate Large Ships.

Would Cheapen Transportation.

Senator John M. Thurston says he has a proposition to make for the disposal of postal savings funds. Mr. Thurston wants the money put into a great system of internal improvements, which will give the commerce of the West a waterway from the Mississippi River to the Atlantic seaboard.

Mr. Thurston would revive the Hennepin Canal project. But he would go farther than the advocates of that canal. They wanted the government to appropriate $6,000,000 or $8,000,000 for a canal from Hennepin, on the Illinois River, to some point west or northwest of it on the Mississippi; for the widening of the Illinois River and for the enlarging of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, which was constructed by the State of Illinois in the first half of the century. Mr. Thurston wants a canal from the Mississippi River deep enough and wide enough to accommodate a ship-of-war. He wants the river and canal channels east of Hennepin made equally wide and deep, and he wants a ship canal opened from Lake Erie to the Atlantic, either by the widening of the Erie Canal or by the opening of a canal to cross Lake Champlain on the line surveyed a year ago by a government commission.

The use of this canal would be the cheapening of transportation rates on the farm and range products of the

THE CANAL FROM LAKE MICHIGAN TO THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

West to points of consumption and export in the East and on the manufactures and imports of the East to the Western States.

"There is no doubt in my mind," said the Senator, "that the government has got to undertake some day a scheme of internal improvements which will give work to the unemployed. There is no considerable number of men out of work now—that is, of those who want employment—but during the three years of depression I have no doubt there was an average of a million men out of employment. Labor leaders at times estimated the number at 2,000,000 and at 3,000,000. I believe it would have been better for the great mass of the people if the government had found employment for these men. The community had to support them in some way. Every idle man is a tax on the man who is working. And lack of work creates discontent, which stirs up a revolutionary feeling.

"The scheme of improvements, I think, will take the form of a system of waterways which will cheapen transportation and keep the rates of the railroads down to a reasonable figure. The canals of New York have done a wonderful work in the regulation of transportation rates in that State. When the Hennepin Canal project was last discussed it was shown that on roads running east from Chicago in competition with the water routes the freight rates were only one-half the rates on roads running northwest which had no water competition. Of course, the enormous traffic of the east-bound roads accounted for this in part, but the lakes and canals were responsible for much of it.

"The experience of the lake carriers has shown that water rates can be cheapened greatly by using the largest carriers. Therefore I say that if the government undertakes the construction of a canal between the Mississippi and the great lakes, it ought to make a complete job of it by affording a channel which will accommodate the largest ships."

Mr. Thurston has eminent authority for his advocacy of the canal system. John C. Calhoun, in 1845, presided over a waterways convention which declared that "the project of connecting the Mississippi with the lakes of the North by a canal, and this with the Atlantic Ocean, is a measure worthy of the enlightened consideration of Congress." Grant approved the canal project. So did Arthur. President Monroe, in one of his messages to Congress, said of the general scheme of waterways: "When we consider the vast extent of territory in the United States, the great amount and value of its productions, the connection of its ports and other circumstances on which their prosperity and happiness depend, we cannot fail to entertain a high sense of the advantage to be derived from the facility which may be afforded in the intercourse between them by means of good roads and canals. Never did a country of such vast extent offer equal inducements to improvement of this kind nor ever were consequences of such magnitude involved in them."

The "consequences" at the present time Mr. Thurston estimates at $80,000,000 to $400,000,000 a year—that is, possibly two-fifths of the present cost of running the whole government.

The Hennepin Canal project received serious consideration several times at the hands of Congress. More than ten years ago the State of Illinois offered to the government the $3,000,000 State canal between Lake Michigan and the Illinois River on condition that it should be widened and connected by way of the Illinois River with the Mississipi. The distance from Hennepin to the Mississippi by the proposed canal was sixty-four miles, while by way of the mouth of the Illinois the same point on the Mississippi was 468 miles away. But Congress, after having elaborate surveys and estimates made, let the project go by default. One point of difference was the choice of a Western terminus for the canal, and that difference would arise again. Three routes were proposed. The cheapest and most satisfactory, from an engineering point of view, was the Marais d'Osier or Meredosia route, terminating at Albany, seven miles above Rock Island. Another route terminated at Watertown, twenty-one miles above Albany, and the third at Rock Island. Gen. Newton and Secretary Endicott favored the Rock Island route, largely on account of the arsenal there and the consequent importance of the canal in time of war. The local interests represented by the three termini supplicated Congress for years, and their failure to agree, no doubt, had much to do with the defeat of the canal bill.

Sir John Macdonald's Advice.

Sir John Macdonald was the guest of honor at a banquet in Montreal one evening and was expected to make a speech of much political moment. The Star sent a shorthand man with instructions to take down Sir John's words exactly as they were uttered. It was a great banquet and wine flowed freely. After the speech the reporter hastened to the office to transcribe his notes. For the life of him he could not make out what Sir John had been talking about. He hurried off to the premier and went over the speech carefully with him and straightened it out. Thanking Sir John most gratefully, he was about to rush back, when the statesman, taking him by the hand, said: "My dear friend, you are young. The world is before you. I am old and have seen much of life, its trials and temptations. Let me venture as one full of experience to offer you a few words of advice"—it was the proudest moment of the reporter's life. He was all expectancy. "Be sure, always be sure, my young friend, that when you try to report a speech you are quite sober."—New York Press.

Connecticut Oaks.

About oak trees an important chapter in Connecticut history might be written. The famous Charter Oak tree in Hartford was an old tree when the colonists first came into these parts, and the Glastonbury oaks, of about the same age, are now held to be over three hundred years old. The Poetry Oak of Pachaug stands in front of Pachaug meeting-house. The tree was alluded to in the agricultural papers of the country half a century ago because of its enormous size. C. Edwards Lester, author of the "Glory and Shame of England," mused under its shade; George D. Prentice wrote his first poems beneath its shadows, and Galusha Grow passed many of the study hours of his youth under it. Mr. Reade says of this oak: "It has heard fifty-two sermons a year for 177 years, and political speeches from the settlement of this country down to the present day. One foot from the ground its trunk is 19 feet and 10 inches in circumference and its longest limbs extend each way 119 feet." On the farm of James B. Palmer, of Lisbon, is an immense black oak that measures around the trunk one foot from the ground 22 1-3 feet. This, Mr. Reade calculates, must be at least 500 years old.—New York Sun.

WISCONSIN'S YOUNG JURIST.

Judge John R. Pannier, of Chippewa Falls, but 28 Years Old.

The youngest judge in Wisconsin, and probably the youngest in the country, is John E. Pannier, elected County Judge at Chippewa Falls, Wis., last spring. He is 28 years old and succeeded Judge Belden, of Racine, who ten years ago, at the time of his election, was the youngest judge on the bench.

Judge Pannier was born in Chippewa Falls and is a product of the public schools, which he attended until he was graduated from the high school in 1892.

JOHN E. PANNIER.

He then spent a year or more making the best of his time and opportunities in studying in the law office of Colonel L. J. Rusk, after which he went to Madison, where he entered the law course and was graduated with honors in 1895. Shortly after he began the practice of his profession. At the time of the spring election he secured the nomination and was elected to the office of County Judge.

NEW UNICYCLE.

A Contrivance Which, It Is Promised, Will Eclipse All Bicycle Records.

The latest novelty in wheels is a unicycle, which it is promised will eclipse all records of the bicycle.

The contrivance is the invention of Emory B. Sowers, of Westville, Ohio, who has succeeded in making surprisingly fast time on it. The motive power of this invention is obtained by the use of a safety, which can be fitted to and be taken from the large wheel without much loss of time. It is claimed the new machine will make it possible to develop a much higher rate of speed than the ordinary form with the same expenditure of energy.

The unicycle is guided by the handlebars the same as an ordinary. The rider's weight may be thrown or shifted by turning these, which, in turn, guide the larger wheel in the same direction. The new unicycle may be changed to a safety by taking off the top wheel and putting a wheel in the front forks as in the ordinary cycles.

LATEST CYCLING NOVELTY.

Vessels with Names Ending in "A."

Marine insurance underwriters always fight shy of vessels whose names end in "a." This has become especially true since the total loss, with all on board, of the steamer City of Philadelphia, about a year ago. The City of Philadelphia left New York for San Francisco, and went down, with all hands, off the Falkland Islands. A ship with the final "a" is looked upon pretty generally as a hoodoo. The most serious wrecks of last year have been vessels carrying the hoodoo latter. One day the telegraph announced that the British ship Androsa, from San Francisco to Liverpool, was lost with a very valuable cargo. The next day word was received that the Orealia, bound from Victoria for Liverpool, had been swept by heavy seas and badly damaged. Her mate and one sailor were drowned. The wires told on the same day of the total loss of the British ship Villanta and the drowning of her master, near Freemantle, and a few days later the papers gave the news of the loss of the steamer Wallapa and of the beaching of the Dora. During the last two or three years the most serious wrecks on the coast were of vessels whose names ended with the hoodoo letter. Besides the wreck of the City of Philadelphia, the wreck of the Colima was the most horrifying of all. Then came the loss of the steamer Columbia, and a few weeks later the passenger steamer Umatilla ran ashore and narrowly escaped destruction.—Philadelphia Record.

Paper Bags for Bread.

A novel improvement has been made by one of the most prominent bakers of Berlin, which is the natural consequence of the increasing tendency to employ hygienic methods in every trade dealing with food and food supplies. While rolls have long been delivered in paper bags to customers, it has always been the rule to handle loaves with the fingers, each loaf going through a number of hands before delivered at the consumer's door, there to be received by the bare, often not too clean, fingers of the servant. The recent improvement, which has been covered by patents, consists of using paper bags the exact shape of the various sizes of bread turned out by a baker. These bags are open at both ends, and, being slightly longer than the loaf, the ends are turned together with a twist as the loaf is shoved from the oven straight into the bag. This cover will protect the bread from any pollution after it leaves the oven, as the loaf is kept in the bag not only while being handled in the bakery and by the delivery man, but while the loaf is being used, being cut at one end as the loaf gets shorter. The new system has found a very quick spread, and the best bakeries, which at once introduced the new improvement, gained by its adoption.

[illegible]IVE IN ALASKA?

Some [illegible] Indispensable.

The universal article of diet in that country, depended upon and indispensable, is bread or biscuit. And to make the bread and biscuit, either in the camp or upon the trail, yeast cannot be used—it must be baking powder; and the powder manufactured by the processes of the Royal Baking Powder Company, miners and prospectors have learned, is the only one which will stand in that peculiar climate of cold and dampness and raise the bread and biscuit satisfactorily.

These facts are very important for every one proposing to go to Alaska and the Yukon country to know, for should he be persuaded by some outfitter to take one of the cheap brands of baking powder, it will cost just as much to transport it, and then when he opens it for use, after all his labor in packing it over the long and difficult route, he will find a solid caked mass or a lot of spoiled powder, with no strength and useless. Such a mistake might lead to the most serious results. Alaska is no place in which to experiment in food, or try to economize with your stomach. For use in such a climate, and under the trying and fatiguing conditions of life and labor in that country, everything must be the best and most useful, and above all it is imperative that all food supplies shall have perfect keeping qualities. It is absurd to convey over such difficult and expensive routes an article that will deteriorate in transit, or that will be found when required for use to have lost a great part of its value.

There is no better guide to follow in these matters than the advice of those who have gone through similar experience. Mr. McQuesten, who is called "the father of Alaska," after an experience of years upon the trail, in the camp, and in the use of every kind of supply, says: "We find in Alaska that the importance of a proper kind of baking powder cannot be overestimated. A miner with a can of bad baking powder is almost helpless in Alaska. We have tried all sorts, and have been obliged to settle down to use nothing but the Royal. It is stronger and carries further at first, but above all things, it is the only powder that will endure the severe climatic changes of the arctic region."

It is for the same reasons that the U. S. Government in its relief expeditions, and Peary, the famous arctic traveler, have carried the Royal Baking Powder exclusively.

The Royal Baking Powder will not cake nor lose its strength either on board ship or in damp climates, and is the most highly concentrated and efficient of leavening agents. Hence it is indispensable to every Alaskan outfit. It can be had of any of the trading companies in Alaska, but should the miner procure his supplies before leaving, he should resist every attempt of the outfitter to palm off upon him any of the other brands of baking powder, for they will spoil and prove the cause of great disappointment and trouble.

They Redeemed Themselves.

During the awful yellow fever epidemic of 1878 in the South the nurses who saved the lives of hundreds of sufferers were fallen women. When every one else turned pale with fear and proved unable to help, these women quit their lives of shame and became ministering angels. Hundreds of them went from every city in the United States to lose or redeem their lives in the great epidemic. They were the only reliable nurses and they proved heroines indeed. Many of them died. None of them ever returned to their lives of shame.

CANADIAN CREAMERIES.

How They Are Operated and Made to Pay the Farmer.

A correspondent of a Brown City, Michigan paper writes as follows:

"An industry which is proving very advantageous to the settlers of North Alberta, Canada, and is truly a boon to the farmers, is the establishment of creameries by the Government at regular distances apart. The Government furnishes the entire plant, puts it in and operates it without direct cost to the farmer. From the sale of the butter the Government retains 5 cents per pound, the balance going to the farmer. This is continued for three years, when the Government turns over the plant and business to the farmers, giving them a clear title of it. Thus these creameries are put in at a minimum cost to the farmer and paid for in a way that he least feels it. When we were there butter was selling at 21 and 22 cents per pound. Cheese factories were being established, too, along the railroad and much of the freight loaded on the cars on our return trip consisted of butter and cheese, as it was in the best season for milk. The produce found a ready market in the mining and lumbering towns and districts beyond the Rockies, through the British Columbia country, where it was, we were told, difficult to supply the demand.

The Klondike is another field now open to the Western Canadian farmer for all produce of the farm, and the officials in the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada, are kept busy sending out literature describing this great agricultural country. The agents of the Government throughout the United States are also supplied with literature, which they distribute free.

"This bicycle riding is all a nonsensical fad!" exclaimed the man who is wrapped up in political enthusiasm.

"Perhaps it is," replied his wife.

"You don't see me working like a day-laborer pushing a wheel around the country."

"No. But give me time. Perhaps after awhile I'll get sufficiently sensible to abandon the bicycle and walk eighteen or nineteen miles with a torch over my shoulder, regardless of the weather, every time there's an election or a ratification meeting."—Washington Star.

WEAK SPOTS.

Everybody Comes Into This World With a Predisposition to Disease.

A Talk With Mrs. Pinkham About the Cause of Anemia.

Everybody comes into this world with a predisposition to disease of some particular tissue; in other words, everybody has a weak spot.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the weak spot in women is somewhere in the uterine system. The uterine organs have less resistance to disease than the vital organs; that's why they give out the soonest.

Not more than one woman in a hundred—nay, in five hundred—has perfectly healthy organs of generation. This points to the stern necessity of helping one's self just as soon as the life powers seem to be on the wane.

Excessive menstruation is a sign of physical weakness and want of tone in the uterine organs. It saps the strength away and produces anemia (blood turns to water).

If you become anemic, there is no knowing what will happen. If your gums and the inside of your lips and inside your eyelids look pale in color, you are in a dangerous way and must stop that drain on your powers. Why not build up on a generous, uplifting tonic, like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

Mrs. EDWIN EHRIG, 413 Church St., Bethlehem, Pa., says: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you that I am better than I have been for four years. I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one package of Sanative Wash, one box of Liver Pills, and can say that I am perfectly cured. Doctors did not help me any. I should have been in my grave by this time if it had not been for your medicine. It was a godsend to me. I was troubled with excessive menstruation, which caused womb trouble, and I was obliged to remain in bed for six weeks. Mrs. Pinkham's medicine was recommended to me, and after using it a short time, was troubled no more with flooding. I also had severe pain in my kidneys. This, also, I have no more. I shall always recommend the Compound, for it has cured me, and it will cure others. I would like to have you publish this letter." (In such cases the dry form of Compound should be used.)

MEMORIES OF THE WAR

Killed His Northern Cousin.

There is no finer scenery on earth than that of the mountains of Northern Georgia. It is not upon a stupendous scale, and a veteran globe-trotter would hardly call it sublime, but a more pleasing prospect does not exist than the long panorama of hills just off from the mighty ridge about thirty miles south of Chattanooga, ending in a burst of glory in the cloud-capped perpendicular wall of Lookout Mountain.

Farther and farther to the west extend the blue terraces, like mighty billows of smoke piled one upon the other, and suddenly turned to stone. A perpetual haze, as of Indian summer, hangs over the scene, and there is a sense of quiet about the whole that is conducive to flights of fancy and constantly recurring memories. At the foot of what the natives call "the ridge," which is pierced by a tunnel, nestles the little town of Tunnel Hill. A mile and a half to the west is Buzzard Roost. Five miles south is Dalton, from where Sherman started to the sea, after moving his troops across the ridge.

It was just before Sherman's march. There had been much firing and cross-firing between the troops on either side, who were camped within a few hundred yards of each other, and many a soldier had been picked off by the enemy without the melancholy distinction of dying in battle.

Corporal William Head, whose aged mother lived at the foot of one of the blue hills near the foot of Buzzard Roost, had been stationed with a detail of infantry in a miserable cabin on a hillside overlooking the mouth of the tunnel. Their orders were brief. Not a bluecoat was to be permitted to pass. It was a gruesome task, but they did it well. The sun was poising upon the top of the ridge, lighting its crest with glory, and twelve men lay dead in the immediate vicinity of the cabin. Corporal Head's soldiers were good marksmen, and each had scored a human life. The corporal's rifle was still loaded. It was his turn to fire.

The golden sun was sinking lower. There came a sound of whistling from the glen. Corporal Head peeped through the loophole and started back. Instinctively each member of the squad looked through the little opening with a feeling of apprehension. What did they see? Nothing but a boy. He was strolling along the roadway, whistling merrily as a bird, and his long rifle was slung across his shoulder after the manner of a careless hunter. His cap was perched on the back of his head, and he seemed oblivious to danger. But he wore a blue uniform, and the cap was a soldier's.

The men looked at each other apprehensively, but in silence. The boy was passing. Would he be allowed to escape? All eyes were fixed on Corporal Head.

He trembled visibly, yet he faltered but a moment. Silently his rifle was raised to the loophole. There was a sharp report, and when Private Quinn gazed with filmy eyes through the aperture he saw the blue-coated form of a boy lying dead in the roadway.

Slipping silently from the cabin, he ran to the spot and hurriedly searched the body. From the blouse of the beardless soldier he drew a well-worn letter. Hastening back, he laid it at the corporal's feet.

Corporal Head took it in his hand and read it mechanically. With a scream of terror he sprang to his feet from the position in which he had been crouching and cried aloud in the strength of a manly grief.

With his own hands Corporal Head bore the body to the cabin, and later conveyed it to the humble cottage, where his parents resided, less than a mile away. His aged mother gazed with horror on the blue cap and uniform, for to her mind they were a badge of infamy. She had never seen the boy, though he was her nephew, but the corporal had visited him in his Northern home just before the outbreak of the war.

He noticed the look on the face of his good old mother, but it did not alter his determination.

"He was a friend of mine," was all he said.

Passage of the James.

In the Century, General Horace Porter writes of "Grant's Dash for Petersburg" in his series of papers on "Campaigning with Grant." Of the passage of the James, General Porter says:

As the general-in-chief stood upon the bluff on the north bank of the river on the morning of June 15, watching with unusual interest the busy scene spread out before him, it presented a sight which had never been equaled even in his extended experience in all the varied phases of warfare. His cigar had been thrown aside, his hands were clasped behind him, and she seemed lost in the contemplation of the spectacle. The great bridge was the scene of a continuous movement of infantry columns, batteries of artillery, and wagon-trains. The approaches to the river on both banks were covered with masses of troops moving briskly to their positions or waiting patiently their turn to cross. At the two improvised ferries steamboats were gliding back and forth with the regularity of weavers' shuttles. A fleet of transports covered the surface of the water below the bridge, and gunboats floated lazily upon the stream, guarding the river above.

Drums were beating the march, bands were playing stirring quicksteps, the distant booming of cannon on Warren's front showed that he and the enemy were still exchanging compliments; and mingled with these sounds were the cheers of the sailors, the shouting of the troops, the rumbling of wheels, and the shrieks of steam-whistles. The bright sun, shining through a clear sky upon the scene, cast its sheen upon the water, was reflected from the burnished gun-barrels and glittering cannon, and brought out with increased brilliancy the gay colors of the waving banners. The calmly flowing river reflected the blue of the heavens, and mirrored on its surface the beauties of nature that bordered it. The rich grain was standing high in the surrounding fields. The harvest was almost ripe, but the harvesters had fled. The arts of civilization had recoiled before the science of destruction; and in looking from the growing crops to the marching columns, the gentle smile of peace contrasted strangely with the savage frown of war.

It was a matchless pageant that could not fail to inspire all beholders with the grandeur of achievement and the majesty of military power. The man whose genius had conceived and whose skill had executed this masterly movement stood watching the spectacle in profound silence. Whether his mind was occupied with the contemplation of its magnitude and success, or was busied with maturing plans for the future, no one can tell. After a time he woke from his reverie, mounted his horse, and gave orders to have headquarters ferried across to the south bank of the river.

A Message of Peace.

A modest corner in Forest Hill Cemetery, in Madison, Wis., has been known as "Confederate Rest" ever since 1862. The winter of 1862 considerable prisoners were sent to Camp Randall, near Madison. The change from the sunny South to the blizzards of the North swept the poor fellows away rapidly, and the camp was soon abandoned as a prison. The dead were buried in Forest Hill Cemetery. For nearly thirty years the graves of these American soldiers have been looked after by Mrs. Alice Waterman, a Southern-born lady, who went to Madison, Wis., in 1868. Often and, indeed, regularly in these later years flowers have been sprinkled upon the Confederate graves by the Union veterans on Memorial day. A few years ago Mrs. Waterman, highly esteemed by all Madison, died, and at her request was buried with "my boys," as she called them, in "Confederate Rest." Now it is proposed to erect a monument to her memory and the memory of "her boys," one that will bear the name of the noble woman and each Confederate sleeper there. What adds interest and pathos to this proposition is the fact that two Union soldiers have undertaken the task, one of whom, Maj. W. F. Oakley, of the Seventh Wisconsin, lost an arm at Rappahannock Station, in 1862, and the other Capt. Hugh Lewis, Company A, Second Wisconsin, lost an arm at Second Bull Run. Both are still men of energy and can be depended upon to carry the work to a successful issue. There will be many to aid them—many in the ranks of the Union veterans. The monument, without doubt, will be ready for dedication this year, when Wisconsin is half a century old—1898. Its dedication will be another message sent to the South—a message of peace, good will, fraternity, Americanism.

A Southern Woman's Reply.

While Grant was marching through the Mattapony Valley, during one of his Virginia campaigns, he halted at a plantation house for a rest. The mistress of the place was a Mrs. Tyler, the wife of a Confederate colonel. During the conversation her mother-in-law, who was visiting her, remarked with some asperity:

"I came from Richmond not long ago, where I lived in a house on the James River which overlooks Belle Isle; and I had the satisfaction of looking down every day on the Yankee prisoners. I saw thousands and thousands of them and before this campaign is over I want to see the whole of the Yankee army in Southern prisons."

Just then Burnside joined the party. As he looked at his corps filing by on the road, he said to Mrs. Tyler:

"I don't suppose, madam, that you ever saw so many Yankee soldiers before."

"Not at liberty, sir," was the chilling reply.

Stonewall Jackson's Horse.

"Old Sorrel," the horse on whose back Stonewall Jackson was killed, is now in the museum of the soldiers' home, half a mile from Richmond. The horse has been prepared and mounted in a life-like attitude and is valued in his present state at $5,000, more than most dead horses are worth.

"Old Sorrel" was presented to the home by Gen. Jackson's widow and kept there until his death. During that time he was sent down to the New Orleans exposition of 1884-85, where he attracted much attention. The horse was 36 years old when he died, and his skin was stuffed and placed in the museum. The Southern people would not part with "Old Sorrel" for any amount of money, their devotion to him being second only to their adoration for the brave soldier.

Grant's Ear for Music.

While Meade's army was marching out of the Wilderness a drum corps in passing Grant's headquarters caught sight of the chief, and at once struck up a then popular negro camp-meeting air. Every one began to laugh.

"What's the fun?" inquired the General.

"Why," was the reply, "they are playing, 'Ain't I glad to get out ob de wilderness!'"

The General smiled at the ready wit of the musicians, and said:

"Well, with me a musical joke always requires explanation. I know only two tunes—one is 'Yankee Doodle' and the other isn't."

A Total Disability Claim of $1,650 Paid to a Man Who Was Afterward Cured.

The Monitor, a newspaper published at Meaford, Ont., Canada, first discovered this case two years ago, and published it at length, which now seems, owing to the cure of it, to be a miracle. The facts were so remarkable that many people doubted the truth of them. They said: "It is too remarkable; it cannot possibly be true; the paper is mistaken, and the man, although he may think himself cured, will soon relapse into his former condition," etc., etc. The accuracy of its report called in question, the Monitor determined to find out definitely whether the facts were as stated and whether the man would really stay cured. They accordingly kept a close watch on the case for two years after the first article appeared, and have just now published another article about it, in which the original reports are completely verified, the cure is permanent, and they publish a facsimile of the check given by the Canadian Mutual Life Association for $1,650.00, amount of total disability claim paid by them to Mr. Petch.

The first account stated that the patient (see address below) had been a paralytic for five years, that there was such a total lack of feeling in his limbs and body, that a pin run full length could not be felt; that he could not walk or help himself at all; for two years he was not dressed; furthermore, that he was bloated, was for that reason almost unrecognizable, and could not get his clothes on. The paralysis was so complete as to affect the face and prevented him from opening his mouth sufficiently wide to take solid food. The doctors called the disease spinal sclerosis, and all said he could not live.

For three years he lingered in this condition. Then by some friends he was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He took them and there was a slight change. The first thing noted was a tendency to sweat freely. This showed there was some life left in his helpless body. Next came a little feeling in his limbs. This extended, followed by prickling sensations, until at last the blood began to course freely, naturally and vigorously through his body, and the helplessness gave way to returning strength, the ability to walk returned, and he was restored to his old-time health.

The above is the substance of the first article published by the Monitor. Now follow some clippings, taken from the same paper two years afterward, and there is not the slightest shadow of a doubt, in view of this testimony, that Mr. Petch's cure is permanent. Here follows the account:

On being again questioned, Mr. Petch said: "You see those hands—the skin is now natural and elastic. Once they were hard and without sensation. You could pierce them with a pin and I would not feel it, and what is true of my hands is true of the rest of my body. Perhaps you have observed that I have now even ceased to use a cane, and can get about my business perfectly well. You may say there is absolutely no doubt as to my cure being permanent. Indeed I am if even better health than when I gave you the first interview."

"Do you still attribute your cure to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills?" asked the Monitor.

"Unquestionably I do," was the reply. "Doctors had failed, as had also the numerous remedies recommended by my friends. Nothing I took had the slightest effect upon me until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To this wonderful medicine I owe my release from the living death. I have since recommended these pills to many of my friends, and the verdict is always in their favor. I shall always bless the day I was induced to take them."

Such is the history of one of the most remarkable cases of modern times. Can any one say, in the face of such testimony, that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not entitled to the careful consideration of any suffering man, woman or child? Is not the case in truth a miracle of modern medicine?

To make the evidence complete we publish above a facsimile cut of the check received by Mr. Petch from the Canadian Mutual Life Association, being the amount due him for total disability. It is unnecessary to add that this life insurance association did not pay this large amount of money to Mr. Petch, except after the most careful examination of his condition by their medical experts. They must have regarded him as forever incurable.

Mr. Petch's address is as follows: Reuben Petch, Griersville, Ont., Canada.

I, the undersigned, Auditor in and for the County of DeKalb, State of Indiana, do hereby certify, that the foregoing is a true and complete list of all the lands and town lots in said county returned delinquent for the taxes for the year 1896, with the delinquent tax, penalty and interest, and also the tax for the year 1897, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Notice is therefore hereby given that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon or due from the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn in said county, on the second Monday in February, A. D. 1898, (the same being the 14th day of said month), unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m. on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale.

FRANK A. BORST, AUDITOR.
By M. BOLAND, Deputy.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 17, 1898.

Well Children

that are not very robust need a warming, building and fat-forming food—something to be used for two or three months in the fall—that they may not suffer from cold.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda supplies exactly what they want. They will thrive, grow strong and be well all winter on this splendid food tonic. Nearly all of them become very fond of it. For adults who are not very strong, a course of treatment with the Emulsion for a couple of months in the fall will put them through the winter in first-class condition. Ask your doctor about this.

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion. See that the man and fish are on the wrapper.

THE MASQUERADE

A Gay Scene At The Armory Last Evening.

The Armory was bright and lovely with bunting in the Carnival colors and a profusion of Japanese lanterns, when they gathered there last evening for the mask party. There were many visitors present, some of whom did not dance, and some who would dance but did not care to mask. The party was not ready till somewhat past the hour set, but soon after nine the Grand March began. There were about 25 couples took part in this and it made a beautiful scene. The masks were unusually fine as well as the general make up as to costumes, etc. There was very much less of the comic, and none of the grotesque or coarse, refined taste and judgment being apparent everywhere.

SOME OF THE MASKS.

Our reporters "discovered" about all of the persons who represented characters.

Dr. J. H. Johnston was Uncle Sam; Mr. Fischler was a Mexican and Mrs. F. was queen of clubs; Edna Davis represented Night and Miss Lela Morse of Angola was a Greek girl. G. H. Yesbera represented a priest; and Mrs. Yesbera an old woman. There were seven "girls from school," Clara Somers, Maude VanAuken, Mrs. G. W. Askew, Louise Long, Mamie Trentman Annie Trentman and Mrs. Jink Eldridge.

Mrs. Geo. Henderson, was a "Hello Girl," and George himself was George Washington. May Rose was a blue domino; Ethel Hodge, a pink domino; Zoe Somers a red domino; and there were two black dominos, Nellie Franks and Lydia Hallam. Mr. Chas. Nelson was a Continental soldier, Ora Snyder was a Chinaman and there were two "Farmer Hayseeds" Harry Trentman and Will Raut. Jim Eldridge was a Spanish Cavalier, Bert McCoy of Columbus O. was a Mexican; Ora Hart and Harry Lamb were clowns Ed Thacker was Uncle Sam; Will Jaeger was a foreign Nobleman. Jim Eldridge and Mamie Trentman led the grand march.

There were perhaps a few others whose names we could not learn. Altogether it was one of the most enjoyable parties our young people have had for years. The music was furnished by Rocco Garramone the Albion harpist and Milo Calkin of this place, who played the violin.

Among the guests from abroad were: Bert McCoy of Columbus, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Meeks of Canton, Ohio, Miss Lela Morse of Angola, Mr. Attebury and Mr. Shelley of Defiance, Frank Newell and Fred Paul of Garrett. From Hicksville quite a party came over on the B. & O. evening train. They were Dr. Baker, Dr. Scudder Hull, Miss Della Kyle, Miss Grace Correll and Miss Ada Clark.

HOUSEHOLD GODS

The ancient Greeks believed that the Penates were the gods who attended to the welfare and prosperity of the family. They were worshiped as household gods in every home. The household god of today is Dr. King's New Discovery. For consumption, coughs, colds and for all affections of Throat Chest and Lungs it is invaluable: It has been tried for a quarter of a century and is guaranteed to cure, or money returned. No household should be without this good angel. It is pleasant to take and a safe and sure remedy for old and young. Free trial bottles at H. D. McCord's drugstore. Regular size 50c. and $1.

WITH A ROPE

One of Fort Wayne's Business Men Hung Himself Yesterday.

W. A. Meyer a hatter of Ft. Wayne was found in the cellar of his store room yesterday morning, having hung himself. In the morning he arose about the usual hour, donned a white shirt and cuffs, dressed the children as was his custom and left the house about 7:30, telling his wife that he had an engagement with the insurance adjusters at the store, his building having caught fire Sunday last.

At the appointed hour the adjusters for the German Insurance Company, called at the store and found the door locked. They waited a few minutes and then sent to Mrs. Meyer for a key. She then went down to the store never suspecting the sight which was to confront her. Mr. Meyer was not in the store room and the wife started for the cellar to see if he was there. Half way down she cried, "My God, he has hung himself." There was Mr. Meyer hanging to a rope attached to a gas pipe in the floor above, not twelve inches from the stairway. The body was limp and was cut down, but life was extinct.

The rope used for the deed was a piece of awning rope which had been laying in the store room for a long time. It is supposed that after tying the rope around his neck he jumped from the stairs.

Among his effects found, was a sealed letter addressed to Mrs. Meyer. It was written in German and was about as follows:

"LIEBE MAMMA—Don't believe what people say; I am innocent. Best regards and kisses for you and the little ones. Trust in God and not the people I pity you and the children.

Your Unfortunate
"WILHELM."

No cause is assigned for the tragedy, except that Meyer was probably despondent. Rumors had reached him that some persons had said he set the hat store afire last Sunday, and this is probably what he referred to in the letter in writing that he was innocent.

A few weeks ago Mr. Meyer was found unconscious in his cellar and it was believed at the time that he had attempted to kill himself by turning on the gas.

He was about forty years of age and leaves a wife and four children.

EXTENDING TELEPHONE LINE

We have frequently alluded to the movement on foot to connect, St. Joe, Spencerville, Newville and Hicksville to the long distance service of Home Telephone Co. W. W. Stimely, manager of the exchange here has just completed all necessary arrangements for the construction of the above line. As noted in Wednesday's daily Mr. Stimely had gone to Ashley where he met the business men there and now plans are under way to build a line from Auburn to Ashley, Hudson, Pleasant Lake and Angola. It is only a question of time until the wires of this company will be webbed over this country like the home of the spider.

RESIGNED.

H. C. Shull, secretary of the school board, has received a letter from J. C. Teeters, principal of the High School, in which he resigns his position in our public schools. The letter comes as a surprise to the school board, and we have not learned what action will be taken. We presume however, that the resignation will be accepted, and a new principal secured. It has been known for some time, that there was a disagreement between Mr. Teeters and the Board, as to the wages paid. It will be remembered that the wages of several teachers were lowered last year owing to the low state of the funds, and some teachers refused to hire for the present year. We think this is the only trouble, for we do not know that anyone has complained of Mr. Teeters' work in the school room.

ACTION NEEDED.

Not Stimulated Action, but Sustaining, Nourishing and Fixed Action as Generated by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

To be healthy, strong nervous action must be well supplied to the organs. There is no activity in the body except by and through the nerves. The heart, liver, kidneys and everything are inactive from lack of nerve power. Poisons remain in the body because there is no nerve power to expel them. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cures by its action on the nerves; it is at once food and medicine for them. It sustains and nourishes by its soothing effect; produces refreshing sleep, which enables them to recuperate. It regulates so that no waste occurs; it cures the cause, goes to the root and restores health. C. N. Page, Roseville, Ohio, tells in the following words what it did for him:

"I was prostrated about a year ago and kept growing worse under treatment of my physician until I could not sleep or hold a small object safely. I was reduced to 110 pounds and to a state of absolute hopelessness. I commenced using Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. Improvement was noticable from first dose, was able to sleep, regained muscular control, nervousness abated; I continued to improve, and from the use of seven bottles I am today in perfect health, weighing 152 pounds, a gain of 42 pounds in a few weeks."

When his nerves were restored to healthy action, his food made good, rich blood; the blood made flesh, strength and health.

SURVEYOR HERE.

Yesterday the Wabash Railroad Company's Civil Engineer, Mr. Woodford, was here and with City Engineer J. J. VanAuken, made the survey for the new siding to the waterworks plant. Every detail in regard to the waterworks is receiving proper attention from those who have the matter in charge.

Range Stove Men.

The latest device for making money out of the unthinking is the range stove business. Today a dozen or so of teams were in town, and we found they were those of the men who are selling what they claim is a new range stove, of a better and cheaper kind than our local dealers keep for sale. The Columbia City Commercial says they have been all over Whitley county, and adds:

They will leave the range for a few days and then come around and try to collect for the same and if the farmer hasn't the cash his note properly signed is acceptable which will be sold to some paper shaver. These men convince the farmer that he is getting a good range for about 25 per cent. less than our merchants received, when in reality they pay from 25 to 33⅓ per cent, more than any hardware merchant at home would charge.

The Commercial is right. It is always unwise to buy of strangers, especially of those who, it is plain will only be here today and gone tomorrow As we said above, these men were in Auburn. That shows they have struck DeKalb county, and as we write this, are no doubt out among our people trying to sell them a new fangled stove or range, a thing generally not needed. It is reasonable to suppose, also, that even is these strangers are honest, they must sell at a higher price than our local dealers, for their expenses are greater. They have to keep on the road a lot of men, horses and wagons and this means a greater expense than the home merchant has. We hope our people are intelligent enough and good business enough to refuse to deal, not only with these strangers, but all other strangers.

NOT FOR EVERYTHING

But if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, you will find Swamp-Root just the remedy you need People are not apt to get anxious about their health soon enough. If you are "not quite well" or "half sick" have you ever thought that your kidneys may be the cause of your sickness?

It is easy to tell by setting aside your urine for twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder need doctoring.

There is satisfaction in knowing that the great remedy Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, fulfills every wish in relieving weak or diseased kidneys and all forms of bladder and urinary troubles. Not only does Swamp-Root give new life and activity to the kidneys—the cause of trouble, but by treating the kidneys it acts as a tonic for the entire constitution. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar, or by mentioning Auburn Courier and sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton New York you may have a sample bottle of this great discovery sent to you free by mail.

AUBURN CARNIVAL

Today Mr. Leedy of the Journal called on Walter Hartman and asked for a statement of the plans on which we gave our Carnival. This is sent for by the business men of Ft. Wayne who expect to give a Carnival this year. A statement showing as much as possible "how it was done" was furnished them. The Auburn Carnival Association officers will call a meeting of the stockholders in the near future for the election of new Directors. The present directors have a balance of over $150 to turn over to their successors.

A Truthful Statement.

FIRE!

ST. JOE, Feb. 4, 1898.

Special to the DAILY COURIER

The St. Joe saw mill owned by A. B. Filley was burned to the ground last night at 2 o'clock. In addition to the saw mill Mr. Filley had added a planing and matching machine a picket and handle saw, this is the second burn out Mr. Filley has sustained on the same location, the other fire occurins some twelve years ago. Mr. Filley was extensively engaged in manufacturing lumber for the B. & O. R. R. He employed ten or twelve hands, including teamsters and the loss of the mill will be deeply felt not only by Mr. Filley but by those employed by him The loss $2500 is total as no insurance was carried. As to the origin of the fire no one knows as the building was a mass of flames when discovered. The probabilities are that the mill will rebuild at once.

FOUR YEARS IS ENOUGH.

Queer things happen in politics. Up at Goshen the county clerk who has been in the usual four years wants it another four years. But his deputy thinks he ought to let go and give the rest a chance. In fact the deputy is a candidate himself. So the two quarreled and the deputy was fired out. That clerk will know more after the people get a whack at him. At least he would over in this county. Here we do not allow any clerk, auditor or recorder to have but one term, which gives them a good office for four years. The sheriff and treasurer can have two terms, which then equal to the four years of auditor, clerk and recorder. But even then the auditor, clerk and recorder have the best of it, for they only have to be at the expense of one election to get the four years, while treasurer and sheriff have to meet the expenses of two. There is often an exception made as to surveyor, an office that requires especial training, and he is not held so closely to the four-year rule. The commissioners often serve two terms making six years, and some have exceeded that. But the office pays too little to quarrel over. But when it comes to other offices, the four years is settled as the limit in DeKalb county. And it is a good rule.

NO PAY—NO CURE

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Chills and Malaria. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price 50c. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY YET.

W. M. Repine, editor Tiskilwa, Ill., "Chief," says: "We won't keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have a certain and sure cure for Coughs. Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and besides is guaranteed. It never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's drugstore.

SHERIFF STROH HURT

Last night as Sheriff Stroh was returning from Hiram Cupp's, down southeast of town with a sleighing party, while turning the corner at John Neff's south of town, the bolt holding the front runners in place, came out and they slid to one side throwing the sheriff out over the front of the rig alighting on his hip and side. Dr. Buchtel is attending, and thinks it will be four or five days before Mr Stroh will be around again and perhaps longer, as he is unable to move his limb today.

Why Men Cannot Sing.

"Women," says Dr. H. L. Hastings, in the Journal of Medicine and Science, "go with their necks bare, and men keep theirs swathed and bandaged, and ten women have sweet voices to one man. A man's voice should be as pure as a woman's. Why is it not? He is choked and shaved."

It's Trying

to the patience to keep on taking medicine that does not cure. But it is trying that leads to success. If you are suffering from eczema, boils, eruptions, etc., you will begin your cure the day you begin trying

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

THE FUNERAL.

The attendance at the funeral was large, for beginning yesterday, the members of the various commanderies began to arrive. The judge had for many years been a prominent Sir Knight. The services were held at the Presbyterian church, where he had usually attended, the sermon, a masterly one, being by Rev. F. C. Colvin

Mosonic bretheren, the members of the bar from the several counties, and with the relatives and friends formed a sad procession marching from the residence to the church.

After the sermon, the Sir Knights took charge and conducted the solemn and impressive burial services of their order. At the conclusion, the great procession was formed for the journey to Waterloo where the concluding ceremonies were had and he was laid to his final rest, near his father and mother, and the father and mother of Mrs. McClellan, who already rest at that place. Then the sad procession returned to their several homes. Many of his old neighbors at Waterloo gathered about the grave to pay a final tribute to one they had known so long.

ROAD SANK.

There is a place on the wagon road on the line between the two counties of Kosciusko and Wabash where the road broke down through into a sink, like that on the Lake Shore road near Sedan. Last week the two counties sent a joint commission to inspect the sink to see what could be done. They report that the deepest place in the sink measures fifty-six feet and ten inches; that it will be next to impossible to fill it up and that it will be necessary to drive piling and bridge the quagmire.

The entire place is covered with water. Some time ago an effort was made to fill the hole up. A large amount of stone and other stuff was hauled and dumped into it. One night, after having worked for several days, when the men quit work the roadway at that place, twenty-five feet wide, was raised three feet above the grade. Next morning, when the men returned, the roadway had sunk out of sight and was again covered with water.

A CLOUD OF WITNESSES.

Catarrh Can be Permanently Cured.

C. W. Knauer, of Sheldon, Ia., was troubled with catarrh for over two years so that he could only work a few days at a time; tried various doctors without relief Pe-ru-na cured him pemanently. Mrs. Thomas Waltz, New Brighton, Pa., suffered with aggravated sore throat which the doctor could not cure Three bottles of Pe-ru-na cured her. Bernard King, National Military Home. Leavenworth, Kas., neglected a severe cold which developed chronic catarrh. Tried everything he saw advertised, to no avail. Pe-ru-na not only cured the catarrh, but an old case of bronchitis. A. F. Carleon, Lindstrom, Minn., took a course of treatment with Pe-ru-na for catarrh of the head and was cured. He delayed reporting for several months in order to see if cure was was permanent; no symptoms reappearing, he has concluded that the cure is permanent. H. Cox was troubled with catarrh of head and bowels. Six bottles of Pe-runa cueed him, after fourteen years of enforced idleness.

A 32-page pamphlet containing several hundred testimonials, accompanied by a pen portrait of the writer, covering cures of catarrh in all forms and stages by Pe-ru-na, will be sent free to any who desire it by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

REV. MEESE MEETING.

Rev. W. L. Meese who has during the past five weeks been conducting a series of meetings at the Lockwood church has been quite successful and formed a class there last evening. Several people on last evening came forward with a determination to do better. Rev. Meese feels greatly encouraged and hopes that all our people who can will attend the meetings.

STILL ON EARTH

As we intimated a week ago, the DAILY COURIER has been made so good that the people are overlooking what they took exceptions to and its list is rapidly increasing. Its complete local news and the Indianapolis Sentinel, so hotly Democratic that it blisters its pages, with foreign and state news, all for the price of the COURIER alone, 10 cents a week, makes its hold on the people hard to break, especially among Democrats who like to see how the Sentinel blisters the Republicans. The second number of the Gazette daily isn't out yet because we are beginning to think that the COURIER isn't going to lay down and kick the bucket. And just wait until the gas well flows, the new band blows, the water works are turned on, the campaign pot boils over, or the Democrats swallow the Populists and the Republican gulp down the gold Democrats, and the Independents elect the best men in the county, and you will see another number of the Gazette daily. Gosh, won't we have fun though.

COMMISSIONERS SPECIAL

The board of commissioners met Tuesday as required by Statute to audit the township trustees accounts and held special session Wednesday and Thursday, pursuant to call from the auditor for the purpose of appointing road commissioners for the Leighty and Shutt gravel road. Thursday it was ordered that the auditor advertise for bids to be received March 17, for the construction of the substructure and superstructure for bridges over Cedar Creek on the township line between Smithfield and Grant townships and over twenty-six mile creek in section (1) Concord township. The first bridge is the Goodwin bridge near the old Goodwin mill northwest of Waterloo, and is to be an iron bridge, stone abutments, as is now done on all the larger bridges. The one in Concord, is that one called the Wyatt bridge two miles this side of Newville and will be a steel leg bridge, the legs being fixed into mud sills four feet under ground.

GRAVEL ROADS.

This question took up a good deal of time and is likely to cause some difficulty. It arises from the St. Joe and Spencervile gravel road matter. The great cause is an oversight on the part of the superintendent of the work whose duty is would appear to have been to lay his assessment on adjoining property owners, in such a way as not only to cover the expense of making the road, but also the expense of laying it out, that is the pay of the men and engineers who established the grades etc, in surveying for the graveling of the road. The law is that these men are to be paid by the county, and then the county is to get its money back in taxes from the adjacent property owners later on. But the superintendent assessed only enough to build the road, but made no provisions for an additional sum to reimburse the county for paying the viewers and surveyors. The county had paid out about $3.0.

Another difficulty arises on top of this. Each year, there will be some little expense connected with keeping this gravel road in repair. And this, under the law used in putting this gravel road through, the county will have to pay. The Board thinks it unfair that the rest of the county's general fund, should go to keep up that one road, which of course is of no benefit to the rest of the county. So they are at a loss to know what to do. If they did not have to lose the $300 they have already put into it, they would object less to the coming annual expense of repairs. They have postponed the matter for a time, and ordered the latest statutes, so as to see clearer what to do.

There were a number of bills allowed and some laid over. The allowances will be published at the session with all others, as is usual. The matter of appointing gravel road commissioners was laid over.

As noted, the new law requires the Board to meet the first Tuesday in each month to audit the accounts of township trustees. Of course, some trustees have no reports to make at these Tuesday meetings. But such as have, came in and report. There were but three or four this time.

From Pacific Islands

We have a letter from Joseph Shade in which he says he will send letters to the COURIER while on his Pacific journeys. He goes to the Sandwich Islands first and then to the Samoa Islands where he expects to remain for some time. The distance is so great, we do not expect a letter till some time in the spring but like all his letters, they will be interesting. COURIER readers have not forgotten the letters he sent from Honduras.

UNGRATEFUL HUSBAND

The following editorial appeared in the Fort Wayne Sentinel, concerning the releas of Newton Penland, of Jackson township. It contains some good advice, and we believe should be read by many:

A man has just been released from jail in Auburn, twenty miles north of Ft. Wayne, after having been in confinement a year for failure to support his wife and child. That may be a lawful way of dealing with such a case, but it is neither an application of justice nor an exhibition of good sense. A man who is indifferent to his moral obligation to support wife and child will not be moved to a better understanding of the matter by a prison sentence. Moreover, to immure him of any opportunity to work for his family. A whipping post would be vastly more persuasive than a jail. We think we are moving out of the shadow of a surviving barbarism when we abolish whipping posts, the stocks, pillories, and the like, but there is nothing barbaric about those things. The whipping post was evolved from that palpable fact of human nature that man's flesh is ofttimes more tender than his conscience. So long as that fact survives in human nature the moral and legal provision for dealing with it should survive as its consequence. Lazy, shiftless louts of husbands and hardened brutes of fathers find it much easier to heave off the burden of the marriage contract by hounding the helpless, browbeaten, terrorized wife into the divorce court than to work to support her and the children. The records of the courts in this city prove this many scores of times. The man who will raise his hand in brutal anger against the wife and is deaf to the shaming appeal of ragged, hungry little ones is a coward of an unspeakable kind. Nothing will so mend the moral nature of a coward as a righteous and effectual thrashing. But let it be done in a lawful way. That will do wife and children as well as the husband and father good. It is a benefit that will go clear round. Confinement in a jail or the wife's remedy of divorce permits the offender to escape altogether, and imposes numerous incidental burdens on the state and on society.

CYRUS M. GREGG

F. T. Zimmerman received a telegram last evening stating that Cyrus M. Gregg had died at his home in St. Louis, Mo. and requesting him to come at once. Mr Z. left on the first train having only about twenty minutes to make the same.

Mr. Gregg is a brother to our townsman, L. E. Gregg also of Mrs. F. T. Zimmerman, Mrs. Sallie Weamer, Mrs. R. H. Weamer and Mrs. T. G. Morse of Angola.

A Flag of Warning.

Beware of the dry, tickling, hacking, morning cough, for it warns you that consumption lurks near. The famous Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it. "I had a very bad cough. One doctor pronounced it consumption. I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and was completely cured; the cough left me and has never come back. Simon Smasal, 375 31st Street, Chicago, Ills." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup costs but 25 cents. Ask for Bull's, take only Bull's.

Will Celebrate.

(St Joe News.)

The Christian Church at Coburn's Corners will celebrate the sixty-first anniversary of its organization on Thursday, Feb. 17th 1898, at their place of worship. A good program is being prepared which will be announced in due time. Good speakers from abroad will be in attendance then who will address the meeting, good music to enliven the occasion, recitations, declamations and general small talk by anyone present who desires to talk.

A general invitation is extended to all of whatever belief, to meet and enjoy the day with us. Exercises will commence at ten o'clock sharp. Sun time. Committee.

The Teller Resolution.

Many of our readers do not understand the exact nature of the Teller Resolution that passed the senate but was defeated in the House, we publish it. It is the same one introduced by Stanley Mathews republican in 1878 and for which president McKinley voted, being then a member of the House. Here it is:

"That all the bonds of the United States issued, or authorized to be issued, under the said acts of congress hereinbefore recited, are payable, principal and interest, at the option of the government of the United States, in silver dollars of the coinage of the United States containing 412½ grains each of standard silver; and that to restore to its coinage such silver coins as a legal tender in payment of said bonds principal and interest, is not in violation of the public faith nor in derogation of the rights of the public creditor."

AT WATERLOO

Saturday afternoon quite a company of ladies came over from Kendallville, and joined their fellow townspeople. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Smiley at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blair for a social evening. They came down on the afternoon train and returned on the 8:35 train the same evening. The hours were spent in a social way and at six all sat down to a supper such as few can prepare better than the accomplished hostess, and which all greatly enjoyed. Three came cards and conversation till train line, which all felt came a little too soon. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Smiley. Mesdames Brillhart, Durling, Helwig, Haddox, Hartsock, Graves, Loomis, Klinkenberg, Weinstein, Barr, Lambright, Gappinger, Miss Gappinger, Mrs. Harry Park and Mrs. Eugene Iddings. Also Mr and Mrs. J. A. Barns, of Auburn, who were acquaintances of the most of them. It was a most enjoyable gathering for all and all feel that Mr. and Mrs. Blair are excellent entertainers.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were received today from the Waterloo Lodge F. & A. M.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in his wisdom on the 31st day of January, 1898, to remove from the roll of this lodge by death our brother, Charles A. O. McClellan, and whereas it was his his pleasure and duty to have been at the institution of this lodge, created its first Master on May 26, 1864 and whereas we recognize that his labors on earth have been called to an end by the grand Master on high, to whom all must sooner or later answer and give an account, and whereas he was one of the charter members of this lodge, therefore be it

Resolved, That we deeply deplore our loss and that a page of the records of the lodge be set apart to his memory, and these resolutions be spread thereon.

Resolved that we tender to his bereaved widow our sympathy in her sorrow, and to the family in the loss of a father.

Resolved, That we recognize in his death that an untiring brother has finished his course on earth, and gone to that celestial home not made with hands, to that lodge on high, eternally in the heavens.

Resolved that the lodge be draped in mourning for the space of 30 days, that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the widow of our deceased brother, and that they be printed in the Waterloo Press, Silver Dawn, Auburn COURIER and Dispatch.

THE SAN JOSE PEST.

The Germans have excluded our apples from their markets because they claim they are infested with a new and destructive insect, the San Jose louse, or scale, so called because first found in this country near San Jose, Calif. It is supposed the insect came from Australia or China. A writer in the South Bend Times says the pest has been found in six counties in Indiana, Clark, Jefferson and Washington counties in the south, Marion county in the center, and Miami and DeKalb in the north. Our enterprising DeKalb farmers will be wise to look this matter up.

BIG CRACKER COMPANY.

Every American Factory Under One Management.

All biscuit and cracker companies between Salt Lake City on the west and Portland, Maine, on the east, St. Paul on the north and New Orleans on the south are now under one management. The name of the new corporation which was incorporated in New Jersey with a capital of $25,000,000 of preferred and $30,000,000 common stock, is the National Biscuit Company. The actual transfer of deeds of the various plants controlled by the companies and merged into the national company took place in the offices of the Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago. Benjamin F. Crawford of Mansfield O., was elected President; H. F. Varies of Chicago, First Vice President; Frank O. Lowden of Chicago, Second Vice President; C. E. Kunsey of Pittsburgh, Secretary and Treasurer.

LEFT THE TRACK.

Bad Wreck on the Michigan Narrow Guage Road.

Train No. 8 on the South Haven and Eastern narrow gauge road was wrecked at Lawrence, Mich., and at least a half dozen people were injured. A quarter of a mile from the station the snow plow jumped the track and was piled into by two locomotives which drew the train and two coaches.

The injured are: General Manager M. V. Meredith, face badly burned; Brakeman Burhans, face burned and may be internally injured; Chief Engineer G. Drow, leg hurt; C. V. Bangs, Lake Cora, left foot mashed; Charles Mill, Papaw, left foot badly hurt and face burned. The other passengers escaped injury. One engine was ruined and the other badly damaged.

A Mine Incident.

Seattle (Wash.) special: "Boys, string me up if you like, but remember you are hanging the steadiest man with a six shooter that ever came out of Montana. You say it's all right to hang me and I suppose it is. I'm only sorry I did not get the rest of them."

With these words Cowboy Doc Tanner faced his executioners on the morning of February 2, at Valdes Pass. The men who passed sentence on him were members of a party of Massachusetts prospectors found for the Copper River country, Alaska, and the crime for which Tanner paid the penalty was the killing of N. A. Coll of Worthington, Minn., and William A. Lee of Towell, Mass.

Train Wrecked.

A local passenger train from Stoneham on the southern division of the Boston and Maine Railroad was struck in the rear and telescoped at the Winterhill Station, near Somerville, Mass., by a train from Concord, and several persons were injured, some seriously. The number of those who were hurt sufficiently to be given medical attendance is reported as fifteen. The accident resulted from the inability of the engineer of the Concord train to see the train ahead of him, on account of the steam from his locomotive.

Saw Her Husband Killed.

Michael Sorg, a farmer living near Lancaster, N. Y., was brutally murdered in bed recently. His wife, who lay beside him, saw the assassin strike the blow. The murderer, whose object was probably robbery, split Sorg's head open with an ax. He then ran from the house, and no trace of him has been found. Mrs. Sorg warded off the blow with her arm and was slightly injured.

Wants Our Horses Barred.

A special from Berlin say: Baron Von Himmerstein-Loften, the Minister of Agriculture, at a recent session of the Prussian Diet, declared that American horses developed influenza after importation. He added: "If the importations increase we shall certainly be forced to adopt a suitable quarantine in order to protect ourselves."

A Chance for Settlement.

It is said that there is a plan under consideration at the White House to secure the freedom of Cuba on financial terms. In this way Spain could escape humiliation and in a small degree recompense herself for the tremendous expense of the Cuban campaign.

Twenty Killed.

Constantinople special: Details received from Balikeer, Asia Minor, show that twenty persons were killed and fifty injured by the recent earthquake at that place and Brusa.

Bread Riots at Persa.

Serious bread riots have occurred at Persa, near Turin, Italy. The disorder was finally dispersed by the troops, but in the disorder many were injured on both sides.

Cretan Question.

News comes from credible sources that Germany and Austria, who have frequently declared they were neutral on the Cretan question, have resolved to oppose the selection of Prince George for Governor of Crete, and have ordered a withdrawal of their warships from Crete.

Robbers Torture a Woman.

Four masked men entered the residence of Miss Nancy Fix, south of Delaware, Ohio, commanded her to tell where she kept her money, and upon her refusing they bound and gagged her. Unable to stand the torture she disclosed the hiding place and the robbers secured $1,200.

North Dakota Bank Closed.

The First National Bank of Larimore, N. D., did not open its doors the other morning. From the officials it was learned that the trouble is owing to slow collections. During the last sixty days there have been withdrawals of deposits amounting to $60,000.

TRADE CONTINUES TO IMPROVE.

Prices of Wheat and Cotton Have Risen—Review of the General Situation.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "The first month of the new year has brought rather more increase in business, but less improvement in prices, than was expected. With payments through clearing house 7.3 per cent larger than in 1892, and probably the largest ever known in any month; with railroad earnings 11.2 per cent larger than the best of past years, the fact that prices are very low only shows more clearly the increase in quantities of products sold. The settlement of wages on a 10 per cent advance April 1 for 200,000 coal miners of the central region, with other changes, will tend toward a larger demand for products of all kinds, though also toward some increase in cost of manufacture. Wheat has been conspicuous, rising 5 cents for the week, with 5½ cents for May options. Cotton has risen 1-16 cent, notwithstanding the strikes in Eastern mills and the oficial report of a decrease of 10.5 per cent in British exports of cotton goods last year. The woolen manufacture is doing well, fine worsted goods having opened at an advance of 20 per cent of last year. Sales at three of the chief markets have been 8,080,100 pounds, and for four weeks, 30,421,070, of which 21,367,720 were domestic, against 36,547,600 last year, of which 23,397,300 were domestic. Failures for the week have been 342 in the United States, against 331 last year, and 34 in Canada, against 57 last year."

HAS TO TOW A BATTLESHIP.

Indiana's Boilers Leaked and the New York Dragged Her Nearly Along.

There has been received at the Navy Department in Washington an official report from Rear Admiral Sicard concerning the leakage of the boiler tubes of the battleship Indiana, which necessitated the towing of that vessel by the cruiser New York in order for it to keep up with the remainder of the North Atlantic squadron. That Rear Admiral Sicard did not think the matter was important is shown by the fact that he only mentioned it in one paragraph of a letter headed: "Incident of the cruise from Hampton Roads to Key West." He stated that in order not to delay the passage to Key West he ordered the New York to take the Indiana in tow. Hawsers were run out to the battleship and the New York, aided by some of the boilers which were in good condition on board the Indiana, pulled the battleship along without much difficulty.

VALUES OF AMERICAN CROPS.

Government Statistics Issued for the Year 1897—Corn Leads.

The final estimates of acreage, production and value of the crops in the United States for 1897, made by the statistician of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, are as follows: Corn, 80,095,101 acres, 1,902,967,933 bushels, $501,572,952 value; wheat, 39,465,066 acres, 530,149,168 bushels, $428,547,121; oats, 25,730,375 acres, 698,767,809 bushels, $147,974,719; rye, 1,703,561 acres, 27,363,324 bushels, $12,239,647; barley, 2,719,116 acres, 66,685,127 bushels, $25,142,139; buckwheat, 717,836 acres, 14,997,451 bushels, $6,319,188; potatoes, 2,534,577 acres, 164,015,964 bushels, $89,643,059; hay, 42,426,770 acres, 60,664,876 tons, $401,390,728.

Warship Headed for Samoa.

The American flag will soon be displayed in Samoan waters by a man-of-war. The vessel will be the Mohican, which has been converted into a training ship. Since the arrival in Washington of former Consul General Churchill the President and Assistant Secretary of State Day have become convinced that American interests demand that a man-of-war shall soon visit Samoa. Mr. Churchill has told them that the natives have no respect for the American Government because it has never sent a man-of-war to support any steps for the protection of American interests which its representatives in Apia might take. Mr. Churchill reported an insult paid to a man from Arizona who had established a mission near Apia. He demanded satisfaction, but the natives laughed at him, and upon subsequent occasions when he attempted to get satisfaction for some wrong committed they taunted him with the outrage committed upon the mission and the further fact that he had received no support from his Government in the stand he had taken. The natives have quite a different feeling for the British and German Governments. Each of these Governments keeps one and sometimes two cruisers in Samoan waters. The last American warship to visit Apia was the Alliance, which dropped anchor in the harbor in 1893. Upon the arrival of the Mohican in Samoan waters it is expected that her commanding officer, Commander G. M. Book, will confer with Consul General Osborne in regard to the steps to be taken to create a deeper respect among the natives for the American flag.

Escape from a Kansas Jail.

Charles Robinson, alias "Blackeye," who was charged with robbing banks and postoffices in Missouri, and who was recently captured at Fort Scott, Kan., broke jail with George W. Finche, under a life sentence for the murder of Frank Swafford, and six other prisoners. They assaulted the jailer and took his keys and gun. Robinson is accused of robbing banks at Hume and Richards, Mo., and the postoffice at Nevada.

Millions for a Road in New Mexico.

A special from New York to the Santa Fe New Mexican says J. J. Hagerman, Colorado Springs, and E. O. Faulkner, receiver of the Pecos Valley Railroad, have succeeded in securing $2,500,000 for the extension of the Pecos Valley road from Roswell, N. M., to Washburn, Tex., where it will connect with the Santa Fe system and Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf. The extension will be 215 miles in length.

To Lake Linderman by Rail.

Hugh C. Wallace, at Tacoma, Wash., president of the Chilcoot Railroad and Transportation Company, has advices of the completion of the company's aerial railway over the Chilcoot Pass to Lake Linderman. This marks a new era for Klondike travel, as the time between tidewater and the headwaters of the Yukon river is shortened from a month to one day, besides removing the peril and hardships.

Anti-Lynching Law Unconstitutional.

The Ohio law which says the sum of $5,000 may be collected from a county by the friends of a person lynched therein, has been declared unconstitutional. Judge Duston of the common pleas court at Urbana gave the decision.

A Dangerous $2 Bill.

Agents of the Government secret service are in Kansas City investigating the appearance there of a counterfeit $2 silver certificate. The character of the bill is very fine, and it is an extremely dangerous counterfeit.

Died from Hydrophobia.

The 6-year-old daughter of A. Olivera of Santa Monica, Cal., was bitten by a vicious dog over three weeks ago and is now dead, having shown every symptom of hydrophobia.

Germany Refuses Our Fruit.

The Prussian minister of finance, Dr. Miquel, has issued a decree at Berlin, which goes into effect immediately, prohibiting the importation of every kind of American fresh fruit. The decree has been sent to all the German ports and frontier stations, excepting Bavaria, Saxony and Wurtemberg. The United States embassy was not previously warned, and the United States ambassador, Andrew D. White, sent a formal letter to the foreign office inquiring upon what authority this inimical step was taken. The United States consul at Hamburg, Dr. Hugh Pitcairn, telegraphs that 16,000 barrels of American apples have been forbidden to be unloaded, and that two trains loaded with American fruit have also been forbidden to cross the frontier at Emmerich, which, aside from Hamburg, is the principal place of entry for American fruit. On receipt of this news Mr. White sent a second and stronger remonstrance to the foreign office calling attention to the evident violation of the treaty. At the foreign office it was learned that the Prussian Government prohibits the entry of American fruit on sanitary grounds, claiming that California and other vermin threaten German trees and fruit.

RAN NUDE INTO THE SNOW.

Washington Girl's Method of Suicide—Her Father Hanged Himself.

The suicidal mania which has caused a number of attempts at self-destruction in Washington during the last several weeks developed two more cases in the persons of Walter Taylor, a clerk in the Treasury Department, and his pretty 20-year-old daughter Lucy. Miss Taylor has been in ill health for some time, and her illness assumed a suicidal form. She was with difficulty persuaded to retire to her room, and about 1 o'clock in the morning, after a violent struggle with her parents, who tried to hold her, she plunged through the window of her home and fell into a snowbank in the front yard. She then ran, terribly cut and bruised, through the streets, and after a half hour's search was found almost nude in a snowbank by a policeman. She was taken home, and it was then found that during her absence her father had hanged himself by a rope attached to the boiler of a stove. He was cut down and removed to the hospital unconscious.

TO SUPPLEMENT MAINE'S VISIT.

Cruisers Montgomery and Brooklyn Going to West Indies.

Encouraged by the excellent effect of the visit of the battle ship Maine to Havana the administration has determined to send another man-of-war upon a friendly visit to the smaller Cuban ports. The vessel selected is the cruiser Montgomery, which is now taking on board a supply of coal at Key West. In addition to this the armored cruiser Brooklyn, now at the Brooklyn navy yard, will leave in a few days for a cruise in the West Indies. She will not touch Cuba. Her itinerary requires her to first visit St. Thomas, thence go to Santa Cruz, Curacoa, La Guayra and Aspinwall. Ports in Cuba will form only a feature in the itinerary of the Montgomery, as it is proposed to have her call at several other points in the West Indies. The Montgomery's mission, like that of the Maine to Havana, is purely friendly in character.

GIVE UP HUNTING RIGHTS.

Treaty with Bannocks and Shoshones is Practically Completed.

C. G. Hoyt of the Fort Hall Indian commission at Pocatello, Idaho, has practically concluded a treaty with the Bannock and Soshone Indians for the sale of the Fort Hall reservation for the lump sum of $525,000. The treaty also carries a provision for the payment of $75,000 to the Indians for the relinquishment of their hunting rights in Jackson's Hole. The treaty is the result of more than a year's work on the part of the commission. About one-fourth of the land to be sold is fine agricultural land and the balance mineral land. It is thought that the treaty will be ratified before Congress adjourns.

Peary's Cash Attached.

The share of the lecture receipts coming to Lieut. R. E. Peary as a result of his engagement in Lawrence, Kan., was attached by J. D. Bowersock. Peary was booked early in the season to lecture at the Bowersock Opera House, but without notifying Mr. Bowersock the management changed the lecture to University Hall, and action for damages was brought by Mr. Bowersock to protect himself.

Too Hasty with a Gun.

An unknown negro, who was refused the privilege of walking through a tunnel of the Norfolk and Western Railway near Bramwell, W. Va., shot Harry Draper, the watchman, killing him instantly. A posse soon formed and captured the negro, later placing him in jail. At midnight fifty men took the prisoner from the jail and lynched him, after which his body was riddled with bullets.

Train Plunged Into a Ditch.

A train on the Maine Central Railway was wrecked near Orono station. Two persons were killed outright and 27 were injured. Of the latter two more are now dead and it is expected that several others will not survive. The derailment was caused by spreading rails.

South Dakota Postoffice Robbed.

Robbers blew open the postoffice safe at Tyndall, S. D., and secured $800 in stamps and cash.

DEATH IN THE STORM.

FURIOUS BLIZZARD IN THE NEW ENGLAND STATES.

Over a Score Are Killed—Property Loss Foots Up to Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars—Boston a Severe Sufferer—Isolated for Hours.

Deals Wide Destruction.

Lives have been lost, hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property has been destroyed and all branches of business have been paralyzed by the fierce storm which exhausted its fury Tuesday afternoon on the New England States. Not in twenty-five years has there been a storm of such severity. It will be days before anything like an accurate estimate can be made of the damage inflicted. It will be weeks before the effects of the storm will have passed away. More than a score of lives have been lost along the New England coast. At least thirty coastwise and fishing vessels are reported as having been wrecked, while as many more are missing.

The storm, which began Monday morning and continued till a late hour Tuesday afternoon, was the most severe in every way of which the weather bureau has any record. About eighteen inches of snow fell in Boston, with a wind blowing from thirty to fifty miles an hour. The storm was even more severe in the North and East.

For about eighteen hours Boston was cut off from all communication with the outside world, no wires were working, and all trains and electric cars were stalled. Hundreds of miles of wires are flat, and it will take thousands of men several days to restore the service to its normal condition.

At least sixty horses were killed in Boston by falling trolley and electric wires. The streets in many places were literally covered with a network of live wires, and as the districts Monday night were in total darkness it was extremely dangerous to pedestrians. Few electric cars made any progress, and many filled with passengers were stalled all night because of falling wires and deep snow. The steam trains fared little better, as nearly all the tracks were covered with wires and poles, in addition to snow, making progress even for a locomotive practically impossible. Add to this the fact that the switches and signals refused to work, and that no communication could be had with the conductors of trains on the road, and some idea of the completeness of the blockade can be obtained. Superintendent Merritt of the Western division of the Boston and Maine Railroad says it is the most disastrous storm on his road since 1867.

None of the New England States escaped the force of the storm. New Hampshire and Vermont are having the most severe winter in twenty years. Following temperatures ranging from twenty to thirty degrees below zero, the storm came and completely paralyzed all railroad and telegraphic communication. Drifts thirty feet deep are reported from the hill towns, and railroad trains are stuck in the snow.

Many mills and factories made no attempt to run, and "no school" signals were hoisted in twenty-eight of the thirty-three cities in New England.

WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE

His Illness Not of So Severe a Character as to Endanger His Life.

It is gratifying news that Mr. Gladstone's illness is not of so grave a character as to endanger his life. Whatever may be thought of his politics and his work as a statesman, there is something fine and admirable in the way in which this famous man has conserved his energies and kept himself healthy and active up to the age of 89.

To have been so actively engaged in large enterprises, to have lived so long and accomplished good hard work in every year of life, is enough reward for any one man. If there is anything in the theory that hearty activity and hard work are life preservers, Gladstone is the man who has done most to demonstrate its truth.

GLADSTONE IN HIS OLD AGE.

PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

Increase During the Month of January is $12,589,771.

The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business Jan. 31 the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,011,701,338, an increase for the month of $12,589,771. This increase is accounted for by the decrease in the amount of cash on hand. The debt is recapitulated as follows: Interest-bearing debt, $847,365,810; debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $1,328,540; debt bearing no interest, $336,878,774; total, $1,235,573,124. This amount, however, does not include $581,213,933 in certificates and treasury notes outstanding which are offset by an equal amount of cash in the treasury. The treasury cash is classified as follows: Gold, $200,731,551; silver, $510,616,160; paper, $100,452,096; bonds, deposits in national banks, disbursing officers' balances, etc., $41,338,199; total, $853,198,008, against which there are demand liabilities outstanding amounting to $629,326,222, leaving a net cash balance, including the gold reserve, of $223,871,786.

The monthly statement of the Government receipts and expenditures shows that for the month of January the receipts aggregated $37,333,628, and the expenditures $36,696,711, leaving a surplus for the month of $636,917. The miscellaneous receipts for January include $8,538,401 received during the month from the sale of Union Pacific Railroad. Excluding this item, the receipts amount to $28,795,227, leaving a deficit for the month of $7,901,484. Deducting also the payments during November and December on account of Pacific Railroad indebtedness, amounting to $49,909,822 in receipts and $5,449,368 in expenditures, the receipts and expenditures since July 1, 1897, amount to $187,537,378 and $239,439,201, respectively, showing a deficit of $51,901,823. The receipts from customs during January amounted to $14,269,492, a gain as compared with January, 1897, of about $3,000,000. The internal revenue receipts also showed a gain of over $1,300,000 for the month. Since July 1 the Government has paid out on pension account nearly $89,000,000. The present net gold balance in the treasury is the largest since August, 1890.

LATTIMER TRIAL BEGINS.

Case Against Sheriff Martin for Shooting Miners in Pennsylvania.

The trial of James Martin, high sheriff of Luzerne County, Pa., and his eighty deputies on charges of murder and felonious wounding, was begun in the county court house at Wilkes-Barre Tuesday. Sept. 10 a collision took place at Lattimer between Sheriff Martin and his armed deputies and a body of striking miners. Twenty miners were killed and fifty wounded. Subjects of Australia, Italy and Germany were among the killed, and these countries are awaiting the outcome of the trial to make claims for damages upon the United States. The defendants all come from Hazelton and vicinity and are all men of considerable standing and good reputation.

SHERIFF MARTIN.

Henry M. Hoyt, deputy Attorney General of the United States, is in attendance at the trial. In sending Mr. Hoyt to attend the trial the United States Government has only one object in view—namely, to protect itself in case foreign Governments file claims for damages for the killing of their subjects at Lattimer. Austria has already made a move in that direction, and it is understood if the verdict is against Sheriff Martin and his deputies Germany and Italy will file claims at once. Each of these Governments has a representative from its legation at Washington present at the trial.

TALMAGE'S SECRET MARRIAGE.

The Announcement Thereof Created a Sensation Among Is Friends.

The recent marriage of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage was a great surprise to his friends and relatives—even to his son. Mrs. Charles Collier, whom he married, is a handsome widow of 39 and one of the most charming women in the society of Pittsburg's twin city. Last summer she visited New York, being one of a party of friends who spent several weeks with Rev. Dr. Paxon. Another of the guests was Dr. Talmage. It was the first time the renowned divine and the woman who is to share his joys and sorrows met, and it was a case where Cupid conquered immediately. When the guests parted there was an understanding between the preacher and the widow. Correspondence was continued, but no one suspected anything. Saturday Dr. Talmage went to Allegheny, where preparations for a quiet, secret marriage had been made. After the ceremony the announcement was given out and it created a sensation. This is Dr. Talmage's third venture on the matrimonial sea. His second wife died two years ago.

GO TO BED EARLY, GIRLS.

Take Warning from Miss Fitzgerald's Fate, and Don't Yawn.

No matter how bored you are, don't yawn. Be warned by the sad case of Miss Emma Fitzgerald of Oakland, Cal., and keep your jaws in their normal position.

DISLOCATED JAW.

Miss Fitzgerald is 16 years old, and, like all well-conducted damsels of that age, goes to bed early. On the evening of her famous yawn she made a call and her hospitable friends insisted upon her staying later than she was used to remaining awake.

At 9 o'clock she had yawned in a smothered fashion several times. At 9:04 she yawned openly, but hastily put up her hand to hide the fact. At 9:15 she yawned with hopeless, sleepy candor, placing no shield before her face. At 9:20 she gave one frightful yawn and something snapped.

She could not close her mouth again. She could not speak. She was taken quickly to the hospital and there the surgeon found where the jaw had been dislocated and set it again. But her Oakland friends will not get Miss Fitzgerald to sit up late again in a hurry.

The carnival festivities have begun at Monte Carlo.

Sir Henry Irving will soon present a new play at his London theater.

The anniversary of the execution of Charles I. was celebrated in London.

Serious riots against the plague measures were reported from Sinnar, India.

Lord Nevill was held for trial in London, England, on a charge of forgery, bail being refused.

The French chamber adopted the bill for razing the Paris fortifications between Point Dujour and Pantin.

French newspapers have advised their Government to be watchful of Germany's actions in the East.

It was reported that Russia would compel Turkey to accept Prince George of Greece as Governor of Crete.

The bill to pay the book publishing company of the Methodist Episcopal Church south $288,000 for damages sustained by that corporation during the war, after encountering an obstinate filibuster, which staved off a vote on two previous private bill days, was piloted to its passage in the House on Friday by Mr. Cooper of Texas, who was in charge of the message. The friends of the measure proved themselves in an overwhelming majority, and the opposition, finding it could hold out no longer, reluctantly yielded. The vote on the bill was 188 to 67. An evening session for the consideration of other private bills was held. In the Senate the entire day was taken up by consideration of the Teller silver resolution. It was passed by a vote of 47 to 37.

The District of Columbia appropriation bill was before the House on Saturday, but the day was spent in political debate. The controverted question as to whether prosperity had arrived attracted the most attention and interest, and testimony pro and con was offered throughout the day. At times considerable acrimony was displayed, but as a rule the debate was good-natured, both sides seeming to recognize that it was merely a struggle to score political advantage. The Senate was not in session.

In the Senate on Monday two of the general appropriation bills, that for the army carrying $23,243,402, and that for the legislative, judicial and executive departments, carrying $21,658,520, were passed, the latter consisting of 121 pages, occupying the attention of the Senate during the greater part of the session. After a brief executive session the Senate adjourned. In the House all day was spent in debate on the Teller silver resolution. It was defeated by a vote of 132 to 182.

The feature of the short session of the Senate on Tuesday was a statement made by Mr. Clark (Rep., Wyo.), as a matter of personal privilege, concerning his vote in favor of the Teller resolution. He maintained that his vote was in no way inconsistent with his Republicanism, and declared he would not permit anybody to read him out of the party, as he was satisfied the masses of the party would not convict him of political heresy. The House devoted most of the session to the District of Columbia appropriation bill, but had not completed it at the time of adjournment. Some politics was injected into the debate just at the close, the feature of which was a bitter denunciation of W. A. Stone of Pennsylvania by Mr. Mahany (Rep., N. Y.), for the former's position in favor of the immigration bill. Mr. Stone did not see fit to reply. Before the district bill was taken up several bills and resolutions of minor importance were passed.

After three days spent on the District of Columbia appropriation bill, mostly in political discussion, the House passed the measure on Wednesday and then took up the bill to provide for fortifications and coast defenses. Several Democrats, notably Mr. McClellan of New York, criticised the measure because it cut down appropriations for these works below what has been appropriated in recent years. Beyond the reading of the agricultural appropriation bill and agreeing to the amendments proposed by the committee, the Senate transacted no business of importance in open session. The greater part of the afternoon was passed in executive session, the discussion being upon the Hawaiian annexation treaty.

Thursday in the House was spent ostensibly in considering the fortifications appropriation bill. In reality the major portion of the time was consumed in the discussion of political topics. The existence of prosperity in the country was again the main question of dispute. All attempts to increase the appropriations in the fortifications appropriation bill or to amend it in any respect were voted down. One of the features of Thursday's session of the Senate was a speech by Mr. Caffery of Louisiana in support of the resolution reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections declaring that Henry W. Corbett is not entitled to a seat in the Senate from the State of Oregon. Mr. Corbett was appointed as Senator by the Governor of Oregon after the failure of the Legislature to elect a Senator to succeed Senator Mitchell. Mr. Caffery maintained that the Governor of a State had no authority to appoint to fill an original vacancy—a vacancy beginning with a new term—after the Legislature had had an opportunity to elect and had failed to do so. The agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration during the greater part of the afternoon and was finally passed. After a brief executive session the Senate adjourned.

A Musical Mousetrap.

Acting upon the idea that mice are very sensitive to music a Belgian manufacturer has substituted a musical mousetrap for the common trap. Instead of baiting the apparatus with a bit of cheese or bread the inventor has hidden in a double bottom a small music box, which plays automatically various popular airs of the country. The mice, he insists, are drawn irresistibly toward the music box, and in order to hear better they step into the trap and find themselves prisoners!

Poet Pawned His Crown.

In 1893 the admirers of the Spanish poet, Jose Corilla y Moral, placed upon his head a crown of solid gold. The poet was forced by lack of money to pawn this crown, and as the legal period of its redemption has expired it is now offered at auction. His admirers will purchase it by subscription.

Her Face Often Soiled.

House Girl—No wonder. The fellow who comes here to court her is a chimney sweep.

The Egg of the Ostrich.

The largest egg is that of the ostrich. It weighs three pounds, and is considered equal in amount to twenty-four hens' eggs.

Singing Soldiers.

A French general has inaugurated a plan of permitting soldiers to sing when on the march, a privilege which has been strictly denied until recently. It has also been arranged that any soldier who can play on any of the smaller instruments shall be provided with such instrument at the expense of the state.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Driven to Death by Malicious Rumors—One Man Killed by a Boiler Explosion—Convict Accidentally Breaks His Neck—Stabbed by a Companion.

Trouble Drove Him to Death.

W. A. Meyer, a hat dealer in Fort Wayne, hanged himself in the cellar of his store. His stock had been damaged by fire a few days before. The insurance adjusters called at the store and found it locked. They sent for Mrs. Meyer and she unlocked the store. She went down cellar and there found Meyer's body hanging by a rope from a gas pipe. Meyer was despondent over a report that certain persons believed that he had set fire to his store.

Big Boiler Explosion.

The Victor mine of the Parke County Coal Company, near Fontanet, was the scene of a serious explosion. A mammoth boiler used at the mine exploded, killing George Markle, the engineer, outright. Two other men, whose names are unknown, were seriously injured. Markle's body was blown a distance of 100 feet and mutilated in a horrible manner.

Escaped from Sullivan Jail.

Daniel Peak, forger, and Charles Lancaster, attempted murderer, made their escape from the jail at Sullivan. They procured fine steel saws and sawed the hinges from the cell door and pried them open. They then sawed two of the iron bars from a window in the jail, from which they made their escape. Lancaster was caught in a barn near the city.

Accidental Death of a Convict.

"Doc" Hall, a convict from Martinsville, was found lying on the floor of his cell with his neck broken, at the Jeffersonville reformatory. He had complained of being ill and weak, and was excused from work. It is supposed that he attempted to rise from his cot, and, being so weak, fell and received the fatal injury.

Klondike Near La Porte.

A sensation has been caused by the finding of gold on the farm of John Jones, northeast of LaPorte. The metal was found in considerable quantities in drilling a well. Particles were assayed by local experts, and a sample has been sent to the State geologist at Indianapolis for an expert opinion.

Boy Stabbed in a Quarrel.

Willie Lindawood, aged 17, and Glenn Ralston, aged 18, of Crawfordsville, quarreled on their way home from a meeting of the Salvation army and Lindawood stabbed Ralston several times in the side, leaving his knife sticking in the flesh. The boy is badly injured.

Within Our Borders.

Peter Roth of Shelbyville died from injuries received in a fall.

At Elwood Emmett Limpus fell from a fifty-foot ladder and was killed.

Harry Warvel, aged 18, has mysteriously disappeared from North Judson.

Daniel Meltzer, a prominent Shelbyville farmer, died while at his breakfast table.

Robert Fisher, a farmer, aged 67 years, living near Greensburg, committed suicide.

The State Board of Agriculture fixed the third week in September as the time for holding the State fair.

At Fort Wayne, Thomas Mannix dropped dead. He had been connected with the mail service many years.

Near Pierceton, James Norris, a farmer, committed suicide in his barn, hacking his neck to strings with two razors.

At Princeton, Otto Anderson attempted to commit suicide by taking an overdose of chloroform. He and his young wife had quarreled.

Jas. Woods, a worker at the National tin plate plant at Anderson, was found dead in bed. It is thought that his heart was affected.

At Butler Andrew Casebeer, aged 92 years, was granted a divorce from his wife, Mary Jane Casebeer, who is a few years younger.

The truant officers of LaPorte County united in an appeal to the Board of County Commissioners for the establishment of a home for incorrigible school children.

The new residence of Elmer Ramie, in a suburb of Muncie, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $1,500; fully insured. A natural gas jet caused the fire.

Some of the leading farmers of Peru are taking advantage of the oil boom that has been going on there for six months and are using the crude product to feed their herds of swine.

Oran Vin Russell, a well-known Elwood man, while intoxicated, swallowed a large dose of arsenic, unknown to anyone. He died in five hours. Russell leaves a young wife and two children.

At Terre Haute Mrs. William Stewart was fatally scalded while her husband was helping her carry a wash boiler filled with boiling water. A handle came off and the water poured over her.

Mrs. Jennie Fultze, a young married woman of Martinsville, swallowed two and a half grains of morphine with suicidal intent. A physician's prompt service has made it possible for her to live.

A stranger was discovered robbing rooms of students on College hill, Valparaiso. He was captured and gave his name as Frank Moore of New Orleans, but later it was learned that he was James Vanhyde of Ohio.

The Indiana Labor Commission effected a settlement for one year among the thousand workmen in the Elwood and Kokomo plate glass plants and the Pittsburg Glass Company. The works at Elwood have resumed operations.

Harry G. Gibson of Abbydelle was convicted at Mississippi City, Miss., of the murder of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Parkhurst of Oskaloosa, Iowa, at Back Bay, a suburb of Biloxi, on the night of Oct. 21 last, and sentenced to be hanged on March 8 next.

A panic prevailed for a time at the county infirmary, three miles from Huntington. The hospital building caught fire, and the fifty inmates became terror stricken. Several were slightly injured and burned, but none seriously. The city fire department extinguished the fire. The loss is $1,000, fully insured.

W. H. Brown, a prominent colored man of Jeffersonville, fatally shot his wife, and then turning his revolver on himself, attempted to take his own life, but instead received only a scalp wound over the left ear. Jealousy was the cause of the rash act.

Chicago and Southeastern Railroad employes, who are on a strike because the company is eight months in arrears for wages, seized the west-bound express at Lebanon and sidetracked it. Forty through passengers were on the train, but the strikers found comfortable stopping places for them at the hotels and private residences. For some time no trains but those carrying mail were allowed to move.

OLD SAYINGS.

BEVIS.

The Lyons diligence was just going to start from Geneva. I climbed on the roof, and chose my place next the driver; there was still a vacant seat, and the porter called "Monsieur Dermann!"

A tall young man with a German style of countenance advanced, holding in his arms a large black greyhound, which he vainly tried to place on the roof.

"Monsieur," said he, addressing me, "will you have the kindness to take my dog?"

Bending over, I took hold of the animal and placed him on the straw at my feet. I observed that he wore a handsome silver collar, on which the following words were tastefuly engraved: 'Bevis. I belong to Sir Arthur Burnley, given him by Miss Clara."

His owner was therefore, an Englishman; yet my fellow traveler, who had now taken his place by my side, was evidently a Swiss or a German, and his name was Dermann. Trifling as was the mystery, it excited my curiosity, and after two or three hours' pleasant conversation had established an intimacy between us I ventured to ask my companion for an explanation.

"It does not surprise me," he answered, "that this collar should puzzle you; and I have great pleasure in telling you the story of its wearer. Bevis belongs to me, but it is not many years since he owned another master, whose name is on the collar. You will see why he still wear it. Bevis, speak to the gentleman."

The dog raised his head, opened his bright eyes, and, laying back his long ears, uttered a sound which might well pass for a salutation.

M. Dermann placed the animal's head on his knees and began to unfasten the collar.

Instantly Bevis drew back his head with a violent jerk, and darted toward the luggage on the hinder part of the roof. There, growling fiercely, he lay down, while his muscles were stiffened, and his eyes glowing with fury.

"You see, Monsieur, how determined he is to guard his collar. I should not like to be the man who would try to rob him of it. Here, Bevis,' said he in a soft, caressing tone, "I wont touch it again, poor fellow! Come and make friends!"

The greyhound hesitated, still growling. At length he returned slowly toward his master, and began to lick his hands; his muscles gradually relaxed, and he trembled like a leaf.

"There, boy, there," said M. Dermann, caressing him. "We won't do it again. Lie down now, and be quiet."

The dog nestled between his master's feet and went to sleep. My fellow traveler, then turning toward me, began:

"I am a native of Suabia, but I live in a little village of the Sherland, at the foot of the Grimsel. My father keeps an inn for the reception of travelers going to St. Gothard. About two years since there arrived at our house one evening a young Englishman, with a pale, sad countenance; he traveled on foot, and was followed by a large greyhound—this Bevis, whom you see. He declined taking any refreshment and asked to be shown to his sleeping room. We gave him one over the common hall, where we were all seated round the fire. Presently we heard him pacing rapidly up and down, from time to time uttering broken words, addressed no doubt to his dog, for the animal moaned occasionally, as if replying to and sympathizing with his master.

"At length we heard the Englishman stop and apparently strike the dog a violent blow, for the poor beast gave a loud howl of agony, and seemed as if he ran to take refuge under the bed. Then his master groaned aloud. Soon afterward he lay down, and all was quiet for the night. Early next morning he came down, looking still more pale than the previous evening, and, having paid for his lodging, he took his knapsack and resumed his journey, followed by the greyhound, who had eaten nothing since their arrival, and whose master seemed to take no further notice of him than to frown when the creature ventured to caress him.

"About noon I chanced to be standing at the door, looking toward the direction which the Englishman had taken, when I perceived a dark object moving slowly along. Presently I heard howls of distress, proceeding from a wounded dog that was dragging himself toward me. I ran to him and recognized the Englishman's greyhound. His head was torn, evidently by a bullet, and one of his paws broken. I raised him in my arms and carried him into the house. When I crossed the threshold he made evident efforts to escape; so I placed him on the ground. Then, in spite of the torture he was suffering, which caused him to stagger every moment, he scratched at the door of the room where his master had slept, moaning at the same time so piteously that I could scarce help weeping myself. I opened the door, and with a great effort he got into the room, looked about, and not finding whom he sought he fell down motionless.

"I called my father, and perceiving that the dog was not dead we gave him all possible assistance, taking indeed as much care of him as though he had been a child, so much did we feel for him. In two months he was cured, and showed us much affection. We found it, however, impossible to take off his collar, even for the purpose of binding up his wounds. As soon as he was able to walk he would often go toward the mountain and be absent for hours. The second time this occurred we followed him. He proceeded as far as a part of the road where a narrow defile borders a precipice. There he continued for a long time, smelling and scratching about. We conjectured that the Englishman might have been attacked by robbers on this spot and his dog wounded in defending him. However, no event of the kind had occurred in the country, and after the strictest search no corpse was discovered. Recollecting, therefore, the manner in which the traveler had treated his dog, I came to the conclusion that he had tried to kill the faithful creature. But wherefore? This was the mystery which I could not solve.

"Bevis remained with us, testifying the utmost gratitude for our kindness. His intelligence and good humor attracted the strangers who frequented our inn, while the inscription on his collar and the tale we had to tell of him failed not to excite their curiosity. One morning in autumn I had been out to take a walk, accompanied by Bevis. When I returned I found seated by the fire in the common hall a newly arrived stranger, who looked round as I entered. As soon as he perceived Bevis he started and called him. The dog immediately darted to him with frantic demonstrations of joy. He ran around him, smelling his clothes, and uttered the sort of salutation with which he honored you just now, and finally, placing his forepaws on the traveler's knees, began to lick his face.

"'Where is your master, Bevis? Where is Sir Arthur?' said the stranger in English.

"The noble dog howled piteously, and lay down at the traveler's feet. Then the latter asked us to explain his presence. I did so, and as he listened I saw a tear fall on the beautiful head of the greyhound, whom he leant over to caress.

"'Monsieur,' said he addressing me, 'from what you tell me I venture to hope that Sir Arthur still lives. We have been friends from childhood. About three years since he married a rich heiress, and this dog was presented to him by her. Bevis was cherished for his fidelity, a quality unhappily which was not possessed by his mistress. She left her fond and loving husband and eloped with another man. Sir Arthur sued for a divorce and got it; then, having arranged his affairs in England, he set out for the continent, followed only by his dog. His friends knew not whither he went; but it now appears that he was here last spring. Doubtless the presence of Bevis evermore recalling the memory of her who had so cruelly wronged him, must have torn his heart and at length impelled him to destroy the faithful creature. But the shot not having been mortal, the dog, I imagine, when he recovered consciousness, was led by instinct to seek the house where his master slept last. Now, Monsieur, he is yours, and I heartily thank you for the kindness you have shown him.'

"About ten o'clock the stranger returned to his room, after having caressed Bevis, who escorted him to the door, and then returned to his accustomed place before the fire. My parents and the servants had retired to rest and I prepared to follow their example, my bed being placed at the end of the common hall. While I was undressing I heard a storm rising in the mountains. Just then there came a knocking at the door, and Bevis began to growl. I asked who was there. A voice replied: 'Two travelers who want a night's lodging.' I opened a small chink of the door to look out, and perceived two ragged men, each leaning on a large club. I did not like their looks; and knowing that several robberies had been committed in the neighborhood I refused them admission, telling them that in the next village they would readily find shelter. They approached the door, as though they meant to force their way in; but Bevis made his voice heard in so formidable a manner that they judged it prudent to retire. I bolted the door and went to bed. Bevis, according to his custom, lay down near the threshold, but we neither of us felt inclined to sleep.

"A quarter of an hour passed, when suddenly above the wailing of the wind came the loud, shrill cry of a human being in distress. Bevis rushed against the door with a fearful howl, at the same moment came the report of a gun, followed by another cry. Two minutes afterward I was on the road, armed with a carbine and holding a dark lantern; my father and the stranger, armed, accompanied me. As for Bevis, he had darted out of the house and disappeared.

"We approached the defile which I mentioned before at the moment when a flash of lightning illumined the scene. A hundred yards in advance we saw Bevis grasping a man by the throat. We hurried on, but the dog had completed his work ere we reached him; for two men whom I recognized as those who had sought admittance at our inn, lay dead, strangled by his poyerful jaws. Further on we discovered another man, whose bloody wounds the noble dog was licking. The stranger approached him, and gave a convulsive cry. It was Sir Arthur—the master of Bevis!"

Here M. Dermann paused, the recollection seeming to overcome him; and he stooped to caress the sleeping greyhound, in order to hide his emotion. After a while he finished his recital in a few words.

"Sir Arthur was mortally wounded, but he lived long enough to recognize his dog, and to confess that in a moment of desperation he had tried to kill the faithful creature who now avenged his death, by slaying the robbers who attacked him. He appointed the stranger his executor, and settled a large pension on Bevis, to revert to the family of the innkeeper, wishing thus to testify his repentant love toward his dog, and his gratitude to those who had succored him. The grief of Bevis was excessive; he watched by his master's couch, covered his dead body with caresses, and for a long time refused to take any nourishment; and it was not until after the lapse of many months that the affection of his new master seemed to console him for the death of Sir Arthur."

As my fellow traveler finished the recital, the diligence stopped to change horses at the little town of Mantua. Here M. Dermann's journey ended, and having taken down his luggage he asked me to assist the descent of the dog. I shook hands with him cordially, and then called Bevis, who, seeing me on such good terms with his master, placed his large paws on my breast and uttered a low, friendly bark. Shortly afterward they both disappeared from my sight, but not from my memory, as this narrative has proved.

HONEY AS FOOD.

There Is Health and Long Life in Its Use.

A pound of honey wil go as far as a pound of butter, and if both articles be of the best quality the honey will cost the less of the two. Often a prime article of extracted honey, equal to comb honey in every respect except appearance, can be obtained for half the price of butter or less. Butter is at its best only when "fresh," while honey, properly kept, remains indefinitely good—no need to hurry it out of the way for fear it may become rancid, says a writer in Bee Culture.

Sugar is much used in hot drinks, as in coffee and tea. The substitution of a mild-flavored honey in such use may be a very profitable thing for the hearth. Indeed it would be better for the health if the only hot drink were what is called in Germany honey tea—a cupful of hot water with one or two tablespoonsful of extracted honey. The attainment of great age has in some cases been attributed largely to the lifelong use of honey tea.

Many people think "honey is honey" all just alike; but this is a great mistake. Honey may be of good, heavy body, what bee keepers call "well ripened," weighing sometimes twelve pounds to the gallon, or it may be quite thin. It may also be granulated or candied, more solid than lard. It may be almost as colorless as water, and it may be as black as the darkest molasses. The flavor of honey varies according to the flower from which it is obtained. It would be impossible to describe in words the different flavors of the different honeys. The different flavors in honey are as distinct as the odors in flowers. Among the lighter-colored honeys are white clover, linden (or basswood), sage, sweet clover, alfalfa, willow herb, etc., and among the darker are found heartsease, magnolia (or poplar), horsemint, buckwheat, etc.

Tastes differ as to honey as well as in all other things. White clover is so generally preferred to buckwheat, with its very dark color and strongly marked flavor, that buckwheat honey always rules lower in price than white clover; yet there are some who prefer buckwheat to any other. Somewhat fortunately, one generally prefers the honey to which he is most accustomed. A Californian thinks nothing equals white sage, while a Pennsylvanian thinks white clover far ahead.

In these days of prevailing adulteration, when so often "things are not what they seem," it is a comfort to know that when one buys comb honey he may know without question he is getting the genuine article. The silly stories seen from time to time in the papers about artificial combs being filled with glucose and deftly sealed over with a hot iron have not the slightest foundation in fact. For years there has been a standing offer by one whose financial responsibility is unquestioned for a single pound of comb honey made without the intervention of bees. The offer remains untaken, and will probably so remain, for the highest art of man can never compass such delicate workmanship as the skill of the bee accomplishes.

With extracted honey the case is different. When you see in the grocery a tumbler of liquid honey with a small piece of comb honey in the center you may be pretty sure the liquid honey is not honey at all, but pure glucose. If not familiar enough with honey to detect it by the taste, your only safe course is to buy of the producer direct, or of some one who knows as to its source and upon whose honesty you can rely.

Aside from its use in an unchanged state as a direct accompaniment of bread or biscuit, honey is used by bakers in manufacturing some of their choicest wares. An advantage in using honey for anything in the line of cake is in its keeping qualities. Even if the cake should become dry, close it up in a bread can for a time and its freshness will return.

Diet of Stout Persons.

It is a mistake for the stout person to refuse to eat fat. Starches and sugars, represented in such vegetable foods as bread, rice, tapioca and the like are fat formers. The living body has a power of making fat out of that which is not fat. And with this point is another—that fat itself does not go directly, at least, to make fat in the body. Fat is, on the other hand, a valuable addition to the diet of a corpulent person because it has a power properly administered of burning off food excess. In more than one system of body reduction fat is, therefore, administered as an essential part and parcel of the diet cure.

TRICKS FOR PARLOR SPORTS.

Clever Delusions Once Practiced by Alexander Herrmann.

There are four little tricks which are said to have originated with the late Alexander Herrman, and which for awhile baffled those who saw them performed by him. Indeed, they continue to be baffling, for their secret is sleight of hand as well as knowledge.

The easiest of them is the putting of a bird in its cage by an optical delusion. Take a round piece of pasteboard and on one side of it draw a canary bird. If you cannot draw you can cut a small bird out of a picture and paste it on the card. On the other side of the pasteboard draw a cage.

THE EMPTY CAGE.

When you show this card to the audience show them the side of the card only upon which the cage is drawn, yet do it in such a way that they imagine they have seen both sides of the pasteboard.

Tie a piece of thread through opposite sides of the card and twirl rapidly before the eyes of your audience. The bird and the cage will move so rapidly that the audience will see a bird in its cage where before they saw an empty cage.

The simple trick of putting a needle through a nickel can be done without private rehearsal. Take a cork and run a needle through it, leaving the point flush with the cork. Now place a nickel between two blocks of wood, put the cork upon it and give the top a sharp blow with a hammer. When you have pulled the cork off the needle the point of the needle will be found to have penetrated the nickel. This is most successfully accomplished by taking a marked nickel from anyone in the company.

Disappear and return a minute later with the needle driven through the nickel.

The very attractive feat of causing a table to move can be done by means of a thread attached to the trousers leg of the skillful operator. Let the thread be caught also around the leg of the table.

THREADING A NICKEL.

During the evening, as the conversation turns upon peculiar phenomena, the subject of table tipping can be introduced. The wily operaton, sitting by a table, suggests that he can make the table move. All are anxious to see him do it. He begins by rubbing the top smartly with a silk handkerchief to generate the electricity. Then he makes peculiar passes over it, and finally, stepping backward, he commands it to follow him. Needless to say, it obeys him, walking faster or slower, according to his demand. If this is practiced upon a dark floor with a slender black silk thread the deception is perfect.

The bird cage delusion suggests another often practiced. A young man in the audience tells a story about going to a photographer to get his picture taken. He shows the card, a circular piece of board with his picture upon it. It is mounted a little to one side, but that makes no difference. He now twirls the card by pieces of string, and the delighted audience sees two photographs side by side, one of the young man and the other of a pretty young woman. Of course, the young woman's picture was mounted on the reverse side of the card, but when twirled rapidly they seemed to be side by side.

Absolute Truth.

The eldest son of a certain family is devoted to a worthy young woman who has a tendency to be exceedingly stout. The suitor's younger brothers, with a deplorable lack of delicacy, chaff him upon his affection and the absurdity of his appearing in public with a lady of twice his size. But their mother, a woman of wit and humor, not only takes his part, but does it with weapons so sharp that sometimes it is hard to tell which way they cut. One day the young man announced his intention of going to a lecture that evening.

"Who's going with you?" called the most unbearable of the boys.

"There, my dear," said the mother, "don't ask questions. It's very ill-bred."

"But I want to know! I want to know awfully. Say, Harold, who is it? One, or more than one?"

"Don't notice him, Harold," said the mother, with dignity in her voice, but with merriment in her eye. "I'll answer for you. Harold is going with a large party."

PARIS.

An Extraordinary Example of Outward Beauty and Inward Filth.

"For a month," says Miss Lilian Bell, writing of Paris—one of her bright letters of travel—in the Ladies' Home Journal, "I have been in this city of limited republicanism; this extraordinary example of outward beauty and inward uncleanness; this bewildering cosmopolis of cheap luxuries and expensive necessities; this curious city of contradictions, where you might eat your breakfast from the streets—they are so clean—but where you must close your eyes to the spectacles of the curbstones; this beautiful, whited sepulchre, where exists the unwritten law, 'Commit any offense you will, provided you submerge it in poetry and flowers;' this exponent of outward observances, where a gentleman will deliberately push you into the street if he wishes to pass you in a crowd, but where his action is condoned by his inexpressible manner of raising his hat to you, and the heartfelt sincerity of his apology; where one man will run a mile to restore a lost franc, but if you ask him to change a gold piece he will steal five; where your eyes are ravished with the beauty, and the greenness, and the smoothness and apparent ease of living of all its inhabitants; where your mind is filled with the pictures, the music, the art, the general atmosphere of culture and wit; where the cooking is so good but so elusive, and where the shops are so bewitching that you have spent your last dollar without thinking, and you are obliged to cable for a new letter of credit from home before you know it—this is Paris."

HOUSE ENTRANCES.

Decorations that Are Proper for the Hall and Vestibule.

The library and drawing-room best satisfy the needs of family and friendly communion. The vestibule should be formal in its furnishings, and the hall a little less so, a step in gradation between the entrance and the private part of the house. The door from the vestibule is not only a means of ingress, but it is also a barrier between the inmates and the outside world. For this reason curtains on the inner glass door are almost necessary. Thought should determine that everything in the vestibule is weather-proof. If there be no marble or mosaic floor, linoleum makes an excellent substitute. Wood is easily marred by wind and rain.

If a hall is used only as a passageway delicacy in ornament and treatment is lost. There is no leisure to examine them. Only the first impression counts. Forcible, simple lines, and strong massing of light and shade are essential. Prominent, continuous patterns in the wall paper are not advisable. They disturb the simplicity of composition. Single figures, placed at regular intervals and architectural in character are suitable to the wall. Pictures should be few in number and decorative in composition and coloring. The mural effect of the picture is more appreciative than the motif. The light in a hall is better diffused if it comes from above. The furniture should consist of benches and straight-backed chairs—perhaps a wooden chest. Everything should be formal in design and treatment, suggesting rest, not repose. A mirror is useful and lends apparent size.

If it be desirable to carpet a hall, and if the carpet possesses a border, the whole will be better in the form of a rug rather than cut to the irregularities of the room. If the stairs have covering, the color should be strong, and it is desirable that there should be no obstructive pattern. A hall should be cheerful and bright, but at the same time dignified in appearance. Attractiveness but not familiarity is its best atribute.

A UNIQUE DISTINCTION.

Daughter of a Revolutionary Hero and Widow of a Veteran of 1812.

Mary Forbes Cobb, of New London, Ind., enjoys the distinction of being the daughter of a revolutionary soldier and the widow of a veteran of the war of 1812. She was born in Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 11, 1803. Her father was an officer in the revolutionary war, serving five years with distinction and being several times wounded in battle.

Mrs. Cobb's father was Capt. Daniel Gano, whose father and four brothers also served their country faithfully and well at that critical period. The senior member of this fighting family, John Gano, was chaplain of Washington's favorite company of archers.

Mrs. Cobb's first husband, Louis H. Bryan, the great-grandfather of William Jennings Bryan, whom she married in 1820 in Clark County, Ky., was a widower, a veteran of the war of 1812. The elder Bryan was a private soldier in a company of Kentucky militia mustered by Capt. Isaac Cunningham. Louis H. Bryan died in 1834, and a few years later the widow was married to Elisha Cobb, who died in 1844. Mrs. Cobb's last widowhood has extended over a period of fifty-four years.

Mrs. Cobb has lived in the times of all the Presidents since Washington. Her Kentucky home was near the Henry Clay homestead, and she was well acquainted with the great commoner. She distinctly remembers the visits of De Kalb and Lafayette to America. She is the mother of eleven children, five by her first marriage and six by her second.

GASOLINE SLEIGH FOR THE CHILKOOT PASS.

A resident of Salem, Ore., has invented a traction sleigh which is intended for use on the Chilkoot pass, between Dyea and the lakes. It carries a gasoline engine, mounted on a framework of wrought steel runners curved at both ends. The engine works a drum, around which is coiled 300 feet of ⅝-inch steel cable. The cable, which weighs 200 pounds, is carried ahead as it unwinds, and is made fast to a rock, tree or any other natural projection. The winding of the cable around the drum by the gasoline engine draws the sled, with a train of freight-laden sleds attached to it, to the point ahead. The sled is expected to average four miles a day. It consumes six gallons of gasoline a day and ten gallons of water. The sled is to be shipped from San Francisco, where it was made, to Seattle by steamer.

ENGLAND'S IDOL A GAMBLER.

Princess of Wales a Regular Devotee of Chance for Charity's Sake.

American admirers of the Princess of Wales will be surprised to learn that she is a gambler, freely staking considerable sums on horse races and other forms of gaming. While this statement will come as a shock to many who know of the Princess' goodness of heart and character it must be remembered that gambling as a pastime for women, however, is not regarded in the same light as it is in America. Nearly every woman of leisure in England or European society indulges in a quiet little game whenever an opportunity presents itself, and no one dreams of thinking her the worse for it.

To the intimate friends of the Prince and Princess of Wales it is well known that at both Marlborough house, the prince's town residence, and at Sandringham, their country place, there is a reproduction on a miniature scale of the gaming outfit such as one sees at the Casino at Monte Carlo and at the popular resort at Ostend. The Princess is partial to the fascinating game of roulette and is very fortunate in playing the red. More than $2,500 has been added to the Princess' exchequer in an evening through the strange caprice of the "wheel of fortune." The money won in this way goes into the Princess' private charity fund, upon which the demands are innumerable.

HAVE A BUSY TIME.

Girls Who Sell Tickets on the Chicago Elevated Street Railroads.

The young women who sit behind the brass railings and sell tickets at the stations on the elevated railroads in Chicago have mighty busy times, and their hours of labor are correspondingly long. Each enters her respective "cage" at 7 o'clock in the morning and remains there, practically locked up, till 7 o'clock at night. Her meals are brought in to her from some convenient restaurant, and she eats as she can while performing her other duties. These afford ample scope for the full display of her mental and physical abilities. With one hand she waits on the passengers, making change, keeping a watchful eye for spurious money, for all of which she is responsible personally. With her other hand she pulls a cord, which opens the gate of exit. One of her feet she uses to press a treadle which rings up the fare of each passenger through the turnstile. The other foot is used to preserve a perpendicular position on the high stool. Besides, she must look as "pleasant" as if she was having her picture taken. If she had another hand or two and a few additional feet she thinks her employers would discover some work for them to perform also. For all of this the fair ticket-seller gets a salary of $1.50 a day.

THURSDAY.....February 10, 1898.

USED HIS GUN.

And Great was the Destruction of Window Glass.

There was a first-class sensation at the Junction last night. It appears that a man living at Waterloo, discovered that his wife and another man had gone down to Auburn Junction, and he at once suspected that they would be found at the hotel there kept by Mr. and Mrs. Waters who formerly lived at Waterloo. So he took a friend along and drove furiously down through Auburn to its little southern annex. When he reached the Walters hotel, his fears were realized. His wife and the "other fellow" were there, and were on the inside. And what was more aggravating, he himself was on the outside. He was very plainly given to understand that the outside was the only place for him. It was in vain that he swore at the "fellow." There he was on the outside, and there was no way to get in but by force. He swore and tore wildly for a short time. Then he passed unanimously a resolution granting the Waters Hotel and all its occupants, full belligerent rights. War once declared, there was no further hesitation. With firm hand he drew his trusty gun from his hip pocket and fired point blank at the window. The glass crashed and flew in all directions, but the people on the inside only huddled closer together and said "let's die like men." And after demolishing the window and driving the frightened guests over to the depot, the man had to go off without his better and worser half.

REV. W. W. MOOREHEAD.

The death of Rev. W. W. Moorehead, of Greensburg, Pa. will be read with sadness by many of our DeKalb citizens, who were originally from that section. He was a distant relative of Mrs. Elias Zimmerman, and many, especially about St. Joe and in Concord and Jackson townships knew him. He had gone south in hope to restore his failing health. He was visiting his niece, Mrs. Ward Foster at San Augustine, Florida when he was suddenly taken worse and died on Sunday, Jan. 30. He was born in 1837, near Blairsville, Pa. his father being an associate judge of Indiana county, that state. Mr. Moorehead entered the ministry and became prominent in the Presbyterian church, and since 1870 had been continuously in charge as pastor of the Presbyterian church at Greensburg, and there he was laid to rest, Feb. 3, in the presence of a large concourse that had gathered from far and near to do him honor.

COURIER BABIES

A New Feature For Readers of an Up-to-date Daily.

The COURIER with this issue presents a group of Auburn babies. This is a new feature with papers in cities the size of Auburn, but our people are always equal to the occasion and hereafter we will endeavor to run groups on Saturday of each week or at such times as we can get them. We will not confine our picture to those of babies, but will run groups of clerks business men, fathers mothers and babies, etc. People who want up-to-date features will find them in the DAILY COURIER and should become subscribers at once.

The group presented in this issue shows a few of Auburn's hearty and robust children. Their names printed under the pictures will identify them, and for those who know them the faces are sufficient for they have been taken and copied with remarkable fidelity.

A good look at these good natured and cute little fellows will be good for the blues. Now, who will be the next lot old or young, to take a place in our picture gallery?

STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

As No. 5 on the Wabash was nearing Auburn this morning, it saw about three miles east of town, a man trying to cross the track with a double sleigh. The ground there was bare, and the sled stuck. The train was too close to stop and struck the sled, knocking it to pieces The man, whose name we did not learn, escaped without harm, nor was the team hurt.

HEADED NORTH.

This morning three solitary brickmasons might have been seen wending their way north on Main-st. as a novelist would say. It was rather a novel sight they made. On a wagon they carried the parts of a little hut they were going to "join together" when they reached their destination which was a big timber lot, up north of town. The men were Chas. Picker, Harley Bumpus and Don Lawrence, and they were going to cut wood and camp out, or at least they can camp out with this outfit if they feel like it. And everybody bid them good by, thinking they had taken advantage of the thaw to go to the Klondyke.

OBITUARY.

Sarah Mariah Smith was born in Huron Co. Ohio, Oct. 31, 1833 and departed this life Jan. 30, 1898, aged 64 years, 2 months and 29 days.

She was the oldest daughter of Derius and Juliann Smith and spent the earlier part of her life in teaching school having commenced teaching in her native township of Sherman, Huron Co., O., at the early age of 15 years, at which place she taught two successive terms, when her mother died in 1851 and she was obliged to care for her fathers large family, with whom she came to DeKalb Co., Ind., in August 1852 and continued housekeeping until death again visited their family in 1854 and took from them their father. The family circle being now broken up she again resumed teaching.

March 4th 1855 she was united in marriage to Solomon Harding. To this union was born 8 children, 4 sons and four daughters, two of whom having preceeded her to the spirit land, Frances M. aged 19 months in 1861, and Evlyn aged 10 years in 1878.

Six children, with their father, three brothers and two sisters are left to mourn the loss of their beloved and affectionate mother, companion and sister. She united with the Baptist church one mile south of Corunna in 1856 and remained a faithful member until the church organization broke up. She was a faithful and devoted wife and a kind and loving mother. Indeed it might truthfully be said that she was so consecrated to her family that she lived for them. She was very patient and cheerful during her sickness, greeting every one with a smile and an outstretched hand as long as strength permitted.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. E. Campbell of the Lutheran church in the U. B. church at Corunna at 2 o'clock p. m. Tuesday after which she was laid to rest in the cemetery south of town.

PUNCHED HIS FACE.

(Fort Wayne Sentinel.)

There was considerable gossip in sporting circles today over an affair of the fists which occurred last evening between Hank West, the wrestler, and "Kid Cramer, the pugilist. The men were gossiping about their merits as wrestler and fighter when Cramer remarked that West couldn't throw Herb Hale in a thousand years. This aroused the ire of the wrestler and reaching out he smashed the "Kid" a blow which sent him sprawling. Cramer was up and at his antagonist and the story goes that twice more was he knocked down before friends of the combatants interfered and prevented a complete "knock out."

They'll Pop According to Law.

That is if a proposed law is enacted in Ohio. A genius in the Ohio Legislature now in session at Columbus, will press upon that body, a bill to regulate popping the question and getting married. His bill proposes a state board of three examiners to be appointed by the governor, and any young couple desiring to get married, will be compelled to come before this board for examination as to their health, sanity and hereditary tendency. Also, the question as to habits will be considered, whether the man is a drunkard, or is likely to become one, whether there is a tendency to crime in either family or tendency to disease or any existing diseases. If any of these objectionable features exist, the couple will be told to go and no permission to marry will be given. This member whose name is Parker, says he hopes in this way to put a stop to the apparent increase of insanity, crime, and certain diseases. Before the COURIER commits itself fully to Hon. Mr Parker's plan, we would like to know what he would do in case the young man hadn't brains enough to at least help make a living or if he was too lazy to help his wife support the family, and even how he stood on the burning cigarette question. It fact before the COURIER comes up to the help of the Parker bill, there are several vital points that must be more fully put under the searchlight.

WERE FEEBLE MINDED.

Yesterday morning when James Parker who lives four miles north of Ft. Wayne, went out to feed his stock, he noticed a buggy was missing, and the first thought was, that possibly there was a horse gone also. He looked in at the stable and sure enough a fine horse was missing from its stall. It dawned on him that horse thieves had called on him He at once telegraphed in various directions, and soon had an answer that a rig answering the description with two men, had been seen driving at a high gait through here in the morning, headed north. Marshal Potter and Deputy-Sheriff Platter at once took the trail and overtook the fellows at Ashley and brought them back and lodged them in the jail. It was soon learned that the men were inmates of the Asylum for Feeble Minded which is located just this side of Ft. Wayne and the fellows were evidently out for a good time They had driven the horse nearly to death. Marshal Potter took them back to Ft. Wayne on the afternoon train and returned them to the Asylum. This morning Mr. Parker came up for his rig and easily identified it as his. The fellows had cut the harness nearly to pieces and he had to stay here long enough to have it mended and theanre turned to his home glad to have his property safe again.

OUR REINDEER.

The man who bought the 830 reindeer in Norway, and is bringing them over, is the Dr. Jackson, who presided at the Winona Presbyterian Assembly at Warsaw last summer. He has been a missionary among the Alaska Indians many years, and was chosen by the government to buy these animals. They go over the country soon as they reach New York, by the Fort Wayne route, and will be hurried to Alaska to carry provisions at once to the mines. About fifty experienced keepers are with them.

THE HOSLER CHILDREN.

We spoke yesterday of the sudden death of these two children. This morning's Ft. Wayne Journal, gives a more somplete account.

Two deaths occurred in the family of Mr and Mrs. Edward Hosler, in St. Joe township, yesterday. Two bright little children were taken off by diphtheria. The children were Edward, aged 18 months, and Franklin, aged 5 years, They died within a few hours of each other. Both were buried yesterday afternoon at Leo.

A CLEVER TRICK

It certainly looks like it, but there is really no trick about it. Anybody can try it who has Lame Back and Weak Kidneys, Malaria or nervous troubles. We mean he can cure himself right away by taking Electric Bitters. This medicine tones up the whole system, acts as a stimulant to the Liver and Kidneys, is a blood purifier and nerve tonic. It cures Constipation, headache, Fainting Spells, Sleeplessness and Melancholy. It is purely vegetable, a mild laxative and restores the system to its natural vigor. Try Electric Bitters and be convinced that they are a miracle worker. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50c a bottle at H. B. McCord's drug store.

NOVEL ENGINEERING

A fine piece of engineering is credited to M. A. Miller, of Auburn Practical Boiler Works, for he added 30 more feet to the already large smoke stack at the Greenler Hoop Co. Factory and the work was done in a very novel manner. The joints or sections were riveted on one at a time to the bottom of the stack then raised the length of another joint ready to receive the next joint. The novel part of the work was that there was no gin pole used. It is surely a great engineering feat, we doubt whether there would be one man in a thousand that would have undertaken the job on the plan that Miller adopted. The stack as it now stands, is 95 feet high, one of the very highest in this part of the country.

NO GRIPING OR PAINS.

Arrowsmith, Ill., Jan. 21, 1898.

Dear Sirs:—I have been bothered for 15 years with constipation and I have tried many preparations during that time. I commenced using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the fall of 1896 and unhesitatingly say it is the best remedy I have ever found for my trouble. No griping or pains after taking.

Yours, etc., WM. HUNT.

E. Davenport, Druggist.

PROGRESSIVE BREAKFAST.

—We have had almost every sort of amusement turned into the form called "progressive" witness, "progressive eucher, progressive pedro, progressive diseases, the progressive march of ideas" etc. etc. none of which ever interested the writer of this, who never was afflicted with any of them. But "the progressive breakfast." Ah, there you catch us. We can understand that, and we flatter ourself make a full partner. This timely and welcome innovation comes in as one of the most valuable results of the election of McKinley. C. K. Davis the senator from Minnesota is chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs, which with his wealth gives him prominence in the new administration and makes his wife a leader in all social functions. Mrs. Davis also has ideas of her own. Hence, the welcome advent of the progressive breakfast. President Dole of Hawaii went through Auburn over the B. & O. a few days ago in company with his wife. After leaving Auburn they paid little attention to the country till they reached Washington, where they went to see if Uncle Sam wouldn't like to own their Island Republic. Once there, they became the center of attraction and have been generously invited out and feasted. Here was a chance for the genius of Mrs. Davis. She invited about sixty of high official ladies ladies to meet Mrs. Dole at her residence to a "progressive breakfast. At the table where Mrs. Dole sat an empty chair was left and when the first course was over, a little girl went to a certain lady and gave her a rosette in the Hawaiian colors. This meant that the lady should go and sit in the vacant seat opposite Mrs. Dole for that one course. For the next course another lady was chosen, the lady first chosen giving up the seat and taking the one vacated by the coming lady, and this was kept up through so many courses that a large number of the guests had a chance to get acquainted with the guest of honor. We look to see Auburn ladies adopt the plan. It beats progressive eucher etc, all out. At least we are told it does. If more information is needed, invite the editor.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

Last evening was held one of the most important meetings the town Council has held for several years, as it resulted in the purchase of the Auburn Mining Company's plant, the electric light works that have for so many years furnished Auburn with both arc and incandescent lights. The price paid is $6,500 S. C. Snyder and C. C. Shaffer, on behalf of Mining Co., offered to sell at $7,250. The Council offered to give them $6,000. Then Snyder offered to split the difference, which would make the price $6,625. Trustee Hines, after some talk told the Mining Co. that if they would first throw off that $250 from their first price, then the Council would talk about splitting the diffence. Finally the $250 was thrown off leaving the Mining Co's price at $7,000 and the Council's offer being $6,000, there was $1,000 difference, and finally this was "split" making the purchase price $6,500. This does not include the land on which the plant is located and which the Council does not want, as they expect to locate it on ground of their own or sell it to outside parties, nor does it include the notes and accounts of the Mining Co. or the old Waterhouse dynamo. The Board adjourned to meet at 1 p. m. today to sign up the contract and make the transfer The Light works began this morning under the control of the town.

HER FIRST VOTE

We venture to say there is but one woman in DeKalb county who has ever voted at a political election. And that woman is Mrs. Milner, the mother of Mrs. Alice Gregg, and who will be well remembered by DeKalb's older citizens. Yesterday, Mrs. Milner and Mrs. Gregg visited Mrs Priscilla Barclay who is a relative of Mrs. Milner and here a COURIER reporter formed her acquaintance. The is a lady of great intelligence and well preservered for a person of 72. She has lately returned from a two years' stay with a son and daughter, whose homes are in the fertile valley of San Luis in Colorado. It was while staying there that Mrs. Milner acquired her political right to vote, a right that had been denied her till then, when she was seventy years old. She speaks of it yet as an incident of great interest to her for her political rights were exactly equal to those of the best man in that state or any other. We do not know whether she was for silver or gold, but we venture to say her first vote was cast as intelligently and as conscientiously as any ever given there or here. But aside from any advantage of citizenship, she thinks Colorado, or at least the San Luis Valley, is a fine country, and her children who are large farmers there are doing well.

Sudden Death at Waterloo

Miss Stone aged 18 years, daughter of Wm Stone of Uniontown, died last night. She was well as usual yesterday and worked at the sewing machine all day. Last night she was taken suddenly with cramps. Help was summoned from Abe McEntarfer's across the street, but she died before they reached her.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for cuts bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by H. B. McCord. tf

SEDAN

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Wheaton spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rhoads.

Quite a number from Sedan took advantage of the cheap sale at Waterloo last Friday and Saturday. Some of them pronounce the goods of a cheap quality.

Dr. A. S. Farrington and wife were in Sedan yesterday calling on friends.

Wm. Hamilton and wife of Hudson, were the guests of W. H. Crane last week.

Rev. T. C. Benson went to Goshen Saturday to preach a trial sermon.

Mrs. C. M. Reynolds is in poor health again.

ST. JOE.

Band concert last Saturday night.

Mrs. J. Y. Davis, who has been sick for several weeks, is slowly improving.

D. J. Baker was at home over Sunday.

Freom Abel will shortly occupy his old barber shop.

Oil well is waiting for Auburn to prospect.

A. B. Filley will commence the erection of another mill soon.

Bishop H. J. Becker, of Dayton, Ohio, will deliver his lecture entitled the "Impersonation of John B. Gough" at the Lutheran church in St. Joe, Saturday evening, Feb. 26, '98. He will also preach Sunday following at 10:30 o'clock

Constable Irvin and Jim White took a flying trip to Auburn Junction Saturday night, but the bird had flown.

Bert Bailey, who has been employed at the Wineland hoop factory as coiler, was discharged Saturday by the firm. He had been boarding at the White Hotel and had not been paying his board, and he being on the "dead beat" order, undertook to get out between two days But Landlord Sam got onto his racket. A warrant was sworn out and placed into the hands of Sam White, who with Grady Woodcox, overtook the tardy gentleman when 1½ mile west of state line, and without ceremony, took him in charge and brought him back to St. Joe. where he was confronted with the charge, matters were straightened up and he was released Hotel and boarding-house men will do well to black list such fellows. Besides his debt to the hotel, he leaves several other small claims unpaid.

BUTLER.

Rev Smith of the U. B. church has been quite seriously ill with quinsy. He is somewhat improved at this writing.

John Crouse is slowly improving again, after another serious attack.

Mrs. Hamilton, her broth-er-in-law and niece, of Steuben county, visited with her daughter, Mrs. R. C. Campbell last week.

The M. E. Sunday school broke the record for the past year, last Sunday by an attendance of 187.

J. A. Campbell and wife visited with the latter's brother in Steuben Co., First sleighride for the winter.

Mr. Kimmel and his new bride settled down to business last week just as if nothing had happened.

Mr. Matus, our new restauranter whom the boys have nicknamed "cider soup," and Dick Monghier had a suit before Squire Steward last week. The testimony brought out some racy facts that filled the house to overflowing.

The Bicycle factory is now running full time with a force of nearly one hundred hands.

May Bruce is still very poorly with meager hopes of recovery.

Mrs. Woodworth of christian science notoriety, has drifted back to Butler, and is holding forth at the Church of God. We have not heard of any miraculous demonstrations yet, but are expecting to see the lame walk and the blind see, at almost any time.

About fifty of the friends of Rev. Disbro gathered at the church parlors last Saturday evening and called him in to remind him that it was his fifty-ninth birthday. He was completely surprised. The occasion was made enjoyable, by recitations, congratulations and light refreshments. He was substantially remembered by many of his parishoners.

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railway Company. Notice to Stockholders

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in case requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tipton, Mo., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and nothing could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and she believes it saved her mother through the Change of Life."

Tuesday's Daily.

Wm. L. Nelson, of Concord, has thanks for favors received this week.

Geo. Walker was in town yesterday. He is hauling a lot of elm logs and bolts to the Greenler factory.

—Rus Guilford and Marion Cramer are putting a new floor in the east end of the court house hall.

—Biron Bland and Miss Alice Farley of Ashley were in the city last evening calling on our tonsorial artist, Jack Bland and Miss Jessie Prickett.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wash Askew took a load of young people over to Waterloo last night and spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Phil Plum. There were in all ten couples and they had a most excellent time. Supper was served by Mrs. Plum and it was good.

—We forgot yesterday to mention the lovely masquerade social given by the Degree of Honor ladies at the hall Saturday night. It was a success in every particular and the masks were quite unique. There were about 200 people present.

—C. P. Houser writes from Indianapolis that all are well down there. It would be well for those having friends in that city to note that the street numbers have been changed lately. Mr. Houser's number is is now 628 E. N. Y. street and Mr. Ensley's is 1616 No. Meridian.

—The danger of convicting a man on circumstantial evidence is shown by the arrest of a man named Stambaugh at Chicago. He confessed that he had committed a murder at Michigan City in 1894 for which a man utterly innocent is now serving a sentence of thirteen years. A number of cases have also happened when innocent persons have been hanged.

—A party of young people were invited to a sleighing party given by Edith Trout and Edna Barnes. They drove to Waterloo and spent the evening with Master Earl Beck. The party consisted of Ralph Brown, Ruth Borst, Blaine Otto, Ralph Rainier, Edith Trout, Carl Brown, Edna Barnes, Guy Baker, Mabel Zerwis, Druie Baker, Guy Barnes, Etta Cool, Julia Miller, Dan Norway, John Hoff, Bessie Rush. They all report a jolly.

—Ex-Coroner Lafe Miser was a caller at our new home today.

—Milo Calkin went to St. Joe today, where he has a band to teach. He has classes now to keep him every night in the week. He has a band at St. Joe and one at Wolcottville, a class at Albion, Waterloo, and Avilla, besides two nights a week in teaching the big band at Auburn.

—At North Manchester last night a ten year old child was assaulted by Leroy Sloan, while returning from school. Later the culprit was caught and after the girl rallied identified him. He afterwards confessed, and was placed in jail. He says his home is in Warsaw, Ind.

—Chicago, the village in Cook Co. Ill., along the lake, is not the only one. There is a Chicago in Marion Co. Kentucky, one in Cortland Co. N. Y., and one in Huron Co. Ohio. The one in Cook Co. Ill., is however, a length or two ahead of the others. If anyone doubts this last statement, let him take a walk back and forth through all of them.

—Mrs. Sparling and Miss Laura Keeran went out to the Lockwood church last evening where Mrs. Sparling addressed the meeting. All speak highly of her address or sermon as perhaps it should be called. There were a number of others who went, but we could not learn their names.

—The big new Auburn band starts out with thirty-five members and all in promising shape. They expect to give a grand concert in a few weeks Our people, remembering the treats heretofore given by our bands, will look for this event with interest.

The logs, piles of bolts and piles of coiled hoops at the Greenler factory have overflowed onto all adjacent territory and outlots. It is a bewildering scene of rough timber, such as is not often seen and will not soon be seen again.

Blanche Shilling was taken suddenly last night with spasms and was in a critical condition for a time. This will be sad news to her many friends. Today she is reported better.

—Ex-Trustee James Blake came home from Columbia City today. His case has been set in court there for Feb. 21.

—Mrs. Frank Eckhart is better today and it is to be hoped will continue to improve.

—Mrs. John W. McCrory came down from Angola today to visit her father, C. C. Shaffer.

—Surveyor Krontz came in from Concord today, where he had been viewing the Hague ditch.

—Angola capitalists incorporated last Friday, a new stock company called the National Wire, Water and Lighting Co., with a capital of $100,000. The directors are W. G. and Paul Croxton, John and Arthur Kinney and Charles Pi loid.

Thursday's Daily.

—Uncle Jimmy Lateon came down from Waterloo today.

—Henry Baum, died at Avilla Wednesday night at the age of 82 years.

—Fred Funk has been confined to his home since Sunday with something like typhoid fever. He has been quite sick.

—Coldest morning of the year this 3d of February. It was 8 to 10 below about daylight.

—Dr. Hines reports a baby born to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stork in north Auburn yesterday.

—Dr. Baxter reports a 9¼ pound boy born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brown east of town. He had a cold ride out there.

—Don't annoy others by your coughing, and risk your life by neglecting a cold. Our Minute Cough Cure cures coughs, colds, croup, grippe and all throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Dr. Buchtel reports Jacob Walborn suffering with a severe attack of pleuritis. It is a very troublesome disease.

—Mr. Winslow has a little article on his early experiences in this issue. It will be interesting especially to our older people.

—Children and adults tortured by burns, scalds, injuries, eczema or skin diseases may secure instant relief by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is the great Pile remedy. By H. B. McCord.

—Dr. Frank Fisk came down from Waterloo yesterday to act in place of Dr. Broughton on the Pension Board. Dr. B. was ill and could not attend himself.

—Whooping cough is the most distressing malady; but its duratian can be cut short by the use of One Minute Cough Cure, which is also the best known remedy for croup and all lung and bronchial troubles. For sale by McCord.

—Ira Thrush was down from Ashle yesterday on business connected with the McIntyre electric light plant there of which he is superintendent. He returned on the evening train.

—What pleasure is there in life with a headache, constipation and biliousness? Thousands experience them who could become perfectly healthy by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. By H. B. McCord.

—Solomon Reinoehl, of Fairfield was in town today in spite of the cold weather. He had forgotten that his COURIER was paid ahead and stood ready to pay again. That keeps a man's credit o. k.

—After years of untold suffering from piles, B W. Pursell of Knitersville, Pa., was cured by using a single box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema, rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this remedy. For sale by H. McCord

—Maj. Kuhlman reports that the government thermometer showed 6½ degrees below zero this morning. The official instruments are very conservative and correct. It is likely that poorer instruments showed 8 to 10 below.

A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—The whistle at the Kiblinger factory got frozen fast this afternoon and when they went to blow it, at 3:30, they could not stop it. It kept on whistling and for a time everybody was scared and on the streets. They had to get up on the roof and loosen it.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—By the report of the of patent office we see that William F. Kessler has now a patent on every part of his Standard Electric cigar lighter. Mr. Kessler is enjoying a big business in the sale of his lighters.

—There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created—they are the ant, the bee and DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the last being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

—Charles Eckhart sends for the DAILY COURIER, tf., to E. Los Angeles, Calif. 202 Workman-st. He and his wife are enjoying the climate there and as noted a few day ago will be joined Feb. 15, by Mrs. Anna Shugers, and Mrs, Jessie Eckhart.

—We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter orbetter way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung trouble that can follow neglected colds. For sale by H. B. McCord.

About eight o'clock last evening a Lake Shore special arrived in this city. It was a private car of the traveling Auditor Mr. J. T. Hoyden of Cleveland H was accompanied by his wife and step son Bert Putman. Mr. Hayden's health has been very poor and he came here to live with the hopes of gaining new strength. He contemplates buying property, and permanently locating here. Auburn will gladly welcome Mr. and Mrs. Hayden.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. 25c.

Friday's Daily.

—Dr. Baxter is paying special attention to Diseases of Children also Diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Nervous system. tf

—Most all of our enterprising business men closed their places of business this afternoon out of respect to Judge McClellan and attended the funeral.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs and timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, Lesh, Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—Judge Taylor is sending out his speech on the monetary question to the republican papers all over the state. He made the speech before the self-appointed body that met there the other day to settle the money question All being in favor of the gold standard they made it unanimous among themselves. And if anyone should worry through the Judge's speech of 24 columns he will also be unanimously dead.

—We had a pleasant call this morning from Commissioner Gunsenhouser. He was here waiting to get home after the close of their three days session. The Board has got down to close work on the business of the county and are watching every penny of the county's expense. They deserve a compliment and as Mr. Gunsenhouser has had a good deal of experience he should have a full share.

—Mrs. Dr. Siver came up here yesterday not having been able to come sooner, as the news of her father's death nearly prostrated her. She herself is subject to bad attacks of heart trouble and the shock caused a return of them, and for a time she was in a critical condition. She however, felt it her duty to come, and her desire was reluctantly granted. Dr. Siver came with her returning home in the afternoon but will come up again today.

—The following attorneys were here and attended the funeral of Judge McClellan. Judges Zollars, Lowery, Chapin and Worden, of Ft. Wayne, Powers, Croxton, Best, Brown, Bratten, Yotter, Frank Powers and Rhodes, of Angola. A. J. Baxter and J. N. Boyle, of Butler, L. J Blair, of Waterloo Knight Templars from Kendallville, Butler, Angola, Waterloo and Garrett were also in attendance.

—St Joe News:—Supt. Coe was a visitor in the schools at this place last Tuesday afternoon.....Mrs. John Bowen of Auburn Junction, has been visiting in town the past week, the guest of her parents and other relatives and friends.....Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Olds and children of Auburn, are the guests of their parents and other relatives in this place this week.

—Judge Best, of Minneapolis, reached here yesterday, having come to attend the funeral of Judge McClellan. The two have been life-long friends besides being associated in professional business for so many years. It will be remembered that Judge McClellan sent for him to help in the McIntosh trial, and in his opening plea, paid Judge Best a high compliment by giving as a reason for Judge Best's presence in the case "I can work with him better than with any other man." And Judge Best will feel keenly, the loss of one with whom his relations have been those of a brother.

—There were only thirteen democratic editors present at the winter meeting at Indianapolis yesterday. Prosperity has not yet struck them and though they get passes on the railroads they have to pay big hotel bills.

—Henry Baum who died this week at Avilla, was the man who in 1866 induced John B. Stoll to come from Pennsylvania to this state. It was in that year, the Ligonier Banner was started Mr. Baum being a leading patron.

—David Seeley is in trouble and in jail to boot at Kalamazoo, owing to his popularity. He has eight wives, all living at once. It is needless to say it is not our David Seeley over at Garrett. Our David has a most worthy wife, but only one, and he being an old veteran with an honorable record, behaves himself as a good citizen should.

—Holoerman, the defaulting cashier of Elkhart county will return, give bond for appearance and stand trial at next term of court. He has turned over so much property and errors have been found that will reduce the shortage so much, that his attorney thinks they can now square up matters.

—Was he a "Red Man?" An exchange says:—Vinton Shaw, while at work in Peabody's woods, near Columbia City, found an emblem button imbedded in a large beech tree, about thirty-five feet from the ground. The button is of gold and is well preserved. It represents a sheaf of wheat.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Baxter of Kansas are now at Waterloo visiting their former neighbors. They have been visiting now about two months and may remain several weeks longer. Mrs. Baxter's brother, Mr. Landis, at Hicksville is lying very low of cancer in the stomach and they will remain here as long as they can on his account They expect to visit in Auburn in about two weeks.

Whitley county has had experts at work on the county records but they found no crookedness except some doubtful charges made by different officers. Of those doubtful charges, there is $405.20 against M. D. Yontz, which is now outlawed as he was auditor several years ago. He is the well known Burford agent who goes over the state gobbling up printing that should be given to home printers.

Saturday's Daily.

—Geo. L. Lanning went over to Butler on business this afternoon.

—Mrs. W. H. Nusbaum and daughter went to Ft. Wayne this morning.

—M. E. Gardner and Jonas Aldrich of Butler were here today.

—Daniel Blucher, of Corunna, was in the city today.

Recorder Jones and John W. Baxter were at Waterloo this p. m. on legal business.

—Judge Best and Mrs. J. E. Rose went over to Butler this afternoon to visit relatives there over Sunday.

—A letter from Hon. F. B. VanAuken brings word of the contiued and remarkable success of the revival there under the auspices of the Christian church. He says Angola is proud of its great congregation of "christians only." Its lay membership is believed to be, in ability, not surpassed anywhere; and at its head is a real Whitefield only 31 years old in the person of C. S. Medburn. Such a moral power can mean only good to any town, Hon. D. R. Best is one of the latest of over a hundred accessions.

Prevent Pneumonia

Prevention is always better than cure, even when cure is possible. But so many times pneumonia is not cured that prevention becomes the natural act of that instinct of self-preservation which is "the first law of nature." Pneumonia can be prevented and is often cured by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Some years ago I had a severe cold and was threatened with pneumonia and could neither eat nor sleep, and was in a wretched condition. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and took it according to the directions, and at the end of fifteen days was as well and sound as before the attack. I have recommended it in many cases of pneumonia since, and have never known it to fail in effecting a cure."
JOHN HENRY, St. Joseph, La.

"I was attacked with a cold that settled on my lungs, and defied the skill of my physicians so that they considered me incurable. At last I began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and was entirely cured after having taken two bottles."
FRANCISCO A. SEVERIANO,
Taunton, Mass.

A VALENTINE.

(Written by a married man.)

Into my presence came just now
A little child—I know not how.
Familiar, too, he seemed; and yet
I could not tell where we had met.

His mien was innocent and mild—
I never saw a fairer child—
And yet, in most unseemly glee,
He cocked one wicked eye at me.

I knew him then. The pretty boy
Took aim with the same silver toy
That slays its thousands. "Wait!" cried I;
"Don't shoot at me, my son; oh, fie"

"For you forget it was your dart,
Sent once with your own matchless art,
That made me like the rest—a fool.
"Place then, alas, I've been at school!

"For she, ah, yes! she still is fair;
Untouched by gray her dusky hair.
Once she was loving; now you see
She rules the house, and she rules me."

He said no word, but just took aim.
Straight to my heart the arrow came.
"Forget me now, sir, if you dare!"
Cried Cupid, running down the stair.

Deep in my heart there is a pain—
Methinks I am in love again!
Sweet, sweet, my pet, it is not true;
Those foolish words I deeply rue.

I wonder if you are in league
With Cupid? Is it Love's intrigue?
I know not, care not, but I'll sign
Myself your humble Valentine.
—Puck.

MEG'S VALENTINE.

MEG was only one of the "hands" in the great factory of Weaver & Co., and with about the same regularity as the machinery she performed her daily tasks.

Nobody in the factory had ever given her so much as a sympathetic glance; the whirr of wheels, the grind of machinery, the everlasting hum of moving belts and singing of spindles do not encourage sympathy, and besides Meg was quiet, even timid, and her companions, after the first day of now and then a half curious, half critical inspection, paid no attention to her.

And yet Meg's "trouble" had been a romance; a sort of a flower which blooms sometimes along the hedgerows with the same beauty and sweetness as in the conservatory.

Born was all Meg knew about her origin; brought up, at first in a charitable institution, later as the chore girl in a boarding house, which always smelled of dirt and rancidity; and still later as a boarder at the same place, because it was more like home to her after her long, hard day's work at the factory, where she had secured employment at the age of 15. Meg's life had been an uneventful one.

Meg was ignorant, her "schooling" having been encompassed by a six months' course at a grammar school in the neighborhood, and for which "educational advantage" she had toiled for the mistress of the boarding house until her health threatened to give way under the strain. But since somebody, back in the past of Meg's unknown ancestry, had sent a drop of ambitious blood flowing through her veins, within the six months she had learned to read easy words, both in print and writing, and she was proud of the fact.

She did glory in her power to read and spell out the meaning of such cheap books as came in her way, and once, having watched a postman deliver a letter across the street, she was seized with a wish that was somewhat akin to pain to receive a letter from somebody—just to see if she could frame an answer.

She had never received a letter and thinking it over from this standpoint, Meg felt that she was very lonely and she vaguely wondered how it all came about that nobody in all the thousands which made up the big city—the big city was Meg's world—had cared whether she lived or died.

Once a sweet little girl, who was walking with her nurse, had looked up into her face and with that free-fasonry which knows nothing of rules and which has in it the element, nay, the very essence of fraternity, had pressed a tiny cluster of violets into her hand.

And so the days went on, to-day as yesterday, to-morrow as to-day, until one morning Meg overslept herself, by some method of calculation which did not consider time in the light of dollars and cents added to her income, and she went to her breakfast late. The landlady was usually pleasant when a boarder happened to be late at breakfast and, as became one in her exalted position, she made an offense of this kind on Meg's part an affair of great importance.

Not that Meg in all the years she had worked for Weaver & Co. had been late to breakfast more than three or four times, but the landlady never quite forgot that Meg had at one time been her willing slave and any dereliction on her part which was savored of independence was not a thing to lightly pass over.

On the morning in question, the landlady, much to Meg's surprise, greeted her in an affable manner and her grim mouth quivered with something which might, under favorable conditions, have been mistaken for a smile, but which had had so little practice that it merely succeeded in being a grimace, as she told her to take her seat at the table and then proceeded to introduce her to a new boarder who had just paid a month's board in advance.

Meg acknowledged the introduction, and after the landlady had gone out ventured to look at her vis-a-vis, and discovered that he was a tall young man with a bronzed complexion and a pair of brown eyes which met hers frankly, and seemed to look right down into her foolishly beating heart, and after the tough steak had been served and he had gallantly filled a glass of water for her Meg made up her mind that he was different from those whom she constantly met beneath that roof, and was undeniably "nice."

The young man, whose name was Atwood—"Mr. Thomas Atwood," as he was called by the landlady—was disposed to talk as he went on eating his breakfast, and as Meg was the only one at the breakfast table he naturally talked to her, and she soon learned that he was head brakeman on one of the trains which rolled out of the city on the iron rails belonging to a great railway line, and that his home was in an Eastern city. She told him that she also belonged to the toiling masses, and before breakfast was finished they became very well acquainted, and Meg, as she pinned her veil down close over her plain little hat, thought Mr. Atwood the very nicest gentleman whom she had ever met.

And so Meg's love story began, and as the time flew away it was apparent to everybody that she was growing absolutely pretty—happiness having much power in this direction—and that the time was approaching when the honest young brakeman and herself would cease to be lovers and become husband and wife.

Indeed, they had talked it all over, and Meg had told Tom that she had saved $100 from her meager salary, and Tom had confessed that "before he had known her he had spent all his earnings, but since that time he had begun to put by a little, and now had $300, and that he meant to work hard and get a promotion, so that they could some time have a home of their own," etc., just as humble, happy lovers always have done and always will do, and then they decided that they would put the $100 and the $300 together, and, as that was the 1st of February, they would get married Feb. 14—a "valentine wedding," as Tom said, and then, when she said "she never had had a valentine," he laughed out of a heart just bubbling over with sweetness, and love, and merriment, and told her "he would be her valentine and she would be his," and then he kissed her, and Meg was in such a state of delight that she forgot she ever had been lonely, and she wouldn't have changed places with a queen, even if the latter had insisted upon it.

As the time drew near for the wedding Meg had a pretty new dress made and, somewhat softened by the love affair which had gone forward directly under her supervision, the landlady had made preparations for a wedding supper which was to outdo any previous effort of the kind in the neighborhood. Indeed, she had resolved that for once she would be extravagant, and she got out several ancient receipts, which were headed "Bride's Cake," and set to work beating eggs and weighing sugar in a way which made the kitchen scullion to declare, in a confidential manner, to the garbage man, that "Missus 'peared to be a little teched in her upper story," and gave as her reason for her conclusion that "She was a-makin' cake to beat sixty."

A few days before the time set for the wedding the weather, which had been in that condition known as "muggy," turned cold, and when Tom came around to bid Meg good-by before going out on his run for the last time before he claimed her as his bride, he had a powder of snow on his collar and that strange, indescribable smell of cold on his clothing which made Meg snuggle up to him and say she "was sorry he had to go out in the cold," and then, as she kissed him in that motherly way that comes natural to women when they love, she asked him to "be very careful and watch his footing as he ran across the tops of the cars, which were sure to be slippery because of the snow," and, at last, she let him go.

St. Valentine's morn dawned clear and bright, although snow lay like bleached linen wherever a heavy team or an early pedestrian had not marred its purity, and Meg arose light of heart and light of foot to make the final preparations for her union with the man she loved. She had told the foreman on the previous evening that she would not return to the factory, and that hireling of men, who considered humanity of her kind as merely adjuncts to money getting, had deigned to say in an interlocutory fashion: "Going to git married, hey?" Meg did not answer, but she felt such delight at leaving the huge building, where she had been merely as a piece of the machinery, that it seemed to her she had never known freedom and vaguely wondered if it really were she—Meg—who walked on air and was so happy that now and then she caught at her heart lest it should beat aloud.

No. 207, which was Tom's train, would be in at 3:20 o'clock, and at 6, in the presence of only one or two of the boarders and the landlady, the ceremony was to be performed. Meg watched the clock, but when the hands pointed to 4:30 she concluded that the train was an hour late and she would don the pretty gown so as to be all ready when Tom came. She smiled at her image in the glass as for the twentieth time she shook out the rustling skirt and then ran hastily down to again look at the clock. It was 5 o'clock now, and still Tom had not come, and all at once something like a cold hand grasped Meg's heart and she trembled as one with a chill. Then the door bell rang and, with the glad cry of "There he is!" upon her lips, she sprang to meet—not Tom, but a stranger, and he looked odd and uneasy at poor Meg, and somehow she knew when he handed her an envelope containing a letter—her first letter—that something had befallen her lover, and she felt her way back to the little parlor and with shaking hands tore the letter open and slowly spelled out its contents. It was not long, but was written by Dr. ——, of the company's hospital, and it stated that Thomas Atwood, a brakeman, had fallen between the cars while on his regular run and had been so badly injured that he had died anortly after being brought to the hospital. Before his death he had asked for pencil and paper and had written the inclosed, and requested that it be sent to its present address."

AND AT LAST, SH . LET HIM GO.

Meg dropped the letter, and with the calmness of one who has fast hold of despair she read Tom's last message which, with many breaks and almost illegible tracery, ran as follows: "Deer girl: I—have made my last—run and—have got to say good-by—keep a tite hold on the brakes, and with—love forever and ever, I am—your valentine."

That was all; only the story of two humble lovers, and to-day Meg is again in the factory. But, as I said, back of her soft gray eyes is a something which is too sad for speech, too deep for tears, and it will go with her all her days, and—who knows?—will fade only when she is no more lonely, no more heart-hungry. Death is not the end; it is the beginning. —Utica Globe.

WHERE ABE PRACTICED LAW.

Old Courthouse at Lincoln, Ill., Has Connection with the Martyr.

The city of Lincoln, Ill., still contains one building in which Abraham Lincoln practiced law over forty years ago. It is known as the "Postville" court house, although that village was long ago absorbed by the present city.

The first county seat of Logan County was Postville, and the old court house, which still stands in the western part of Lincoln, was occupied as such from 1839 to 1848. In the latter year the courts were removed twelve miles south to Mount Pulaski, which village was the county seat until 1855. At almost every term of court from the time of the organization of the county as a separate local district and until his nomination for the presidency, Mr. Lincoln was one of the lawyers in attendance, and that he was a favorite with the people of the county is evidenced by the fact that the city bears his name. His stories are yet repeated by surviving pioneers who were county officials at that time, and his legal services in many of the trials of those times are still remembered.

OLD POSTVILLE COURTHOUSE.

When the Chicago and Alton Railroad was built through the county it did not pass through the new county seat, Mount Pulaski, nor the old one of Postville, but it did pass within a mile of the latter town. At this point a new town was founded and named in honor of Mr. Lincoln, who was was a friend of the men who were its founders.

At the sale of lots in the new town on Aug. 29, 1853, Mr. Lincoln was present and expressed his regrets at having no money with which to buy some of the town lots. However, two lots opposite the block set aside as the court house square were given to him by Messrs. Gillet, Hickox and Latham as an attorney fee for services in the work of securing the charter and deeds for the new city. These lots Mr. Lincoln owned until his death and were not sold by his heirs until about seven years ago.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

On the 12th of February, 1809, in the wilderness, in Larue County, Kentucky, was born one of the best and greatest men that ever lived—Abraham Lincoln. His father was a poor farmer, and in the rude life of the backswoods his entire schooling did not exceed a year, but while at school he was noted as a good speller, but more particularly for his hatred of cruelty—his earliest composition being a protest against putting coals of fire on the backs of the captured terrapins. He wore coarse, home-made clothes and a coonskin cap, and his trousers, owing to his rapid growth (before his 17th birthday he was at his maximum of 6 feet 4 inches), were almost always nearly a foot too short. His last attendance at school was in 1826, when he was 17 years old, but after leaving it he read everything readable within his reach, and copied passages and sentences that especially attracted him. His first knowledge of the law, in which he afterwards became eminent, was through reading the statutes of Indiana, lent to him by a constable, and he obtained a tolerable knowledge of grammar, also from a borrowed book, studied by the light of burning shavings in a cooper's shop, after his family had, in 1830, emigrated to Illinois. In 1834 he was elected to the Illinois Legislature—was three times re-elected—was admitted to practice law in 1836, and then removed to Springfield, the State capital. In 1846 he was elected to Congress, where he voted against the extension of slavery, and in 1854 was a recognized leader in the newly-formed Republican party. In 1860 he was nominated for the Presidency, received a majority of votes over any of the other candidates and was installed in the President's chair March 4, 1861. His election was followed by the secession of eleven Southern States and a war for the restoration of the Union. As a military measure he proclaimed Jan. 1, 1863, the freedom of all slaves in the seceding States; and was re-elected to the Presidency in 1864. The war brought to a close April 2, 1865, and on the 15th of the same month Abraham Lincoln's life was ended by the hand of an assassin. Thus, when he

Had mounted Fame's ladder so high
From the round at the top he could step to the sky, the great President passed to his rest. Twice elected to his high office, he was torn from it in the moment of triumph, to be placed side by side with Washington, the one the father, the other the savior of the Union; one the founder of a republic, the other the liberator of a race.

LINCOLN AS A LABORER.

He Did Farm Work in Indiana for 25 Cents a Day.

By this time Abraham had become an important member of the family. He was remarkably strong for his years, and the work he could do in a day was a decided advantage to Thomas Lincoln, says McClure's Magazine. The ax which had been put into his hand to help in making the first clearing had never been allowed to drop; indeed, as he says himself, "from that till within his 23d year he was almost constantly handling that most useful instrument." Besides, he drove the team, cut down the elm and linden brush with which the stock was often fed, learned to handle the old shovel plow, to wield the sickle, to thrash the wheat with a flail, to fan and clean it with a sheet, to go to mill and turn the hard-earned [illegible] into flour; in short, he learned a [illegible] trades the settler's boy must know [illegible] well enough so that when his father [illegible] not need him he could hire him [illegible] neighbors. Thomas Lincoln also [illegible] him the rudiments of carpentry and cabinetmaking, and kept him busy some of the time as his assistant in his trade. There are houses still standing in and near Gentryville on which it is said he worked. The families of Lamar, Jones, Crawford, Gentry, Turnham and Richardson all claim the honor of having employed him upon their cabins. As he grew older he became one of the strongest and most popular "hands" in the vicinity, and much of his time was spent as a "hired boy" on some neighbor's farm. For 25 cents a day—paid to his father—he was hostler, plowman, wood chopper and carpenter, besides helping the women with the "chores." For them, so say the legends, he was ready to carry water, make the fire, even tend the baby. No wonder that a laborer who never refused to do anything asked of him, who could "strike with a mallet heavier blows" and "sink an ax deeper into the wood" than anybody else in the community, and who at the same time was general help for the women, never lacked a job in Gentryville.

MAKING LINCOLN PRESENTABLE

Mrs. Lincoln "Fixed Up" the President-elect to Meet a Delegation.

In narrating "When Lincoln Was First Inaugurated," in the Ladies' Home Journal, Stephen Fiske writes interestingly of the memorable journey from Springfield, Ill., to the national capital, and tells of Mrs. Lincoln's efforts to have her husband look presentable when receiving a delegation that was to greet them upon reaching New York City.

"The train stopped," writes Mr. Fiske, "and through the windows immense crowds could be seen; the cheering drowned the blowing off steam of the locomotive. Then Mrs. Lincoln opened her hand bag and said:

"'Abraham, I must fix you up a bit for these city folks.'

"Mr. Lincoln gently lifted her upon the seat before him; she parted, combed and brushed his hair and arranged his black necktie.

"'Do I look nice now, mother?' he affectionately asked.

"'Well, you'll do, Abraham,' replied Mrs. Lincoln critically. So he kissed her and lifted her down from the seat, and turned to meet Mayor Wood, courtly and suave, and to have his hand shaken by the other New York officials."

Love Lottery Day.

One of the most charming and at the same time plausible versions of the relation of the modern valentine idea to that devoted Christian martyr, St. Valentine, is the following:

The early Christian fathers, in their attempts to conciliate their pagan compatriots, with most commendable tact and insight utilized many of the popular forms of mythological celebrations to commemorate Christian events.

One of the festivals, dear to the heart of every Roman, was the feast of Lupercalia, when they did honor to their gods Pan and Juno, not only with the banquet, dance and drama, but with a peculiar ceremony which provided a billet box into which were dropped slips of paper inscribed with the ladies' names. The bachelors drew out these slips and the ladies whose names were on their papers were henceforth installed as their mistresses for twelve months to command them as best suited their sweet wills. This festival usually occurred in February, and was therefore made use of by the Christians to commemorate the birthday of the martyr, St. Valentine. In time it came to be called Valentine's Day and retained the love-lottery as its especial feature.

Honest Abe and the Bull.

Crossing a field one day, the late President Lincoln, it is said, was pursued by an angry bull. He made for the fence, but soon discovered that the bull was overtaking him. He then began to run round a haystack in the field, and the bull pursued him; but, in making the short circles round the stack, Lincoln was the faster, and, instead of the bull catching him, he caught the bull and grabbed him by the tail. It was a firm grip and a controlling one. He began to kick the bull, and the bull bellowed with agony and dashed across the field, Lincoln hanging to his tail and kicking him at every jump, and, as they flew along, Lincoln shouted at the bull, "Hang you, who began this fight?"

A Valentine Luncheon.

On St. Valentine's Day a luncheon carrying out heart-shaped decorations would be a unique affair. The center of the table should be adorned by heart-shaped floral pieces composed of carnations. Crystal candelabra with red candles, each alternately screened with red hearts and bows and arrows should be placed in the middle of mirrors at either end, and three heart-shaped crystal dishes should surround each candelabra and contain heart-shaped bonbons and cakes. Several gold cupids should be suspended over the table and a broad red satin ribbon should be inscribed with the words: "St. Valentine, 1898."

Grace's Valentine.

Such a dainty valentine!
Cupids, mottoes, lace,
Roses, satin frills—in fine,
Just the thing for Grace!

Push the satin frills apart,
Lo! beneath the lace
Lies a flimsy, tinsel heart—
Just the thing for Grace!

A HUMAN ALPHABET.

LETTERS AND FIGURES MADE FROM BODIES OF MEN.

Writer in the Strand Magazine Tells How This Ingenious and Entertaining Feat May Be Accomplished—Sentences May Also Be Made.

How It Is Done.

The idea of building up each letter of the alphabet and each figure from 1 to 0 out of the bodies of men is certainly an absolutely unique notion. Mr. Wm. G. Fitzgerald tells how he accomplished this in an interesting article in the Strand Magazine. From this article we quote:

LETTER A.

All kinds of difficulties stood in the [illegible] of the [illegible] shment [illegible] he very photo- [illegible] me the [illegible] might [illegible] would not spell words when used as type.

'We were extremely fortunate in our choice of 'material.' We selected the most intelligent and original trio to be found on the variety stage. These gentlemen are known as the 'Three Delevines,' and in the ordinary way they go through a quaint entertainment, which they call 'Satanic Gambols.' It will be seen that, throughout the whole of the alphabet and figures, the Delevines retain their diabolical uniform.

LETTER E.

"We found them ideal men for the purpose—splendidly formed, highly intelligent, and full of helpful hints. Now, as to the method of obtaining the photographs. The letters and figures were built up separately and photographed in a special studio in the beautiful town of Plymouth. We give a few specimen letters reproduced on a large scale.

LETTER K.

"The A is remarkably simple. It would form an excellent design for a Christmas card, with seasonable greetings printed below. The men merely form an isosceles triangle, with the floor for a base and their heads for the apex. The crosspiece is simply formed by the men shaking hands, and, as it were, whispering Caristmas greeting.

LETTER M.

It is Messrs. Harry and Sam Delevine who form this letter.

The E, which is the next to be reproduced large as a specimen letter, is elaborate and strenuous. Few will doubt its claim to ingenuity. Mr. Percy Delevine may be called the backbone of the letter; he is the tallest of the three, and therefore will be frequently found doing duty in a similar capacity. Sam is creeping between his legs; and Sam's own shapely members form the lower out-stroke of the letter. When this was done, Harry climbed upon Percy's shoulders and extended himself down his back; then stretching out his own legs and arms in the way shown, the letter was triumphantly completed. It is rather a pity that Mr. Harry Delevine's body is so prominent, thereby making the upper part of the letter unduly thick. But what would you? It was quite unavoidable. Remember the 'bricks' out of which we built our letters are human beings, and occasionally a troublesome body or limb was very difficult, indeed, if not impossible, to get rid of.

LETTER P.

"The letter K, which is next seen, is beautifully sharp and clear-cut. Mr. Percy Devine is again the shank, while Sam is kneeling behind him in an attitude of touching devotion. Harry is kneeling on Sam's shoulders, and inclining himself back at a perilous angle.

"Poor Sam is looking toward our artist, and protesting in a choked voice that 'he can only stand it a moment or two longer.'

"The letter M, which is next shown, is a particularly fine specimen. This time we want the tall man in the middle. It was rather an onerous position, but Percy said he could do it on his head; and he did. On the left-hand side Harry Delevine is seen, wearing a quizzical expression. The right-hand support is his brother Sam. Notice how the feet of the outer men add to the appearance of the letter—a capital one in two senses. The unfortunate Percy was obliged to remain upside down for at least some twelve seconds. Almost simultaneously with the snap of the camera a groan burst from the interior anatomy of our M, and Mr. Percy Delevine righted himself, looking perfectly purple in the face.

"The next letter reproduced large is

LETTER Q.

P, which is at once simple and effective. Percy is again the long stroke, and he is holding Harry at his back in order to form the loop of the letter. It was perfectly marvelous, by the way, how still these gallant fellows kept, even under the most trying circumstances. Like a pair of Greek wrestlers, Sam and Harry form the greater part of the letter Q, which is next seen. In order to complete the circle with human material, Percy has extended himself from one pair of legs to another; and to form the tail of the letter he thrust his own leg out of the circle in a perfectly delightful manner.

Mr. Fitzgerald goes on to show each letter of the alphabet and the ten primary numerals, as well as sentences and mottoes made up from them. The whole thing is most ingenious and entertaining.

Some Narrow Escapes.

Miss Elvira Tobey had reached the age of 70 without becoming a victim to matrimony, but, according to her own views, she had had some hairbreadth escapes.

"What if I had of married old Hi Skaggs!" she said with a great sigh of relief one day. "He's tormented three wives to death, and what if I'd been one of 'em!"

"Why, were you ever engaged to him?"

"Well, not to say 'engaged,' mebbe, but then it was next door to it. He beaued me home from spellin' school twice fifty years ago, an' land only knows what'd happened if he'd gone home with me a third time. And what if I had married old Henry Todd forty-five years ago?"

"Did he ask you to marry him?"

"Well, it was next thing to an out an' out proposal. He came over to our house three Sunday nights hand running! If that wa'n't mighty nigh a proposal I dunno what could be. And I s'pose that if I'd married Joel Baxter I'd a been the mother of all them Baxter children, and not one of 'em has turned out well, and how turribly I'd felt. I'm thankful enough that I escaped Joel Baxter!"

"Did he propose to you, too?"

"He came as nigh it as I wanted him to, for he chose me three times in one evening when we were playin' kissin games at a play party forty-nine years ago, and I've allus felt that I had a mighty narrer escape from bein' Mrs Joel Baxter. And, oh, if I had married Thomas Knapp!"

"Did you come near marrying him?"

"Well, he asked me to go to a picnic once and I refused, and a month later his engagement to Tryphosa Jones was announced, an' she's hed an awful life with him. I can tell you that it hasn't been for lack of chances that I never married, an' I can't be too thankful for some of the escapes I've had."—Detroit Free Press.

The Largest Coin in the World.

The largest gold coin in existence in the "leol" of Anam, a ponderous gold disc, nearly a pound in weight, on which its value, £44, is written in Indian ink.

Next in size and value to this cumbrous but desirable coin comes the Japanese "obang," which is worth approximately £11; and the "benda" of Ashanti, representing a value of nearly £10, makes a good third, bracketed with the 50-dollar gold pieces of California.

The heaviest silver coins in the world currencies are—an Anamese ingot, worth about £3, and weighing considerably over a pound, the Chinese [illegible] and the Austrian double-dollar.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Christian Fellowship.—Fellowship with Jesus secures the highest culture known to men.—Rev. Dr. F. Sample, Presbyterian, New York City.

Intimacy.—The confidence in God is one of the noblest attributes of the soul, but intimacy causes contempt.—Rabbi Friedman, Denver, Colo.

Divine Help.—Every man must be his own savior. God will help only those that help themselves.—Dr. Joseph Silverman, Hebrew, New York City.

The Mission of Life.—Life is a mission where we are to build the foundations for an illimitable future.—Rev. B. Fay Mills, Evangelist, Boston, Mass.

Discipline.—The trust in Providence robs disappointment of its sting, and sorrow becomes a method of discipline. —Rabbi Friedman, Hebrew, Denver, Colo.

Hope and Faith.—Faith being absent, all is absent. Faith is mightiest where there is neither means nor hope.—Rev. Dr. Roughton, Methodist, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Spiritual Courage.—Only a moral hero, while the body quakes and the face is pallid with fear, can rise to spiritual courage.—Rev. H. I. Nicholas, Presbyterian, Philadelphia, Pa.

True Prayer.—Humility is the foundation of all true prayer, and without it every other grace of the soul will wither and die.—Rev. Edward McHugh, Methodist, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Human Destiny.—There is but one destiny: Some day every soul, however stained, however small, however distorted, shall rise.—Dr. Minot J. Savage, Unitarian, New York City.

The Bond of Society.—Truth at all costs should be the watchword of every honest soul. The bond of society is confidence whose basis is truth.—Rev. J. Q. A. Henry, Baptist, Chicago, Ill.

The Only Way.—We must bring the affections and intellect into closer conjunction if we would reach a fully developed manhood and womanhood.—Mrs. Celia T. Woolley, Independent, Chicago, Ill.

Sacred Work.—All work done in a religious spirit is sacred work, for Christianity ennobles and consecrates all work which is done for the welfare of man.—Bishop Fallows, Episcopalian, Chicago, Ill.

Looking Backward.—Thousands of men and women start for the kingdom, but they look back. Man, if you look back, you are not fit for the kingdom of heaven.—Rev. James McFarland, Presbyterian, Denver, Colo.

Home and Harmony.—Put honor on the mother, and the home goes up in sweetness and harmony and elevation of sentiment and in all refining influences.—Rev. Dr. F. A. Noble, Congregationalist, Chicago, Ill.

Heavenly Beauty.—Even the wayside mud puddle, if viewed at the proper angle, is a thing of beauty and mirrors the sky and reflects in its bosom the clouds of heaven.—Rev. J. D. Long, Presbyterian, Babylon, N. Y.

Answer to Prayer.—The lesson for you and for me is that the best answer to our prayers is in God's coming to us and revising our plans for higher use.—Bishop W. F. Nichols, Episcopalian, San Francisco, Cal.

Bench and Bar.

A Missouri justice of the peace at the close of a case announced with great dignity: "I will hold this case under advisement until next Monday morning, at which time I will render judgment for the plaintiff."

It is said of an Illinois judge who as an attorney had been somewhat noted as an objector that during his term on the bench when an improper question was asked by a lawyer exclaimed, "I object." As the hilarity in the court room subsided he said with great dignity, "That objection is sustained." No one took exception.

Enthusiasm and emotion in an official document appear for once at least in an ancient report by a Mexican officer who had been commissioned to place a grantee in possession of land. He says: "I took him by the hand and led him over the whole tract, he shouting and plucking up grass and throwing stones in the name of the king, saying, 'Long live our beloved monarch, Don Fernando VII., whom God may preserve,' with hurrahs and shouts, and I shed tears of delight at his acclamations."

Unique Celebration.

A highly-esteemed midwife at Stolfe, in Germany, celebrated lately a singular feast. She had just assisted at the birth of her 6,000th child to whom she had given services, and, in honor of that event, she invited all the children whom she had helped to come into the world to her country house to partake of a banquet. Very many big and little children accepted the invitation, passing a pleasant afternoon. 5 DROPS RHEUMATISM. FOR 30 DAYS YOU CAN TRY IT FOR 25 CTS.

GIVEN UP BY 14 DIFFERENT DOCTORS.

[TRADE MARK.]

DEAR SIRS: I thought I would write a statement of my case, and how I was when I commenced using your "5 DROPS," as I feel truly grateful to think that our Heavenly Father has endowed you with the knowledge to bring out such a wonderful medicine as your "5 DROPS." I was a great sufferer for about four years. I was taken sick with vomiting and cramps and dizziness, so I could not sit up a minute, so they had to carry me in where I fell. Then I employed one of our city doctors; he said I was all broken down, and that I would never be able to work again; then I kept getting worse, and I employed another, and he said about the same. After a while I got a little better, then I was taken with cramps and pains in my elbows, hands, knees and feet. The torture of the pains was so great that I had to walk the floor night and day. I employed another doctor, and when he would say that he could do no more for me, I would employ another and another till I had employed 14 different doctors, and had used every kind of patent medicine I could hear of. My teeth are all gone from the effect of the strong medicine. Some of the doctors said it was my kidneys, some said it was my liver and kidneys, and some called it Rheumatic Gout. My friends would say that I could not live a week. Two years ago my sister-in-law came from Nebraska to see me, and she said when she went away that she would never see me alive again. Thank God she is here again to see me, and she had just one look at me, then she said: "What did you ever get to do you so much good?" for, she says: "I expected two years ago every letter I got to hear you were dead." All I can say is, it was wonderful—"5 DROPS" did it all. When I was taken sick I weighed about 100 pounds—I ran down to about 75 pounds, and I could not feed myself and had to be turned in bed. I now have taken your "5 DROPS" about three months, and can clean my own horse and harness it and drive it. People all look at me and say: "It is wonderful," for they thought my box was made for me. My cure is a great testimonial for your "5 DROPS." Now, if you want any more I can give it, and I can get testimonials from prominent men here that know just how I was.

THREE HAPPY WOMEN.

A Trio of Fervent Letters to the Sympathetic Friend of Her Sex.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

Each Letter Tells in a Different Way of Agonies Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health was gradually being undermined. I suffered untold agony from painful menstruation, backache, pain on top of my head and ovarian trouble. I concluded to try Mrs. Pinkham's Compound, and found that it was all any woman needs who suffers with painful monthly periods. It entirely cured me.

MRS. GEORGIE WASS,
923 Bank St., Cincinnati, O.

I sat right and Liver I feel like a is a thing of the Vegetable for me.

For years I had suffered with painful menstruation every month. At the beginning of menstruation it was impossible for me to stand up for more than five minutes, I felt so miserable. One day a little book of Mrs. Pinkham's was thrown into my house and down and read it. I then got some of Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Pills. I can heartily say that to-day new woman; my monthly suffering the past. I shall always praise Compound for what it has done

MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON,
363 Lisbon St., Lewiston, Me.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of painful menstruation and backache. The pain in my back was dreadful, and the agony I suffered during menstruation nearly drove me wild.

Now this is all over, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine and advice.—MRS. CARRIE V. WILLIAMS, South Mills, N. C.

The great volume of testimony proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safe, sure and almost infallible remedy in cases of irregularity, suppressed excessive or painful monthly periods.

Never Content.

Some people are never content with anything. They will not find exactly what they want even in heaven, if they know some one is there ahead of them. For instance, some are great sufferers from neuralgia. Friends have told them what is best and certain to cure them. Not content with want is said, they suffer on. Pain ravages and devastates the system, and leaves it a barren waste. St. Jacobs Oil has cured thousands. Just try it.

John Bull's Pudding.

A terrible indictment has been brought against the famous English Christmas plum pudding. It is supposed to be typically John Bullish, and yet we are asked to believe that most of its ingredients are foreign—Greek currants, American plums, candied peel from anywhere, except England, and—culminating atrocity—French brandy. The only consolation found is that the cinnamon comes from Ceylon, which is at least a British possession. It is, indeed, a blow to find that the flag on which the sun never sets does not cover the materials for an English plum pudding. This is even worse than importing the roast beef of old England from Chicago.

FLASHES OF FUN.

"I think we met on a previous occasion," said the affable man. "Are you sure it wasn't a subsequent one?" replied the crusty one.

She—"I heard about the elopement. Has her mother forgiven them?" He—"I think not. I understand she has gone to live with them."—Puck.

Jill—"Is Gill a good judge of cigars?" Bill—"I think he must be. He had two last night, and he gave me one. He must have kept the best one."—Yonkers Statesman.

In their stateroom: Brown—"Confound you, you're using my toothbrush!" Sonderhausen—"I beg your pardon. I tinked it vos ze ship's."—Pick-Me-Up.

Jabbers—"I woke up last night and found a burglar in my room." Havers—"Catch him?" Jabbers—"Certainly not. I'm not making a collection of burglars."—Puck.

He—"I told your father we expected to be married next month, and he was wild." She—"What did he say?" He—"He wanted to know why we couldn't make it next week."—Puck.

"Once a friend of mine and I agreed that it would be helpful for each of us to tell the other his faults." "How did it work?" "We haven't spoken for nine years."—Chicago Record.

Hubbard—"Simpkins has got over his nervous prostration." Pease—"How can you tell?" Hubbard—"Why, I met him on the street last night, and he wanted to borrow twenty dollars."—Puck.

The Count—"I haf been told, madame, your daughtaire haf ze bad tempaire." The Mamma—"Ah, yes, count, but you know she loses her temper so easily." The Count—"Ah, how loafiy."—Detroit Journal.

"At no time," said the philosopher, "is a man so willing to take the burden from the weak shoulders of frail woman as when she is harassed with the care of a large and paying property."—Indianapolis Journal.

He—"The sight of an old school-mate is—er—well, it might be called both meat and drink." She—"Yes, that's what you men usually do under the circumstances." He—"Eh?" She—"Meet and drink."—Indianapolis Journal.

"I suppose classical music is all right in its place," said Maud. "I'm sure it is," replied Mamie; "I don't care to listen to it myself, but sometimes you have to play it in order to get a man to go home."—Washington Star.

"These shoes you sold me last week squeak so that they keep me awake nights," said the customer, entering the shoe-store. "My dear sir," replied the shoe-dealer, reassuringly, "you shouldn't sleep in them."—Yonkers Statesman.

Valet (to officer's fiancee)—"My lieutenant has sent me to bring you this bouquet of flowers plucked by his own hands." Fiancee—"Oh, how poetic! And how long it must have taken to gather them!" Valet—"Indeed, miss, it took me nearly three hours."

Clerk—"I wouldn't like to cut this piece of lace just for one yard, madam; and, besides, that isn't enough to trim anything." Shopper—"Oh! I didn't want it for trimming; but it's so nice to have a piece of lace about the house as an heirloom, you know."—Puck.

"Do you like being under the mistletoe?" he asked, tenderly, just after the thirty-ninth kiss. She looked into his eyes and sighed. "All I have to say," she murmured, "is that my last dying wish will be to have some of it planted on my grave." Then they resumed.—Puck.

"Why has Mrs. Langdon left her husband and gone back to her parents?" "She got to rummaging through his papers the other day and found the receipt for his first wife's engagement-ring. It cost twenty dollars more than he paid for the second one."—Chicago News.

African Explorer (dumbfounded)—"What, you, Clarence Vere de Vere, in the heart of darkest Africa! What in the world are you doing here?" Clarence Vere de Vere—"I'm wearing the necktie Miss Darling gave me for Christmas. I promised her I would, you know!"—Puck.

"You have been very generous in buying Mabel new gowns," remarked Mrs. Cumrox. "Yes," was the reply; "I don't like that man who pays her so much attention." "I don't see what that has to do with it." "I desire to give him something to think about when I ask him if he can support her in the style to which she has been accustomed."—Washington Star.

Papa Brindle—"Matilda, I seriously object to you encouraging the attentions of that young Spooler. He is the most rakish-looking youth I ever saw." Matilda—"What do you mean, papa?" Papa Brindle—"Why, I mean the way he wears his hat on one side." Matilda—"That isn't rakishness, papa." Papa Brindle—"What is it, then?" Matilda—"It's a boil."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"I never saw a man so cut up as old Rox is over the death of his book-keeper. And yet you have always said that he had no heart and regarded his employes as mere machines." "I'll tell you something on the quiet. The book-keeper was about three thousand dollars behind in his accounts, and old Rox was keeping him on and making him work it out."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Oh, pa!" exclaimed the dear girl, her sapphire eyes brimming with unshed tears, "how can you say that society is hollow?" "Why shouldn't I?" retorted pa, with a coarse laugh that betrayed the fact that he had paid more attention to making money than to acquiring polish—"why shouldn't I, when I have to pay the bills for feeding the gang that you have here at your blowouts?"—Indianapolis Journal.

Paris Cabs.

A citizen just returned from Paris describes a very ingenious device that has been adopted there for use in cabs. It is a register that indicates the exact distance automatically the cab travels on a trip, and at the end displays the amount of the legal fare for that distance, for the information of the passenger.

The day breaks but doesn't fail, while the night fails but doesn't break.

A PERFECT HOME SECURED AT LITTLE COST.

Ivan and Theodore Striovski, formerly residents of Michigan, but now living in Alameda, Western Canada, before taking up their home there visited the country as delegates. They reported to the Government of the Dominion of Canada the result of their observations, and from this report extracts have been taken, which are published below:

"We have visited a number of most desirable locations, and are highly pleased with the country as a whole, it being beyond our highest expectations. We find here a prosperous and well-contented lot of people. They have comfortable homes, and their vast fields of wheat and other crops in addition to their herds of choice cattle, indicate prosperity in the full sense of the word. In conversation with the farmers throughout our trip we learned that the majority of them came here with very limited means, and some with no more than enough to bring them here, and they are now well-to-do. They all claim that this is the only country for a poor man, or one with little means, to get a start and make a home for himself and family. As you are aware, we were a little shaky and undecided before leaving Detroit, but have determined since that we, with our friends, will make this country our future home. It is far from being the wilderness we had pictured it to be; it is, instead, a land having all the facilities required by modern civilization, such as railroads, markets, stores, churches, schools, etc., in fact, an ideal home for those having the future welfare of themselves and families at heart."

The Messrs. Striovski selected the Alameda district, but what they say of it applies in a general way to most other districts in that vast country. They speak of the fuel, which is to be had in great quantities, of the water that can be had by digging from ten to twenty feet, and of the good grazing land to be had almost everywhere. There is plenty of wood for building timber and for fuel, while coal is convenient, and sells at low prices at the mines. In driving through the country they passed many fine patches of wild raspberries, and say they can speak highly of their flavor, as they could not resist the temptation to stop and eat.

Having already transgressed on your valuable space, I shall defer further reference to Western Canada for another issue. An illustrated pamphlet recently issued by the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada, giving a complete description of the country, will be forwarded free to all who write for it.

Yours,
WESTERN CANADA.

The combined ages of six men who acted as pallbearers at the funeral of James Grigsby (himself 95 years old) recently in Indianapolis was 493 years. The men and their ages are as follows: T. M. Child, 86; J. F. Daugherty, 85; G. W. Ryan, 84; D. G. Kern, 79; D. Shearer, 77; J. L. Avery, 82.

To Denver in Less Than 28 Hours.—Only One Night En Route.—"The Colorado Special."

Beginning Sunday, February 6th, a new train will be placed in service between Chicago and Denver via the Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line, which will make the fastest schedule ever maintained between Chicago and Colorado's Capital City.

This train will be known as "The Colorado Special" and will leave Chicago via the Chicago & North-Western R'y at 10:00 A. M. every day and reach Denver at 7:30 the following afternoon, the west-bound time at certain intermediate stations to be approximately as follows: DeKalb, 11:33 A. M.; Clinton, 1:25 P. M.; Cedar Rapids, 3:30 P. M.; Belle Plaine, 4:30 P. M.; Tama, 4:55 P. M.; Marshalltown, 5:25 P. M.; Ames, 6:15 P. M.; Boone, 6:40 P. M.; Carroll, 8:25 P. M.; Mo. Valley, 10:40 P. M.; Council Bluffs, 11:20 P. M.; U. P. Transfer, 11:30 P. M.; Omaha, 11:55 P. M., all the same day. Eastbound, this train will leave Denver daily at 3:30 P. M. and reach Chicago at 8:45 the next evening. As connections will be made in the Union Depot at Denver to and from trains of all the Colorado lines, passengers will thus be afforded the very best opportunities for quick transit between Chicago and all points in Colorado and the west.

Train will be vestibuled throughout, lighted with Pintsch gas, and will consist of Drawing Room Sleeping Cars, Free Reclining Chair Cars, Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, coaches and Dining Cars serving all meals en route. A feature in connection with the service of this train, which will be appreciated by tourists, is that it will afford an opportunity for a daylight ride through the progressive and thickly settled portions of Illinois and Iowa, which has been impossible heretofore, as all trains for Denver have left Chicago in the evening.

Daily service to Denver via The Pacific Limited leaving Chicago 10:30 P. M. will be continued.

Demand for More Battleships.

The Secretary of the Navy has demanded more battleships, and there can be no doubt that Congress will consider his recommendations. Protection is what our sea ports require, and fortifications will not adequately supply this. Defense against all disorders of a malarial type is, however, adequately afforded by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an efficient remedy, also, for constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and nervousness.

A Clam's Brain.

It is only within a comparatively short time that the existence of an organ properly termed a brain in the lowest orders of animals has been recognized. Of course, very far down in the scale of creation one finds hardly more than a system of nerves and ganglia, with nothing especially recognizable as representing a brain. But even a clam may be said to have a sort of brain, though it is extremely small; it can be dissected and properly identified as the thinking center or principal ganglion of the creature. This principal nerve bunch or ganglion has direct control over the so-called "foot" of the clam. When it comes to the higher mollusks, such as the squid, nautilus, argonaut and other cephalopods, it is found that they possess quite large and well-developed brains.—Philadelphia Press.

A JOYFUL MOTHER OF CHILDREN.

Mrs. Pinkham Declares that in the Light of Modern Science no Woman Need Despair.

There are many curable causes for sterility in women. One of the most common is general debility, accompanied by a peculiar condition of the blood.

Care and tonic treatment of the female organs relieve more cases of supposed incurable barrenness than any other known method. This is why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has effected so many cures; its tonic properties are directed especially to the nerves which supply the uterine system. Among other causes for sterility or barrenness are displacements of the womb. These displacements are caused by lack of strength in the ligaments supporting the womb and the ovaries; restore these, and the difficulty ceases. Here, again, the Vegetable Compound works wonders. See Mrs. Lytle's letter, which follows in this column. Go to the root of the matter, restore the strength of the nerves and the tone of the parts, and nature will do the rest. Nature has no better ally than this Compound, made of her own healing and restoring herbs.

Write freely and fully to Mrs. Pinkham. Her address is Lynn, Mass. She will tell you, free of charge, the cause of your trouble and what course to take. Believe me, under right conditions, you have a fair chance to become the joyful mother of children. The woman whose letter is here published certainly thinks so:

"I am more than proud of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and cannot find words to express the good it has done me. I was troubled very badly with the leucorrhœa and severe womb pains. From the time I was married, in 1882, until last year, I was under the doctor's care. We had no children. I have had nearly every doctor in Jersey City, and have been to Belvidere Hospital, but all to no avail. I saw Mrs. Pinkham's advertisement in the paper, and have used five bottles of her medicine. It has done more for me than all the doctors I ever had. It has stopped my pains and has brought me a fine little girl. I have been well ever since my baby was born. I heartily recommend Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to all women suffering from sterility."—MRS. LUCY LYTLE, 255 Henderson St., Jersey City, N. J.

A good idea is to keep some Pearline in a sifter, ready to use for floor-washing, dish-washing, etc., etc. You sprinkle a little over the floor, for instance, and then just wash it over with a wet cloth. See how much more convenient to use than soap, to say nothing of the easier work!

If you're buying and using Pearline simply for washing clothes, and not for all kinds of washing and cleaning, you're cheating yourself out of a great deal of comfort and economy. 547

BONDS OF $100,000

(South Bend Times)

John M. Studebaker, of South Bend, and the American Trust and Savings Bank, of Chicago, as trustees of Winona Assembly, have decided to issue $100,000 of first mortgage bonds, running ten years, at five percent, with which to refund $45,000 outstanding bonds on present indebtedness and the surplus to be used in still further improvement of the grounds.

The capital stock of the Winona Assembly is $200,000, of which $103,000 is paid up. The assets are about $240,000 including the grounds, hotel, etc., at Eagle Lake. The features of the coming year will be the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Westminster creed, on which day 15 of the most noted divines of the Presbyterian church will deliver orations at Winona

The first gathering at Winona will begin May 17, and the general assembly, will follow on May 19.

HOME AGAIN.

Mr. Moody and his two boys and granddaughter Lucille, and brother O. S. Moody all made a call at this office today. And all are glad to be together again. We are pleased to find him looking well, much better than we were led to expect. He is not very enthusiastic as to the way some things are done at the prison, and speaks especially of the small acts of tyranny on the part of the imported deputy warden. That high toned official has now taken to burning all daily papers that come to the inmates, thus depriving them of one of the few consolatious left them. This ridiculously mean course should have the condemnation of every man in the state. We shall allude to the fellow some other day. Mr. Moody brings word that the other DeKalb boys are in good health and as well situated as could be expected. He saw them all just before he left. Mr. Moody met many friends, who greeted him home with heartiness, and we all hope to see him succeed in again establishing himself in his profession. His office will be in the second story of the Gaudy Block, the rooms formerly occupied by Steele & Son.

GAS WELLS.

The following letter has been received by Dr. Swarts in relation to the gas well matters.

VANBUREN, OHIO, Feb. 5th, 1898.
MESSRS. SWARTS & LACKEY,
Auburn, Ind.

GENTLEMEN:—Enclosed find some quotations on pipe. I can get 8 inch drive pipe for 65c per foot, 6⅝ casing at 30c per foot, 2 inch tubing at 6c per foot. And all necessary pipe at reduction. How are you prospering in soliciting? I am anxious to hear, hope you have the necessary amount for drilling a well, as I would like to start soon if I am to do the work. Since I arrived home I concluded that should we be fortunate in getting gas, I would take ¼, ½ or all of the stock at the actual cost. I would then pipe the town drill more wells and keep up the supply. I am a practical man in that line of business. I would move to Auburn and devote my time and attention to the plant. I would give a grand natural gas illumination and boom the town Now Dr. I think this is a very good offer, no person will have any responsibility except myself, if we get gas, if the share holders are so inclined.

Please answer. Yours Resp'y,

THOS. GARVIN.

Beginning Sunday, February 6th, a new train will be placed in service between Chicago and Denver via the Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line, which will make the fastest schedule ever maintained between Chicago and Colorado's Capital City.

This train will be known as "The Colorado Special" and will leave Chicago via the Chicago & North-Western R'y at 10:00 a. m. and reach Denver at 1:30 the following afternoon. Eastbound, this train will leave Denver daily at 3:30 p. m. and reach Chicago 8:45 the next evening, and as connections will be made in the Union Depot at Denver to and from trains of all the Colorado lines, passengers will be afforded the very best opportunities for quick transit between Chicago and all points in Colorado and the west.

Train will be vestibuled throughout lighted with Pintsch gas, and will consist of Drawing Room Sleeping Cars, Free Reclining Chair Cars, Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, coaches and Dining Cars serving all meals en route. A feature in connection with the service of this train, which will be appreciated by tourists, is that it will afford an opportunity for a daylight ride through the progressive and thickly settled portions of Illinois and Iowa, which has been impossible heretofore, as all trains for Denver have left Chicago in the evening.

Daily service to Denver via The Pacific Limited leaving Chicago 10:30 p. m. will be continued.

A BIG LOSS.

To All Northern Indiana By The Death Of Judge McClellan.

(Ft. Wayne Sentinel.)

In the death of Hon. Charles A. O. McClellan Northern Indiana suffers a loss that will be keenly felt for a long time. Judge McClellan had been of eminent service to the people of his county and, indeed of this great section of the state. He came here when men of his sturdy, progressive and self-reliant character and superior intellect were needed. He came in the early formative period of our society and, as all men like him, left his impress deep and lasting. Judge McClellan was conspicuously a successful man, both in his private affairs and in his capacity as a public servant. He represented the Twelfth district two terms in congress with signal ability and was not only a hard worker for his constituents, but was active and foremost in the important legislation of that time. Judge McClellan was not an aged man and that he was not spared to fill out the allotment of usefulness usually vouchsafed by nature deepens the public sorrow his death occasions.

THE WEBB CASE

This case is at last concluded. Last evening Judge Adair had concluded all the hearing and made his decision. He gave Mrs. Webb a divorce and custody of the three children. But the children are not to be removed from this judicial circuit without consent of the court, and they are also to have the privilege of visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Richards two weeks in a year. Mrs. Webb also gets $300 all money, which Mr. Webb is to pay in $5 monthly installments for five years.

A REMINISCENCE.

EDITOR COURIER:—The article taken from the Laporte Argus about the first train that passed through South Bend over the Lake Shore interested me.

This I suppose was over the old line from Toledo through Jonesville to Elkhart and to Chicago. The line through this part of the state I think was not finished before 1857 or 1858. However I find no fault with the statement. This article put the thinking cap on me as the old saying is. I remember of seeing the first train that passed over the Pittsburg. Ft. Wayne and Chicago R. R. in Eastern Ohio.

I am not prepared to say how far west the road was then finished, whether to Mansfield or Crestline, but I know that it was not finished to Ft. Wayne. The place where I saw this train was in Stark Co. about 8 miles west of Alliance. I then lived near the road and saw the men building it This was I think in 1851. I remember that the bonnet of the smokestack looked something like a big iron kettle. The way of knowing that the road was not finished to Ft. Wayne is this, for in moving from Stark Co. to DeKalb Co. we had to take a round about way. In '52 we moved to DeKalb Co.

We took the train at Louisville for Alliance, east there we had to change to go to Cleveland, and from there to Toledo. This was as far west as we went by rail. At Toledo we took the ever famous canal boat for Ft Wayne. These boats are built for speed, pleasure and comfort. As for speed we went a mile in about a certain time. While passing through the locks I would sometimes find myself standing on my head, this was for pleasure.

At other times I would be turning back summersaults this then was for comfort. At Fort Wayne our friends met us with a two seated rig drawn by two horses. This convenient rig was a big lumber wagon. At this time I was only about 5 years old. The memory in childhood is stronger than in old age. These occurrences have made, strong imrepssions on my mind.

H. A. WINSLOW.

Whirling Mice of Japan.

There is a certain breed of mice in Japan very sensitive and susceptible to impressions. Under proper conditions these little creatures will whirl like dervishes for hours at a time. They have been taken up by naturalists when in this condition and held stationary for several minutes, but will instantly resume the whirling when released.

AN OLD ENGINEER.
Run an Engine on the New York Central Forty-Three Years Ago—Cured by
Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER
GREENVILLE, MICH.—E. A. Smith, engineer for F. N. Wright & Co. this city, ran a locomotive on the N. Y. C. & H. R. Ry., 43 years ago. He can tell many amusing incidents of the rail in the early days; but prefers to speak of his recent experience with rheumatism, and relief secured from use of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. Mr. Smith is well advanced in years and his trouble had been so serious and of long standing that it became constitutional. He doctored and took all the different kinds of medicine suggested for the trouble, without any benefit. Recently he was advised to take Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; a nerve preparation which has been received with much favor in Montcalm County, and which has performed many remarkable cures. The effect of its use was highly satisfactory, not only in relieving his rheumatic pains, but also in correcting symptoms of kidney trouble which existed. It certainly is to be hoped that a knowledge of Mr. Smith's experience may lead other sufferers to use this valuable preparation.
Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has many virtues not possessed by any other form of treatment. It is entirely free from morphine, opium, cocaine; and the stimulating drug, kola, which is so persistently advertised. Such drugs are ruinous and should be avoided as pernicious.

THE LOUD BILL.

The New P. O. Bill Greatly Misunderstood.

We are under obligations to Congressman Robinson for copies of the "Loud Bill" now before the House. This bill is intended to make new regulations for the expense of maintaining the postal service and to stop the frauds now being perpetrated by big advertising firms, etc. The bill gets its name from its author, Mr. Loud of California, who is chairman of the "Committee on Post-Office and Post-Roads." The postoffice department is running behind not less than ten millions a year, and chiefly because great dealers and advertisers send thousands of tons of advertising matter, pamphlets, etc, through the mails at second class rates or 1 cent a pound. This is a fraud on the government, for even books by the ton are in this way carried by Uncle Sam, for only a trifle of the real cost. It is claimed that the average cost of carrying a pound of mail is about 8 cents, of which the 4th class matter pays double that, or 16 cents a pound. This class includes printed goods such as jobs of letter heads, envelops, flowers albums, blank books, etc.

Third-class pays the exact cost or 8 cents a pound, and includes books, circulars, pamphlets, almanacs, proofsheets, seeds, bulbs, etc, etc.

Second-class matter costs 1 cent a pound and includes all newspapers, magazines and periodicals published regularly by the day, week or month and sent regularly to subscribers. It is in this class that the fraud comes in.

First-class matter pays at the rate of 32 cents a pound, or 1 cent for each half ounce. This is letter postage, and articles in the cheaper classes must pay this rate if they contain writing that should go in a letter.

We have given this matter more space because, the proposed change in the postal law has been extensively misrepresented. It has been stated, it would ruin the business of country newspapers. We think not. It does not as some claim, require that a country paper must have a circulation of at least 500 subscribers who have paid in advance. The only object of the law seems to be, put a stop to the dead heading through the mails, of free advertising of all sorts. And this should be done.

HOW TO FIND OUT
Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. To frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.
WHAT TO DO.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamplet both sent free by mail Mention THE AUBURN COURIER, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co, Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuinness of this offer.

New Switch Board.

At the Central office of the Home Telephone Co., they have just received and put in place a new switch board. It is for toll use only, that is it is for outside towns. It is the latest thing in this line and consists of a bell for each town within a certain limit. There are twenty of these bells on this board, each bell being different in shape, or size or weight of metal from any other on the board. This is so that each shall have a different tone, and when a bell is sounded, the central operator knows at once by the sound, whether it is Garrett, Fort Wayne, St. Joe, Butler, Waterloo, Ashley, or any other town with which their system is connected. It very convenient. And as the bells are highly finished and symmetrically arranged, it makes a pretty piece of furniture.

MR. MEESE'S POSTAL

We have often alluded to the strange letters Rev. W. L. Meese receives from all parts of the world, since he became known so far by the matrimonial reunion. Recently, he brought us another and the queerest letter so far. This one is from Russia and we give elsewhere a facsimile of the direction side and a translation of the letter side, it being a postal card. The first head is in Russian with its French for the same right below it. Then follows the second head, in Russian with its French at the right, then at the bottom is a line in Russian followed by the French which says the same thing, viz, "Write the address only on this side." These French translations are on the postal cards, etc, in Europe, as the officials in all countries are supposed to know something of French, though they may not of Russian and other less known tongues.

Honesty and Virtue.
There is more honesty and virtue contained in a bottle of Salvation Oil, than in any other liniment known. "Mrs. A. Fiedler, 2864 Palethorp St., Philadelphia, Pa., confirms this truth: She found Salvation Oil to be an excellent remedy for rheumatism, stiff joints, bruises, etc., and thinks it should always be kept in the house." Don't listen to the dealer's arguments in favor of a substitute. Insist on getting Salvation Oil, it costs only 25 cts.

THE FIRST TELEGRAM

"What God Hath Wrought" Was The First Message Over The Wire.

An exchange calls up the old history Morses' first telegram. It says:

The correct date of Mr. Morse's experiment under a congressional appropriation is May, 1844. Howard F. Kennedy, who is the author of an official handbook of the capitol and perhaps knows as much of the history of the structure as anyone in Washington, recently received a letter describing the inauguration of the telegraph from Miss Annie Ellsworth of Malden, Mass. who was the first person to inform Mr. Morse of the passage of the congressional appropriation for the trial line, and who, on this account, was permitted to choose the first message to go over the wire. Miss Ellsworth, who was the daughter of Henry K. Ellsworth, then commissioner of patents, chose the historic words, "What hath God wrought?" She was present at the reception of the message in the capitol. The instrument used at the Washington end of the line was lost, but that employed at Baltimore is to be seen in the National Museum at Washington.

THE SURPRISE OF ALL

Mr. James Jones. of the drug firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with LaGrippe, and her case grew so serious that physicians at Cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develop into Hasty Consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from first dose, and half dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumtion, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to do this good work Free trial bottles at McCord's Drugstore

ARTESIAN WELLS IN SAHARA.

May Involve Important Political. Climatical and Economical Changes.

Artesian wells sunk in the desert appear to find an abundant supply of water without going very deep for it, and this fact may in time put a new face on desert conditions, involving important political, climatic and economical consequences, says the New York Tribune. The English have begun sinking them along the Berber-Suakim road, finding water there as abundant as it was in the regions near the Nile when their first experimental wells were put down. Flowing under the Saharan sands there may be water enough to fertilize oases all over its sterile expanse and rescue it in a measure from its historic barenness and desolation. Some years ago a French engineer proposed to cut a canal from the Mediterranean to the lower desert levels, thus creating a new inland sea, or, rather, restoring an old one, but for some reason the project was abandoned. Local irrigation by means of artesian borings is a more judicious expedient and the English having pointed the way in this direction the French are quite likely to follow it. Only a narrow desert belt separates their possessions in north and middle Africa, reaching from the Mediterranean to the Niger, and it is quite worth their while to fertilize and plant it with palm groves and date orchards, if possible; at any rate to provide water enough to supply their present caravans and perhaps their future locomotives.

THE SPANISH MINISTER.

The Spanish Minister at Washington has been called to come home.

It is a short story and soon told. He was imprudent enough to write a private letter to a friend in which he criticised the president of the United States, the government to which he was sent, by Spain. This is always considered an insult to the government in any country. And ministers to foreign capitals are always very careful not to take any chances in such ways. But they now and then are caught doing this very thing. The Spanish Minister, DeLome, is an able man, and has been at Washington a long time, and has always been highly regarded by our government, and very popular with our people. And even the strained relations between ourselves and Spain since the Cuban troubles began have not lessened our regard for the Spanish representative. Of course he did not look at the Cuban matter as we do. But he was always careful and respectful as to what he said, for a hasty word from him might get the two nations into trouble. A little spark would kindle a big fire just now. But at last he was careless enough to write to a friend, a former member of the Spanish Cabinet, who had just been visiting him, and then went to Havana. DeLome thought no one would ever see this private letter, and in it he spoke of McKinley as "weak and catering to the rabble, and besides a low politician." It is strange that he should have said this even if he believed it, and also believed his letter would never be seen. But it appears the letter never reached his friend, but was stolen from the mails when it landed in Havana, and at once published. Our own government at once asked Spain, by cable to have him recalled and sent home which has been done. This will probably end his career as a diplomat, for it is the custom of most nations to retire a man whom they are obliged to call home from nation to which he has been sent. Had our own government ordered him to go, it would not have hurt him as much, for in that case Spain could still have sent him as minister to some other country. Of course the Spaniards will be pleased at his coarse criticism of the President and many give him a high place at home. But he will hardly be a minister to any other country.

Wonders Never Cease.

No one need suffer the tortures of rheumatism, because that modern liniment, Salvation Oil, positively cures it. "I was a great sufferer from sciatic rheumatism, and the best of doctors attended me without relief. I commenced using Salvation Oil, and two bottles helped me wonderfully. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of consumption and sick headache. For Malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranted to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c per box. Sold at Robbins & McCord's drug store.

Italian Prince an Electrician.

The prince of Naples is perhaps the only real electrician among all the present princes of Europe. He is very learned in all that concerns the application of electricity to light, motive power, sound and photography. He was one of the first and most successful experimenters with the X rays after their discovery and in Rome his residence in the Quirinal had the aspect during his royal highness' bachelor days of a scientific laboratory.

Got It.

A Georgia pastor, who resigned because he couldn't collect his salary, said in his farewell sermon: "I have little else to add, dear brethren, save this: You were all in favor of free salvation and the manner in which you have treated me is proof that you got it."—New York Tribune.

GOES TO WARSAW

Auburn's Popular Band Master, Milo Calkin Gets a Good Position

There will be an important change in the Auburn Band, for its leader, Milo Calkin is soon to go to Warsaw. He has accepted an offer to be leader of the Fourth Regiment Band, which is located at Warsaw and is the band for the Forth Indiana Regiment of National Guard. He will have a good salary there, and will besides have a large class of pupils in instrumental music. In addition to this, he may and likely will, become the leader of the Warsaw orchestra which will furnish the music for the Winona Assembly at Eagle Lake this summer. Altogether Mr. Calkin is in a good way to get a big combined salary. We are glad to note his good fortune, for he is a good musician and band leader. He has a house rented in a desirable location on the banks of the Center Lake at the north edge of the city, and will move soon. He has resigned his place here as director and as leader, and leaves with the best of feeling between him and the band. We are told there are already two or three applicants for the position made vacant by his resignation, and the place will soon be filled by the directors, so that the interests of our own band will be as actively promoted as ever.

Her Good Reason.

He—"What makes you think me a fool about women?" She—"Because you're silly enough to think that you know all about them."—Detroit Free Press.

AN HONORED OLD AGE.

Yesterday Mrs. Ward was seventy-five years old, and though there was no regular party given in her honor, some of the friends, Mrs. L. E. Lane and the Keeran sisters among them, made her an appropriate gift of lovely flowers. Mrs. Ward is passing her later years in a serene and happy manner, just what a person of her temperament would enjoy best. And on occasions like this she calls up the old days and experiences and has many interesting recollections. She and her husband Elder Ward came to this county fifty-six years ago and settled first in Wilmington township. The forests were then full of wild animals includwolves, panthers and bears. Mr. Ward killed one of the latter. Neighbors were far away and yet Mrs. Ward recalls that sometimes the "fire on the hearth" would die out and they would have to make a hurried trip off to a neighbor, through the woods to get fire to rekindle on her own hearth. There were no matches to be had then. This little item alone, shows how many and how important are the changes covered by a life of seventy-five years. We hope for her many returns of her birthday and years of enjoyment in the land she and her husband have done much for.

Ecclesiastical Controversy.

"The amusing denunciation of football by a rector of the established church as a device of Satan reminds me," writes a correspondent, "that the 'game of bowls' is mentioned by Strype in his "Memorials of Archbishop Cranmer' as among the 'arts adopted to procure the archbishop's recantation of protestantism.' 'They set the doctors of the university upon him. He was entertained at the dean of Christ's church, his lodging; then they treated him with good fare. They got him to bowls with them.'"—London Westminster Gazette.

THEN AND NOW

It will be remembered that Judge Lochren, when commissioner of Pensions decided that Judge Long, of the supreme bench of Michigan was not entitled to a pension of $72, but reduced him to $50 a month. At once, the country was filled with fierce criticisms of Lochren. Now Lochren is out of office and Evans is his successor. So Judge Long appeals his case to Evans in hope to have his $72 a month restored. But Evans decides against Long, exactly as Lochren did. But little is said about it. The chances are that Evans decided properly, and that Locren did also. The difference that caused one to be criticised, and the other not, is that Lochren is a democrat and Evans a republican. Pensions should always be liberal but not illegal no matter which party is in power.

A Golden Pagoda.

At Rangoon, the capital of Burmah, is situated the famous golden pagoda of a Buddhist temple, the whole of the exterior of which is one mass of shimmering gold. This generous coating of the metal is the result of years and years of votive offerings to Buddha, for devotees from all parts of the world go to Rangoon and take packets of gold leaf, which they place on the pagoda. During the last century Tshewbyo Yen, the King of Burmah, gave his weight in gold to the walls of the pagoda, an offering worth £9,000 sterling.

WANTED OYSTERS.

Children are funny. For example, not long ago, our schools had public literary exercises and when visitors began to throng into one of the primary rooms, one little girl came up to the teacher and earnestly asked. "Say teacher, aint you going to have oysters?" In some surprise at the question, the teacher asked what the little one meant. "Why, oysters," said she "the men they have to show us our seats at the Opera House." And that shed light on a difficult question. The little wisehead wanted to see things conducted in a dignified manner and have "ushers" as they do at the Opera House.

Marble Ponds of Persia.

That beautiful transparent stone called Tabriz marble, much used in the burial places of Persia and in their grandest edifices, consists of petrified water of ponds in certain parts of the country. This petrifaction may be traced from its commencement to its termination; in one part the water is clear, in a second it appears thicker and stagnant, in a third quite blacker, and in its last stage it is white like frost. When the operation is complete a stone thrown on its surface makes no impression, and one may walk over it without wetting one's shoes. The substance thus produced is brittle and transparent, and sometimes richly striped with red, green and copper color. So much is this marble, which may be cut into large slabs, looked upon as a luxury that none but the king, his sons and persons especially privileged are permitted to take it.

A Comparison

The Goshen Democrats says: The snow drifts in the vicinity of Laporte were never so deep or numerous before in the history of the oldest inhabitant.

Here in Auburn the mud was never much deeper.

Edible Oil of Egypt.

In Egypt and the Soudan, in India and all through the east an enormous trade is carried on in vegetable oils, which take the place of our butter and margarine products. One of the principle edible oils is obtained from the ground nut, known in France as "arachide oil." Over 1,000,000 hundredweight of these nuts are annually imported into that country for its production. Belgium also takes vast quantities. Arachide oil is an excellent soap maker, besides being an edible oil, and when cotton oil is high in price will compete well with it in this branch of industry. In France alone there is already a very large consumption of it, to be counted in tens of thousands of tons.

Sure Thing.

The Hicksville News says:

The representatives of the National telephone company have secured the desired amount of pledged patronage and now it will be but a few weeks under till this city and St. Joe will be connected. This will give splendid service to all western points, likewise Antwerp, Paulding, Defiance and Toledo. Maysville, Newville, Spencerville, Ft. Wayne, St. Joe, Auburn, Kendallville, Garrett and a number of other towns will be on the western connection. In case the Union Central fails to put in a local system this company will.

Whirling Mice of Japan.

There is a certain breed of mice in Japan very sensitive and susceptible to impressions. Under proper conditions these little creatures will whirl like dervishes for hours at a time. They have been taken up by naturalists when in this condition and held stationary for several minutes, but will instantly resume the whirling when released.

—Dan Swihart one of our Junction friends came up town today. He is still nursing a very sore hand. It was hurt several weeks ago in a curious way. He was catching some chickens when a big Plymouth Rock rooster objected to being handled and caught Mr. Swihart's left hand with his strong sharp claws. It made a slight wound at first but became a serious sore and he has had to treat it ever since.

Since speaking of Mr. Calkin yesterday we learn some additional facts as to his work in his new location, Warsaw. When there, the other day, the leaders of the band showed him every favor, took him about and introduced him, and have indicated where he can get a large number of pupils, making a very profitable class The band itself has thirty-five members and he will be at the head of the Warsaw Orchestra that furnishes music for Winona Assembly. It will be seen that he will not only have a good position from a financial standpoint, but will be in the most prominent position in musical circles.

—The ground hog was in duty bound to go back into his "dugout" and stay there six weeks. But as we have had several days of sunshine since Feb. 2, we suppose the woodchuck has lost his grip on the weather.

—Among the handsome decorations at the M. E. church basement there was a fine curtain which took fire from a candle last night and soon blazed up to the ceiling. Had the burning not been noticed it might have caused some damage.

DE LOME'S JOB GONE.

His Resignation Accepted by the Spanish Cabinet.

At a meeting of the Spanish Cabinet held at Madrid under the auspices of the Queen Regent, the Minister of Foreign Affairs Senor Cullon, read a dispatch from Senor Dupuy De Lome, the Spanish Minister at Washington, saying that the published letter to Senor Canalejas was written by him and that his position, consequently, had become untenable and he begged the Government to accept his resignation. The Cabinet decided to accept the resignation of Senor Dupuy De Lome, and the ministers subsequently met and decided to telegraph to Senor De Lome accepting his resignation and entrusting the First Secretary with the conduct of the current affairs of the legation.

All the newspaper comments on the subject bitterly denounce "the business of stealing and publishing a private letter." After the Cabinet Council, the Premier, Senor Segasta, told the correspondent of the Associated Press that Senor Dupuy DeLome had "bravely" admitted the authors hip of the letter.

Gold Going to Waste.

Under date of Circle City, Oct. 7, Capt. Ray reports to the authorities in Washington: "From what I learned from mine owners and prospectors I am fully satisfied that the greater part of the gold belt lies in our territory along the range known as Upper Ramparts, and that along the Tananah, Manok Creek, Birch Creek and the head of Forty Mile there are diggings that pay from $10 to $20 per day per man, now lying idle, but they will not pay expenses at the present price of food. I am satisfied that with adequate means of transportation and cheaper food this will develop into one of the greatest gold producing regions in the world."

Railroads Not Liable.

Judge Payne of Chicago, has handed down a decision in the case of John D. Blank against the Illinois Central Railroad Company for $5,000 damages, in which he held that an employe of a corporation has a right to sign an agreement waiving all claims for damages even if injury results from the gross negligence of employer. Blank was an express messenger. He ran on the Illinois Central train from Chicago to Sioux City, Iowa, and was hurt in a collision Jan. 15, 1896. His injuries were so severe he is now helpless.

Mingle Hanged.

James Mingle, who murdered the infant Dollie Briscoe, and at the time made an attempt on the life of the child's mother, was hanged at Springfield, Ill. Mingle showed nerve to the last. From the scaffold he said: "I'm not only on a journey to meet my child in Heaven. I'm going to my baby, and my little woman will join me soon, for she has not long to live. She will meet me; she has forgiven me. I forgive all. I'm going to Heaven, where I hope to meet you all." Mingle's neck was broken by the fall.

Booth at the White House.

Gen. William Booth, Commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, and father-in-law of Commander Frederick D. Booth-Tucker, of the American Army, arrived in Washington, and called on President McKinley at the White House. The President, in the course of the interview, expressed to General Booth his great admiration for him and for the great work of the Salvation Army.

SCARE MAKES TRADE GOOD.

France, Germany, Russia, and Great Britain Buy Tons of Beef.

The officials of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company of San Francisco say that within the last few days there has been an astonishing increase in the shipment of food supplies to the Orient, consequent upon the gathering in China waters of the English, German, French and Russian warships. They also state that a few days ago a representative of the English Government placed an order in Kansas City for 2,000 tons of beef to be sent to the English fleet in China waters. The Russian Government has given a big order to two Chicago houses for canned goods and beef, part of which will be sent from San Francisco to the Orient and the remainder by way of Vancouver or Seattle. The agent of the Russian Government has an order for 1,200 tons of beef. This order for canned goods is intended as part of the supplies for the Russian troops now being sent from Odessa to the Manchurian frontier. Agents of the French and German Governments have also placed orders for meat supplies both in Omaha and Chicago.

MISSING MAN COMES BACK.

Reappearance of Galena, Kan., Man Complicates Matters.

Great excitement prevails in Galena, Kan., over the appearance in the city of Tyler Gaviett, who disappeared last March from the Windsor stock farm, owned by Solon L. Cheney, one of the most prominent citizens of the county. At the time neighbors took charge of Gaviett's crops and other property and disposed of it, and circulated the report that Cheney had murdered him. County Attorney Charles Stevens, in the absence of Cheney, searched the place for the body. This act led to an assault upon Perry Stevens, brother of the county attorney, by Cheney, for which a $30,000 damage suit is now pending. Upon his arrival Gaviett immediately secured warrants for the arrest of County Attorney Stevens and five others, charging them with stealing his property. The appearance of Gaviett removes the cloud from Cheney and leaves his accusers in a bad predicament.

RESCUED IN MIDOCEAN.

Crew of Sinking Bark Metcalf Brought to New York.

The Fabre Line steamer Burgundia arrived at New York from Mediterranean ports and brought safely to port sixteen seamen who were rescued in midocean from their sinking craft. They were Capt. Larsen and fifteen of the crew of the Norwegian bark B. D. Metcalfe, from Savannah for Hamburg. Capt. Larsen says he sailed from Savannah Dec. 10 with a cargo of naval stores. "When three days out from Savannah," the Captain said, "the vessel encountered a strong gale and began to leak. The bark put into Bermuda, where she was thoroughly calked, sailing again Jan. 22. Ten days after leaving Bermuda we met a gale from the north and northwest, with enormous seas. We were obliged to put the vessel before the gale, as she was laboring heavily and had sprung a leak again. After a most distressing experience the crew was taken off by the Bergundia."

ROBBED OF DIAMONDS.

Mrs. James C. West of New York Suffers Loss at St. Louis.

The St. Louis police report that Mrs. James O. West of New York, who is visiting at the home of Frank L. Norton, has suffered the loss of $7,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry, which were taken by sneak thieves while the family was at dinner. Mrs. West is an aunt of Mr. Norton. The jewels stolen were collected during years of travel in all parts of the world, and could not be duplicated for many times their purchase price. The robbers failed to find $23,000 worth of jewelry that was locked up in a cabinet. A diamond necklace valued at $7,000 was concealed in a hatbox under the bed. Among the articles stolen from Mrs. West were a number of costly gems purchased in Egypt last summer. It is said that connoisseurs considered Mrs. West's collection of Egyptian jewelry second only to that owned by Sarah Bernhardt.

ADULTERATED FLOUR.

Much of the High-Priced Article Said to Be Mixed with Corn Meal.

An investigation by the Chicago Health Department discloses the fact that much of the high-priced flour used in that city is mixed with cornmeal and inferior grades of spring wheat. For several weeks complaints have been made by bakers and others that it was impossible to produce good bread. The fault is charged to the millers who are accused of using inferior grades of wheat without making a corresponding reduction in the price of flour. This is one of the peculiar incidents in the great wheat deal in which a powerful syndicate, headed by Joseph Leiter, has purchased a large percentage of the high grade wheat and is holding it for a decided rise in price. The Minneapolis Board of Health is making a similar investigation.

Indian Girls Sentenced.

Elizabeth Flanders and Fannie Eaglehorn, the two Indian students at the Carlisle, Pa., Indian school, who have been confined in the county jail for arson, were sentenced, each to pay a fine of 6 cents and costs and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern penitentiary for eighteen months in the solitary cells. These girls attempted to burn the girls' quarters last November. They stated before the court the reason for their crime—homesickness—thinking that for burning the building Capt. Pratt would send them home.

Murdered His Sweetheart's Father.

John Schofield shot and instantly killed Peter Pfeffer at the latter's home in Louisville. Schofield was in love with Pfeffer's daughter. The girl's father opposed his suit and ordered him to leave the house. Schofield drew a revolver, and placing it against Pfeffer's left breast, fired, killing him instantly. Schofield escaped, and the police have been unable to find any trace of him.

Killed by His Tenant.

Dr. William McCoy, of Lincoln, Neb., was shot and killed near Spaner postoffice, Okla. McCoy and his tenant, John W. Crandall, were living in the same house. Crandall had been away from home much of the time lately and on returning his wife told him of many acts of cruelty that Dr. McCoy had heaped upon her. The first time that McCoy came from his room Crandall shot him dead.

National Convention of Labor.

Sheriff Feared Lynchers

Dr. S. H. Sampson, or Samson, was removed from the village jail at Laurelville, O., to the Hocking County jail at Logan as a precaution against lynching pending the coroner's investigation of the death of Bessie Neff, found dead in the doctor's office.

Another Mysterious Case.

The mutilated body of a man was found in the East River at New York. Half of the head was missing, the right leg was cut off at the hip, the left at the knee, and both arms were gone, having been cut off close to the shoulder. The police believe that another murder mystery of a similar character to the recent Guldensuppe case has been unearthed by this discovery. The man had apparently been strangled to death, stabbed with some sharp instrument, thought to be a stiletto, and then cut to pieces. The body had been in the water for a week or more. It is that of a man about 5 feet 8 inches tall, broad shoulders and muscular body. The portion of the scalp which still remains was covered with sandy hair. The corpse appeared to be that of a laboring man. The entire front part of the head was cut off. Inspector Cross said he was positive the man had been murdered and that the mutilation was to conceal the identity of the victim. The body was discovered by a deck hand named Peterson, employed on the ferryboat Wyoming, and with the help of a policeman it was removed from among the floating logs in the water.

KAISER MAKES A DEAL.

Chinese Give Him Very Valuable Concessions of Land and Privileges.

A dispatch to the New York Herald from Pekin says: The imperial edict issued at the demand of the German Minister being held to be unsatisfactory a second edict was issued on Feb. 1. In this the Emperor expressed regret at the murder of the two German missionaries at Kiao-Chou. The unfortunate crime, he said, was committed by banditti in Shantung province. He had already punished the Governor and the local officials. Permission has been granted to build three churches and seven houses for the missionaries and orders have been issued to all officials to protect the missions. According to the treaty with Germany there has been ceded to that country the bay of Kiau-Chou and a zone of territory thirty miles wide for the construction of a railway 200 miles long from Kiao-Chou to Chinan Fu (Shantung).

TO PRISON FOR LIFE.

THE JURY DECLARES LUETGERT GUILTY OF MURDER.

Verdict Makes the Penalty a Penitentiary Term—Prisoner Appears to Be Satisfied to Have Escaped the Gallows—Guatemala's President Slain.

Takes It Calmly.

Adolph L. Luetgert, the Chicago sausage maker, is guilty of wife murder. After five hours of deliberation the jury agreed upon this verdict. Half an hour before midnight Wednesday each of the twelve men rose in his seat in the jury box in Judge Gary's court and declared that beyond the question of a reasonable doubt he believed the prisoner had taken the life of his wife, Louise Luetgert, on the night of May 1. The prisoner sat without a sign of emotion and met the gaze of each juror without a tremor. If anything, a look of gratitude and relief was noticeable on his face. He had expected the death penalty if convicted.

The first intimation that a verdict had been arrived at, says a Chicago dispatch, was brought by one of the bailiffs from the jury room on the sixth floor. The jury wanted to see Judge Gary. This was shortly before 11 o'clock. The scene in the court room and State's attorney's office was instantly changed from a rollicking gathering of those connected with the case to an anxious, expectant crowd. State's Attorney Deneen and Mr. McEwen came into the court room promptly and took their places at the west end of the counsel's table, which they occupied during the trial. Mr. Harmon, Mr. Kehoe and Mr. Reise gathered at the opposite side. William Charles was nearby with an anxious look on his haggard face. Behind him sat Arnold Luetgert, the defendant's son, equally agitated. Dr. Reise and others interested in the defense were grouped about them. In the midst of them a chair was left for Luetgert. Inspector Schaack, Captain Schuettler and many of the officers who have worked on the case were on hand.

Judge Gary arrived at 11:20 o'clock, and he promptly ordered every one to sit down and maintain silence. The last strain of the trial had come, and the silence became oppressive, while the wait for Luetgert and the jury continued. No one ventured to break this, except Mr. Harmon, who objected to the draft from one of the open windows, and asked the bailiff to close it. Luetgert came into court closely guarded by five bailiffs, and took his position near the private entrance to the court room. Attorney Harmon requested that he should take his place with his counsel, and the prisoner complied. He was looking pale and anxious, and showed the effects of the severe strain under which he has labored.

Juror Snow was the first to appear, a few minutes later. The solemn expression on the faces of the twelve men seemed to show that they had decided on a verdict of guilty. Juror Bachelor carried a bundle of papers, the instructions and verdict. Another wait of five minutes, more silent than the first, occurred, while Luetgert was being brought over from the jail. Juror Bolek bowed his head as if suffering from the long strain. Juror Loeb's face was swollen and red as if he had been weeping.

Judge Gary addressed the jurors: "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?" Juror Bachelor rose and replied, "We have, your honor." The momentous piece of paper was handed to the clerk, who read:

"We, the jury, find Adolph L. Luetgert guilty of murder in the form and manner charged in the indictment, and fix the punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for the rest of his natural life."

A look of intense relief a tthis announcement passed over the face of the prisoner, who seemed glad that he had escaped the death penalty. Mr. Harmon promptly rose and requested that the jury be polled. This was done by the clerk, and each juror announced that he concurred in the verdict. Mr. Harmon then gave notice that in due time he would file notice for a new trial. The jury were then discharged by Judge Gary.

"That is only half a victory and half a defeat," said Mr. Harmon. "It was unjustifiable from either standpoint, and a compromise. We asked for an acquittal or a conviction, and there could be only one conclusion if he was really guilty." Luetgert's lawyers regard the verdict as a compromise on the part of the jury and look upon it as a victory for their client. Luetgert was immediately surrounded by his friends as he stood up in court, and they shook him heartily by the hand and congratulated him that he had escaped the death penalty. They plainly showed their satisfaction with the outcome of the trial.

The big prisoner all this time was closely guarded by bailiffs, who when the short scene was over led him back to his cell in the jail.

FALL VICTIMS TO FLAMES.

Explosion of Whisky Wrecks a Pittsburg Warehouse.

By an explosion of 2,000 barrels of whisky in Pittsburg at 11:30 o'clock Wednesday night over a score of persons were buried under tons of brick and mortar and it is estimated that twenty-five lives were lost. The property loss is nearly $2,000,000. The Government bonded warehouse was burned, 2,000 barrels of whisky exploded, and the falling walls crushed the adjoining tenements, all the occupants of which were either killed or injured.

After the warehouse wall fell in a large ammonia tank shot out of the burning building and fell on a small house in an alley, crushing in the roof and two stories, and leaving the four walls standing. The house was occupied by the Sipe family. Rescuers dug into the cellar and found the body of Sidney Sipe, 15 years old. The father was standing upright jammed in by timbers. He was cut out with axes and found to be alive. N. C. Scott, son of W. S. Scott, president of Chautauqua Lake Ice Company, was looking at the fire with his brother. He was killed by the falling wall. His body was recovered, but his brother is still missing. William Rubenstein's body was recovered and identified. The body of one fireman unidentified is at the morgue. Thomas Lynch's scalp was torn off by flying debris. He is still alive. Lieut. Roseland of the fire company was giving orders to his men when the ammonia tank blew out of the warehouse building and took off both his legs at the knees. Police Lieutenant Berry's body was the first recovered. All the dead were crushed. The ammonia tanks exploded at intervals of a few minutes with reports that were heard miles away.

The following is the best list of losses obtainable to-night: Hoveler Storage Company, building and contents, $600,000; Chautauqua Ice Company, $150,000; Union Storage Company, $1,000,000; small Penn avenue houses, $25,000, making a total of $1,775,000, all of which was well insured, mostly through the agency of W. G. McCandless & Co. Some of the heaviest individual losers who had consignments in the warehouses are: The Economy Distilling Company, 8,000 barrels of whisky, worth $75,000; Monongahela Textile Company; wool dealers, 125,000 pounds of wool; Collins Cigar Company, 25 car loads of tobacco; W. H. Williams, commission merchant, twenty cars loads of sugar.

BARRIOS IS SLAIN.

President of the Republic of Guatemala Slaughtered.

President Barrios of Guatemala has been assassinated.

Lajo Arriaga, the Guatemalan minister to the United States, Wednesday afternoon received an official cablegram from the minister of foreign affairs of Guatemala announcing the assassination of President Barrios and the succession to the presidency of First Vice-President Manuel Estrada Cabrera. No details whatever were given. The dispatch came from Guatemala City, the capital, where President Barrios has lived and the Government departments are carried on. It added that entire calm prevails.

President Barrios was a man of wide attainments and marked executive ability. He was comparatively young, being only 42 years old. The six years' term of service for which he was elected terminated March 15 next, but the national congressional assembly already had extended this term for a further four years.

The new president, Mr. Cabrera, is a man of prominence in Guatemala, and is one of two chosen by the congress to fill the presidency in case of a vacancy. The system of the country is different from that in the United States, there being no vice-president elected with the president. The duty of filling the executive chair devolves on the congressional branch, and accordingly two vice-presidents, first and second, were designated some time ago. They are eligible in the order of their choice. When the excitement of the tragedy has passed a presidential election may be held.

The assassination of President Barrios probably is due to the revolutionary feeling which has been growing in Guatemala ever since he declared himself dictator last June. One of the first acts of the rebels was the assassination of the president's brother in San Jose, and the murder of the wife of the jefe politico of Quezaltenango. Following closely on these two crimes came the capture of Plaza San Marcos by the revolutionists. To the dissatisfaction since President Barrios proclaimed himself dictator the bad financial condition of the country under his rule has added fuel to the flames of discontent. The dead dictator had been straining every effort to restore peace and harmony, but had been thwarted by an assassin.

MASON WANTS A WAR.

Introduces a Resolution Demanding of Spain Immediate Peace in Cuba.

In the Senate the other day, Mason of Illinois presented the following:

"Resolved, That the President of the United States is hereby requested to notify Spain and the insurgents that the Cuban war, so called, must at once cease, and be discontinued, and the United States of America hereby declares and will maintain peace on the island."

This resolution is preceded by a long preamble setting forth the horrors of war as it exists in Cuba, declaring that "all Christendom is shocked by its barbarities." It sets forth the refusal by the insurgents of the pretended autonomy; asserts that "daughters of insurgent soldiers are sold into houses of infamy and women and children debauched and threatened beyond the power of language to describe." It tells of the sufferings of the concentrados, declaring that the flag of truce has been abandoned and the struggle narrowed to extermination or independence; pointing out the necessary expenditure of large sums by the United States to succor its citizens in the island, and quoting the Cuban paragraph from the last Republican national platform.

A four-story rear tenement in New York City was destroyed by fire. Seven families lost everything they owned and two children were burned to death. They were Tony, 3 years old, and Michael, a year younger, the children of Fillippo Spoinelle, a bootblack living with his wife and three children on the top floor.

Friday was private bill day in the House, but by systematic filibustering the private calendar containing the bills reported by the Committee on Claims was not reached, the whole day and evening being consumed in passing thirty-seven private pension bills favorably acted upon by the House at the session last Friday night. During the consideration of one of the bills an interesting discussion of the sale of the Kansas Pacific Road was precipitated by Mr. Fleming (Dem., of Georgia), who, with his Democratic colleagues, desired legislation to require the President to bid the full amount of the debt, principal and interest. Mr. Powers, chairman of the Pacific Railroad Committee, contended that the real purpose of the opposition was to compel the Government to take the road and operate it. He said he thought the administration, which had secured every dollar owing from the Union Pacific, could be safely trusted to protect the Government's interest at the sale of the Kansas Pacific. In the Senate no business of importance was transacted in the brief open session. After the executive session of three hours the Senate adjourned until Monday.

The House during its entire session of Saturday had under consideration the bill making appropriations for fortifications and coast defenses. Little interest seemed to be manifested in the proceedings, less than one-half of the members being present during the session. The bill was passed. It carries $4,144,012, against $9,517,141 last year. The Senate was not in session.

On Monday the House passed the military academy bill with only one important amendment. The debate on the measure was desultory and touched a variety of political topics. The bill carries $453,540, being $26,032 less than the amount carried by the current law. The bill to limit the period for the refunding of the certificates of deposit of 1879 to Dec. 31, 1899, was passed. In the Senate Mr. Chandler presented a memorial prepared in 1874 by the late Admiral Worden, who, as a lieutenant in the navy, commanded the Monitor in the historic fight in Hampton Roads between that vessel and the ironclad Merrimac. Mr. Chandler said that Admiral Worden conceived the idea that it would be proper for the Government of the United States to pay to the officers and crew of the Monitor the sum of $200 each, in the nature of prize money, but after having prepared the memorial concluded not to present it to Congress lest his motives might be misconstrued. The Hawaiian question consumed most of the day.

In the Senate on Tuesday Mr. Allen offered as an amendment to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill a resolution recognizing the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents. Mr. Cannon offered a resolution urging the President to notify Spain that if it did not recognize the independence of the Cuban republic before March 4 the United States would recognize the belligerency of the Cubans and within ninety days thereafter would assert the independence of the Cuban republic. Mr. Mason followed with a resolution requesting the President to notify Spain that the Cuban war must cease at once and to declare the intention of the United States to restore and maintain peace on the island. The House entered upon consideration of the Aldrich-Plowman contested election case from the fourth Alabama district. The majority of the committee reported in favor of seating the Republican candidate on the ground of conspiracy, an allegation vigorously denied by Democrats. Mr. Plowman's plurality on the face of the returns was 2,967. The majority revised the figures so as to give Mr. Aldrich a plurality of 342. Messrs. Taylor of Ohio and Mann of Illinois spoke for the majority, and Messrs. Fox of Mississippi and Settle of Kentucky for the minority.

In the House on Wednesday the Aldrich-Plowman contested election case from the Fourth Alabama District was settled by the passage of a resolution declaring Mr. Aldrich (Rep.), the contestant, entitled to the seat. The vote was on party lines. Cuban debate consumed the whole day in the Senate. Speeches were made by Messrs. Cannon, Mason and Hale.

The House was in a very bad temper Thursday, and the whole session was consumed in filibustering against two bills of minor importance—one to issue a duplicate check, and the other to make Rockland, Me., a subport of entry. Neither got further than the engrossment and third reading. Finally, when it became evident that no progress could be made with the bills presented, an adjournment was taken until Monday. During almost the entire session of the Senate the Indian appropriation bill was under discussion. The reading of the bill was completed, and all of the committee amendments were adopted. Subsequently several amendments of a minor character were attached to the measure. Mr. Allen of Nebraska enlivened the proceedings a few minutes before adjournment by making an attack upon Speaker Reed for preventing the enactment, as the Nebraska Senator declared, of meritorious legislation, sent to the House of Representatives by the Senate. He denounced the Speaker's action in this regard as a "disgrace" to Congress and to the American people.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

OCCURRENCES DURING THE PAST WEEK.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties and General News Notes of the State.

Militia Affairs.

James K. Gore Adjutant General, announces that infantry companies have been mustered into service and assigned as follows: Company F, First Infantry, Roachdale; Company G, First Infantry, Brownstown; Company D, Third Infantry, North Manchester; Company L, Third Infantry, Ligonier. The new battery company at Dana is known as Battery C, First Artillery. Battery C, First Artillery, Rockville, whose term of service has expired, has been mustered out. The following infantry companies having fallen below the standard efficiency have been mustered out: Company F, First Infantry, Brazil; Company L, First Infantry, Scottsburg; Company C, Second Infantry, Anderson.

It is also announced that for insubordination and breach of discipline the commission of John J. Buckner (colored) as Captain of the first separate company, infantry, of Indianapolis, has been revoked. Captain Buckner's offense was in criticising the department because the colored company of which he was Captain was not attached to the guard. He alleged that the company was kept in the "unattached service" so that he might not be eligible for promotion.

The 1898 Winter Wheat.

The January returns to the Indiana Bureau of Statistics show that the acreage in winter wheat crop for the State for 1898 does not fall much short of that of last year, being reported at 2,583,332 acres. The January condition, taking 100 as an average, stood at 70 per cent., which is very good for January, considering the late sowing. The reports on condition stand as follows:

Seven counties the condition was 90 per cent. and above; sixteen counties, 80 per cent. and above; twenty-eight counties, 70 per cent. and above; twenty-six counties, 60 per cent. and above; nine counties, 50 per cent. and above; four counties, 40 per cent. and above; two counties, 30 per cent. and above. Ninety-two, whole number of counties, averaged 70 per cent. The January reports show the corn crop of 1897 to have been 125,499,401 bushels for the State. This was an average of 31.3 bushels an acre.

The oats crop of 1897, by the same reports, is found to be 85,574,823 bushels, being an average of 30.6 bushels an acre. There were 1,668,527 tons of timothy hay, and 1,907,174 tons of clover hay. The potato crop was 4,027,229 bushels, and the tobacco crop 2,797,575 pounds.

THEIR MEANING.

To live in shade, yet trust the sun,
To bravely creep while others run,
To suffer pain and still believe
That just enough one will receive;
To feel no envy when the best
Of precious gifts are given the rest,
Persuaded that each lot must be
The best for each eternally—
Is truest faith.

To bear with wrong and wait for right,
Believing that the darkest night
Means only growth for timorous seeds;
To see some good in rankest weeds,
To feel the love that watches o'er
Those left behind, those gone before;
To be bereft, yet know no loss.
And thus the highest faith indorse—
Is true content.

MISS JEMIMA'S VALENTINE.

BY RUTH MCENERY STUART.

Two crimson spots appeared upon Miss Jemima's pale face when she heard the gatelatch click. She knew that her brother was bringing in the mail, and, as he entered the room, she bent lower over her work, her crochet-needle flew faster and she coughed a slight cough. But she did not look up.

She knew, without looking, that her brother brought in a pile of valentines in his hand, and that when presently he should have finished distributing them to his eager sons and daughters, her nephews and nieces, he would come and bring one to her—or else? He would not do this last. It was this dread that brought the crimson spots to her cheeks.

If there was one for her he would presently come, and, leaning over her shoulder, he would say, as he dropped upon her lap the larger, handsomer one than all the others; "This looks mightly suspicious, Sis' 'Mimie," or, "We'll have to find out about this," or maybe, as he presented it, he would covertly shield her by addressing himself to the younger crowd after this fashion:

"Ef I had a lot o' boys and girls, an' couldn't get bigger valentine from all my sweethearts an' beaux than my ol' auntie can set still at home an' git, why, I'd quit tryin'—that's what I would."

There was always a tenderness in the brother's manner when he handed his sister her valentine. He had brought her one each year for seven years, now, and after the first time, when he had seen the look of pain and confusion that had followed his playful teasing as he had presented it, he had never more than relieved the moment by a passing jest.

The regular coming of "Aunt Jemima's valentine" was a mystery in the household.

It had been thirteen years since she had quarreled with Eli Taylor, her lover, and they parted in anger, never to meet again. Since then she had stayed at home and quietly grown old.

Fourteen years ago she had been in the flush of this, her only romance, and St. Valentine's day had brought a great, thick envelope, in which lay, fragrant with perfume, a gorgeous valentine. Upon this was painted, after the old Dresden china pattern, a beautiful lady, with slender waist and corkscrew curls, standing beside a tall cavalier, who doffed his hat to her as he presented the card that bore her name, so finely and beautifully written that only very young eyes could read it unaided.

By lifting this card, one might read the printed rhyme beneath—the rhyme so tender and loving that it needed only the inscription of a name on the flap above it to make it all-sufficient in personal application to even the most fastidious.

This gorgeous affair was so artfully constructed that by drawing its pictured front forward it could be made to stand alone, when there appeared a fountain in the background, and a brilliant peacock with argus-eyed tail, a great rose on a tiny bush and a crescent moon. The oldest children had been very small when this resplendent confection had come into their home. Some of them had not been born, but they had all grown up in the knowledge of it.

There had been times in the tender memories of all of them when "Aunt 'Mimie" had locked her door, and because they had been very good, let them take a little peep at her beautiful valentine, which she kept carefully locked away in her bureau drawer.

They had on occasions been allowed to wash their hands and hold it—just a minute.

It had always been a thing to wonder over, and once—but this was the year it came—when her sky seemed as rosy as the ribbon about her waist—Miss Jemima had stood it up on the whatnot in the parlor when the church sociable met at her brother's house, and everybody in town had seen it, while for her it made the whole corner of the room beautiful.

But the quarrel had soon followed—a foolish lovers' quarrel—Eli had gone away in anger—and that had been the end.

Disputes over trifles are the hardest to mend, each party finding it so difficult to forgive the other for being angry for so slight a cause.

And so the years had passed.

For ten long years the beautiful valentine had lain carefully put away. For five years Jemima had looked at it with tearless eyes and a hardened heart. And then came the memorable first anniversary when the children of the household began to celebrate the day, and tiny comic pictured pages began flitting in from their school sweethearts. The realization of the new era was a shock to Miss Jemima. In the youthful merriment of those budding romances she seemed to see a sort of reflection of her own long-ago joy, and in the faint glow of it she felt impelled to go to her own room and to lock the door and look at the old valentine.

With a new, strange tremor about her heart and an unsteady hand she took it out, and when in the light of awakened emotion she saw once more its time-stained face and caught its musty odor, she seemed to realize again the very body of her lost love, and for the first time in all the years the fountains of her sorrow were broken up, and she sobbed her tired heart out over the old valentine.

If Miss Jemima had not found joy, she had at least found her heart again—and sorrow. Her life had been for so long a weary, treeless plain that in the dark depth of the valley of sorrowing she realized, as something only from sorrow's deeps poor mortals may know it, the possible height of bliss.

For the first time since the separation, she clasped the valentine to her bosom and called her lover's name over and over again, sobbing it, without hope, as one in death agony. But such emotion is not of death. Is it not the rebirth of feeling? So it was with Miss Jemima, and the heart stillness that had been her safety during all these years would never be hers again. There would never again be a time when her precious possession would not have a sweet meaning to her—when it would be a tangible embodiment of the holiest thing her life had known.

From this time forward, as an offset to the budding romances about her, Miss Jemima would repair for refuge and a meager comfort to that which, while in its discolored and fading face it denied none of life's younger romance, still gave her back her own.

The woman of forty never realizes her years in the presence of her contemporaries. Forty women of forty might easily feel young enough to scoff at the bald head, and deserve to be eaten by bears—but thirty-nine with a budding maid for fortieth scoffer? Never!

Miss Jemima, in her suddenly realized young-love setting, had become, to her own consciousness, old and of date gone by. "Aunt Jemima" was naturally regarded by her blooming nephews and nieces, as well as by their intimates who wore their incipient mustaches still within their conscious toplips or dimples dancing in their ruddy cheeks, quite in the same category as Mrs. Gibbs, who was sixty, or any of their aunts and grandmothers who sat serenely in daguerrotype along the parlor mantel.

But there is apt to come a time in the life of the live single woman of forty—if she be alive enough—when in the face of even negative and affectionate disparagement she is moved to declare herself.

Perhaps there be some who would say that this declaration savors of earth. Even so, the earth is the Lord's. It is one thing to be a flower pasted in a book, and quite another to be the bud a maiden wears—one thing to be To-day and another to be Yesterday.

One thing, indeed, it was to own a yellow, time-stained valentine, and quite a different one to be of the dimpled throng who crowded the Simpkinsville postoffice on Valentine's day.

"I reckon then young ones would think it was perfec'ly re-dic'lous ef I was to git a valentine at my time of life," Miss Jemima said, aloud, to her looking glass one morning. It was the day before St. Valentine's of the year following her day of tears.

"But I'll show 'em!" she added, with some resolution, as she turned to her bureau drawer.

And she did show them. On the next day a great envelope addressed to Miss Jemima Martha Sprague came in with the package of lesser favors, and Miss Jemima suddenly found herself the absorbing center of a new interest—an interest that after having revolved about her awhile flew off in suspicion toward every superannuated bachelor or widower within a radius of thirty miles of Simpkinsville.

It had been a great moment for Miss Jemima when the valentine came in, and a trying one when, with genuine old-time blushes, she refused to open it for the crowd.

How she felt an hour later, when, in the secrecy of her own chamber, she took from its new envelope her own old self-sent valentine, only He who has tender knowledge of maidenly reserves and sorrows will ever know.

There was something in her face that forbade cruel pursuit of the subject when she returned to the family circle, and so, after a little playful bantering, the subject was dropped.

But the incident had lifted her from one condition into quite another in the family regard, and Miss Jemima found herself unconsciously living up to younger standards.

But this was ten years ago, and the mysterious valentine had become a yearly fact.

There had never been any explanations. When pressed to the wall, Miss Jemima had, indeed, been constrained to confess that "certainly every valentine that she had ever gotten had been sent her by a man" (how sweet and sad this truth!)

"And are all the new ones as pretty as your lovely old one, Aunt' Mimie?"

To this last query she had carefully replied:

"I ain' never get none thet ain't every bit an' grain ez purty ez thet one—not a one."

"An' why don't you show 'em to us, then?"

Such obduracy was indeed hard to comprehend.

As the years passed, if her brother began to suspect, he made no signs of it save in an added tenderness. And, of course, he could not know.

On the anniversary upon which this little record of her life had opened, the situation was somewhat exceptional.

The valentine had hitherto always been mailed in Simpkinsville—her own town. This postmark had been noted and commented upon, and yet it had seemed impossible to have it otherwise. But this year, in spite of many complications and difficulties, she had resolved that the envelope should tell a new story.

The farthest point from which, within her possible acquaintance, it would naturally hail was the railroad town of—let us call it Hope.

The extreme difficulty in the case lay in the fact that the postoffice here was kept by her old lover, Eli Taylor.

Here, for ten years, he had lived his reticent bachelor days, selling plows and garden seed and cotton prints and patent medicine, and keeping postoffice in a small corner of his store.

Everybody knows how a spot, gazed at intently for a long time, changes color from red to green and then to white.

As Miss Jemima pondered upon the thought of sending herself a valentine through her old lover's hands, the color of the scheme began to change from impossible green to rosy red.

By the only possible plan by which she could manage secretly to have the valentine mailed in Hope—a plan over which she had lost sleep, and in which she had been finally aided by an illiterate colored servant going there, to return next day—it must reach her on the day before Valentine's. This day had come and gone, and her valentine had not returned to her. Had the negro failed to mail it? Had it remained all night in the postoffice—in possession of her lover? Would she ever see it again? Would her brother ever, ever, ever get through with the children and finish giving out their valentines?

Miss Jemima had not long to wait, and yet it seemed an age, before the distribution was over, and she felt rather than saw her brother moving in her direction.

"Bigger an' purtier one 'n ever for Aunt 'Mimie this time—looks to me like," he said, as at last he laid the great envelope upon her trembling knee.

"Don't reckon it's anything extry—in partic'lar," she answered, not at all knowing what she said, as she continued her work, leaving the valentine where he had dropped it; not touching it, indeed, until she presently wound up her yarn in answer to the supper-bell. Then she took it, with her work-basket, into her own room, and dropping it into her upper bureau drawer, turned the key.

The moment when she broke the new envelope each year—late at night, alone in her locked chamber—had always been a sad one to Miss Jemima, and to-night it was even a sadder ordeal than ever. She had never before known how she cared for this old love-token.

As she sat to-night looking at the outside of the envelope, turning it over and over in her thin hands, great hot tears fell upon it and ran down upon her fingers, but she did not heed them. It was, indeed, a meager little embodiment of the romance of a life, but such as it was, she would not part with it. She would never send it out from her again—never, never, never.

It was even dearer now than ever before, after this recent passage through her lover's hands. At this thought she raised it lovingly and laid it against her cheek. Could he have handled it and passed it on without a thought of her? Impossible. And since he had thought of her, what must have been the nature of his thoughts? Was he jealous—jealous because somebody else was sending his old sweetheart a valentine?

This year's envelope, selected with great pains and trouble from a sample catalogue and ordered from a distant city, was a fine affair profusely decorated with love symbols.

For a long time Miss Jemima sat enjoying the luxury of nearness to her lover that the unopened envelope had brought her before she felt inclined to confront the far-away romance typified by the yellow sheet within. And yet she wanted to see even this again—to realize its recovery.

And so, with thoughts both eager and fearful, she finally inserted a hairpin carefully in the envelope, ripping it open delicately on two sides, so that it might come out without injury to its frail, perforated edges. Then, carefully holding its sides apart, she shook it.

And now— Something happened. One of God's best traits is that He doesn't tell all He knows—and sees.

How Miss Jemima felt or acted, whether she screamed or fainted, no one will ever know, when, instead of the familiar pictured thing, there fell into her lap a beautiful, brand-new valentine.

It was certainly a long time before she recovered herself enough to take the strange thing into her hands, and when she did so, it was with fingers that trembled so violently that a bit of paper that came within the valentine fluttered and fell beyond her reach. There it lay for fully several minutes before she had strength to move from her seat to recover it.

There was writing on the fluttering fragment, but what it was and why Miss Jemima wept over it and read it again and again are other trifling things that perhaps God does well not to tell.

The details of other people's romances are not always interesting to outsiders.

However, in this particular case, it may be interesting to know that the woman who took charge of the old lover's room in Hope and who had an investigating way with her, produced seven or eight torn scraps of paper collected at this period from his scrap basket, on each one of which was written, in slightly varying terms, bits of rough sketches like the following: "—sending you this new valentine just as hearty as I sent the old one eighteen years—"

"You shall never want for a fresh one again every year long as I live, unless you take—"

"If you want the old one back again and me along with it."

The newest models of cape and cloaks seen in Paris have the fronts curving from the throat to the back, instead of falling straight, and making a right angle with the lower edge. The curve is not accentuated to the degree where the back would be much longer than the sides. The style is pretty, and will be much in evidence for early spring.

Straps of braid terminate on many costumes with the addition of tiny buckles or fancy buttons, and tailor vests fasten with the latter trimming. The necessary button is small, but the one for ornament only is rather large. In these, as in gimps and buckles, cut steel, jet and jewelled designs outnumber all others.

Light, tissue materials in medium qualities will be in demand another season. Chiffons, gauzes, nets, Liberty silk and mousselines in endless variety of coloring will soon be seen in the stores, and for evening wear will prove both satisfactory and stylish.

Black net, the simpler laces and all the black gauzes and tulles are worn by debutantes, but sequins or frills of plaited mousseline are considered in better taste for trimming than the jet and steel embroidery employed in the trimming of these gowns for older persons.

One of the lowest things that even a very depraved and unprincipled person ever did is to collect torn scraps from anybody's waste basket and to read them. To print them or otherwise make them public is a thing really too contemptible to contemplate in ordinary circumstances. But this case, if intelligently considered, seems somewhat exceptional, and perhaps it is well to do so, for, be it borne in mind, all these scraps, without exception, and a few others too sacred to produce even here, are the things that Eli Taylor, postmaster, did not send to his old sweetheart, Jemima Martha Sprague.

Miss Jemima always burned her scraps, and so, even were it well to condescend to seeking similar negative testimony from her concerning her laboriously-written reply, it would have been quite impossible. Certain it is, however, that she posted a note on the following day, and that a good many interesting things happened in quick succession after this. And then?

There was a little, quiet, middle-aged wedding in the church on Easter Sunday. It was the old lover's idea to have it then, as he said their happiness was a resurrection from the dead, and belonged to the Easter season, and there was no one to object.

Miss Jemima showed her new valentine to the family before the wedding came off, but in spite of all their coaxing and begging, she observed a rigid reticence in regard to all those that had come between that and the old one; and so, seeing the last one actually in evidence, and rejoicing in her happiness, they would only smile and whisper that they supposed he and she had been "quar'lin' it out on them valentines."

The old man, Eli, in spite of his indomitable pride, had come out of his long silence with all due modesty, blaming himself for many things.

"I ain't fitten for you, Jemimy, honey, no mo'n I was eighteen years ago," he said, his arm timidly locking her chair, the night before the wedding, 'but ef you keered enough about me to warm over the little valentine I sen you nigh twenty years ago, and to make out to live on it, I reckon I can keep you supplied with jest ez good ez thet fresh every day an' hour. But befo' I take you into church I want to call yo' attention to the fac' thet I'm a criminal li'ble to the State's prison for openin' yo' mail—an' if you say so why, I'll haf to go."

"Well, Eli," Miss Jemima answered quite seriously, "ef you're li'ble to State's prison for what you have done, I don't know but I am worthy to go to a hotter place—for the deceit I've practiced."

"Well," said Eli, "I reckon ef the truth was told, the place where we jest nachelly both b'long is the insane asylum—for the ejiots we've acted. When I reflect that I might 'a' been ez happy ez I am now eighteen years ago, an' think about all the time we've lost—Well— How comes it that Easter comes so late this year, anyhow?"

THE INDIAN NATION.

Schoolhouses, Courts and Other Evidences of Civilization.

"People of the East have a mistaken impression regarding the Indian nation," said Senator J. M. La Hoy of Claremore, who is a member of the Cherokee delegation, at the National. "In the Cherokee nation alone there are 125 primary schools kept up by our government. In addition to these there is an orphan asylum, with 230 inmates, high schools, female and male seminaries, asylums for the insane and blind and one freedmen's high school. The interest on the $5,000,000 United States bonds held by our nation, pays the expenses of our government, and our people have no taxes to pay.

"Every person who is interested in having the Indian nation turned into states is interested in land sites. There is a selfish motive in the whole scheme. Our climate is something like the climate of Washington. The wheat harvest comes about June 1, and often we plant corn in March. As to railroads, we have the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, the St. Louis and San Francisco, and the K. and A. V., a branch of the Iron Mountain, on the east side. On the west side are the Sante Fe and the Rock Island, and then there is the Choctaw, Omaha and Southern running east and west through the territory.

"Our capital, Tahlequah, has about 2,000 inhabitants. Instead of a governor and lieutenant governor, we have a first and second chief. We have a treasurer, secretary and auditor, and a senate and house to formulate legislation. Each district has its courts. We have district, circuit and supreme courts. Indians have always been on the bench. If any question comes up that pertains to the interest of all the nations, an international council is held. Delegations from each tribe meet for consultation. They compose what might be called a ways and means committee.

"A great many think our nation occupies the same relation toward the United States as the northwest Indian reservations. This is not so. We have a patent fee simple. The land belongs to us; it is ours. Many think we live on a great reservation, consequently the government should take charge of it. They think the Indians grow up in ignorance. We have as good school facilities as the United States. We spend more per capita for schools than any state in the Union.

"Another great hobby made use of through the press, and a good many of our enemies say the same, is that we have invited 300,000 people into the nations. We deny this, and maintain that they are there for the purpose of bettering their condition. Our land can't be sold to outsiders. Any one can make improvements in the domain, and can use the land. Improvements can be sold. People from the outside can rent land, but they have no votes there, no political rights."—Washington Star.

Out of the Jaws of Death.

While feeding his stock one day last fall Jack Dodge, an old hunter of Lanesboro, Penn., had his attention attracted by the strange actions of a squirrel on the ground. He approached the animal and discovered a large rattlesnake in front of the squirrel. The squirrel got nearer and nearer to the snake until the snake opened its mouth and seized the little animal.

After the snake had partially swallowed his prey Dodge tried to kill the snake with a pole, when the reptile threw the squirrel from his mouth and sprang at the man, but a second stroke of the pole killed the snake. It was six feet long.

CALIFORNIA has celebrated with imposing features the semi-centennial anniversary of the discovery of gold, a discovery which attracted a large immigration to the state and laid the foundation for the prosperity which it now enjoys. The gold which James W. Marshall and John A. Sutter found in the tail race of their saw mill was not of itself the most valuable product of California; the inflowing population found the climate and the soil of the country to be just as rich as its gold mines. As many millions were coined in real estate as were found in the diggings. The ground upon which the postoffice in San Francisco now stands was sold for $750 and bought back a decade later for $500,000. Lick, the man who left a fortune to build the big telescope, purchased a bit of ground on Montgomery avenue for $50, which he sold thirty years afterward for $1,000,000. The history of the gold discovery of the Pacific coast is full enough of romance and pathos to be told with a degree of confidence at this time.

John A. Sutter was a man of enterprise and had wandered from Baden, Germany, where he had been born in 1803, having been a Swiss guardsman, first to Vancouver, then to the Sandwich Islands, and finally to "Alta California," where he settled, built a farmhouse, gathered flocks and herds, got into his employ skilled workmen, and was prosperous. He, however, wanted one thing—a saw mill. He had been compelled to get his lumber at great labor and expense from the mountains, far distant from his farms. So he sent his millwright, James Wilson Marshall, to find a saw mill site. Marshall, who was a native of New Jersey, had joined Sutter in 1845. He was then 33 years of age. This search for a mill site made a nation rich, filled the pockets of many millionaires, but ruined Sutter and sent Marshall to the poorhouse.

SAN FRANCISCO IN 1848.

Marshall went in search of the saw mill site in May, 1847. He was in the habit of taking long walks alone, and in one of these—to be exact, on Jan.

THE FIRST QUARTZ MILL.

24, 1848—he made his great discovery. Watching the tail race of the new mill he noticed bright yellow particles mingled with the dust which had been washed out by the recent rains. At first he attached little importance to it, but upon examination, seeing more and more of it, and some in shining scales, the thought occurred to him that it might be gold. He sent an Indian to his camp for a tin plate, and in this washed out some of the dirt. He found a few grains of clear dust and went off to meditate. He said something to his companions to the effect that perhaps he might find a gold mine. To which they replied with smiles: "Guess not; no such luck." But he could not put the idea out of his mind. The next day he made a closer examination of the washed-up soil, and found a nugget, but was not yet sure that it was gold. He weighed it in his hand. He bit it. He hammered it between stones. Surely it must be gold. And so it was, and so the great secret of the Sierra stood revealed.

He found more of the metal, and then mounted his horse and hastened back to Sutter, to whom he told the story. A private examination by the partners up the river disclosed gold along its course, and in the tributary ravines and creeks.

Sutter regarded the discovery as a misfortune. Without laborers his extensive works must come to a stop, presaging ruin. Gladly would he have shut the knowledge from the world, for a time at least. With the men at the mill the best he could do was to make them promise to continue their work and say nothing of the gold discovery for six weeks, by which time he hoped to have his flour mill completed, and his other affairs so arranged as to enable him to withstand the result. The men, indeed, were not yet prepared to relinquish good wages for the uncertainty of gold gathering.

If only the land could be secured on which this gold was scattered—for probably it did not extend far in any direction—then interloping might be prevented, mining controlled, and the discovery made profitable. It was worth trying, at all events. Mexican grants being no longer possible, Sutter began by opening negotiations with the natives, after the manner of the English colonists on the other side of the continent. Calling a council of the Calomas, an dsome of their neighbors, the lords aboriginal of those lands, Sutter and Marshall obtained from them a three years' lease of a tract some ten or twelve miles square, on trifling payments of cheap ornaments. Sutter then returned to New Helvetia, and the great discovery was consummated.

A messenger intrusted with this portentous secret to Colonel R. B. Mason, then the chief representative of the United States government in California, let the cat out of the bag, and prevented Sutter and Marshall from reaping the reward of their great discovery. This man was a mill hand—Charles Bennett—one of Marshall's associates, who was instructed to say nothing about the gold find, but assist Marshall to make arrangements to secure the saw mill, and the land about with "mineral rights" from the government. But Bennett could not keep the enormous importance of his errand to himself. He met some prospectors who had an idea of finding coal, and during their talk exclaimed: "Oh, I have something here better than coal," exhibiting his specimens. He showed them to others, and so the matter got abroad. Bennett and Marshall found Colonel Mason at Monterey, who, when the messenger exhibited the gold, refused to make any promises as to a grant of land.

The upshot was that gold seekers began to pour in about Caloma and the saw mill from Francisco and Monterey, and Sutter had finally to abandon most of his industrial enterprises. The stories of those days would fill volumes, and it only remains to chronicle the fate of the two luckless men who found the treasure, but did not profit by it. Sutter's saw mill did not prosper, because the gold fever had absorbed all of the labor, and no hands could be gotten to do work other than gold mining. Neither he nor Marshall succeeded in doing much at mining, and so they went from bad to worse.

Marshall was driven away from Caloma by the fights between the Indians and the inrushing gold seekers. When he returned several years afterward he was bankrupt. He did all sorts of things for eight years, and in 1857 returned to his old home and made a living by sawing wood, making gardens, and cleaning wells. Subsequently he received a small pension from the state, but died in 1885 in poverty at the age of 73 years. Sutter met almost as bad a fate. He died almost in want, and was at one time threatened with dreams of the almshouse.

Marshall's secret once out, the world began to pour into California. There were no railroads and no other sort of roads to the Golden Gate in those years, but all that then were in the West led to California, and crowded caravans crossed the Sierras constantly and thronged packet ships sailed from Europe and from the Atlantic coast of America round the Horn to the glittering shores of the new El Dorado.

From February, 1848, to May, 1848, more than 300 square-rigged vessels were lying in the harbors stranded and disabled for want of sailors, the crews having deserted to go to the gold region.

IN THE first half of the year 1849, 15,000 souls were added to the population of San Francisco, and during the last six months of that year came 24,000 more. When the returns were made to the United States authorities in 1851, the town contained 371 individuals, and very few more resided in it up to the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill. Like the magic seed of the Indian juggler, which grew, blossomed and bore fruit before the eyes of the spectators, San Francisco seemed to accomplish in a day the growth of half a century. The people came from every State in the Union and every land under the sun. They lived in board shanties, and in canvas tents pitched in the midst of sand and mud. They slept in rude cots, on boards, tables, counters, doors, trucks in the open air; some had horse blankets, others only a covering of fleas.

The employments of the newcomers were as varied as their nationalities. They worked an anything and everything. Common laborers received $10 per day and ordinary mechanics $20. Five dollars a day was about the smallest stipend paid even to boys. A pick and a shovel were worth $10; a tin pan or wooden bowl $5, and a butcher's knife $30. Lumber rose to $500 per 1,000 feet. Wheat flour and salt pork sold at $400 a barrel; a small loaf of bread was 50 cents, and a hard-boiled egg $1. You paid $3 to get into the circus, and $35 for a private box. Ordinary coarse boots cost $40 a pair; a stout pair was worth $100. When a shirt became dirty the wearer threw it away. Washing cost $15 a dozen in 1849.

Rents were monstrous. Three thousand dollars a month was paid in advance for a store hurriedly built of rough boards; and a small room on the second floor used as a lawyer's office rented for $1,000 a month. Lodging was equally extravagant. A bedroom in a hotel costing $250 a month, and a sleeping berth or "bunk," one of fifty in the same apartment, $6 a week.

In the social life of San Francisco at that period the gamblers cut the widest swath. They constituted a controlling class, with whom was all the physical, moral and financial force. Nearly everybody gambled and the stakes were sometimes enormous. As high as $20,000, it is said, have been risked upon a card. Five thousand, three thousand and one thousand were repeatedly ventured.

Sunday was a "wide-open" day in California in 1849. It was looked upon only as a day for trading, recreation, spreeing, business meetings and preparation for the business of the ensuing week. It was very common to see large cards hung up in boarding-houses and business places like this: "All bills paid up here on Sunday." That was the day for miners to get their blacksmith work done and lay in their supply of provisions for the week; the day for holding public meetings for the enactment of other municipal business.

SINCE THE year 1848 California has produced more than three-fifths of the entire output of gold in the United States, and the United States has produced more than one-third of the world's production in the same period. That is to say, California has furnished more than one-fifth of the gold mined in the world since the yellow metal was first discovered in the State. It is upon this wonderful record that California is given the place of supremacy throughout the world as the greatest gold-producer the world has ever known. But it is not in gold alone that lies the vast mineral wealth of the State, for nearly every metal and non-metallic mineral of commercial value is produced within its boundaries, and in several instances they are produced nowhere else in the United States. As the demands of the world grew, the importance of these mineral products is emphasized little by little, and the extent of the latent resources of California is being gradually disclosed. At the same time it is to gold mining, which is now steadily progressing along conservative lines, that the State will continue to look for many years to come for the largest part of its yearly production of wealth from the bowels of the earth.

MRS. M. S. ALLEN.

Her Record for the Year Was 21,086 Miles and 117 Centuries.

Mrs. M. S. Allen, of Worcester, Mass., is a proud woman. One hundred and twenty-eight century bars hang from the lapel of her cycling jacket and eleven more are to be added. She has beaten the 1896 record of Mrs. A. E. Rinehart, of Denver, who made 17,196 miles and 116 centuries, by riding last year 21,026 miles and 117 centuries. Out of the 365 days of 1897 she was in the saddle 256.

That Mrs. Allen didn't ride 365 days of the year was not her fault. An attack of pneumonia, a sprained ankle and prohibitive weather alone are at fault. And now Mrs. Allen is looking forward to a year of cycling feats that will outdo her own wonderful achievements, including a trip awheel, unaccompanied, from Boston to Chicago and to other Western cities.

Getting Off the Earth.

"It seems," said the melancholy man, "that there is nothing but trials and tribulations in this life."

"True," replied his jovial friend, "but what are you going to do about it?"

"Simply this," said the gloomy individual, "I'm tired of it all, and having arranged my affairs satisfactorily to-morrow I propose to quit the earth."

"What!" exclaimed his horrified friend, "do you mean to say that you contemplate suicide?"

"Oh, no," was the reply; "I'm merely going on a protracted sea voyage for the benefit of my health."

When a farmer tickles the earth his fields laugh with crops.

THE FIRST TELEGRAM

"What God Hath Wrought" Was The First Message Over The Wire.

An exchange calls up the old history Morses' first telegram. It says:

The correct date of Mr. Morse's experiment under a congressional appropriation is May, 1844. Howard F. Kennedy, who is the author of an official handbook of the capitol and perhaps knows as much of the history of the structure as anyone in Washington, recently received a letter describing the inauguration of the telegraph from Miss Annie Ellsworth of Malden, Mass. who was the first person to inform Mr. Morse of the passage of the congressional appropriation for the trial line, and who, on this account, was permitted to choose the first message to go over the wire. Miss Ellsworth, who was the daughter of Henry K. Ellsworth, then commissioner of patents, chose the historic words, "What hath God wrought?" She was present at the reception of the message in the capitol. The instrument used at the Washington end of the line was lost, but that employed at Baltimore is to be seen in the National Museum at Washington.

Wonderful Memory.

—Mr. Moody's sister, Mrs. Ida Davie, of Newell, Iowa, is visiting friends here, and has with her, her 5-year daughter Audrey. This little girl is a bright child, and especially is she gifted with a wonderful memory. For instance, on Sunday her mother read to her, five verses calling her attention to them. A short time afterwards, the child was asked to repeat them, which she did readily. This was surprising enough but still more so, was the fact that yesterday morning she was again asked to repeat the verses, and was able to do so without trouble. Her mother says she has always seemed to have this gift.

SEERY BOY ESCAPED

From The County Infirmary Yesterday Morning.

Young Seery of Waterloo, who ha been an inmate of the county infirmary for some time, and who is mentally unbalanced escaped from that institution before daylight yesterday morning. Nothing was seen of him until last night when he called at the hardware store of Culbertson & Boland and wanted a place to remain for the night Mr. Boland knew the boy and asked him his name, but he refused tell. Mike then asked him if he hadn't ran away from the county farm, and he seemed to be ignorent of that. He tried to induce the boy to walk out there last night, but the boy claimed he did not know where the place was. So Mr. Boland took him over to the jail and asked Stroh to keep him over night. The sheriff refused to give him even a place to sleep in the county jail and turned him out in the cold. Considering this too cruel Mr. Boland took him to the Holister House and provided for him his supper, room and breakfast. Word was sent to Supt. Bartels and he called for his man this morning and he is now stopping at the old place.

Want His Testimony.

Gov. Mount has been subpœnsed to testify in the case concerning Musgrave, the man who put a skeleton in an old building and then burned it, and tried to collect insurance money Musgrave claims to have clue to a man who robbed the bank at South Bend, and thinks Gov. Mount had some acquaintance with the man. The Governor says he knows nothing about it. We would suggest to people, that it is very bad taste to call the governor as a witness unless his testimony is absolutely necessary. And in this case it is of no value. No one can blame the governor if he makes a vigorous kick, being dragged overthe country in such little affairs. And he says he don't know anything pertaining to the case of either man.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Fred Gouley Breaks His Leg and Dislocates an Ankle.

Fred Gouley who lives on south Cedar-st, met with an accident yesterday which will lay him up for several weeks. He was loading heavy car timber at the DeWitt saw mill when a piece fell on his leg. Both bones were broken and his ankle dislocated, Dr. Nusbaum was called and the fractures reduced. Mr. Gouley has handled this heavy timber for about ten years and never before met with an accident. It is unfortunate now that he must be laid up and suffer the intense pain which always follows, such a fracture

LOGS AND STUMPS.

Covered Main Street When Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rush Came Here

Tomorrow, Feb. 16, will be the 55th anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Rush of North Main-st. They were married Feb. 16, 1843, near Royalton, Ohio, the minister being Rev. Thomas H. Hurd, then on the M. E. circuit there, and coming to the wedding on horseback. Mrs. Rush's maiden name was Jemina A. Rigby, and as she was born in 1820, she is now about 78 years, old while Mr, Rush is about 83. We are happy to say that both are as hale and sound as could be expected of people of that age. They came to Auburn in 1849, so that they have lived here about 49 years, always honored and respected citizens. Auburn was rather a wild place when they came. Forest trees grew on much of the townsite and Main street was full of trees and logs Five years ago they celebrated their golden wedding and many citizens gathered there at the home of W. B. Brown to do honor. Rev. A. S. Wooten who made a happy address said among other pleasant thing that he hoped they would live to "stay up all night to see the 20th century break over the world and soon thereafter answer all the interrogatories of the census man." We join a multitude of their friends in hoping that this felicitous wish may be realized.

Winona Assembly

Winona Assembly which meets May 19, will be the 110th General Assembly of the Presbyterian church. And on May 29th they will celebrate the 250th anniversary of the adoption of the Westminster Standard of Faith. It bids fair to be one of the greatest of their National or General Assembly meetings. Warsaw and Winona will be liberally advertised and widely known by means of this Assembly coming two years there in succession. There will be an unusual feature this year, which is the arrangement for a museum in which will be shown a multitude of articles connected with the history of the church and prominent people connected with it. Prominent ministers and members of denomination over the country, have been named as a committee to help this work on, and to raise funds for a fire proof building on the grounds, in which the museum may be kept in safety. Some members of this committee are, Dr. Henry Johnson, of South Bend, Julius Barnes, a leading merchant at Laporte, Dr. Moffat, of Ft. Wayne, John Mitchell, of Kendallville and Rev. Charles Little, of Wabash.

CHICORA.

The winter's winds swept the Troubles waters o'er,
When the ill fated Chicora left
Bleak Wisconsin's shore;
Twas five o'clock a. m. when the Boat from her moorings went Out into wild Lake Michigan,
Where the wind its fury spent.

Little did Captain Stines
Think where the trip might end,
As o'er the troubled waters,
His boat did onward wend.
It was sometime after sunrise,
When the winds began to moan,
And all through that fearful day,
Did the vessel creak and grown.

T'will never be known how long,
She lived in that terrible sea,
And few there are who now believe
The vessel they may sometimes see,
For pieces of wreck and debris are found
Where banks are high and steep,
Which plainly shows that the vessel lies
In Lake Michigan's crystal deep,

The Chicora sailed with twenty-six souls
On January's twenty-first morn,
And not a single one has yet returned,
And to us the sad news borne.
None of us will ever know how
The crew met their sad sad fate,
But we hope their peace was made
With God before it was too late.

A TRIBUTE.

ANGOLA, IND., Feb. 11, 1898.

MY DEAR MRS. MCCLELLAN:

The enclosed is meant to be a slight tribute of respect and a small expression of sympathy, for you and yours.

It is very comforting to feel when we lose those we love that the grief is more ours than theirs. That those who go are happier than those they leave behind. To anticipate a future reunion and recollect the pleasant things of the past will make life again worth while

With my very best regards I am

Truly your friend
FRANK S. ROBY.

Charles A. O. McClellan, was born at Ashland Ohio, May 25th 1835. He removed to Auburn in 1856, and was for a time deputy auditor. November 10th 1859 he was married to Elizabeth Long. In the spring of 1861 he located at Waterloo, was admitted to the bar in 1862 and then entered upon the practice, which he continued until his death.

In 1883 he returned to Auburn which had in the meantime secured railway communications. He was Judge of this circuit from Feb. 1879 until Oct. 1880. In 1888 he was elected to congress, and served two terms, declining to be a candidate for the 3rd one.

His activities were not confined to his profession but while maintaining his place at the head of the bar, he found time to engage in various business enterprises, and was at his death president of the 1st National Bank and the holder of other important interests.

He died on January 31st 1898, at home, and from heart failure.

Judge McClellan began at the bottom of the ladder. He was poor and unassisted by influence or wealth. He made his own way. He fought his own battles without flinching. The place left vacant at the bar and in the community tell of earned and deservod victory.

Of the many eminent member of this bar, since its formation none have possessed in so high a degree business prudence foresight and sagacity. He accumulated considerable property but he was not in any sense a miser. He used money freely and valued it for what it would purchase and bring. His judgment of men and conditions, and affairs was rarely at fault.

He was a wise counselor. Those who learned upon him trusted no broken reed.

He was a just judge: "Unswerved by influence and unbribed by gain" He administered justice with dignity and decorum. His superior has not yet graced our bench.

As an advocate he made constant use of his rare good sense and acute discernment. He made no serious mistakes. Others were more brilliant but none more stable. He participated in many important trials and always conducted them with undisturbed serenity. He practiced self control at all times, and while none knew better how to prod and exasperate his adversary he himself never lost his temper. Master of his passions, imperturbable in countenance, his carriage erect and his personality imposing, he inspired respect and put opposing counsel on the defensive from the outset.

In the opening statement he expressed as much by his attitude and air of conscious power, as by his words.

Some men make an easy point with apparent effort. He made difficult ones with an appearance of indifference and case, as though he had not yet done his best but had another arrow if this one failed. The quality of his personality can be illustrated by an incident occuring in justice court where he represented the defendant in a cause on trial before a jury.

His client had no defense and he was unable to discover one. The plaintiff step by step put in his proof. When the plaintiff rested the defendant's lawyer rested too. Said the plaintiff's lawyer, "Havent you got any evidence?" "Plenty of it was the answer, but it is not necessary to put it in. The burden is on you and any fool can see that you have not made out a case" The lawyer for the plaintiff went to the jury. He argued with eloquence and in great detail. The only reply he got was "I don't want to argue such a case as this." The justice read an instruction that the burden was on the plaintiff. The jury retired and considered and returned a verdict for defendant, entirely satisfied that in some respect the plaintiff had failed to discharge the "burden" and unwilling to admit that they knew less about it than Judge McClellan expected them to know.

He was tactfull and wary, as more than one man here can testify, but after all his great power lay in his perfect mastery of his facts. He marshaled them. He knew them; he knew where to stop and where to dwell and what to lightly pass. He could get at the substance of things and the witness who sought to equivocate and evade when he cross examined, made a sad mistake,

In argument he did not aim to appear eloquent, but he was always impressive and convincing.

He believed himself to be at a disadvantage in the disposition of technical and unanticipated technicalities but if there was any weakness in that respect those who opposed him failed to observe it. He was in short, a forceful man and a lawyer who won his cases, A good lawyer.

There was one characteristic of his life which ought to be an inspiration and an example. He was always his own man. The bitterest enmey, personal or political, that he ever had, and he had them both, as all strong men must, never accused him of being a tool. He did not permit himself to be placed in a false position. His influence could not be discounted. No client could dictate terms to him, or command his effort against his will. He maintained his own absolute independence. He bent no servile knee but stood erect, walked his own way and spoke his own sentiment, when he choose.

It has been my privilege to receive much friendly advice and encouragement from him, and to have had, I hope a measure of his confidence, during the dark days when the shadow was upon his soul, The disease by which he fell gave warning. Months ago he was at times convulsed with great and sudden pain, but he made no outcry and expressed no fear. He suspected and then he knew that the sword which hangs suspended by a single hair, was soon to fall and yet he neither repined nor trembled. Unconquered and indomitable he faced death like a man and met it as bra men do. It was not that he was insensible. A calm and grave exterior is no sign of insensibility but it is an indication of character lofty and sustained. In the early autum he said, "Every morning I think, What is there yet I ought to do?"

He put his house in order and waited hoping the best and ready for the worst, but made no sign, except, that those about him will remember that he was more tender in expression and act than was his wont.

Demonstration was foreign to his nature and his habit. He loved little children dearly, and the children, judges of what we are, whose judgments never failed, loved him. "He forbade them not."

He did not use the term or appearence of friendship to compass his own selfish purposes, as it is so easy to do, but his friendships when made were lasting. A few days before his death he referred with great emotion to his early and long associate and said. They were the happiest days of my life when we were beginning there at Waterloo. I don't know whether I shall ever practice law again or not.

Twice the prompt skill of his efficient physicians brought him out of the valley. Then there came a period of renewed hope. The possibility of life and activity were again before him. "The doctors say that I will have better health than I have had for twenty years." and yet as he said it, there was in his tone suggestion of doubt.

After a moment's respite the unexpected and the expected came. O r brother met the common fate. "Hail and farwell."

"The old, old fashion. The fashion that came in with our first garments and will last unchanged until the wide firmanent is rolled up like a scroll. The old old fashioned death.—Oh thank God, all who see it, for that older fashion yet of immortality."

The son and the daughters remember an indulgent parent. The wife weeps a devoted husband. Father of the fatherless, Comforter of widowed wives who mourn, be with them now. Be with them now.

MARRIED.

W. C. Crew, of Ligonier, well known in this city, and Miss Della Dicus, of Defiance, O., will be married at the bride's home in Defiance tonight at 7:30 The COURIER extends congratulation to Mr. and Mrs. Crew.

Rev. Guild perfomed a marrige ceremony at the bedside of Mrs. Gulick, yesterday afternoon at about 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bucher. The contracting parties were Phillip D. Long and Mary Shepherd, the lady being an adopted daughter of Mrs Gulick. The wedding took place at the request of Mrs. Gulick, who the doctors claim cannot live.

IMPORTED WARDEN

Of Michigan City Prison is Being Exposed by Convicts

As before stated in these columns, D. D. Moody has lie use for the imported Deputy Warden in charge of affairs at Michigan City. He stated some things which would surprise the people. Now all he has said and more too, is substantiated by a man who only a few days ago was liberated. The story is as follows:

Frank Hamilton, a New Yorker who has recently been a convict called on Governor Mount this week and made charges against the prison. He says he was well treated himself, but told the governor that the deputy warden was cruel.

Convict Smith, he says, who had been in a solitary cell, was struck across the head by the deputy and knocked down. Three blows, he declares, were struck, and the convict was then put back into the cell.

He further charges that on Jan. 16 Convict Johnson, colored, was knocked insensible because he refused to come out of his cell.

It is charged too that Convict Williams was cruelly beaten by the deputy warden, who on each of these occasions used a cane.

The governor says that complaints of the kind are constantly coming to him by letters and otherwise, and he promises to investigate.

Clerk Whitaker of the penitentiary denies that the deputy warden is cruel and declares that he had forbidden any more beating of convicts; that bread and water or solitary confinement are the modes of punishment. A fewweeks ago another ex-convict made substantially the same charges as Hamilton makes against the prison officials.

TELEPHONE PUZZLES.

During the recent heavy falls of damp snow, the telephone lines have caused a considerable trouble from having the wires tangled when weighted down with the snow. Then your telephone bell is liable to ring, and you are not certain whether the call is for you or some one else. But you make a jump, grab the receiver, chuck it to your ear, and listen wildly, to a communication like this:

"Say, is you, Oh! shut I DeLapp, this bet I'm up wish this you I calling can't you'd is Dora am the you send the I just COURIER yes the Swineford have stuck can't it's Newspapers House been on you Zent a is calling her give I'm notice the you now me after of 10 20 an don't the oh that train hour laugh COURIER ring social on didn't I say off there time we shall your gee will Smith just call yesterday's you be takes have around DAILY make chicken his a soon was me pie wedding lovely and just weary and trip time get fine this Oh! to and the it aint no the isn't right has Zent's not Junction Jack side the dulcet turkey no just of news voice just it too the nicely oh chicken aint sweet old written yes turkey another for gent well where's is Waetrloo anything Oh! it's that too affair haha! sure good car high so funny you enough you yes long aint hear for promised all De he me anyone us right"

The above may not all be intelligible to our readers, but it is a straight matter when you once get the key. There are several different conversations mixed up but each is complete in itself, and easily separated and read. It is the COURIER'S "Telephone Puzzle." And for each correct re-writing and solution, before March 1, we will give a month's subscription to the DAILY or a year's subscription to the WEEKLY COURIER free Now try it. But keep your copy of paper till it shall be settled and the answer published.

JOHN H. LESH DEAD.

The COURIER publishes with a feeling of sadness the death of John H. Lesh at his home in Goshen, yesterday. We first made the acquaintance of Mr. Lesh many years ago, and though we have not met him for several years, have all the time been aware to a certain extent of his movements and business success He was the leading member of the firm known as "The Lesh, Sanders & Egbert Co.," whose notice has been in the WEEKLY COURIER for a year or so. They are large dealers in black walnut and all hard lumber. Mr. Lesh was a member of the Chicago firm of Lesh, Prouty & Barrett, who are among the largest dealers in the world. He left a large fortune, which has been acquired by his own effort. He will be greatly missed in the business circles of Northern Indiana.

MAKE A DIVIDEND.

The Auburn Mining Co., had a meeting yesterday to transact certain business growing out of the recent sale of the Electric Light Plant, especially that in regard to the division of the money received, among the stockholders. It was found that they could declare a dividend of 21 per cent which was done, and the shareholders have it. There will likely be another small dividend whenever the real estate and such notes and accounts as the company has, are disposed of, making probably about 35 per cent in all. When we consider that had the plant not been well managed, there would never have been a penny in dividends we think great credit should be given to the officers of the Mining Co. Had they left the matter to die out when the gas wells were abandoned, the whole stock would have been lost. They turned it into the light plant and then struggled on and saved this much. A dividend of 35 per cent beats nothing by far.

Wednesday's Daily.

—The Laporte Argus, speaking of the three great railroads recently combined, the Lake Shore the N. Y. Central and the Hudson River, suggests a a good name for the combine. "The Shore and N. Y. Central." That's all right. So let it be.

—Wm Swarts one mile south of Waterloo will have a sale of his personal property on Thursday, March 3, beginning at 10 a. m. There will be sold two work horses and two 3-year old colts, Jersey cows and heifers, a lot of shoats, binder, mower, drills, two cultivators, a two-horse wagon, harness and many other things. See bills.

—Dr. Broughton and Messrs. Barr, Dickinson and Walker all of Waterloo were in the city today.

—Mrs. Swarts and Dr. Stamets both made professional calls to Waterloo this afternoon.

—Read the able and eloquent tribute to Judge McClellan, delivered at the Angola meeting.

—James H. Rose went to Columbia City this afternoon, where he has a case in court equet. He represents the state in the case against Extrustee Blake, of Smithfield. The case was to be called today.

Gen. O. O. Howard will be at the head of the new association for the protection of the American flag. Its object is to prevent descration of the flag. How that would be called "desecration" is not stated

David Ralston, of Plymouth, Ohio, is here visiting the family of A. J. Ralston and the other relatives. He is a brother of the late S. W. Ralston, and as the latter used to be, a strong, hearty man. He is now eighty-five and fair to live many years yet.

—L. J. Marvin was at Ft. Wayne last evening. He was there to inspect the S. of V. camp, he being assistant inspector for this district. They all made him welcome and gave him the "freedom of the city." Besides the regular work, there was a reception and supper by the ladies society that is auxiliary to the Sons of Veterans.

THE RAILROAD TO BULAWAYO.

Why It Seems Bound to Be a Successful Enterprise.

The fact that the large sums of money necessary for the building of railways in Rhodesia have been readily forthcoming as required is in itself evidence of the confidence which is felt by capitalists in the future of the territory, says the Contemporary Review. The undertaking has been initiated and the bulk of the financial responsibility in connection with it is being borne by men who, whatever their faults, cannot be described as wanting in business acumen. They are not the sort of men who would be likely to subscribe solid golden sovereigns to a project for building, say, a railway to the north pole or to the moon. They have put money into these railways because they believe that they will become profitable commercial ventures. These railways can only give them a return on their money upon the condition that Rhodesia proves itself to be a region possessing payable gold mines and good agricultural soil. As regards gold mining, it may be recalled that during the peaceful periods when gold prospecting was feasible many thousands of claims were pegged out, many companies formed and much capital sunk in various parts of the country. It is asking too much to expect us to believe that these prospectors and miners, comprising men who have had experience of gold mining in all parts of the world, became so credulous when they crossed the Limpopo as to believe that gold was to be found where no gold exists, or were such knaves as to pretend it existed when they had no bona fide belief in its existence. Prospectors, we hear, are again busy now that the country is pacified, and the arrangements are being made for the importation of machinery and the starting of practical mining. It has yet to be seen what success will be attained. Results will soon decide between those who disbelieve that the country carries payable gold and those who tell us that it does. It is almost incredible that in a country with traces of gold over such a tremendous area and honey-combed with so many ancient gold-workings, there should not be found one good egg in the basket.

The World's Sheep.

The number of sheep in the world is estimated to amount to 550,000,000. Of this number between one-third and one-half are believed to be merinos.

Why They Resigned.

Mrs. Houser—"I hear that all the members of your church choir resigned yesterday. What was the trouble?" Mrs. Churchly—"Why, after singing the first hymn the minister arose and opened his Bible and chose for his text, Acts xx.: 'And after the uproar had ceased, etc.'"

FOR ALL WOMEN

Non-terms of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefited by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Topeka, Kan., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and delivery could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and she looked my mother through the Change of Life."

A buggy factory is the latest sensation.

Dept. Sheriff Platter was in town Tuesday.

H. M. Widney has the contract for delivering telephone poles.

C. B. Leighty has moved into the J. A. Leight property north of town.

The Leighty Hotel will change landlords within the next few days.

Mrs. Emma Skilling (Nee) Curie, is quite sick. She has been visiting under the parental roof for some days.

Wineland & Sons have purchased two second hand boilers and an engine which they propose to ship with their other machinery to St Joe county, Mich., the first of April.

Two gentlemen from Chicago, are stopping at the Leighty Hotel, soliciting patronage for a Chicago Sanitarium. They have very plausible stories.

The I. O. O. F. Lodge had a very enjoyable social at their Hall Monday evening proceeds go to found a hospital for members of the fraternity.

Remember day and date of the H. J. Becker Lecture Saturday evening, Feb. 26.

Samuel Grill living 1½ miles south of Spencerville met with a very serious accident last Thursday. As near as we can learn the facts are as follows:—He was engaged in running a saw mill near Mayaville and in some unaccountable manner a two inch plank was caught by the saw and thrown back, striking Mr. Grill in the skull in a horrible manner. Three physcians from Hicksville were hastily summond and succeeded in removing portions of the skull; five or six pieces of bone were removed. Last reports received are that he has recovered consciousness and the chances are 1 to 10 for his recovery,

Wednesday's Daily.

—Supt. Coe has received a number of books from Congressman Robinson, suitable to add to the library which the county superintendents have been collecting. All are works of an educational character and the COURIER thinks Mr. Robinson is entitled to credit for remembering the common people.

—The funeral of the late P. S. O'Rourke will be at the CatholicCathedral at Ft. Wayne tomorrow, Feb 16, at 9:30 a. m. At the time Judge McClellan received his first nomination Mr. O'Rourke was his chief competitor. It is a sad coincidence that both should die within a few days. Judge McClellan died Jan. 31, and Mr. O'Rourke Feb. 12.

—Mr. Morgan, of Canton, O. is here visiting friends

—Wm Krugere little boy was taken suddenly sick at the opera house last evening just as the show was over.

—Scott Shoemaker, son of Commissioner E. R. Shoemaker is lying sick at the latter's home, with little hopes of recovery. They changed doctors yesterday and it is hoped he may improve.

—Dr. Ford went to Peru yesterday and expects to visit there for a time with Dr. and Mrs. Jared Spooner. Mrs. Spooner is his daughter and both she and Dr. Spooner are well known to Auburn people.

—Mr. Gibson, of Muncie, was here today and called on Wm Kessler. He will probably handle the Standard Cigar Lighter.

—Catherine Beha was today declared insane. She resides east of Butler close to the state line and has been an inmate of the asylum before.

Wednesday's Daily.

—C. C. Walters was about town on his crutches today.

—Mrs. Maria Woodworth, the healing preacher is still in the field. She claims having made many cures.

—S. S. Potter was at Fort Wayne today calling on Henry Wyatt who is dangerously sick.

—Geo. Morr had a little accident at the corner of Jackson and 7th-sts this forenoon. A single tree broke which delayed him for a time, —Irate women thrashed a school teacher over in Allen county, and had to pay a fine. And now they are kicking about our boasted freedom being invisible.

—Mrs. Jennie Dickinson of Collingwood, has been very sick with tonsilitis and lagrippe. Dr. Smith, of Leo, attended her. She is now able to sit up although still quite weak.

—At the meeting of the directors of the Auburn Band, Monday evening, Prof. Niles was chosen as leader and instructor. It was expected this would be done, when Mr. Calkins resigned, though we believe there were other applicants for the position. It is a position of which anyone may feel proud, and we think the directors made a happy choice. The Auburn Band is on high road to success and we look to see it rank first in the state.

—We were pleased to meet yesterday our old-time friend John T. Shaffer, who was an employe of this office thirteen years ago. He has developed into a rapid and skillful printer, having few superiors. His last employment was on a daily paper at Paris, Ky., but ill health compelled him to return here Christmas, where he has since been with his brothers and sisterr. He is troubled a good deal with neuralgic affections, though otherwise in fair health We hope to see him fully restored however, as he is always anxious to be at work.

Thursday's Daily.

—J. P. Widney is here visiting his children Mrs. Ludwig and Morris Widney and son-in-law A. Lewis.

—Don't annoy others by your coughing, and risk your life by neglecting a cold. Our Minute Cough Cure cures coughs, colds, croup, grippe and all throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord sells it.

—J. B. Gibford got even with his favorite county paper again today, and has thanks for same.

—Children and adults tortured by burns, scalds, injuries, eczema or skin eiseases may secure instant relief by DeWttt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is the great Pile remedy. By H. B. McCord.

—Jacob Bishop, of Butler township, was in town today. He came by train as the roads were too bad to take a team.

—Whooping cough is the most distressing malady; but its duratian can be cut short by the use of One Minute Cough Cure, which is also the best known remedy for croup and all lung and bronchial troubles. For sale by McCord.

—Two car loads of finished work were shipped from the Greenler factory today. That reminds us that our informant was a little off in the statement that they had enough timber to keep them at work a year. The have enough for two or three months.

—What pleasure is there in life with a headache, constipation and billousness? Thousands experience them who could become perfectly healthy by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. By H. B. McCord.

—Will Timmerman is in the city from Jackson, Mich. He is the son of the late Mrs. Porter. He sold the property now occupied by Will Buss on north VanBuren street which belongs to his mother, to John Beard.

—After yeaes of untold suffering from piles, B W. Pursell of Knitersvalle, Pa., was cursd by using a single box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema. rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this remedy. For sale by H. McCord —Judge Best is in town today. He has spent several days with his father-in-law, P. B. Nimmons of Butler, whose health has been in a critical state for some time.

A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—The two feeble minded young men with strong minded tastes for horses, that were arrested near Ashley by Marshall Potter gave their names as Henry Engle and Isaac Woodfield. We had not learned their names yesterday.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbuaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs.

—A destructive fire is reported to us at Leo. The farm home of Chas. Fuller burned and the family barely escaped. One child was missed and the father plunged through the flames and saved the child, but both were seriously burned.

—There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created—they are the ant, the bee and DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the last being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

—'Squire Walter tried another case this afternoon. Frank Draggoo brought suit to get possession of the house he lately bought, the old John W. Shaffer residence on South Main st. J. N. Myers, is the occupant, and the 'Squire gave him till next Tuesday, to move out.

—We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter orbetter way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung trouble that can follow neglected colds. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—In the suit before 'Squire Walter yesterday, Frank Jones got judgment against Oscar Grogg. He had helped Grogg to build the house out on his farm, and then failed to get what he believed his just dues for his work. There were some other matters also brought in for settlement between the two men, but the result was in Jones' favor.

—Rev. T. M. Guild and Hon. C. M. Brown went up to Hamilton Lake yesterday on a fishing expedition. We think they were able to pull their nets ashore without breaking. Still for a fact they did get a nice lot of fish. We know that Mr. Guild is a successful "fisher of men" but when they started off we half believed Charley would have to catch all the fish. Still they insist the minister hooked his share.

—John Goscop was on our streets yesterday for the first time in two or three weeks, Although he has to keep a patch over his eye, he is improving.

—L. J. Miller shipped a car of fine hogs to Buffalo yesterday It seems there is not wheat enough to keep him busy and he will try stock. We hope he may establish a good business.

Friday's Daily.

—Dr. Baxter reports a new boy born this morning to Mr. and Mrs. August Bahlke.

—Geo. Picker of Coffeyville, Kansas, is in town, called here by the sickness of his mother.

—Dr. Baxter is paying special attention to Diseases of Children also Diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Nervous system. tf

—A man was hurt by a fall while washing a window a Ashley a few days ago. It appears that the people of that town are not in the habit of washing their windows. Hence their awkardness and consequent danger.

—Many readers of the COURIER will be interested in learning the death of Levi Kiester of Noble county, one of the early settlers of his section. He died about a week ago.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs and timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, Lesh. Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—St. Joe News:—The DAILY COURIER has introduced a new wrinkle, and now publishes once a week, cuts of Auburn's pretty babies, its fairest women and leading business men. The COURIER is bound to be up-to-date.

—Trustee Kelham of Keyser township is in the city having specifications for a new school house drawn up. City Engineer J. J. VanAuken is doing the work. It will be a very creditable building to the township.

—Mrs. Henry Sherlock and John Lahnum's little girl went to Chicago this morning and will remain there a while. Mrs. Lahnum has been there all winter but they expect to locate in Auburn in the spring. Mrs. Lahnum and Mrs. Sherlock are sisters.

—A bill poster at Goshen swallowed a lot of tacks yesterday. He was tacking up signs and had the tacks in his mouth. When looking up to fasten the cord he swallowed two of them, and others stuck in his throat. A physician afterwards extracted three of them.

—Can twins have different birthdays? Certainly. Mr. and Mrs. Speelon of Nickel Plate in Starke county this state have a pair of twins. One was born just before midnight Jan. 31 and the other just after midnight which would be Feb. 1. So they not only have different days but different months. There are not many things that ingenious Hoosiers cannot do.

—It is said that C. G. Conn is making a monstrous big horn to send to the Paris Exposition in 1900. It takes a good sized house to shelter it while the workmen are putting it together. When they test its playing qualities in Elkhart, it is believed it may beard in———Smithfield, DeKalb Co. ss.

—Butler is having "oodles" of trouble over "C. Mabus," a sort of cross between a quart shop dealer and lunch room man. If the citizens of that place, are anxious to find out more about C. M., they might ask over at Busco or Avilla, or any where over that way.

—Mrs. Jane L. Hine, of Sedan, read a paper before the Farmers' Institute at Ligonier the other day. Her subject was: "Your Birds, Farmers, and What they do for You." The papers speak well of her lecture, for she has made a study of our common birds for many years.

—The Lake Shore road has been bought by the New York Central. The question now is, Will this change the name of the greatest and best line of road in America? It will surely sound odd to our people to speak of taking a train to Toledo or Kendallville on the "Central road."

—Rev. Brosy feels highly gratified over the large attendance at the prayer meeting last night. He says the lecture room was jammed full and at the next meeting expects to move out into the church. The Sunday services were grand. He thinks he never saw better services than were held at his church last Sunday.

—The new postage stamps are likely to appear soon. The 1 cent stamp is to be green instead of blue, the 2 cent will remain red as at present, the 5 cent will be dark blue instead of brown. An attempt is being made, and likely to succeed, to have all nations use stamps of the same color after next New Year.

—One of the leading business men of Omaha, Neb., Mr. A. Hospe was in town on a brief visit to his mother and his sister, Mrs. Geo. Engelman, and left this morning on the B. & O. west. He says that the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition will be a grand affair and well worth going there. It will be the greatest exposition ever held in the United States except the World's Fair. Mr. Hospe is engaged in the sale of musical instruments, art work and material.

—Today, Friday, is the last day of school work here by J. C. Teeters, this being the end of the extra two weeks for which he was hired to stay in hopes his successor could be found. He has been a faithful worker, and as far as we have ever heard, his services have given satisfaction. It is merely a question of price. He will get vastly better wages at the new location to which he goes, at Berea, Kentucky. The COURIER joins many other friends in wishing him all possible success in his new field.

—Mrs. Julia E. Hodge is ill with an attack of grip.

Saturday's Daily.

—The Laporte Argus has changed its weekly edition to a semi-weekly. And it has a good daily edition. The Argus in any form is one of the best papers in the state.

—W. A. Banks is the new postmaster at Laporte. He has long been known as an enterprising farmer and stock raiser and was for many years a member of the state board of agriculture.

—Elder Z. T. Sweeny of the Christian church, has been a foreign consul, and is now state fish commissioner, but he has concluded to accept a call to take charge of a church at Richmond, Va, at $3,500 a year. That pays better than most offices. It also proves that it pays to be a good preacher, which he really is Many DeKalb people have heard him.

—In reporting the very pleasant party in honor of W. H. Rakestraw, we failed to get all the names of the guests. Those omitted were: Mr. and Mrs. E. T. DeLapp, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hellauer, Mr. Thacker and Miss Cora Weaver.

—Simon Pokagon, the old Indian chief who spoke at the old settlers' meeting at Albion two or three years ago, has just lost his house and all his business papers by fire. This leaves him very poor and without the papers to prove some claims he has against the government.

—The State Bank at Walkerton that has been under suce a cloud of troubles for a year or two has been reorganized with more capital. The great trouble is that the same old financiers will control it.

—P. P. Lochner was in the city today and took orders for twenty gallons of his choice homemade maple syrup And these orders were from his patrons some of whom have bought syrup of him for four years. They know the quality.

—Those who returned from Angola this forenoon after attending the Bar Association meeting were, Judge Koby and wife, P. D. West and wife, E. D. Hartman and C. E. VanAuken. J. E. Rose, wife and daughter, Pauline. All report a splendid meeting and lovely banquet

—Columbia City :PostnaupWard— Harley of the northern prison has established a night school for the benefit and education of prisoners. There will be a class for those who can neither read nor write numbering 58; a class for those who can read a little and can not write numbering 60, and a class for those who read and write poorly.

—The great Pine Lake summer resort near Laporte is to be sold at sheriff's sale on a debt of $8000. It is owned and conducted by the Baptists and has always been very popular. A great deal of money has keen put into it, but its present financial condition proves that summer resorts are difficult property to manage successfully.

—Trustee Dancer was in town yesterday on business.

—Fort Wayne is indulging in new strawberries.

—The iron of the new bridge is on the ground ready for putting together, the five cross beams are already located about where they are to be in the bridge. They are supported by a heavy temporary scaffolding.

—Feb. 16, will be the 50th anniversary of the incorporation of the town of Huntington. It is now an incorporated city, and one of the solid county seats of the state.

—James E. Draggoo of South Frankford, Mich., is dead. His many friends in DeKalb will be pained to learn this He died about three weeks ago.

—New York society people have a new fad. At their dances, they dress to represent some vegetable No doubt some of them are just green enough to do that very thing.

—Milton Myers who carries mail from the Junction to Colingwood and Gloyd, says has a hard road to travel now-a-days. It beats the old song "Jordan is a hard road to travel."

—Herman Green who drives the express wagon found it took an hour and a half to go down to the Junction and back this forenoon. These roads are not "trotable" by a long ways.

—Miss Flo Bennan arrived in this city from Chicago last week and after a few days visit with her uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Griest, will assume her duty as bookkeeper for Ensley & Griest.

—Our old friend Joseph Krehl, of Fairfield was a caller today and has thanks for subscription to Aug. 15, '98. He says the roads in the country are much better than here in town.

—Wm. F. Kessler, Saturday, bought the carpenter shop building of John H. Weaver, on east Seventh-st and will fix it up for a factory for the manufacture of his electric cigar lighters.

—Nelson Morr is a faithful one. Last evening he served in place of both collectors at the Presbyterian church. But he had one advantage, there was not more money than he could carry alone.

'Squire Walborn is able to be out again, though by no means sound yet. In addition his attack of pneumonia he has for time been troubled with a sort of gathering in his head. He is now in a fair way to be all right.

—Ben. Zeigler is reported as improving. His trouble has been a serious form of marlarial trouble, and it is believed he contracted this while tearing up and repairing the store building on the corner of Main and Ninth. It opened up old ground under the floor that had not been disturbed or ventitated since pioneer days

—Lee Bennett of Bristol was here over Sunday, a guest in the family of R. H. Weamer. Mr. Weamer was for some years a neighbor of his at Bristol, Mr. Bennett leaves for New Orleans in a few week weeks to join the New Orleans Base Ball Team as he is engaged to play for them the coming season.

—G. H. Yesbera had another streak of bad luck. His big plate glass show window is ruined. Some time ago a window fixture fell against it and made a small crack, in shape something like a star. Of course this would keep growing worse. Last night it took a big step, and the crack now extends diagonally across to the left and then upward utterly spoiling it. This one cost $150 but they are cheaper now. It is the biggest plate glass in town.

—Mrs. Emily Dills and daughter, Kittie, returned Saturday evening over the B. & O. reaching here at 8:53. They have had a good long visit among friends and relatives at Plymouth, Mansfield, Shelby and Wellington, and enjoyed it greatly. But of course there is no place like home and they are glad to be back again.

—Libby Prison at Chicago, is to be removed the coming summer. We are told it has not been a paying venture. On Wednesday, Feb. 9, a few of those once confined in its wall as war prisoners, held a reunion in it. It was Feb. 9, 1864 that 109 prisoners escaped through a tunnel they had dug out under the wall and across a street.

—The COURIER has received a number of valuable books from Congressman Robinson, which we are pleased to add to our liberary. Among them is the last volume of Presidential Messages, and the volume that contains the last census. Both are handy for references, and Mr. Robinson has thanks for them.

Baron Hickey, an eccentric Englishman committed suicide in Texas one day last week. He was better known as "Prince of Trinidad". He had gone down some years before, toward South America, and finding that a small island named "Trinidad," was not occupied he landed and gave out to the world that it was his, and held possession for some years, calling himself "Prince of Trinidad."

—Walter Hartman went to Fort Wayne on business today.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Mrs. Gulick, of South Cedar street is not expected to live.

—Perry Fair is arranging to move his family to Fort Wayne.

—David Kutzner, of Ohio, has been summoned to the beside of brother, Sylvester Kutzner.

—Grandma Picker is improving, with a fair hope for recovery. We are glad to hear this.

—Wm. Kennedy, of Waterloo came over here yesterday taking the old pioneer style by horseback.

—Gib McIntosh, of Waterloo, came down yesterday.

James W. Clark, of Ashley, was down yesterday.

—Sousa's Band will give a one night entertainment at the Temple in Ft. Wayne next Tuesday.

—Mrs. W. Maxwell, sister of Sheriff Stroh, is here his guest. She is receiving treatment from one of our physicians.

—Alvin Ash who used to publish a magazine at Butler but who now is working on the circulation of the Toledo Daily Blade was in the city yesterday.

—It is believed that the President is preparing an important message on the Cuban question. It would now be an excellent time to take some decisive step in this direction.

—M. I. Hoffman and J. C. Lochner, were out taking some kodak views of the big elm and the court house park this morning. The trees were handsomely decorated with snow and presented a lovely appearance.

—Truant Officer Link is having some trouble with the small boys who want to distribute bills for the show during school hours. Unless some of them are careful he will probably have them fined.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm Likens came to town yesterday over the fearful roads. But nothing keeps them from paying for the COURIER when the time comes.

—J. A. Campbell and Dan. Diehl, of Butler, were over here yesterday from Butler on some business matters. We are pleased to see Mr. Diehl looking in better health.

—It was a regular "sugar snow" that came last night and this forenoon. It was about three inches deep and very damp, hanging to the trees and buildings everywhere.

—It was an attack of apoplexy, not paralysis, from which Mr. Kutzner suffered Saturday evening. We were mistaken in our report of it yesterday.

—Mr. Moody is fitting his law office up nicely in the Gandy block. Yesterday he received a neat new table and some chairs, sent by his son Ralph, who is employed in a furniture establishment in Columbia City.

—Lloyd Obenchain, of Columbia City is here, a guest of his relatives of the COURIER office. He is a printer and for some time was chief man on the Mail at his place. He may visit the relatives at Butler before returning home.

—Several parties were out with their kodaks this forenoon, to catch the beauties of trees and buildings draped in snow. We expect the photo galleries will show some fine views, and Mr. Locher of the COURIER office has several.

—The Lake Shore runs a "theater train" to Toledo tomorrow evening for the benefit of those who attend. But Auburn has a theater right at home all the week. Why not run a theater train to Auburn? It would be cheaper and the plays probably as good.

—Mrs. W. H. Fair, of Butler township, has been here a day or two visiting D. D. Moody and the sister from Iowa, Mrs. Ida Davie. Yesterday G. I. Patterson came to town and took the two ladies out to his home for a visit there.

—A "Marble Heart" club has been formed at Atlanta, Ga., to help do away with the habit of kissing. A fine of $10 is the penalty, the money to be used for charity. While we cannot directly recommend this society to all in general, yet there are several young girls of North Auburn, who march back and forth on our streets evenings, whom we would advise to become "jiners" at an early date.

—E. Zimmerman's band is getting along nicely. But it might have been worse. He was holding the rope while they were putting up the smoke stack at the factory and it was jerked through his hand, lacerating it and making a pretty sore affair of it. He has it still bound up, but it is healing up in good shape.

—Ft. Sheridan, near Chicago, is again in trouble and will have a man court martialed. He was the sergeant in charge of one of the mess tables. Mush and molasses were served but in passing the pitcher of molasses down the line, the men took so much that the four at the end got none. They complained that the sergeant should have seen to it, that enough was saved for their share.

—Wm. Pickhart is amoung the latest new, paid in advance subscribers to the Weekly. People have learned to know good newspapers when they see them, and we are flattered at the solid way in which the list of both daily and weekly are kept up. We shall, as always give our readers the best news correctly and fully stated. We find by long experience that people want the body of the news, not the mere skeleton

MR. DOLE OF HAWAII.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE REPUBLIC'S PRESIDENT.

He Is a Hercules in Size and as a Young Man Was a Wonderful Athlete—His Mind Is Judicial Rather than Executive.

Personality of a President.

The visit to this country of Sanford B. Dole, President of the Hawaiian republic, centers attention on this remarkable man and in the Chicago Times-Herald H. S. Canfield discusses in a very entertaining manner some of his characteristics. The first thing about him, says Mr. Canfield, is his size. The President of the Hawaiian republic is six feet two inches in height. He is about 60 years of age, but he has not taken on flesh. He is as trim as a man of 30. He is admirably proportioned—broad-shouldered, deep-chested, thin-flanked and long of limb. One cannot help thinking in looking at him that such bone and sinew were wasted on the supreme bench. A weak man can sit still and think as well as another. Dole would have made an ideal head for a boarding party. Properly trained, he could have attained international reputation in the prize ring. He is, or rather has been, a giant of a man. Twenty years ago his strength must have been enormous. So far as physiques go, he is not the largest living President, he is the biggest President the world ever saw. Spare of flesh as he is, he weighs more than 200 pounds.

Those who knew him as a boy, youth and man tell many tales of his prowess. The Kanakas of undiluted race are finely proportioned and well grown, but Dole was swifter of foot than any man on the islands. He handled without effort weights that others could not stir. As a mountain climber he was unsurpassed. Like the natives of the little group that lies lonely but smiling in the heart of the Pacific, he was as much at home in the water as on the land. As a swimmer, diver and shark fighter he held his own with the best of them. His skill in aquatics made him remembered at Williams College, Massachusetts, for many years. He was supreme judge of the Hawaiian Islands, but his former college mates and those who came after him thought of him only as a mighty swimmer, runner, climber, walker and fighter.

The old Puritans bred big, raw-boned, hardy men, and Dole is of Puritan stock undefiled. His ancestors lived down New Bedford way, where they believe in Medford rum and true religion. He possesses the more salient characteristics of the Puritan stock, modified by a long life spent in an easier clime and amid an easier people. He is direct, positive, earnest, personally abstemious, grave of demeanor, with little sense of humor, with a tendency to estimate observance above the thing observed; very straightforward, very moral, very honest and very reverent. He has lost the Puritan desire to force others to his way of thinking. He is not in any sense a missionary, or an evangelist, or an exhorter.

He is a handsome man even now. Undersized cynics say that avoirdupois is always more potent with the other sex than brain, and there may be something in it. Dole had both the size and the brain. His features are regular and well molded, his head is rather long, but well shaped; his eyes are a lustrous dark brown. They are much too soft for a man. Dole could never have been the loving and volcanically remorseful Lancelot, or the merrily jesting Gawaine, or Tristan of the fiery heart and conscienceless desire; but he could have been Arthur, who was handsome and good, and, with it all, something of a prig. It is Charles Reade who in one of his lesser stories, The Jilt, makes his heroine faithless, charmed from her equipoise by a magnificent beard which belonged to a man who should not have won her. When she came within the sphere of influence of that torrent of hair she was powerless. Dole's beard is splendid. It is silken and brown, slightly tinged with gray, and pours over his breast in masses.

With all of his personality, however, his reposeful manner and suggestion of latent force, one cannot talk to the Hawaiian President without realizing that he was not, is not and can never be the real leader of the revolution and the forces which maintain the present form of government. He has the judicial, not the active mind. He can plan, but is not the kind which executes. All of his previous life had unfitted him to be the man to strike the decisive blow. He was the son of a school teacher and was educated in this country, where a respect for the established order of things was ground into him. He was a lawyer until called to the bench, and was on the bench until a short time previous to Liluokalani's overthrow. He was made President because of his lifelong reputation for an unswervable rectitude. No man could say aught against him. He was a representative of the purer and better life of Hololulu. He was known also to possess some administrative ability. He was, in the vernacular of politics in this country, a "safe man." Therefore he was honored and made famous.

Mr. Dole was not elected President as many suppose. He was proclaimed President and the proclamation was ratified by the "American party." By the Hawaiian constitution he holds office for six years. His term expires at 12 o'clock midnight December 31, 1900. If annexation fails, Thurston, it is thought, will be the next President of the islands.

THE FAMINE IN IRELAND.

FULLY three-fourths of the counties in Ireland suffered from crop failures during the past season. Heavy rains, long continued, beat down the hay and rye crops and rotted what had been cut. From the same cause the potatoes failed to mature, and what there were of half-grown, half-rotted tubers were affected with a blight that rendered them unfit for food. From eating these diseased potatoes many persons have been attacked with acute choleraic symptoms, and one case proved fatal. The inhabitants of the western part of the island have nothing whatever to fall back upon, and unless the Government gives relief a repetition of the scenes of 1879 and 1847 may be expected. In Glengariff the inhabitants along the seaboard are in a state of destitution. They are attacked periodically with famine fever, and they are being pressed for arrears of rent by Lord Ardilaun, trustee of the late Earl of Bantry's estate. These arrears originally amounted to £23,000, and were bought by the trustees for £7,000. Having already collected £12,000, the trustees are now trying to extort the remainder. Counties reporting the failure of crops and a shortage in fuel are shown in black on the foregoing map.

SHE FOUGHT A WILDCAT.

A Brave Minnesota School Teacher's Experience with an Ugly Brute.

Miss Martha Culver, a school teacher who lives near Grand Rapids, Minn., is a heroine in the eyes of the residents of her section, and she is deserving of all the praise that has been lavished upon her. She had an experience with a wildcat recently which proves her to be a girl of uncommon nerve and pluck.

Miss Culver is obliged to walk five miles to and from her school every day through dense pine woods, and usually has no other companion than a small rifle, which she carries as much for sport as for protection. Timber wolves are very numerous in the vicinity of Grand Rapids and have caused the settlers great annoyance and considerable damage by preying upon their stock. Miss Culver is one of the few persons who have encountered the animals at close quarters and under desperate circumstances. Since October she has killed wolves, lynxes, wildcats, bears, moose, deer and rabbits.

One day while returning from school Miss Culver had a tussel with an ugly wildcat, which cost her a deep, painful wound upon her right arm and the ruin of a costly fur jacket which came in contact with the animal's wicked claws. She had heard the crafty step of some animal in the thicket. Presently it came—a big, hungry-looking wildcat, creeping stealthily over the tangled underbrush until it came to the clearing, where it stopped, looking cautiously about as if it expected an enemy. Miss Culver took deliberate aim and fired, but as she pulled the trigger the wildcat crouched down to the earth and the charge just grazed its back. The school teacher rushed forward to finish the job with a blow of her gun barrel, but the wounded animal sprang into the air and landed with its forepaws upon the breast and right arm of his fair antagonist, tearing the front of her jacket to shreds and cutting a deep scratch in the arm. Seizing the beast by the throat and forelegs she succeeded, by a desperate effort, in releasing herself from its grip, and another sweep of the gun put an end to the struggle.

This Was a Truly Wise Owl.

Owls are, by common consent, adjudged to be birds of ill omen; but there is an engineer on the Santa Fe road who thinks otherwise. One morning, as the east-bound overland was pulling through the mountains near Albuquerque, N. M., a big horn beaked owl dashed against the front window of the cab with such force as to break the glass, the bird dropping dead at the engineer's feet. The man was superstitious, like most railroad men, and immediately stopped the train and sent a brakeman ahead to see if the way was clear. The brakeman returned and reported a landslide across the track in the mountain pass, 200 yards ahead. Men were sent out to clear the track and in doing so they found another owl, no doubt mate to the first, caught in the crotch of an uprooted tree, crushed to death by the fall. The engineer had both owls stuffed and they now ornament his cab, because he thinks they are mascots.

The Wise Druggist.

Youth—I would—er—like a bottle of some—er—good hair restorer.

Druggist—Want it for your mustache, I suppose?

Youth—Er—yes.

Druggist—I guess it's hair orignator you want.

Instructors in elocution may teach a man how to talk, but unfortunately not what to say.

As a rule, the more successful a man is in love affairs, the less successful he is in business.

UNCLE SAM'S BUILDING AT TRANSMISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION.

The building which the United States Government is erecting for the Transmissisippi and International Exposition at Omaha occupies the place of honor on the grounds. It fronts on the lake, facing the main group of buildings, and its colossal dome will tower far above all the other buildings. Apart from the advantage given it by its position, the building will rank well at the front on account of the beauty of its architecture and decorations. Like many of the other buildings, it partakes of the classic style, the Ionic order having been used. It will be built in three sections, the wings being separated from the central structure by colonnades, connecting with the agricultural building on one side and the fine arts building on the other side. The two finest features are to be the dome and the main entrance. The entrance, which faces the center of the basin, will be reached by a broad flight of steps and through a colonnade. On either side are to be placed pavilions furnished with richly decorated domes. The whole decoration of the entrance will be done in colors, and a very rich effect will in this way be secured. The great dome will be capped by a heroic figure modeled after "Liberty Enlightening the World," and the electric illumination of Liberty's torch will be one of the most striking features of the exposition grounds at night. The height of the torch above the ground will be 178 feet.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

M'KINLEY'S BLUNDERS.

That President McKinley was ill advised enough to take up the gauntlet thrown down by Senator Teller, and to commit himself unreservedly to advocate the policy and plead the cause of the goldbug Shylocks, was deplored by the wiser and more moderate element of his own party. He cut himself loose thereby from the entire Republican party of the Southern and trans-Mississippi Western States. He made his renomination for the Presidency depend upon the adoption by the Republican National convention of 1900 of a purely gold standard platform—a platform demanding a continued and increasing reduction of the total amount of the currency, and a recall of every dollar of the paper money issued by the government directly. He had had the choice between Wolcott and Gage, and their conflicting policies, and had chosep Gage's.

Already he is threatened with retribution. Already Speaker Reed has warned him back. The Gage plan and the Indianapolis Mugwump plan have frightened certain Republican party leaders; they have called on McKinley to pause. It is announced in the Republican daily having the largest circulation in this city that there will be no further attempt to carry out the goldbug program in the present Congress. This is a great victory for the Teller resolution—a surrender of Speaker Reed to Teller.

And this is not all. The silver Republican Senators from the Pacific States, whose attitude on the currency question is identical with that of the Democrats in Congress, are for taking their revenge on McKinley. They have revolted at the Hawaiian annexation project. They look upon it as mere New England missionary work, and resent the coming to Washington of President Dole, and the unanimous support which the Republican goldbug Senators from the six Eastern States are giving to the proposed treaty now pending. The treaty is now in danger of defeat by the men whom McKinley antagonized by his speech at the New York dinner.

Thus, while the Democratic party closes up its ranks and speaks with a voice practically unanimous, the Republican ascendency, won in 1896, by fraud and double dealing, is threatened with division and defeat in the Congressional elections of the present year. The situation has a parallel to that of 1798, when the Democracy of the "old Thirteen" States roused itself under the leadership of Jefferson and Burr, to overthrow the Federalist administration of President John Adams.—New York News.

That Golden Feast.

It has been said that when President McKinley attended a fifteen thousand dollar dinner given in a ten million dollar hotel he "turned his back on the starving cotton spinners of New England." This is true in a limited sense. It would be too much to ask of the President of this great nation, made up of rich and poor, that he should refuse the courtesies of the rich. It is not so much his presence at the dinner that should cause criticism as what he said there. But, aside from the fact that the President was quite within the bounds of propriety in attending the dinner, there can be no doubt that his presence there will lose him many votes, should he succeed in being renominated for President in 1900.

Commenting on this matter, the Pittsburg Post says: "Brother McKinley should beware of these feasts of Belshazzar. They had much to do with the undoing of James G. Blaine. The banquet, magnificent in its oriental display and Babylonian luxury, was almost within earshot of some of the 125,000 New England cotton operatives who are striking against taking 70 cents off their average wage of $6 a week."

As a candidate for re-election, the Waldorf-Astoria dinner incident and the gold-bound menu-card will be quoted against McKinley; but, more than that, his attempt to carry water on both shoulders—his endeavor to pose as a gold monometallist and an international bimetallist—will be remembered. As the guest of millionaires, McKinley was in the company of those who contributed largely to his election. By his presence he has given color to the charge that he represents the trusts and the combines, and not the people, but if he is to be a candidate for re-election the votes of the people will be needed to place him in the seat of his ambition.

On Account of "Competition."

Attention has been so centered on the troubles of the cotton mills of New England that other troubles in a different line of business have probably escaped the attention of Dingley and his tariff defenders. However, while Southern competition is alleged to have caused the trouble in the cotton manufacturing districts of the East, the same excuse can hardly be urged for the reduction of wages by the Wheeling Iron and Steel Company of from 10 to 20 per cent. As a consequence of this cut, the workmen threw down their tools and are doubtless waiting to hear what Dingley has to say in connection with this wage reduction.

It is unfortunate that the advance agent of prosperity failed to bill his show to appear in Wheeling. Perhaps, however, the failure of the beneficent tariff to protect the iron and steel industry in the South is due to Northern competition. Certainly such an excuse would have as much basis as that urged for the cotton mill troubles in the East, and it is assuredly a very poor rule that won't work both ways.

Dole an Embarrassed Guest.

President Dole's object in coming to Washington seems to have been defeated through our excess of courtesy. As a "sovereign guest of the nation" it would be unbecoming in him to stroll through the capitol corridors and importune Senators to vote for the annexation treaty; neither will the rules of etiquette permit him to unreasonably prolong his visit. After having enjoyed the hospitality of the nation for a week or ten days, during which time he will be merely an animated exhibit for the amusement of Washington society, he will be obliged to return to Honolulu like one of Little Bopeep's sheep.—Philadelphia Record.

Bimetallic Clubs.

William J. Bryan brought a message of good cheer to the people of this country in his address at the Jackson day banquet.

With a clear recital of the victories won by Democracy in the year just past, the great champion of the rights of the masses coupled a prophecy of success in the future. Giving the reasons for the faith that is in him, he presages that the twentieth century will open with the money of the constitution restored, and that the people will be able to sing a new song of a nation restored.

But the eloquent advocate of bimetallism does not neglect to indicate some of the practical means through which success is to be achieved. Among them he points out the necessity of enlarging and perfecting the scope of the clubs of a nature similar to those whose members he addressed as an adjunct to the work of the party organization.

This suggestion should fall upon willing ears, and should be carried out by industrious hands. The work of forming clubs should be pushed with the greatest activity, and the remaining days of winter should be filled with labor in this direction. The campaigns of 1898 will soon be in progress, and much depends on their results.

There should be a Democratic club in every precinct. By such organizations the individual can be reached, funds can be secured and the integrity of the ballot box protected. By all means let the matter be taken in hand and the formation of Democratic clubs inaugurated at once.—Chicago Dispatch.

No Chance of Rejection.

Mr. McKinley's personal and political admirers boast that of fully 3,000 names sent by him to the Senate in the last ten months not one has been rejected. Why should they have been rejected? They were practically furnished to the President by the Republican Senators, and when they came back from the White House these Senators acted on them under an understanding that no Senator would make objections so long as his own men were approved.—New York Times.

Cabinet Officers Enough.

The cabinet is large enough. Even as it is, it is often difficult to maintain harmony among all its members and the President himself. It is alike impracticable and undesirable to give every sort of private business representation in the cabinet, and since all cannot be represented there the safe rule is to confine its membership to those who are absolutely needed for the transaction of public business.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Dear Victory for Hanna.

There seems to be an eager determination on the part of Senator Hanna's friends to prevent any disclosure of the facts regarding the way in which a majority vote was secured for that able dispenser of campaign funds. People of course ask why Hanna is afraid of the truth if he is not guilty. They are beginning to think he is afraid of the truth because he is guilty. In fact, Hanna's election is developing into a first-class scandal.—Boston Post.

McKinley a Bulwark for the Trusts.

The Dingley law is adopted. There is no help for it now. The protected manufacturers are either taking in their extortions from the pockets of the people or holding their mills idle to force reductions of wages of their employes. The sugar trust and the rest of the trusts are dividing their share of the swag. The system will, of course, be maintained while Mr. McKinley remains in the White House.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Thurston and McKinley at Odds.

While Mr. Thurston is telling us that "every dollar is as good as the best dollar ever coined" Mr. McKinley is telling us that the bonds will be paid in "the dollars that are the best at the time of payment." It seems that the Senator and the President are drifting apart.—Omaha World-Herald.

The Republican party has proved to be united upon no important measure of public policy under this administration except that of the tariff, and its tariff policy has brought it failure and discomfiture.—Boston Herald.

It has just occurred to the Eastern mine owners that they can afford to advance the wages of miners 10 cents per ton without loss. The plan is to advance the price of the product 25 cents per ton and claim a great victory for protection.—Cedar Rapids Gazette.

The free trade editors of Iowa are blaming the Dingley bill for crippling our foreign trade, while those of some of the other States are claiming that it is bringing bankruptcy to our domestic industries without producing any revenue.—Peoria Journal.

Again we are assured that the Dingley tariff has nothing to do with the strikes in the New England cotton mills. Senator Hoar says it has not, and he knows. But it is curious how often the Republicans feel called upon to volunteer this information.—New York Evening Post.

BATTLING WITH SNOW.

Great Railways Are Kept Clear in Winter at Enormous Cost.

There are thousands of men in the Northwest whose only occupation during the winter months is to fight snow. It is exciting work, too, a life that involves the greatest hardships and continual risks. One might search the world over for a more desperate and dangerous employment. The cost of these snow storms to the railroads is something enormous. It is estimated that the two leading lines running west through Minnesota and North Dakota, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, and the leading road in the northern part of South Dakota, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, have spent during one season not less than $500,000 in clearing snow from their tracks and in putting up additional fences and guards. Besides their shops become filled with equipments damaged or ruined in tussles with the hard snow-ice on miles of tracks. In addition, other roads, whose mileage is not so great or whose lines are in parts of the Northwest less exposed, are said to have spent half as much more in the same time. In all it is believed $1,000,000 is not too high an estimate of the direct loss, outside of lessened travel, to the roads in the blizzard section during a hard winter.

Under favorable circumstances the snow parts readily before the onslaught of the plow, but when the drifts are found too deep or too hard for the plows to handle hundreds of men are set at work, and most of them learn for the first time that shoveling snow is about as hard work as a man can ask. They do not dig the track open but are set off into little groups a few yards apart, and each group cuts a square hole down into the drift, perhaps clear through it, perhaps only part of the way down. Then the men are withdrawn to a safe distance and the wedge plow, driven by three or four mogul locomotives, pulling a half dozen heavily-loaded coal cars to give impetus to the mass when it strikes the bank of snow, is sent at full speed into the hollowed drift. Often the entrance is made at a speed of thirty or forty miles an hour, and usually the drift is conquered.

The introduction of the rotary plow has simplified the task of snow fighting more than anything else, especially in the prairie country. It bores its way into snow-banks, clearing just enough space to enable the waiting train to pass through. Some of the bigger plows weigh over fifty tons by themselves, and with the machinery that operates them the total weight is over 100 tons.

In a number of cases snow fences along the tracks have been blown into the cuts by winds during the storms and then covered by snow, the whole mass being frozen solidly. Into this mass rotary plows have been driven, and not being constructed to fool with sections of fencing, they have invariably got the worst of it and been disabled. One disabled machine, starting for the shops for repairs, was behind an engine that had to leave it and run for water. Twenty minutes after the locomotive had gone the track was hopelessly blocked, and it took three days to get back to that rotary plow. At another time at a station in Northern Minnesota the engine of a passenger train was detached to go to a tank 1,000 feet away. When the water had been taken the engineer found the track blocked that he had come over five minutes before, and it took him and his fireman just fourteen hours to go back that 1,000 feet to the train waiting at the station. A fearful blizzard was raging and no man from the station dared go to their relief, while they did not dare trust themselves more than a few feet from their machine. At the end of fourteen hours they had shoveled before the engine so as to get back, and they were so badly frost bitten as to be laid up for several days.

It is difficult to realize that the air can be so full of snow as to hide objects only a few feet away, and that this obstructing snow is so fine as not to be distinguishable at the same time. It is hard to understand how a man can lose his way in broad day on his own doorstep or on the way from his house to his barn, but hundreds have had the experience and scores have died in consequence.

A BLUE-BLOODED GAMBLER.

Lady Tatton Sykes, an English "Plunger" and Alleged Forger.

The attention of Englishmen, and Americans as well, has lately been held by the sensational suit of Jay, a London money lender, against Tatton Sykes, a rich old Yorkshire baronet. The money lender sued to recover $50,000, which he had loaned to Lady Tatton Sykes, on notes to which the baronet's name was attached. On the trial the latter swore that he had not signed the notes, but that his wife had been guilty of forgery.

The revelations on the trial of her ladyship's career as a high gambler amazed all England. She is known at Monte Carlo, and people who make a profession of betting on horse races have come into possession of much of her money. She plays bacarrat. She likes to buy $80,000 race winners and she is "eccentric" in many more ways. When Lord Sykes married her she was a popular woman. The third duke of Portland was her great-grandfather. The present duke is her cousin. Her aged husband has a rent roll of $500,000. Lady Sykes wanted money to play cards and the baronet gave her plenty of it, but finally protested. Lady Sykes declared that her husband encouraged her to gamble and shared in her profits, but refused to share her losses. She says she will sue him for divorce and an increase of alimony, and maybe for perjury.

This lively noblewoman paid three visits to this country. She was received with open arms by New York's best society, but her manners were too astounding even for the four hundred, and on her third visit she was left alone.

SUE AS A SURGEON.

How the Great Writer Attended to His Friend's Leg.

Eugene Sue and the eccentric wit Romieu were intimate friends, and often enjoyed the wildest pranks together. One evening they dined at the Cafe de Paris. On the way home Romieu made a misstep and sprained his ankle.

Sue, who had been a surgeon in the navy, picked his groaning companion up, placed him in a carriage and drove him rapidly home, where, after putting him to bed, he hurriedly dressed his foot.

At the commencement of the operation Romieu, who was suffering greatly, fainted away and did not come to until it was over, when he murmured his heartfelt thanks for the relief he felt. Eugene Sue, justly proud of his professional skill, went away, promising to return the next morning to renew the treatment.

When morning arrived, so did Sue, still a little anxious about the sprain. Romieu was asleep as he entered the room.

"Well, my dear friend, how do you feel this morning?" inquired Sue.

"Ah!" said Romieu, yawning, "never better in my life. My foot must be well. I have not stirred all night."

As he spoke he attempted to leap from his bed, but the action was attended with a yell that almost shook the house. He sank back upon the bed as pale as a sheet.

"What!" cried Sue. "Can your leg be broken? Does it still pain you like that? Let me see it!"

"You! You! See, then, what you have done!" cried the victim, throwing back the clothes with a dramatic gesture and a horrible face.

Sue looked. The leg that was carefully bound and wound in cloths never looked better, but the other—it was so badly swollen that the bones could not be seen.

"Alas!" cried the erstwhile surgeon. "I have dressed the wrong foot. Why didn't you tell me that it was the other one that hurt?"

"My dear Eugene," said the suffering patient, sitting up in his bed, "you are a great writer no doubt, but," waving his hand toward the door, "kindly hasten and send me a surgeon."

Good Samaritans.

Speaking of good neighborhood and kind heartedness, an example is afforded at Reading, Pa., that helps man to think well of his kind. A farmer, Washington Sand, had a large field of corn that needed cutting. He was ill and help was scarce. He left his sick bed Friday and cut a few shocks of corn. Neighbors saw him at work and knew he ought to be in bed. At night, which the full moon made almost day, Mr. Sands' neighbors went into his corn field, and before they left they had cut and shocked his crop. When the sick farmer went out to resume his labors the next morning it would have been difficult to convince him that the days of miracles have passed. Moral: So live that you may deserve the good will of your neighbors.—Utica Herald.

Death of a British Ally.

One of the most interesting figures among the Maoris of New Zealand has passed away. The famous chief, Major Royaala Waharsaha, died at the ripe old age of 90. He rendered gallant service on behalf of the Europeans in the early days of the colony. In return he had the New Zealand cross conferred upon him and received a handsome sword from the queen.

Everyone thinks he can get along with nice men, and that he is annoyed only by fools.

The work of a bill collector is always dun, it's seldom finished.

DOCTORS HAD GIVEN HER UP

A Convincing Letter From One of Mrs. Pinkham's Admirers.

No woman can look fresh and fair who is suffering from displacement of the womb. It is ridiculous to suppose that such a difficulty can be cured by an artificial support like a pessary.

Artificial supports make matters worse, for they take away all the chance of the ligaments recovering their vigor and tone. Use strengthens; the ligaments have a work to do.

If they grow flabby and refuse to hold the womb in place, there is but one remedy, and that is to strengthen their fibres and draw the cords back into their normal condition, thus righting the position of the womb.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is designed especially for this purpose, and, taken in connection with her Sanative Wash, applied locally, will tone up the uterine system, strengthening the cords or ligaments which hold up the womb.

Any woman who suspects that she has this trouble—and she will know it by a dragging weight in the lower abdomen, irritability of the bladder and rectum, great fatigue in walking, and leucorrhœa—should promptly commence the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If the case is stubborn, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., stating freely all symptoms. You will receive a prompt letter of advice free of charge. All letters are read and answered by women only. The following letter relates to an unusually severe case of displacement of the womb, which was cured by the Pinkham remedies. Surely it is convincing:

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier cured me when the doctors had given me up. I had spent hundreds of dollars searching for a cure, but found little or no relief until I began the Pinkham remedies. I had falling and displacement of the womb so badly that for two years I could not walk across the floor. I also had profuse menstruation, kidney, liver and stomach trouble. The doctors said my case was hopeless. I had taken only four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and one of the Blood Purifier when I felt like a new person. I am now cured, much to the surprise of my friends, for they all gave me up to die. Now many of my lady friends are using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound through my recommendation, and are regaining health. It has also cured my little son of kidney trouble. I would advise every suffering woman in the land to write to Mrs. Pinkham for aid."—MRS. EMMA PANGBORN, Alanson, Mich.

A BENEFACTRESS' KIND ACT

From the Evening News, Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. John Tansey, of 120 Baker street, Detroit, Mich., is one of those women who always know what to do in trouble and sickness. One that is a mother to those in distress. To a reporter she said:

"I am the mother of ten children and have raised eight of them. Several years ago we had a serious time with my daughter, which began when she was about sixteen years old. She did not have any serious illness, but seemed to gradually waste away. Having never had any consumption in our family, as we come of good old Irish and Scotch stock, we did not think it was that. Our doctor called the disease by an odd name, which, as I afterward learned, meant lack of blood.

It is impossible to describe the feeling John and I had as we noticed our daughter slowly passing away from us. We finally found, however, a medicine that seemed to help her, and from the first we noticed a decided change for the better, and after three months' treatment her health was so greatly improved you would not have recognized her. She gained in flesh rapidly and soon was in perfect health. The medicine used was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I have always kept these pills in the house since and have recommended them to many people. I have told many mothers about them and they have effected some wonderful cures.

"Every mother in this land should keep these pills in the house, as they are good for many ailments, particularly those arising from impoverished or diseased blood, and weakened nerve force."

Frightening a Grizzly.

A veteran hunter tells in the San Francisco Chronicle of a bear which packed out of a fight, frightened by a man's acrobatic performances. He says: "A remarkable instance I heard of once, where a famous guide courageously advanced upon three grizzlies, an old she-bear and two half-grown cubs, and by a series of ridiculous monkey shines and acrobatic manoeuvres on the ground within a rod or two of the bears, filled them with such astonishment and apparent fear that the three hastily retreated into the woods.

"The guide's gun had snapped in both barrels, he having drawn on the old bear before the young ones appeared. He afterwards said that it was in a fit of desperation that he tried the turning of a handspring and jumping up and down, flopping his hands and resorting to other unhunter-like measures.

"He had been told once that a hunter had frightened a mountain lion away by similar absurd movements, and he found that it worked to perfection in the case of the bears, although he did not encourage any one to go hunting grizzlies armed with nothing more than a capacity to turn somersaults."

Merit Always Wins.

The hard times of the past three or four years have been very destructive to all industrial affairs, and the railways have had an unusual amount of difficulty in making both ends meet. Roads that have, during this trying period, earned dividends while at the same time affording high class transportation facilities to their patrons, have, indeed, been fortunate. And such an event speaks well for the management of the roads.

The record of the Nickel Plate road during the recent period of industrial depression has indeed been remarkable, and it speaks most eloquently of the conservative judgment of the managers. For this road has made great and steady progress in the material improvement of its roadway and appliances, and in perfecting its equipment. The interests of the public have been in nowise neglected; in fact, the success of this road has inured to the benefit of the public as much, if not more, than to the stockholders. The condition of the road today shows this. Great and valuable improvement of a permanent character have been made—in the shape of strengthening the roadway, bridges, and other accessories, and procuring new and improved safety appliances; new coaches have been added, elegant Wagner sleeping cars put on, new and powerful engines have been placed in service, and everything has been done to raise the standard of the road, to perfect its service, and to give it a leading place among the best roads in the country. The result has been obvious. The people have observed the progressive spirit of this road, have given it a liberal patronage, have enjoyed its excellent facilities, and that tells the whole story of a highly successful enterprise.

Among the most noteworthy improvements effected by the Nickel Plate route is the introduction of a first-class dining-car service which has won the approval of the best class of patrons. Then the coaches have been illuminted by the brilliant Pintsch gas, heated by steam, and placed in the care of a colored porter. So the passengers have had the best that money can afford, at the lowest rates.

The through train service of the Nickel Plate, running in connection with the West Shore and Fitchburg railroads—over the great Hoosac Tunnel route, between New York, Boston and Chicago, ranks with the best in the country, and has become deservedly popular. Elegant new coaches, and palatial Wagner buffet sleeping cars run through without change; the service is unexcelled, the time fast, the scenery most fascinating.

Located along the south shore of Lake Erie are many substantial and attractive summer resorts that are yearly growing in popularity, and this class of travel promises a continually increasing source of revenue to the Nickel Plate road.

Poor Tommy!

Even so sacred a thing as maternal affection may sometimes provoke a smile.

"Why, Mrs. Jamesby!" exclaimed a neighbor across the back-yard fence. "Do you beat your own carpets?"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Jamesby. "I don't mind it. It's good exercise."

"I should think you'd have Tommy do it."

"Poor Tommy!" rejoined the good woman, resuming her exercise. "He belongs (whack!) to a gymnastic class downtown, and (whack!) he's so tired when he comes home in the afternoon (whack!) that I haven't the heart to ask him (whack!) to take hold of any work like this." (Whack! whack!)—Youth's Companion.

THE NEW WORLD.

Interest Is Aroused in the Canadian West.

The exhibits of grains and grasses, roots and vegetables, the product of the fertile lands of Western Canada, which were made at the several State and county fairs in some of the Western States this fall, have awakened considerable interest in the lands which the Canadian Government has opened for settlement, and which are given free to settlers. The agents of the Government, who are to be found in these States, are flooded with inquiries regarding the conditions on which these lands may be secured. Large numbers have located on these lands during the past year, and send back to their friends most encouraging reports. They say they have entered on an era of prosperity, and are well pleased with both the agricultural possibilities and the climate. The provinces of Manitoba, Assinabola and Alberta are specially adapted to diversified farming. In some parts the country is specially adapted to stock raising, and it is being profitably pursued. In these parts snow seldom remains a week at a time, the warm breezes from the ocean affecting the climate thus favorably. When the desirability of these lands is fully known there will be a rush such as has scarcely ever before been known. Information as to low railway rates, illustrated pamphlets, etc., will be forwarded with pleasure by the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada, if you are not in possession of the name of an agent of the Government.

Another Freak.

"That young man of yours," said the observing parent, as his daughter came down to breakfast, "should apply for a job in a dime museum."

"Why, father," exclaimed the young lady, in tones of indignation, "what do you mean?"

"I noticed when I passed through the hall late last night," answered the old man, "that he had two heads upon his shoulders."

5 DROPS Is the name of a simple but effective remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, asthma and kindred ailments. The trade mark is self-explanatory. Five Drops make a dose. The effect is magical. The Government's Domain.

The commissioner of the general land office has submitted his report to the Secretary of the Interior. Compared with last year, it shows a decrease of 3,298 homestead entries, aggregating 378,625 acres. Quite proportionate to this is the falling off in general health when no effort is made to reform irregularity of the bowels. This can easily be accomplished with the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, also a remedy for malaria, dyspepsia, rheumatism and liver trouble.

His Brilliant Son.

A literary man in Boston has a son who is to him as the apple of his eye. The other day he noticed a square hole in the trousers of his well-beloved, a shrieking hole just about the knee. "How is this?" asked the sire. And the boy replied: "You know I have two pairs, my best and the other. I couldn't tell them apart, so I cut a hole in the best, and now I can tell 'em and know which to put on."—Boston Journal.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

NEARLY DROWNED

And Wanted to Deed His House And Lot For His Rescue

A Bigger Fool Than Thompson's Colt Lives At Angola.

ANGOLA, IND., Feb. 12, 1898.

Special to the DAILY COURIER

While Anthony Cruson was crossing Center Lake at the northwest end of town he fell into a hole where Alvah Carpenter had cut ice from and came very near drowning. He held onto the ice with his fingers and cried for help. Charles Freygang, who happened to be near, heard him and ran to his assistance. Mr. Freygang had the presence of mind to take the ax and cut notches in the ice for a foothold before he took hold of Mr. Cruson, and by a terrible effort pulled him out. Mr. Cruson felt, so grateful that he offered to deed Mr. Freygang a house and lot for saving his life. It was a close call, as the man could not have held out a minute longer.

ANGOLA, IND., Feb. 12, 1898.

Special to the DAILY COURIER.

Yesterday a man drove to the depot to see the hay balers, and hitched his horse to a freight car and walked away some distance. Pretty soon the cars started up and pulled horse and carriage down the track at a lively pace. Fortunately not much damage resulted, but the man strained his vocal organs yelling for the engineer to "shut off steam." It is considered about as big a fool trick as Thompson's colt played on himself.

THE KIND OF MONEY.

We have often said the United States pays out money on its obligations and in all its financial dealings, just as other persons do. One of the best informed men in the country in a recent letter to the Chicago Record, confirms this statement. He says:

It is the practice of the government to make all disburnements, for ordinary expense, for the interest on the public debt and for the redemption of bonds that have matured, by checks drawn upon the sub-treasuries at New York, Chicago and elsewhere. Persons holding registered bonds receive these checks by mail. Persons having coupon bonds cut off the coupons and deposit them as so much cash in banks where they keep their accounts. The checks when received are deposited in the same manner. The banks send them to the clearing house, which sends them to to the sub-treasury for deposit, and to settle other accounts, so that it is entirely a matter of bookkeeping, and the actual cash is not handled one time in a thousand. At very rare intervals some one will come into of the sub-treasuries with a government check or a coupon and ask for the cash. The paying teller invariably inquires: "How will you have it?" If they say gold they get gold; if they say greenbacks they get greenbacks, but they usually express no choice, and the cashier hands them the money that is most convenient. If all the persons receiving interest checks should bring them to the sub-treasuries the same thing would occur. They would be given wharever money they asked for as long as it held out, and if the cashier got short of gold certificates or gold coin, or greenbacks, or any particular kind, he would tell them so and give them something else.

Brutal Murder.

Mrs. Louisa Stolz, a wealty widow of Portland, was not seen about her house Saturday and a neighbor finally forced an entrance. She was found lying on the floor, bound hand and foot with twine used for tying staves in bundles, and her mouth stuffed with cotton and bound with a bandana handkerchief and piece of window curtain, cold in death. The murderers wrote a postal card addressed to the city marshal, containing the following message:

"Go to the lady's house who lives next to the heading factory; she's been robbed. Please go."

Bloodhounds tracked the murderers to the railway station, showing that they had boarded the cars there.

THE AGE WE LIVE IN.

Wonders Become Commonplace and Marvels Hardly Excite Comment.

Monday's Daily.

These thought however will arise, for new marvels keep coming up and the new ones at least demands attention. A thing occured last night, worth noticing. At just 11 o'clock p. m. the telephone bell rang, and a Chicago daily paper called for a dispatch containing 500 words, to be "rushed" to them. The reporter hastily arose, dressed and went and called Miss Gwynn, the operator for the Western Union. They went down to her office, the message was prepared as she sent it. It took 593 words, which she sent whirling across the state 160 miles to Chicago. She finished the message, and both went home. As the reporter turned off the light and went to bed, the clock showed exactly 12, midnight. It was just an hour—sixty minutes—since he had received the telephone message at his room, till both were back to their homes. The office here being closed the message was sent to Fort Wayne and phoned up from there. It went its 160 miles and at 10 a. m. today, the paper was in Auburn and people were reading the dispatch. Truly we are privileged to live in an age of marvels.

Dandruff is Dangerous

When dandruff appears it is usually regarded as an annoyance. It should be regarded as a disease. Its presence indicates an unhealthy condition of the scalp, which, if neglected, leads to baldness. Dandruff should be cured at once. The most effective means for the cure is found in AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It promotes the growth of the hair, restores it when gray or faded to its original color, and keeps the scalp clean and healthy.

"For more than eight years I was greatly troubled with dandruff, and though a young man, my hair was fast turning gray and falling out. Baldness seemed inevitable until I began to use

Ayer's Hair Vigor

The dandruff has been entirely removed and my hair is now soft, smooth and glossy and fast regaining its original color."—L. T. VALLE, Allenton, Mo.

FOR ALL WOMEN

NINE-TENTHS of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

SAME AS DeLOME.

Uncle Sam Has Been Insulted Before and the Offender Was Fired.

It was nearly ten yerrs ago, that we had an experience very much like this DeLome incident. But it was not with a weak and foolish nation like Spain, but with the strongest in the world—England. It was in the campaign of 1888, when President Cleveland was president and making his race for a second term. His opponent was Gen. Harrison. We had been having some trouble with England in regard to the Central and South American states, matters that later on have caused a good deal of trouble. Englishmen generally opposed Cleveland for the way he handled these affairs and one of them named Murchison living at Pomona, Calif., who had been naturalized, wrote to the British minister in Washington and asked advice as to how a naturalized Englishman ought to vote whether for Cleveland or Harrison. This minister was Lord Sackville West, an experienced diplomat, who had been here for some time and was highly regarded. Lord Sackville answered the letter and while not severe he showed a hidden yet distinct dislike to the president. Somehow this letter was lost by Murchison. Someone found it and published it. Our government condemned the act of the minister and asked England to recall him. The British prime minister, Salisbury hesitated to do this as he said it would end Lord Sackville's diplomatic career. But he hinted that a dismissal by the United States would injure Sackville less, and serve the ends of justice exactly as well. So our government took the hint and our secretary state, Mr. Bayard sent Sackville a polite note saying the president was displeased and thought it best for both nations that a new man be sent us. A passport was enclosed in the letter and Lord Sackville left the next day, Oct. 30, 1888. The English still felt a little sore and did not send a new man till the next May.

QUEER ACCIDENT.

Mrs. W. C. Hartman had a queer accident Saturday. She was dusting the walls of the sitting room when the cloth she was dusting with caught in a fish hook that was hanging from the wall there. She got the cloth loose, but in doing this caught her finger on the hook and as she was standing on her tip toes to reach up, she was left helpless. Every move she made would force the hook deeper. After a good deal of trouble, she at last got the hook down, but could not then get it out. She went over to Will Schaab's to get him to cut it out with a razor, she being at the time, alone at home with the baby. Will was not able to cut it out and Dr. Swartz was called. He found that the barb of the hook made it impossible to get the hook out and then push it through till the barb was out and then broke this part off. Then with some trouble the hook was pulled back through. It was a severe ordeal, but the wound though painful, is not dangerous, and she is rapidly recovering from her frieght and injury over the queer accident.

Modern Treatment of Consumption

The latest work on the treatment of diseases, written by forty eminent American physicians, says: "Cod-liver oil has done more for the consumptive than all other remedies put together." It also says: "The hypophosphites of lime and soda are regarded by many English observers as specifics for consumption."

Scott's Emulsion

contains the best cod-liver oil in a partially digested form, combined with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. This remedy, a standard for a quarter of a century, is in exact accord with the latest views of the medical profession. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

THAT MEXICAN WAR VOTE.

Another County Heard From As Having Given One Vote That Caused That War.

We have at several times during the past ten years proved the claim that DeKalb county by the vote of one man, the father of Commissioner Shoemaker elected a state senator, whose vote sent a certain U. S. senator from Indiana, and the vote of that U. S. senator decided the vote on the annexation of Texas and consequently, the Mexican War But every little while some other county comes up with the same claim. A dispatch from Richmond, this state makes a claim now for their county, the county of Wayne. Here is what they put forth:

Strange as it may seem, it is nevertheless true that the state of Texas was admitted to the union on account of an election in this county, and the vote of one man. In the election of state senators in 1841 or 1842, Wayne county was entitled to two senators. The contest was between the whigs and democrats and one whig and one democrat was elected, the latter, David Hoover, defeating his opponent by just one vote

The legislature following elected a United States senator. Edward A. Hannegan, democrat, and Joseph Marshall, whig, were the opposing candidates, and Hannegan was elected by a majority of one vote, Hoover furnishing that

In the United States senate the bill for the admission of Texas to the union involving, as was well understood, a war with Mexico, was stubbornly contested. Finally, in 1845 it was forced to a ballot and the measure was passed by a majority of just one vote. Senator Hannegan, of Indiana, casting it.

The war with Mexico followed, resulted in the humiliation of that country and the acquisition by the United States not only of Texas, but the vast territory embracing California, Arizona, New Mexico and the whole of the so called Gadsden purchase, all as the result of a single ballot cast in Wayne county, Indiana.

Why Men Cannot Sing.

"Women," says Dr. H. L. Hastings, in the Journal of Medicine and Science, "go with their necks bare, and men keep theirs swathed and bandaged, and ten women have sweet voices to one man. A man's voice should be as pure as a woman's. Why is it not? He is choked and shaved."

WITHOUT A DOUBT.

Unquestionable Proof that Effect of LaGrippe is Cured by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The number of physical wrecks resulting from the La Grippe is truly alarming. The peculiarity of the disease asserts itself after the attack, by becoming seated in some of the nerve centers, usually the brain. The many remedies and methods of treatment by physicians have little if any benefit. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has proven to be a specific, it cures every case. A recent instance coming to our notice, is that of Joseph Lee, Entrican, Mich., who writes the following under date of Oct. 31st.

"I was prostrated from the effects of La Grippe; during the first six months I was treated constantly by two physicians without benefit. I then changed and was treated by another during the six months following with same result. I continued to grow worse until I could not sleep day or night; my mind was harassed by evil thoughts—I was frantic. In this condition I commenced using Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; after taking one bottle I felt much better; I took two more and was restored to health. I heartily endorse Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; for all forms of nervous disease." Signed Joseph Lee. Nerves are alike in all, you can be cured as Mr. Lee was.

If you have not fully recovered from La Grippe use this valuable medicine at once. Your case is the same as thousands of others cured by it. It cures every case.

THE LUETGERT TRIAL

It Ends With a Life Sentence For the Big Sausage Maker.

This is at last over. The jury at Chicago, Tuesday night, after a few hours, agreed that he was guilty of the murder of his wife, and sentenced him to imprisonment for life. This ends one of the most remarkable trials that ever was known.

In May of last year it was found that Mrs. Luetgert had disappeared and when he was asked about her, gave evasive or contradictory answers. He was arrested on the belief that in some mysterious way he had made away with his wife. A trial of many weeks followed. It was shown that on the night of her disappearance he had been at work all night in his big sausaue factory. The vats in which sausage meat was usually boiled or steamed were found to contain strange matter, including fragments of bones, and it was proved he had put into one vat a large quantity of crude potash, and the belief was that Mrs. Luetgert's body had been dissolved in the "middle vat" by the potash. In the same vat, two finger rings were found, exactly such rings as she was known to wear. Many other strange facts were brought out, and the motive was believed to exist in the frequent quarrels they had had. But the case was so hard fought and the testimony so confusing, that the jury disagreed after a long struggle Luetgert was rearrested and again brought to trial, and after a fight nearly as hard as the first, he is convicted. The evidence was all circumstantial and that we suppose is the reason he was not hanged. He has all long declared his innocence and claimed that his wife was alive, and every few days there would come a rumor that she had been seen and talked with at certain places. But his failure to bring her into court evidently made the jury believe she was dead and that he had killed her. The crime if he did it, was one of the most brutal ever known, and the trial one of the most remarkable.

HER SECOND VENTURE.

Our people will remember that two or three years ago, Mary Loveland was married to Frank Jones. She had lost her brother and mother and was to a great extent without a home or means of support. It was hoped by her friends that she and Mr. Jones could get along so that each might have a home. But she did not seem to be suited and they had trouble soon after they were married and housekeeping. Finally, last July she left him and came into town and lived with different families doing some work for her support. At the October term of court she sued for a divorce and Mr. Jones did not fight against it and it was given her. Later she went back to Corunna, her old home and lived with a widow there, a former neighbor. Now comes word that she is again married, this time to the Mr. Otto who some years ago moved to Auburn and married the widow of Tom Cool. The question is will the second venture be more successful than the other?

HOW TO FIND OUT

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. To freque t desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamplet both sent free by mail. Mention THE AUBURN COURIER, and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuinness of this offer.

Live Quail on London Market.

The only foreign game birds which arrive here alive are the quails. They reach us in the early spring, just when every other kind of game is out of season and young ducks and chickens either still in the shell or extravagantly dear. So are the quails, but, as the old farmer said of the curacoa at 5 shillings a glass, they are "wurth it, too." The Egyptian quails come first. A month later the Italian quails arrive. Their numbers seem never to diminish, though 17,000 were brought to Rome in one day. Dealers collect them from Sicily, the Naples coast and that strip of sandhills between the Pontine marshes and the sea, stretching from Nettuno to Astura. The Italian birds all come by rail via Paris, in the small, low cages, which prevent them hurting themselves by trying to fly. As soon as they arrive they are sent to London to be fattened, unless it is intended to use them for winter fattening, when they are kept in Paris. Cornhill Magazine.

WHAT A WHOPPER.

The Greenler Co. are not only the busiest institution in town but are getting the biggest logs ever hauled to the city. The other day they purchased of D. D. Metcalf east of town and had delivered in their yard one eleven foot elm log which contained 2,313 feet. This is probably the largest log that has ever been hauled to this city, and to give our readers some idea of its dimensions will state that it was over six feet in diameter at the butt end.

REMARKABLE LONGEVITY

Their Days Have Been Long in The Land.

The Scriptural Three-Score and Ten Years Looks Small Beside Their Record

We have long been aware that the Ralston family, always so prominent in Auburn, were a race of remarkable longevity. So we have been at some pains to get date in regard to it. We find a list that is remarable especially in the present days. Here is the result of our investigation:

—Robert Ralston, Plymouth, Ohio, died at the age of 86; James W. of the same place, died at 86; Jane Hall, of Plymouth, at 91; Margaret Hall at Ashland, Ohio, at 86; Mary Griffith, at Plymouth, O., 85; Samuel W. Ralston, died at Auburn at the age of 83; Alexander Ralston in Tennessee at the age of 75; Maria Dickson at Bucyrus, Ohio, at 78; James Ralston, at Plymouth, at 89; Robert Ralston jr. at Clinton, Iowa at 73; David Ralston, now visiting the relatives here is 85, and Julia Bodley at Columbia City is 83. The two last named are the only ones in the above list, now living. Of those who have passed away, ten in all, the average is 83.2 years. The average already reached by the two living is 84. And counting these two at their present ages, the sum total represented by the years of all, is exactly 1000 years, or the present average of all, including the two survivors, is 83⅓ years. As David Ralston and Mrs. Bodley, seem good for several years yet, we look to see the final average go past 85. Can any other family show such a record of longevity?

NEWS IN THE OLD DAYS.

How the Wreck of a Steamship in 1853 Was Reported.

The ocean passenger steamer Franklin ran ashore on the south side of Long Island, opposite Center Moriches, at 8 o'clock on the morning of July 8, 1852, says the New York Herald. There was a dense fog prevailing at the time and the officers of the vessel lost their bearings completely and did not know exactly where they were when the steamer stranded. Surfmen and boats were not as plentiful along the coast in those days as they are now. Several hours elapsed before boats were secured equal to the task of making their way through the surf to the steamer. Until communication was had with the vessel nothing was known about her. Finally a boat's crew came ashore and the vessel's name and destination were made known. Her commander made arrangements with Sidney B. Topping to go to New York and report the stranding of the steamer to the board of underwriters, whose office at that time was in Wall street. Mr. Topping at once crossed the bay to the mainland and harnessed up his horse to a light wagon and started for Patchogue, fourteen miles away. It was just noontime when he stepped into the wagon. At Patchogue he changed horses and continued his journey to Babylon. Another change of horses was made at that place and Mr. Topping started for Jamaica. His horse was pretty well winded when that place was reached and he changed animals and continued on to Brooklyn, and crossing the ferry drove to the underwriters' office in Wall street. It was just 6 o'clock in the evening when he ascended the office steps. He had made the journey of a little more than seventy miles in exactly six hours. Having reported the full details of the wreck to the underwriters, Mr. Topping drove around to the office of a leading newspaper and furnished the information for publication. He received a check for $50 from the paper and was told that if he had brought a copy of a foreign newspaper from Franklin they would have given him $100. Mr. Topping was postmaster in Westhampton during the war and was a prominent figure on the east end of Long Island. He died in Westhampton at the age of 77.

GOOD FOR THEM

We watch for good news from the Pension Department. Lately we have noticed several streaks of luck have come Auburn's way. This time we note that Phil. Myers after long waiting and deserving has had a raise in his pension from $10 a month to $14 a month. Good for him. Then we see that Wm. Werntz, of Auburn Junction also is among the lucky ones, getting an original pension of $8. Let every worthy veteran have his dues.

J. G. RAUB DEAD.

Special to the DAILY COURIER
SEDAN, IND., Feb. 17, 1898.

Mr. J. G. Raub, of Sedan, Ind., died at the home of his son-in-law, S. W. Guthrie, that place, last evening at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Raub has been afflicted for the past several months with general debility, and last December was confined to his bed with some nervous disease which developed into paralysis, his left side and lower extremeties being totally paralyzed. The death of Mr. Raub completes a sad list. Eighteen months ago the family consisted of four, all in splendid health, but since then, all with only a few months intervening have died. The funeral services will be conducted in the Lutheran church at Sedan, Saturday, Feb. 19, at 10 a. m. and the interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

CONSUMPTION POSITIVELY CURED

Mr. R B Greve, merchant, of Chilhowe, Va, certifies that he had consumption, was given up die, sought all medical treatment that money could procure, tried all cough remedies he could hear of, but got no relief; spent many nights sitting up in a chair; was induced to try King's New Discovery, and was cured by the use of two bottles For past three years has been attending to business and says Dr. King's New Discovery is the grandest remedy ever made, as it has done so much for him and also for others in his community. Dr. King's New Discovery is guaranteed for coughs, colds and consumption. It don't fail. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCoad,s drugstorr.

The Czar's Rebuke to His Soldiers.

An interesting story is being told of the way the czar recently administered a rebuke to his officers. It seemed there is a great deal of extravagance and luxury among the upper grades of the Russian army, and a young officer who had been guilty of riding in a tramcar for the sake of economy had been asked by his fellow officers to send in his resignation. When the czar heard this he himself rode down to the barracks in a tramcar and presented himself before his officers with the startling question whether they desired him to send in his resignation.—St. James' Gazette.

Save The Children.

When children are attacked with cough, cold and croup, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will prove a quick and sure cure. Mr. Elmer E. Absorbed Nothing.

At a gathering of Cambridge undergraduates the head of one of the colleges was the subject of a number of flippant criticisms. A fellow of the college heard the talk and proceeded to administer a rebuke. "You are probably ignorant, young gentlemen," he said, "that the venerable person of whom you have been speaking with such levity is one of the profoundest scholars of our age. Indeed, it may be doubted whether any man of our age has bathed more deeply in the sacred fountains of antiquity." "Or come up drier, sir," was the reply of the undergraduate.

McNabb always keeps the best line of choice meats to be had in the market.

CRUEL AND FALSE

To Lie about the Living is Base To Lie About the Dead is a Crime

Everyone who knows the managers of the Garrett Clipper knows them to be unreliable, and that their paper continually teems with falsehoods and scurrility. But it has generally leveled its falsehood-poisoned shafts at the living rather than the dead. That course was low enough in all reason, but to assault and slander the dead, descends to even a lower level. We allude to its attack on the late Treasurer, Henry Hines. Its article is headed "Eighteen Hundred Short" and goes on to state that when Treasurer Henry Hines died last July, he was short to that amount. The first sentence in the article reads:

It is said that Treasurer Hine has discovered eight hundred dollars of missing funds, which must be accounted for by Ex-treasurer Hines or his bondsmen."

We presume it means $1800 instead of $800, as that is the sum used all through the article, the conclusion of which is:

This matter of Henry Hines should be looked after immediately, by the leaders of the democratic party. It is undoubtedly being kept quiet for campaign purposes; at any rate there is something about it that shows deceit and trickery.

There is also more or less allusion to the commissioners, and a statement that the county is still short some $50,000 growing out of the late troubles in the county offices. Of course this is not true, as the bondsmen of the several officers have already made good the county's losses, as shown by official statements.

But as to the Hines matter. The books show what has been done, and Dr. F. M. Hines, who had charge of the settlement of his father's affairs confirms them.

When Mr. Hines suddenly died at his home, July 6, the safe in the treasurer's office was locked, just as he had left it the evening before. When it was opened, it was found to contain about $1800 in money. This money Dr. Hines took to the Farmers Bank and left it as a special depost. Mr. Ernst, the expert accountant was sent for, to make the settlement, between the late Treasurer Henry Hines and the appointed treasurer, S. H. Hine. Mr. Ernst found that the late treasurer owed the county $50,354.82. There were found road receipts and similar credits $25,349.33. The balance due the county, $25,005·49 was promptly paid when the new man took the office, July 26. It was paid in checks on various banks, for the money the late treasurer had deposited with them, and also the $1800 in cash in the Farmers Bank, was used. So it will be seen that every penny was paid to the county, and paid at once, on the minute. This was as Mr. Hines would have done himself had he been alive, for he was not the man to cause the loss of a penny to anyone. It should also be said that Isaac Hague, who was one of the commissioners and who helped at the June settlement when Mr. Hines was alive and at the settlement after Hines death, in July, and he says, both were correct. James H. Rose, who is the county attorney, says he was present at the June settlement and that it was all right, but was not present at the special settlement after Mr. Hines' death The present treasurer does not know of any such shortage.

So, this barefaced falsehood, while eminently characteristic of the Clipper will strike the better portion of people of all shades of politics and opinion as a cowardly and cruel stab at the innocent dead. Will it have the manliness and decency, to come out and acknowledge its crime?

CASE DISMISSED.

The Smithfield Township Matters Thrown Out at Columbia City.

As noted in the DAILY COURIER attorney James H. Rose went over to Columbia City Wednesday to care for the State's interest in the case against James G. Blake, ex-trustee of Smithfield. There had been a belief out that the indictment against Blake was not sound and on reaching Columbia City, he found that a motion had been made by Blake's attorneys to have the indictment quashed. Mr. Rose found that their reasons were good, for the indictment charged him with embezzling the funds of the "civil township" when it should have read "school township" which means an entirely different and distinct corporation. The township fund is a distinct fund as is also the school fund. And as he had been charged with misapplying the school funds the indictment should have said so. The case was dismissed and as it is now outlawed will never be called up again. There is one good thing h is, that the expensive law suits will be stopped and save that township a lot of money. It is doubtful whether any punishment could have been secured any way. A trustee may be incompetent, reckless, dishonest or unfortunate and waiste the money of his township. But it is hard work to prove him a criminal. The remedy for the people is to make careful selections of their officers. Whether the present trustees will prove better than the previous ones, remains to be seen. At all events the new laws compel both them and the county commissioners to keep closer watch over the expenditures of public money.

SETTLED BY SUIT.

Bailed Hay in Justice Walter's Court Yesterday.

Yesterday, there was another suit before squire Walter. Jacob Stamets had sold a lot of hay to Frank Pyles and Jerry Carmer, who bailed it and put it into their warehouse at the Lake Shore yards. They were to pay $6 a ton, but after getting it in the car said it was second grade and only worth $5 a ton. Stamets wanted to get the hay back, but the car was sealed. He then brought suit, J. E. Pomeroy being Stamets attorney while, Baxter and Brown were for Pyles and Carmer. Stamets offered to take back the hay, about 28 tons and allow something for the bailing but this was not accepted After getting in part of the evidence, it was compromised, each party paying its own witnesses and half the costs of officers leaving the hay at $6 and the defendant pay $4.50 for broken scales.

SAMEAL GRILL DEAD.

Special to the DAILY COURIER.
SPENCERVILLE, IND., Feb. 19, 1898.

Samuel Grill, whose skull was fractured by a plank which was whirled from a saw two weeks ago, died this morning at 6 o'lock. In him Spencerville loses one of her best citizens.

More Royal Wheelers.

The ranks of the women bicyclists abroad have recently been added to by no fewer than three royal personages, one of whom is the empress of Russia, who learned to ride during a visit to Darmstadt. The Princess Leopold of Bavaria, the oldest daughter of the emperor of Austria, has taken to the wheel on the advice of her physician, and the Princess Frederick Augustus of Saxony, is now engaged in her first efforts, the king and queen of Saxony having, after some persuasion, given their august permission to their royal daughter to cycle. But the tale that has been going the rounds with regard to the young queen of Holland has been contradicted. Her young majesty, it is said, disapproves of cycling for women.

"Catarrh was my great affliction for a number of years. Doctors did not help me. By a friend's advice I began using your medicines, and was perfectly cured after taking three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."
J. MURPHY, 173 Mulberry St., Newark, N.J.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.
McELREE'S Wine of Cardui
is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.
For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.
THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

Genteel Poverty in Washington.

"I never saw so much genteel poverty before as exists in Washington, D. C. You have no idea how many of these department clerks tremble in their boots for fear of losing their positions with a change of administration and enforcement of the civil service rules. The departments unfit both men and women for any other occupation. You would be surprised to know how many of the fashionable society men are department clerks. Some of the most attractive among them get a majority of their meals out of society. They rent a room for a small amount and dine out every night, frequently getting a lunch or a breakfast from a friend. In return they make it their business to be entertaining and always in good humor, ready to be of service and to initiate new people into the etiquette of the place."—Ladies' Home Journal.

FROM EVERY CORNER

OF THE WORLD THIS FRESH NEWS WAS GLEANED.

The Head of the Salvation Army Thinks the Cuban War Should Stop —A $260,000 Fire at Pittsburgh—Bad Crossing Accident.

BLOOD-THIRSTY ESTERHAZY.

Still Very Anxious to Butcher the Jews of Paris.

The Paris correspondent of the London Daily News sends to that paper interviews with M. Zola and Major Esterhazy. Zola is described as being calmly buoyant. He said:

"Whatever the result of the trial, we are producing a better effect than we dared to hope. The Government is now forced to the position of a defendant. The comic part of the affair is that the public Prosecutor for the last two days has barely opened his lips."

Count Esterhazy said: "It is almost impossible that this drama will reach its close without scenes of violence. It is likely enough that the streets of Paris will be strewn with 100,000 dead bodies before this miserable business is concluded.

"I should ask nothing better than to lead my regiment against the Jews of Paris. I would shoot them without hatred or anger, but as a work of public safety, as if they were so many rabbits.

"I have been wantonly ruined by an infamous combination. The mob of Jews has hunted me without pity, but I never knew fear, and I would face a whole crowd of my accusers with a walking stick."

War Should Stop.

Gen. William Booth of the Salvation Army, said at Cincinnati recently:

"The Cuban butchery should stop. It should stop if need be by the intervention of the United States. England is not jealous of America. The individual Englishmen would see young America prosper in peace. I do not think that the fur of the British lion would rise should 'Uncle Sam' fight the dons. The Cuban war should stop at any cost—and that is admitting a great deal for as conservative an Englishman as I am."

Bad Crossing Accident.

A buggy in which Col. Richard P. De Hart, the well-known lawyer, and Thomas Lonergan were riding, was run into at Main and Third streets, Lafayette, Ind., by a street car, badly injuring the occupants. Col. De Hart was badly bruised on the hip, head and hands, and Lonegan's leg was broken. The buggy was a complete wreck. The accident will greatly interfere with Col. De Hart's canvas for State Senator, for which he is a candidate on the Republican ticket.

Pittsburgh's Scourge.

Three important business houses were damaged by fire, involving a loss of $260,000. The fire started on the ninth floor of the National Wall Paper Building, 815 Pennsylvania avenue, and within twenty minutes after it was beyond control. The flames communicated to H. Childs & Co.'s nine-story building at 813 Pennsylvania avenue, and from this to the building of M. Oppenheimer & Co., at 811.

Lost on the Ice.

Fifteen to eighteen fishermen, who were caught in a blinding snow storm at Buffalo, are lost on the ice on Lake Erie. It is feared they will be frozen before the air clears to permit searching parties to go after them. Bonfires are blazing all along the beach and bells are wringing and whistles blowing to guide those who may come within sight or sound.

Miss Willard Dead.

Frances E. Willard, President of the W. C. T. U., died at the Imperial Hotel, New York. She had been ill for a week with the grip. Her life was one of the busiest in noble causes and uplifting reforms. She was idolized by millions of people who have been charmed by her oratory and saint-like personality.

Acquiring New Arms.

Both the German and French armies are busily replacing all field guns with new quick firers at an enormous expense. Both governments have guarded the secret wonderfully well. The German rearming will be completed by the middle of this year, and the French before the end of 1899.

Fifty Persons Perished.

A special from Juneau, Alaska, dated Feb. 12, confirms the news of the loss of the Clara Nevada and says: The cause of the disaster was doubtless the explosion of her boilers. Of fifty people on board, none are believed to have been saved.

Killed a Baby.

At Spring Valley, Ill., the child of Mike Bogatis, a miner, was killed while asleep in its cradle by Stanislas Perook, who hurled a stone at Alex Frabiska. It missed him and the stone struck the infant on the head.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Tramps in Svengali Role.

Two tramps entered the hermit home of Levi Rodgers, centenarian, at Ellejoy, Tenn. They hypnotised him and stole $1,000. The money taken was the result of fifty years' economy and was in gold.

Five Years for Filibustering.

The United States Court of Appeals at Philadelphia affirmed the verdict in the case of John D. Hart, who was convicted on the charge of aiding the steamer Laurada in a filibustering expedition to Cuba. The sentence imposed was two years' imprisonment.

Spanish Workmen Protest.

Barcelona special: Thirty thousand people, mostly workmen, and orderly, demonstrated here against the torture of the anarchists at Mont Juch Fortress. Resolutions of protest and demanding the punishment of the torturers and revision of the trial were adopted, and will be forwarded to the Government.

Tamper with Mail.

It is known on the highest authority that the real reason for sending the United States torpedo boat Cushing to Havana was that the Spanish authorities have been tampering with mail sent to the battleship Maine in Havana harbor.

SHIP BLOWN UP

Cruiser Maine Destroyed in Havana Harbor.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE

Two Hundred and Fifty-eight American Sailors Dead.

SUSPECT THE SPANIARDS

Belief That the Terrible Affair Was Not Accidental.

WILD TALK OF WAR.

Many Americans Would Wipe Spanish Off the Earth.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT AMERICAN SAILORS DEAD.

Terrible Destruction of the Magnificent Battleship Maine Was the Greatest Calamity that Has Ever Befallen the Navy of the United States.

Powerful United States Naval Vessel Sent by This Government to Cuban Waters Lies at the Bottom of the Bay a Charred and Torn Hulk—Catastrophe Took Place at 10 O'clock at Night, When All the Sailors Except Those Detailed for Duty Were Sleeping—Explanation Which Seems to Best Fit Circumstances Is That a Torpedo Was Exploded Under the Ship.

THE United States battleship Maine lies at the bottom of Havana harbor, a charred and torn hulk, and a tomb for over 250 of her crew. She was blown up about 10 o'clock Tuesday night by a terrific explosion said to have been an accident. The explosion occurred in the bow of the vessel and at an hour when the honest sailors had retired, while most of the officers had returned from the gayeties of the city. Whether the magazine of the ship was fired by accident or treachery, whether bomb or torpedo placed beneath the bow sent the Maine to the bottom of Havana bay and its blue-jackets to their long home perhaps no man shall ever know. All that sailors and officers of the fated craft could say was that there was a crash and a roar—that men were hurled headlong from their bunks upon the cabin floors, and that out of the darkness, the grinding of bursting timbers, the surging of the water rushing back to fill the great chasm torn by the explosion, came the screams of wounded men and long red jets of flame.

COMMANDER SIGSBEE.

Ten minutes later and the Maine, all afire from stem to stern, began to settle in the water. Over the side went the sailors, half clad or clad not at all, flinging themselves into the bay, still dazed, bruised and bleeding. Out of the red murk and the horrible uproar could be heard the loud voices of officers, ordering and directing, cool and plucky in the face of death, showing even in that hour of horror the grand courage and the steady discipline that won at New Orleans and Mobile—the grandeur of Farragut, the iron nerve of the Kearsarge's crew upon the rock of Roncador. There were no weak souls nor cowards there; the officers held place and power even as at a dress review, and to their coolness and their courage is due the fact that the panic did not result in even heavier loss of life than the explosion and the water caused combined.

The nation mourns for those who perished with the Maine. Such a startling vision of sudden death has not for years been presented to the public mind. The tragedy appeals to all American hearts. For all must feel that the lost stood ready at an instant call to make of their bodies a rampart between their country and their country's foes. There have been few such disasters in modern times. The catastrophes to the Royal George, to the Victoria, and, in Apia harbor, to the Nipsic, the Vandalia and the Trenton are among the few comparable to it.

A dispatch from Havana said that the wildest excitement prevailed in the city. The wharves were crowded with thousands of people. There was a rush and hurry and it is claimed that the Spaniards bent every energy to the saving of the doomed Americans. Out from the great black sides of the Spanish warships, says the dispatch, flew boat after boat and the Spanish sailors never pulled faster oars. Over the bay they skimmed, seizing here an arm extended from the water in the last struggle of the drowning man, grasping there a drenched blue-jacket, until the boats were full of rescued men and no more living bodies could be found upon the surface of the water.

The shock of the explosion wrecked every window in Havana. Capt. Gen. Blanco was among the first to realize what had happened, and he spared no exertion to aid Capt. Sigsbee's men. Admiral Manterola and Gen. Solano proved worthy coadjutors, and the Spanish sailors and soldiers alike did all that was in their power. Capt. Sigsbee was not hurt, although the earlier dispatches represented him as severely wounded. The explosion took place directly under the quarters of the common sailors, missing the officers' cabin by many yards.

The wounded sailors in hospital declared that they were utterly at a loss as to the cause of the explosion—that they were all asleep when the crash came, and that all they could do was to pick themselves up from the floor, grope their way amid falling timbers, smoke and flame and take to the water and the Spanish boats.

Capt. Sigsbee says the explosion occurred in the bow of the vessel. He received a wound in the head. Orders were given to the other officers to save themselves as best they could. The latter, who were literally thrown from their bunks in their night clothing, gave the necessary orders with great self-possession and bravery. The first theory was that there had been a preliminary explosion in the Santa Barbara magazine, with powder or dynamite, below the water. Admiral Manterola believes that the first explosion was of a grenade shell that was hurled over the navy yard. When the explosion occurred Captain Sigsbee was below, but he rushed up on deck in his shirt sleeves and gave orders. Efforts were at first made to save the vessel, but when Captain Sigsbee realized the extent of the damage done and that many casualties had occurred he bent all his energies to assuring the safety of his men.

The Secretary of the Navy at Washington received the following telegram from Capt. Sigsbee: "Maine blown up in Havana harbor 9:40 and destroyed. Many wounded and doubtless more killed and drowned. Wounded and others on board Spanish man-of-war and Ward line steamer. Send lighthouse tenders from Key West for crew and few pieces of equipment still above (water). No one had other clothes than those upon him.

"Public opinion should be suspended until further report. All officers believed to be saved. Jenkins and Merritt not yet accounted for. Many Spanish officers, including representatives of Gen. Blanco, now with me and express sympathy.

"SIGSBEE."

WE ARE READY TO STRIKE.

Within 24 Hours Our Ships Could Blockade Every Cuban Port.

A New York dispatch says: Three flag officers of the United States navy are watching events at Washington, Madrid and Havana with great interest. They are Rear Admiral Montgomery Sicard, commanding the North Atlantic squadron; Rear Admiral John A. Howell, commanding the European squadron, and Capt. Colby M. Chester, senior officer in command of the South Atlantic squadron. Each of these three commanders received telegraphic orders to hold his ship in readiness for active service and to keep it fully coaled and provisioned at all times. There is an American flag floating over frowning broadsides of guns within easy striking distance of every port on the northern and southern coasts of Cuba.

Within twenty-four hours from the declaration of hostilities every port in Cuba and Porto Rico could be sealed by a blockade, while a fleet of our ponderous battle ships would be thundering away at the castles which guard Havana harbor.

HOUSE PASSES RESOLUTIONS.

Sympathy Expressed for the Families of the Dead.

In the National House of Representatives Wednesday Mr. Boutelle, chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the House of Representatives has learned with great sorrow of the calamity which has caused the destruction of the United States battle ship Maine and the appalling loss of more than 250 lives and the wounding of many others of the gallant defenders of our flag, and that the House expresses its sympathy for the injured and its sincere condolences with the families of those who have lost their lives in the service of the nation."

SPANISH BATTLE SHIP VIZCAYA.

WAR SPIRIT AT WASHINSTON.

Feeling That the Maine Disaster Resulted from Spanish Treachery.

Washington was aflame Wednesday with the war spirit. Everybody eagerly read the extra newspapers carrying latest dispatches from Havana and the strained efforts of those high in official life to show the blowing up of the Maine to have been an accident only added to the impatience of the general public. Both houses of Congress assembled at noon under the most exciting conditions since war times.

"From the advices received from Lee and from other sources in Havana," said Secretary Long, "I am not inclined to think it was an act of Spanish hostility. I have no explanation to make, but the fact that Capt. Sigsbee has asked that public opinion be suspended leads us to believe that those who are in a position to have the best information do not regard it as a hostile act. The dispatch from Consul General Lee says the cause of the explosion is yet to be investigated, but it also says that the Spanish have rendered all possible assistance. Nothing yet received indicates that the disaster was the result of Spanish treachery, and we will proceed with care until we have further particulars."

Public opinion, however, refused to be suspended, and to say that the capital was excited over the report of the destruction of the Maine is but to give but a meager and inadequate idea of the real condition of affairs Wednesday. It was the only topic of conversation. There were extra papers on the streets every fifteen minutes, people wildly shouted their opinions of the catastrophe, and on all hands were talk of war and demands for more information. Treachery was the word on all lips. No one could be persuaded that the affair was not of Spanish origin. It was thought that some Spanish agent secured access to the vessel and exploded a grenade near the ammunition magazine.

If Spanish treachery did not destroy the magnificent battle ship Maine and murder more than 250 American seamen, Spain must produce the proofs that the Maine was blown up by some other power than that of a Spanish torpedo. Washington advices on Thursday stated that officers of the navy did not believe that there could have been an accidental explosion on the Maine from spontaneous combustion or any other cause, when the battle ship was lying at anchor without steam in her boilers, or coal in her forward bunkers, and with only projectiles and such ammunition as might be exploded by concussion in her forward magazine. While some officials at the Navy Department talked of accidental explosions, there were few of practical experience who did not privately scout such theories, and said that to advance them means to condemn the modern war vessel. The corps of constructors at the Navy Department insisted that the explosive power must have come from the outside of the vessel, because it is their business to prevent accidents of this kind occurring within the hull, and they claimed that it is impossible for the vessel to have been destroyed by an explosion in one of the magazines. Chief Naval Constructor Hichborn said that an accidental explosion was impossible, leaving the inference that he believed the explosion to have been due to treacherous hands.

The President and his cabinet tried to keep down the excitement until full reports could be received from Captain Sigsbee. They did not care to base their judgment on dispatches that must be passed upon by the Spanish censors in charge of the telegraph wires at Havana. They therefore followed the theory of an accidental explosion because it would be very serious for the administration publicly to assume that the Maine could have been destroyed in any other way, until they had the full details of this affair from the commander of the ship.

It is asserted by naval officers that the harbor of Havana is full of submarine torpedoes, which need only an electrical connection to make an explosion possible. The theory that the Maine was destroyed by a torpedo found ready believers. Nobody was willing to assert that the Spanish Government was primarily responsible for touching off a torpedo, but among the hotheads roaming the streets of Havana in the state of excited feeling now existing there are many, it is believed, who would not hesitate to commit such an outrage.

It is not known the depth of the water in which the Maine sank, but it is known that the harbor of Havana is the vilest on the globe, and that the great mass of steel, weighing many thousand tons, has probably sunk in the mud of that harbor, where divers can neither live nor work. The Maine at the time of the explosion was at anchor about 500 yards from the arsenal and some 200 yards from the floating dock.

There is no precedent for an accident of this sort. No ship of war has ever been mysteriously blown up. Naval experts are unanimous in the opinion that an accident to the powder magazine could never result in a catastrophe of this sort, and they say the precautions taken on board a modern man-of-war make an accidental explosion in the ammunition a practical impossibility.

COUNTRY GREATLY EXCITED.

Seems as Though Providence Were Leading Two Countries to War.

The agitation and suppressed excitement that prevail throughout the country are shown by the telegrams of inquiry that have been received at the various departments and newspaper offices and by members of Congress as to the probable cause of the explosion. And it is clear that, however it may be explained, this awful calamity must seriously increase the tension between the United States and Spain by provoking excitement, suspicion and irritation. The comments of many public men as furnished in the press dispatches cannot be overlooked by the Spanish. And if the explosion is not satisfactorily explained it may be expected that similar opinions will be offered in Congress and elsewhere in such form as to give great provocation. The feeling in Congress has reached a more acute stage than ever before. The Dupuy de Lome incident intensified the prejudice against Spain and developed a hostility that was never so bitter as to-day in any quarter and is particularly pronounced among those who have been preserving an impartial judgment and a conservative attitude. The excitement from one incident does not subside before another even more aggravating occurs. And it seems as if Providence were leading both countries into war.

Among naval officers, members of Congress and high officials in the inner circles of the administration, a Washington correspondent asserts that there was on Thursday only one opinion as to the cause of the horrible tragedy in Havana harbor. They believed that either with or without orders some Spanish officer sprung a mine or set off a torpedo under the Maine and sent her to the bottom. They grant that it is too horrible an act to charge against any civilized nation or people, but it is in keeping with many other horrible deeds that have been committed by Spaniards in Cuba since this war began.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE HARBOR OF HAVANA.

WAS A FLOATING FORT.

Maine One of the Best War Ships in the American Navy.

The great explosion that rattled the foundations of the Cuban capital and struck terror to the heart of every human being in Havana at the same time, in a few seconds obliterated nearly $3,000,000 worth of public property and rendered useless the great mass of steel that had been called the battle ship Maine. She was a proud, strong ship, and she will go down into history alongside the Royal George, the Victoria and other men-of-war which were wiped out of existence with their crews under appalling circumstances.

The Maine was one of the best ships in the American navy. In an up and up fight she would have stood her own against any boat of her class afloat. She was not a cruiser. She was built to fight, and she was a floating fort. All the ingenuity of modern naval architecture was brought to bear upon her construction.

CONSUL-GENERAL LEE.

For six years the labor of men was put into her. Her keel was laid in the Brooklyn navy yard in October, 1888. She was launched on Nov. 19, 1890. The construction of the Maine was authorized by an act of Congress passed Aug. 3, 1886. The act provided that the new boat should cost $2,500,000, and over that sum was expended upon her. In size the Maine was a goodly ship. Her length over all was 324 feet; at load water line, 318 feet; her beam, 57 feet; her draught, 21½ feet; her displacement, 6,648 tons. She was designed for a flag ship, but the great changes in modern methods of naval construction were the cause of her being finished up as a fighter.

Something of her formidable power may be imagined when it is said that she could hurl a broadside of 1,322 pounds. This did not include the fire from her small arms. From her two turrets and forward guns she could hurl a fire of 1,224 pounds. The Maine was a twin screw, armored turret ship built in the belted style. She had a belt of armor to protect the vital parts of the fabric after the vulnerable parts had been beaten in with shot. This belt was a foot thick, tapering to seven inches at a point below the water line. The engines and boilers were protected by a curved deck of hardened steel. The barbette armor was a foot in thickness, and the armor plates about the turrets were eight inches thick. In armament the Maine was one of the most destructive vessels in any navy of the world.

MORRO CASTLE.

Frowning Guardian of Havana's Gateway and Some of Its Uses.

Morro Castle, the guardian of Havana's gateway, stands upon an imposing height at the east entrance of the harbor. Havana was founded eighteen years after Columbus visited the island, and the site of El Morro was the earliest location among fortifications. The castle, of solid masonry and stone parapets, looks secure against all oncomers. Less a fortress than a prison, however, is the Morro Castle of to-day. It has ramifications under the sea and chambers that have not been explored for a hundred years—at least by others than Spaniards. The castle has come to be used principally as a prison for political offenders, and its moldy, drainless cells are a horror to Cubans, who, of course, are the political offenders. It is the place of execution when political prisoners are not to be shot publicly.

MORRO CASTLE.

Flags Half-Masted.

President McKinley has ordered the flags at all navy yards and on naval vessels, at posts, army headquarters, and on all public buildings, at half-mast.

COURT OF INQUIRY.

NAVAL BOARD TO SEARCH OUT THE FACTS.

Several Days May Elapse Before a Verdict Is Reached, but There Will Be No Unnecessary Delay—Investigation to Be Rigid.

Four Men to Decide.

On Thursday the court of inquiry to investigate the cause of the Maine disaster was called to meet in Havana by Admiral Sicard. It is composed of the following officers: Capt. William T. Simpson, Capt. French E. Chadwick, Lieutenant Commander William P. Potter and Lieutenant Commander Adolph Marix, judge advocate. The verdict of these four naval experts, writes a Washington correspondent, may mean war with Spain.

Under the direction of Admiral Sicard, says the correspondent, writing immediately after the calling of the court, the members will hear evidence and examine the debris. The splintered and twisted hulk is expected to tell its own story. The plates will be bent in or out. If all point outward, the disaster was caused from carelessness or probably treachery on board the ship; if they point inward, then to Spanish treachery from without. Beneath the waters of the harbor the divers will turn their electric searchlights as they search the deep for the submerged debris of the once mighty battle ship.

They will report speedily to their superiors. There will be no unnecessary delay. Public opinion will not stand indefinite suspense. The verdict of the court of inquiry will go to the Secretary of the Navy and to the President. There will be a cabinet meeting. There will be no splitting of hairs, no quibbling over official etiquette. This matter is executive; it will not follow precedents; there are none to follow.

TRIP TO DISASTER.

When and Why the Ill-Fated Maine Went to Havana.

The Maine arrived in Havana and dropped anchor in the inner harbor on the morning of Jan. 25. The trip had been hasty and the arrival of the boat so soon had not been expected by the residents of the Cuban capital, yet no demonstration was made and no unpleasant occurrences had to be recorded. It had been the intention of President McKinley for a long time to send a war ship to Havana. Several weeks were spent in preparation, although the details of what was going on were not known to the public until the final orders were given.

The Maine started from Dry Tortugas early in the morning of Jan. 25, and in a few hours reached her destination. As the big vessel steamed into the harbor through the narrow strait over which Morro Castle stands guard, friendly salutes were fired. The answer was at once returned by the guns of the forts and the Spanish flag ship Alphonso XIII., which was at anchor in the harbor. Almost before anchor could be dropped a small boat was alongside containing officers of the Spanish vessel. The visitors were met by the officer of the deck and at once conducted to the captain's cabin. Here introductions were made in the most friendly manner.

When the Maine entered the harbor she anchored almost in the center, and quite close to the Spanish flag ship. The docks were lined with excited Spaniards and curious Cubans. They did not cause any trouble at the sight of the vessel so hated or so much despised, but it was reported that some of the ignorant Spaniards went off in grumbling disgust when they saw their own boat hoist the enemy's flag by way of courtesy. According to orders, Admiral Sicard established a line of small boats between Dry Tortugas and Havana in such a way that signals could be rapidly transmitted from the Maine to the fleet. This was done to make certain of speedy aid to the vessel on guard if it should happen that the use of the cable was made impossible. This was only one of the precautionary measures that were taken, not only to prevent trouble but to make sure of having a strong defensive position if unavoidable trouble should arise.

THE WINTER WINDS.

Hear the winter wind rejoice,
Lifting high its frigid voice
As it frolics on the housetops
In a wayward, wanton choice!
Now it mounts a lordly pile
In a dashing daring style,
Shrieking with demoniac pleasure
As it leaps from tile to tile!

Now it whistles on the rim
Of a building high and dim—
Standing far above its neighbors—
And with keen appalling vim,
Tears a snowstorm into shreds,
Catches up the tangled threads,
Whirls them to the streets and chuckles
When they fall on trav'lers' heads!

Now it rides a cottage roof
Pounding it as with the hoof
Of an imp from shade infernal;
Then, to give an added proof
Of some diabolic spell,
With a frantic, fiendish yell,
It goes charging down a chimney,
Near where frightened children dwell!
Then it makes the shutters clash,
Bangs the stormdoor with a crash
And goes howling through the treetops
In a sudden startled dash!
Now it races down the street,
Tripping up unwary feet,
Tossing hats and skirts with roguish
Haste and freedom indiscreet!

A Romance.

Old Paulo Serati sat beneath the tree in his front yard during the long summer day and listened to Angela Argenti read to him. She lived on another street, but she was a firm friend of old Paulo, and there was not a day that passed that she did not come and read to him.

She was bright and pretty, with long eyelashes and deep black eyes that looked up into the old man's face, mirroring the love she had for him in her heart. There were times too, when she would tell him that it was not necessary to read so much, and then she would sing some of the good, old fashioned tunes that he had sung when he was a boy on the farm.

Her laughter, too, used to lighten up the gloomy house, and old Paulo used to say:

"Ah, my lass, you must get a good husband."

This always caused her to toss her head and laugh, showing two rows of pearly white teeth.

"You are already married," she would retort, and his wife would often join them in this good-natured joking.

"There is not a girl in all Italy any prettier than you," old Paulo used to tell her, "and I don't believe there is one your equal in Milan. I like you so well my lass, that I am anxious to have you marry some good man. The good father was telling me just the other day that I must look after you."

"But my own father and mother can do that," she would answer. "You do not seem to realize that they are living and that I am very happy with them."

"I know," said Paulo, "but I don't think that they can think more of you than I do. Why, I've known you since you were a little baby lying in your mother's arms and cooing whenever I came near you."

"We are good friends," she would say.

"That we are," he would answer, and times when you don't come when I expect you, I realize how dear you are to us. Neither wife nor I thinks that the morning or afternoon is perfect if you don't come in to see us. Your father told me the other day that I would spoil you; that you had begun to have ideas of marriage, as I spoke about a few minutes ago."

"There is no one I know of," she answered.

"There are so many young fellows around here who would like to marry you, that I know," he answered.

"I don't love them," she would say, with a shake of her head. "The man I marry must have my love."

"That's right, Angela," he said, "you must marry for love and not for wealth, but still you must be sure that your husband can support you."

"Oh, I will," she replied.

Then she took up the book she was reading aloud to him and went on, while he lighted his pipe and sat looking at her. Sometimes when she read for a few minutes she would stop and the two would sit perfectly still, looking up through the trees at the sky, always the bluest in Italy.

They were occupied with their own thoughts, and once she suddenly asked him:

"How is Martino?"

"He is well," answered Paulo. "He is in St. Louis in far-away America."

The two sat for several seconds, and then he said:

"He is a good son. Yes, he's a good son," he repeated.

The girl looked at him and nodded assent.

"Yes he is good—and handsome," she added, for she had seen his photograph, though she had never seen him.

Then she sang a few lines of a love song and, as if suddenly recollecting herself, stopped abruptly. She was blushing and an odd light was in her eyes when she picked up the book and resumed her reading.

The old man looked at her a moment. She was conscious of his scrutiny, and held the book up in front of her face. He noticed that her little hands trembled.

Then he nodded his head and laughed and chuckled to himself. He thought that he had learned something that perhaps even she did not know.

Martino Serati had prospered in America. He was a poor but hard-working Italian lad when he came to this country. His knowledge of the language was limited, but he started in to learn the American ways and the American language.

"It is slow," he said to one of his friends once, "but I will learn after awhile. Others have had to learn and so will I."

"You must marry an American girl. Then you will always have someone to talk to you in the language," replied his friend.

"I will become a native of this country," Martino responded, "but I will marry an Italian girl. I don't know who it will be," he hastened to add, "for I don't intend to marry until I am prosperous; until I can support a wife in the manner in which she should be supported. You know I hope some day to have a home of my own, out in the suburbs of some city. There I can have room to stir around in and not be huddled together like we are compelled to live in the tenements and in the crowded city streets."

"You want to sit out in the yard like the old people in Italy, eh?" said his friend. "Do you often think of that?"

"Very often," responded Martino. "My father and mother, I warrant, are at this instant sitting out in our yard—"

His voice choked, and two big tears came. But that was a dozen years ago, and he was a young man, and he was unacquainted with the country and the customs and was often homesick. But he learned rapidly. He bought a reader and he soon mastered the language, and aside from this he heard the language all the time.

Martino first lived in New York, but he did not like it there, and so he came West, finally settling in St. Louis. His fruit business prospered, and he accumulated considerable wealth, which he invested in property. The city grew out and around 5,213 Shaw Avenue. He lived there and owned the property. Time dragged along. He was lonely.

"You ought to be married," one of his friends told him. "I remember you said once that when you were able you would marry some Italian girl."

"But I don't know of any," he answered.

"Wasn't there one in Italy?" his friend asked him.

"None," he replied.

But the subject reverted to his mind a dozen times. He thought about it much of the time. He looked ahead into the future, and saw himself married, with a family around him, and spending the last days quietly and peacefully like his old father over in Italy."

"I will write to my father," he said.

Old Paulo Serati held the letter in his hand and laughed aloud and long.

"Martino wants us to find a wife for him," he said to his wife. "He likes America, but he knows where the beautiful women live; where the good wives come from. It is here in Milan; here in Italy."

"We can find him a wife," she answered.

Then Paulo laughed and laughed again.

"Here comes Angela," he said. "I will let her read the letter."

When Angela came up to them she saw that both her friends were much pleased over something.

"We have a letter from Martino," he said, "and I want you to read it. See what he says."

The girl took the letter and read it.

"Have you found him a wife?" she asked.

"Yes," said Paulo. "I think I know a girl who loves him now. She will make him a good wife. She has never met him though."

"Who is it?" she asked, her voice being so low that it was with difficulty that she was understood.

"You," said Paulo.

She threw the letter down on the chair and ran out of the room and to her home. There she told her parents what her friends had decided.

"But that is a long way," said her father.

"Not for a girl to go to the man she loves," she replied, "for I do love him. I believe I've loved him ever since I was large enough to love anybody."

"He is a good man, too," said her father.

Old Paulo and his wife came over and told her parents what she had told them.

"I have written to him several times about Angela," said Paulo, "and he knows her almost as well as I do. I will tell him that I have selected his wife."

That very night the letter was written and mailed. Next day it was speeding for St. Louis.

There was great excitement in that neighborhood. It became rumored around that Angela, the prettiest girl in the vicinity, was going to St. Louis, America, to marry Martino Serati. Several of the people around knew him. They remembered when he packed up and left for the New World. They knew, too, that he was sturdy and honest, and had prospered. The girls flocked around Angela. It was romantic, they declared, that she was going to marry a man she had never seen; also that she was going so far.

For days they were very busy at her home. There were so many clothes to be made, and there were also friends to call on and bid adieu. But the time slipped by, and almost before she was aware of it the day had come for her departure. She went over to Paulo's house and walked about the yard and looked about the house. She knew that Martino would want to know all about it and how his parents were. She wanted to be sure that she had not overlooked anything, from the chintz cover to the table in the sitting room to the trees out in the yard.

She was very happy, for she told her parents and also Martino's father and mother that she knew she would be happy, for she did love Martino, and she believed that he would love her. Paulo was certain of this and so assured her.

Finally all the adieux were said and she had started for America. The trip was a long and tedious one, particularly the ocean voyage. Sometimes she thought that she would never reach land again, and after reaching land she wondered how long it would take her to get to St. Louis.

There was much to interest her and the time flew by in the train, and soon she saw the city. Her heart beat violently as the train rushed up through the yards, passing scores of cars that were being switched here and there, and then the train came to a standstill. It was such a big place that she was a bit frightened at first. There was a big crowd around, too, and she was a little afraid that Martino would not be able to find her.

She recognized him at once, from the photograph, and he knew her, too. Then she knew that her worry was over, for she was safe, she knew, with his arm around her and his kiss still hot on her lips. The marriage was yesterday afternoon in the little church on Manchester Road. To-day a letter will start for Milan, and there will be four supremely happy people in that city when the letter is received.—St. Louis Republic.

NEW HOMES FOR SOLDIERS

THE Government has completed the expenditure of $1,000,000 and nine years' work in converting 235 acres of rolling but barren Indiana land into a city for men who participated in her conflicts. The work was to have been completed by the first of last year, but there were delays which set it back. In this delightful retreat over 2,000 men in blue, many without arms, others without legs, are huddled together to let the sands of life run out.

The Fifty-first Congress passed the bill of Congressman George W. Steel appropriating $200,000 for a national soldiers' home to be built at Marion, Ind. This was approved Jan. 23, 1888. A 235-acre tract of land belonging to a farmer named Unthink was selected and the work of construction begun. Previous to this act of Congress there were six national homes of soldiers and sailors and over twenty State homes. These institutions, however, were crowded, and there was urgent necessity to either enlarge them materially or erect a new national home. The same condition exists to-day, and the Government, while finishing the Marion home, was laying the foundation for an eighth at Danville, Ill., which in the course of seven or eight years will also be completed.

The death rate of participants in the late rebellion may by the time the Danville home is completed have reached such a point that the present homes will afford all of the facilities needed by the Government to care for those who nurtured her in the years of '12, '48, '61-65.

Barring probabilities that another war will again fill hospitals and wreck lives, as well as wrest them, the time is fast approaching when the great army, which now numbers about 150,000, will have passed away; when the great cities which have and are now being erected for the comfort of her unfortunates will be empty. Still, in her building to meet their present requirements and their comforts, the Government is not erecting structures to stand a day, a year, a decade or a century, but many centuries. The permanence of construction, the completeness of the work and the beauty and art worked into these homes strike one as probably elaborate considering the fact that in a few years they will not be needed for what they are now used.

The Marion home, the seventh and most modern, is nothing short of an architectural dream. It lies near the little town of Jonesboro, though Marion is but three miles away. Picturesque Messissinawi River girts one end, and neatly trimmed shrubs form the fence which incloses the picturesque retreat. Viewed from the great entrance to the west, the city of brick buildings is seen a quarter of a mile off across the drill grounds. On the drill grounds the stars and stripes wave in all of their glory, and there is not a place where they seem so thoroughly appropriate and so well appreciated. Under the flagstaff is a row of brass cannon.

In the space between the buildings and the outer guardhouse lies a little grove, and under the spreading boughs of the trees are modest little white stones. They seemingly form great circles—circles within circles. Here lie the men who have entered across the gay drill ground, have lived in the village of pretty residences, walks and flower gardens, and at last joined the great procession to enlist in the higher army. Here the stars and stripes float over graves. The little white stones are used at Gettysburg to mark the last resting-places of those who died "in line," and they are none the less impressive when viewed under the trees at Marion, where, after years of joys, of sorrows and of pains, those who missed the bullets at Gettysburg have found their allotted six feet of earth and their little white stone on which is but a simple inscription—"John Smith, Company A, Seventh Indiana Volunteers. Died Jan. 22, 1898."

Buildings of the Home.

Broad macadamized drives and pretty little walks, properly and artistically curbed and guttered with brick, lead to the city within. Over the knoll to the north is the home of the governor, a modern house of frame built in colonial style, neither gorgeous nor common. Beyond the governor's residence is the treasurer's house, equally artistic and comfortable. There are pretty flower beds and walks and drives leading up to the residences. Down the slope and across the broad main drive stretches the great central court, probably 1,000 feet square. In the center is the band stand, in which last year over 200 concerts were given. Walks and flower gardens make this open space very artistic and give good effect to the buildings which surround it. On the east is the hospital—undoubtedly the finest in Indiana and one of the finest in the country. The building cost $75,000.

At the further end of the open court, facing the governor's residence, is the new building, where the inner man is looked after in a manner most artistic and satisfactory. This is one of the newest and one of the prettiest buildings in the list of thirty-five. It is of pressed brick, with clock tower and artistic, sloping eaves, which come over the verandas. On the first floor is the dining hall, one of the most interesting points in the city. It is a pleasant retreat, one great room in which 1,080 can dine at once with the ease and style of the millionaire who sticks his feet under the board at the Waldorf-Astoria. On the second floor is the Grand Army chapel and a library of 5,000 volumes. On the shelves are twenty-four daily newspapers and many weekly publications and the leading magazines. The number of books is rapidly increasing.

In the rear of this building is the most complete and probably the most thoroughly scientific and up-to-date big kitchen in the Central or Western States. It is by long odds the pride of the home. The kitchen cost something like $60,000. It is two stories and a half, artistically built and perfectly equipped. Natural gas is utilized for the cooking, but if it ever gives out provisions have been made whereby electricity can be brought into use.

Back of this couplet of buildings, which together cost almost $100,000, and across a prettily laid out lawn, is the new theater building. In rear of this, across another stretch of lawn, lies the club, provided with billiard and pool tables and other contrivances for pleasure. There are several pool and billiard "sharks" among the "old boys." Everything is free. Back of the club lies the woods. To the right is the commissary department, to the left the waterworks and the fire engine-house. The water used is taken from wells drilled 300 feet. There is a fire company and ample fire protection. There are administration buildings, headquarters, special hospitals, greenhouses, a postoffice, a home store, and fourteen barracks, making a total of thirty-five buildings in all.

These barrracks are the homes of the soldiers—the sleeping apartments. Big verandas encircle them and afford ample lounging place. There is a captain in charge of each, and he has a neat office and a sergeant as an attendant. Each barracks is fitted for four companies of fifty men each, and each company has a separate room. In these retreats the old soldiers of the wars of '48 and '60-'65 pass the winter at cards, and in the summer stroll among the flower gardens, on the drill grounds by along the Black road, one of the most delightful evenues in the State, which runs through the center of a sixty-acre forest.

To maintain this institution the Government makes an annual appropriation of $85,000 for food, a general appropriation of $100,000 for general fund, and at present $51,000 in pensions per annum. No man receiving more than $16 per month can be admitted to the home. The enrollment at Marion and other national homes on Jan. 1 was:

Central home, Dayton, O.	5,033
Southern Home, Hampton, Va.	4,638
National home, Leavenworth, Kan	3,205
Northern home, Milwaukee, Wis.	2,798
Eastern home, Togus, Me.	2,518
Marion home, Marion, Ind.	2,272
Pacific home, Los Angeles, Cal.	2,083
Total	22,546

Many State Homes.

In addition to these national homes, there are now twenty-four State homes, to which the Government pays $100 per annum for each inmate. It is thought that these twenty-four homes have a population of about 22,000 also, which makes 45,000 soldiers now being cared for by the Government. Few realize what a home the nation provides for her worthy soldiery.

There is an overwhelming opposition among the inmates of soldiers' homes against the proposition urged by the regular army to place the control of the homes under the regular army management. Such a proposition has no chance of passing Congress if the protests of the soldiers are heeded. At present the management rests with the President, the Chief Justice, the Secretary of War and a board of ten prominent veterans. Congressman Steel is manager of the Marion home, General J. C. Black the local manager, and J. H. Chapman governor.

Bidden to the Feast.

Fortune smiles upon the man who is master of the homely art of cooking. There is in London a celebrated cook who is said to have an income of over ten thousand dollars a year. He is attached to no house, but in his own brougham sets out toward evening for the home of some rich man who is going to have a dinner, at which every dish must be above criticism. Here he alights and, making for the kitchen, goes through the process of tasting all the soups, sauces, and made dishes—advising when his palate suggests a little more salt here, a pinch of herbs there, a dash of sugar or a suspicion of onion. This done, he pockets his fee of twenty-five dollars and drives on to the next dinner-giving patron, who has bidden him to his feast in this strange fashion. His nightly list comprises many houses all through the London season.

HOW TO BE GRACEFUL.

Proper Exercise Will Bring About Some Fine Results.

The one rule to be always observed by the woman who seeks to be graceful is to keep the chest active. It should never be relaxed; the body should bend from the hips, whether one leans forward, backward, or sideways.

If, however, lifting the chest is a painful effort, exercises should be taken to strengthen the enfeebled powers. Standing, poising and bending movements are of first importance. The correct standing position is one which most women find it very difficult at first to assume. The chest should be raised, the head held erect, the abdomen drawn in; at first a toppling sensation will be produced, and the back will feel uncomfortable, but continued practice of the movement will properly adjust the muscles and cause the first unpleasant consciousness to disappear.

Poising movements consist in holding the weight of the body on the balls of the feet, and rising and descending for several times in succession, holding the hands, with arms extended, upon an active chest. Other movements throw the weight of the body upon one foot only, while the other foot, after describing a circle, is held suspended behind the active one. Excellent practice for acquiring a graceful carriage consists in poising as far forward as possible with the right and left foot alternately, moving across a large room in this manner.

MOVEMENTS TO ACQUIRE GRACE.

Proper walking results from stepping so that the heel shall fall upon the ground at nearly the same time as the toe, and always in a line with it, but with the weight of the body falling on the ball, and the chest leading so prominently that a line dropped thence to the foot would fall to the toe; while a line dropped from the chest of the person who walks incorrectly would strike the instep.

Correct positions in standing and walking are often cures for weak and lame backs. Let one who doubts this note the pull upon the muscles of the back when correct attitudes are at first assumed. Other excellent exercises for strengthening the muscles of the back are the bending movements. Lifting the arms as high as possible above the head, bend the body at the waist, immediately below the floating ribs, and bring the hands gradually to the floor. The knees should be kept firm, and the exercise taken directly in front, and also at the right and left sides.

Other bending movements are of the waist, and yet others of the head. Nothing gives dignity and grace to the bearing more effectively than a regal poise of the head; and the muscles of the neck can be made flexible by practicing movements which consist, first, in dropping the head upon the chest, then backward, then in a series of rolling movements which call into action all the muscles of the neck.

There are few women, however old, weak or ill, who will not be directly benefited by practicing the foregoing suggestions. Systematic work with the various movements suggested will not only bring back departed girlish grace, but daily labor, of whatever description, will be rendered less arduous on account of the resulting suppleness.

In the case of girls it is well to be warned in time. No young woman who has acquired a stooping, ill-poised body can hope to have a graceful or stately carriage when she is old.

VOTING MADE HONEST.

Mr. Ross of Ohio Has a Straightforward Machine.

"It is too honest to be popular," was the rather caustic observation of a gentleman who was examining the good qualities of Mr. N. B. Ross' newly patented voting machine.

The inventor of the machine is the present representative of Putnam County, Ohio, in the House of Representatives. Mr. Ross is an old minister of the Gospel, and has had ample opportunity to see the necessity of some automatic and incorruptible voting machine that would register the vote of the people.

He started in about eight years ago to perfect a machine for that purpose, and has succeeded far beyond his original hopes or anticipations. If the Ross voting machines were used the result of any election would be made known within a few moments after the polls are closed, or as soon as the different sum totals of the precincts could be added together.

ROSS VOTING MACHINE.

The machine is a box about three feet wide by three feet high. It is shaped on the top much like the keyboard of the ordinary typewriter, with keys similar to the key of the typewriter, in rows at stated distances apart. The surface is inclined. Over the top of the machine fits down close a sheet of platinum around the keys. Under this platinum is pasted between the rows of keys the various tickets to be voted. There is room for half a dozen different ones, and if there were more tickets placed in the field then more space might easily be provided. It is so arranged that the minute a man steps into a booth his weight upon the floor throws the triggers of the machine open, and it is ready to be manipulated. Before this is done, however, the representative of every party who has a ticket in the field has to be present, and, by turning a certain combination, admits the voter to the booth. He cannot enter if one be absent. So soon as the combination of the machine is thrown open and ready for action the voter may see the ticket he desires to vote. The row of keys at the top are for a straight ticket. For example, if he desires to cast a straight Democratic ticket, he presses a key opposite the name on that ticket, and at the same time every other key on the board is locked. Say he wanted to vote for a certain man for Governor on one ticket. He presses the key opposite his name. At the same time the keys are all locked opposite the names of the other candidates for Governor on other tickets, and also the key just used, so that a vote for two men on the same ticket or for one man twice cannot be cast. This is the case with all the rest. If he neglected to press the key opposite any name for a certain office no vote for any man would be marked.

On the same principle as fares are rung up and kept account of in street cars automatically, the number of votes for each man is kept track of and the sum total noted at the bottom of the column. As soon as the sheet is taken from the machine a glance tells how many votes each man has received. The machine, as arranged at present, will count as many as 2,500 votes. Mr. Ross will take the machine before the present Assembly of Ohio and endeavor to have it adopted instead of the Australian ballot system.

EXERCISES FOR THE FINGERS.

Some Feats in Finger Gymnastics that Are Difficult to Perform.

For example, place both hands together in such a manner as to have the backs of the two middle fingers joined. Now try to spread out the thumbs and the other fingers from the tips. This will be found easy enough with the thumbs, the index and the little fingers, but try it with the ring fingers, and this kind of gymnastics becomes decidedly interesting. Exercise No. 2 is not so difficult, and some can do it after the first trial, but there are others who can never perform the apparently easy feat. This may also be said of the third exercise. Here the condition is not to permit the least bend in the two lower parts of the index finger. In exercise No. 4 it is imperative that the fingers remain stretched out straight. Try some of these experiments when you have an idle ten minutes, and you will be surprised to find them not half so easy as they appear in the picture.

Vet's Last Skirmish.

"Madam," said the agent for a new work on the late conflict, as he stood before an able-bodied woman who had opened the door, "I believe your husband was in the recent war, and——"

"How recent?" asked the woman as she rested her hands on her hips.

"Sixty-five, was it not, lady?"

"I don't go back that far," she replied. "I thought maybe you meant the one he was in just afore you knocked. I'm tired of his loafin' round the house and I jest started him in on the week's wash. I reckon he'll feel more like buyin' a plaster fer his back by the time he gits through than a book. The war me and him jest had is so recent, mister, that I reckon he ain't likely to forget very soon, and as fer you, you're wastin' yer time and I'd advise you to be shovin' up the creek whar a monyment is to be unkivered to-morry."—Truth.

Shrewd Young Man.

The young man approached the elderly capitalist with a confident air.

"Sir," he said, "I love your daughter. I ask you for her hand."

The old man turned pale with rage.

"You want my daughter," he snarled. "Well, you'll get my foot." And he made a sudden advance on the youth. The latter did not quail. On the contrary he leaped in the air. He waved his arms. He yelled "Kill him! kill him! robber! robber!" He jumped at the old man, who trembled and shrank back. He cowered before the savage onslaught. "Kill him! Kill him!" roared the youth.

"Wait, wait!" screamed the old man. "I'll reverse my decision!"

"For it appears that the young man had in some way learned the fact that in his early years the aged capitalist was a base-ball umpire.

When a man has had his leg pulled by one schemer, the next schemer to call on him walks out lame.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Shot a Jonesville Politician—Riotous Miners Must Go Unarmed—Poisoning Case at Terre Haute—Child Killed by a Ram—Drunken Miner Shot.

Kills His Political Enemy.

John Williams, one of the best-known Democratic politicians in Bartholomew County, was shot and almost instantly killed by James Lewis at his home in Jonesville. The men had been engaged in political discussion over the work of the Democratic primaries preparatory to the county convention. Lewis was arrested at once and hurried to Columbus as fast as possible, as the friends of Williams threatened violence.

Riotous Miners Warned.

The action of Gov. Mount in insisting that the imported negro miners at Washington, who, whenever they are paid their wages, get drunk and terrorize the people, shall not be allowed to carry arms, is the subject of much comment. The Governor said that the repeated presence of the armed negroes in the streets is not to be tolerated. The striking white miners are becoming less inclined to be peaceable as the sentiment of the people grows in favor of driving the negroes out of the community.

Mysterious Poisoning Case.

The mother of John Romine, who with six other members of the family was poisoned the other night at Terre Haute, is dead. Romine and one of his daughters are still sick, but the other members of the family are recovering. It is known now that the poison was in the water with which tea and coffee were made, and the authorities are convinced that it was placed there intentionally.

Drunken Miner Shot.

Henry Gilfoy, the new postmaster at Lyford, shot and perhaps fatally wounded Joe Hoffman, one of the toughs of that town. The shooting was a climax of an old feud existing between the two men for the past three years. Gilfoy is not a drinking man, and from the facts so far known it appears that he shot in self-defense.

A Ram Kills a Child.

While playing among a herd of sheep, Henry Johnson, the 6-year-old son of Milton Johnson, a farmer three miles north of Ingalls, was butted in the stomach by a ram. At the time no serious damage seemed to be done to the boy, but a night or two later he was taken with severe pains and died in twenty minutes.

Within Our Borders.

At Brazil, George France was stabbed by James Booth.

Fire destroyed property at English to the amount of $2,500.

Dr. J. H. Raab, president of the First National Bank of Vincennes, is dead at the age of 69.

South Bend bank officers think that Convict George West stole $15,000. He is to be released soon.

Ross Rudy, a runaway lad from Hagerstown, was killed by a train in the Big Four yards at Terre Haute.

The C., H. & D. Railroad Company is to move Blue River Park from the vicinity of Morristown and locate it near Connersville.

Mrs. Solomon Teague, aged 66, who lives four miles southeast of Martinsville, was stricken with paralysis while working at the washtub.

"Dode" Carrington shot and instantly killed Wesley Niece and fatally wounded Bayless Niece, an uncle of the latter, in Martin's saloon at Grant.

Patrick S. O'Rourke, general agent of the Grand Rapids and Indiana at Fort Wayne, aged 68 years, is dead. For the past year he had been suffering with Bright's disease.

William Van Sell, an ex-convict, has been sentenced to two years in the penitentiary at San Diego, Cal., for representing himself to be Banker Frank McKeon of Terre Haute.

George Pritchett fired several shots at William Neaville's house in Montclair at 2 o'clock one recent morning. There was some feeling between him and Neaville. None of the shots took effect.

The freshmen and sophomores of De Pauw University have been indulging in a series of class fights, which have been the most interesting and sensational the university has witnessed in many years.

The body of Mrs. Catherine Deneen was stolen from a cemetery south of Indianapolis several nights ago, and relatives, armed with search warrants, found it at the Central College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The town of Andrews was greatly excited over the explosion of a number of bombs upon the streets during a recent night. The first explosion took place in the vicinity of the railway depot as a train was passing. A large hole was torn in the earth by the force of the explosion. This was followed by a number of similar explosions in different parts of the town, shattering window glass some distance away and scattering glass and stones, with which the bombs were filled, in all directions. Many persons narrowly escaped injury.

A murder was discovered in the Pratt mine at Lodi, when the dead body of John Peste, an Italian, was found in water under the cage, where the murderer had carried it, hoping the water would hide it. The murder had not been committed more than five minutes before the discovery, as the body was still warm. The neck was broken, which was probably caused by a blow from a miner's pick. A hole four inches deep, made by such an instrument, was found back of the left ear. No outcry was heard, and who committed the deed and how he escaped from the mine is a mystery.

Lucien Wolff, a Pendleton merchant, with Frederick Goodrich, were returning home from the country at 8 o'clock in the evening, when they were stopped by masked men and robbed. They were "held up" one mile west of town at a bridge.

The terms on which State Labor Commissioner McCormick accomplished the settlement of the strike at the Irondale tin plate mills, at Middletown, were on a basis of wages paid at the American tin plate plant at Elwood. It was a reduction of about 60 to 70 cents per day, or little over a cent a box on finished tin.

Mrs. John R. Gladden of Clark's Hill shot herself through the heart with a revolver secretly taken from her husband's store. Since December she had been inconsolable over the death of a young daughter.

Reports which have just been compiled for official record show that the wheat crop in the eighth and sixth congressional districts, eastern Indiana, is in a more favorable condition than this time last year, although last year's crop turned out to be one of the best in recent years. The acreage is slightly greater than last year. As yet there is a great deal of old wheat being held in these districts by men who figure on getting $1.20 a bushel for it.

TO THE COAST.

Mrs. Jessie Boland Eckhart started this morning on her long journey to the Pacific Coast, to remain there for a time in hope to recover her health She was accompanied by her husband, Frank Eckhart, his sister Mrs. Geo. Shugers, of Coldwater, and her mother, Mrs. Boland. They go over the Wabash to St. Louis, and then take the Santa Fe, and expect to reach Los Angeles, where Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eckhart are, at the end of a trip of 72 hours, three days. All possibe ease and comfort will be secured for her on the journey, and as she has been appearing better and stronger for several days, it is hoped she will go through without trouble. Our people all hope she will receive permanent benefit, and be untimately restored to health.

ST. JOE.

Buggy factory is on the boom.

E. E. Headly southeast of St. Joe has sold his farm to Grant Stewart and will move to Michigan 1st of April.

Shilling, Curie & Lake shipped a car load of hogs Saturday.

Mell Herrick has sold out his interest in Blacksmith shop to Chris Saylor.

Examination for graduation at the school house last Saturday.

Samuel Grill, of near Spencerville who was so badly injured last week, died last Saturday evening and buried Monday from the Lutheran church at Spencerville.

B. A. Hadsell, makes complaint that the hunters annoy him very much hunting on his lands and wishes it distinctly understood that any more trespassing by hunters will be liable to prosecution.

E. Dilley was at Fort Wayne last week to consult Dr. Murphy in regard to a sore hand.

William W. Moore has sold his residence in the west end to S. L. Widney.

A. F. Woodcox who has been at Coldwater Michigan visiting with a brother has returned to this city.

An eight pound baby boy at the residence of Earn Jenkins is the latest addition to the number of St. Joe people The boys are smoking today.

Word comes to us that Dr. Henry Hull, of Newville, is very near deaths door.

Late reports from Watonga, Ok., say that Mrs Beeks Erick is quite sick with typhoid pneumonia. Additional news is anxiously awaited by her many friends in St. Joe and at Spencerville.

BUTLER.

Miss May Bruce, who has been a lingering sufferer for two or three years with consumption, quietly passed away the first of the week. Her funeral took place from the M. E. church last Wednesday, conducted by Rev. Disbro The custom of exhibiting the remains at the church was dispensed with, as it ought to be in nearly all cases. She leaves father and two brothers.

Mell Wilkinson's have left Butler, for Cleveland where he has a position in a large dry goods store. David Knisely has quietly stepped into his old position and things are assuming their old appearance.

J. A. Campbell traveled the mud by making a trip to Hamilton and Pleasant Lake last Thursday.

Fred W. Oberlin continues very poorly with little if any hope for recovery.

A couple of crusaders, have rented a shake down 3½ miles north of Butler and are awaking the dry bones among the people about Jerusalem with a very lively meeting, considerable good is being done.

The Canning Factory Co. held a meeting last Saturdy and elected a new board of directors and officers, and start in the new year with every appearance of success.

Mrs. Woodworth has given Butler's bad people over two weeks of her valuable time. She has succeeded in filling her house to the steps, and awakened much inquiry and discussion. She, no doubt is doing some good, but n case of divine healing is reported Some disorder occurs, and windows are occasionaly broken, some very demonstrative scenes take place, during which church furniture is at a discount. The singing, led by her own leader, is excellent.

The new bakery conducted by Joseph Wolfensperger, of Columbia City, opened its doors this week. Its success depends upon reducing the trade of the other two.

A. G. Jones has sold the Haskins building to Isaac Hose.

Miss Sudie Worth, who never learned the meaning of "Fail," has sold her stock to a Miss Murray, of Mich., who comes here well recommended and will make her home among us. Miss Worth goes to Chicago.

KILLED!

Wm. Staley, An old Resident, Meets Sudden Death.

Struck By the West-bound Wabash Today at Mooresville.

The 11:45 west bound train to-day on Wabash, ran over and killed an old resident of Wilmington township, as they reached the crossing at Mooresville. It was Wm. Staley. The train does not stop there, and they were going at 50 miles per hour, when suddenly tney saw him a little way ahead of them, beyond the road crossing, near the track, and right at the cattle guard. They whistled and he went to step across the track, and just then the engine struck him. His body was thrown into a heap, the head cut in to and the upper part of it and his hat were found three car lengths ahead. One hand and one foot were cut off and he was bruised and torn otherwise. Death must have been instantaneous. He was picked up, and given in charge of the township trustee, J. J. Eakright, who happened to be on the train on his way to Auburn. On reaching Auburn, the conductor and engineer made a written report to Mr. Zent, and gave the facts as here stated, O. P. Noel of Butler was also along and gave a similar statement. He said it was a terrible sight. No blame is attacheed to the trainmen as they always run fast along there and could not stop sooner than they did, which was many rods past where My. Staley was struck Mr Zent notified the coroner at Waterloo.

B. C. Zeigler Dead

B. C. Zeigler breathed his last at 9 a. m. today after an illness of several weeks, all of the time desperately sick of some sort of internal trouble. The efforts of skillful physicians and his own naturally robus constitution, enable him to hold out so long, that till near the end, there were hopes that he would at last wear out the disease out. The funeral will be under the auspices of the K. P. on Friday at 2 p. m. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating. Interment will be in Woodlawn. There was an autopsy this afternoon.

OBITUARY.

Mary Jane Gorsuch Rosenbury was born in Tuscarawas county, Ohio, April 5th 1822; died in Waterloo, Ind., 1898; age 75 years, 10 months and 14 days.

She was married to Alexander Y. Rosenbury Oct 3, 1839, who survives her. She has been a faithful, devoted wife, and became the mother of fifteen children, four of whom preceded her to the long home. Oliver, Wm, Clement, Winfield and George; Melinda, Margaret, Libbie, Mary, Melissa and Olive still survive to cherish the memory and follow the precepts of a loving and righteous mother. With husband and family she removed to DeKalb county, Ind., and settled upon a farm in Troy township in the year 1855, where for fifteen years she underwent Spartan-like, all the hardships, economies, and wear of a farmer's wife, answering to every call of the God of her nature filling to generous fullness the measure wife and mother. In 1870 they came to Waterloo, where they have since resided.

In 1842 she experienced the blessing of regeneration and has been zealous adherent to the religion of Christ through all the trying scenes of this earth. Her husband and children, as well as those of her neighbors who knew her, will join in the testimony that in this one thing she never wavered. True as the ring of steel her voice was ever raised in the defense and teaching of its principles. Thus she was enabled to pass the ordeal of ten years of sickness, seven of which have been so severe as to make her bedridden, without a murmur or complaint.

The funeral services were held at the M. E. church, for she had been a member of it and the U. B. Church for 46 years, and the old, worn out body was tenderly born to the Waterloo cemetery on the 22nd inst., Revs. Erlougher and Butler officiating.

DR. BARROWS' LECTURE.

The third entertainment of the series given by the Junior class will be a lecture by Dr. Barrows, which will be at Opera House in Auburn the evening of Thursday March 10. It will be an eloquent lecture and a literary treat such as we seldom have. We hope all who possibly can will be present to enjoy it. The proceeds of all these entertainments are for the benefit of the school.

THE S. H. G.

The meeting at M. E. Griswold's residence last evening by the S. H. G. club was one more than ordinary interest. There was a fine literary program, including papers, recitations and a drama, all excellent. The paper on Washington, read by Elsie Caruth, was especially good. She did not think G. W. had had a very good chance. He had never heard Bob Ingersoll he had never been a Democrat or a Republican or a Populist or a Prohibitionst. He had never been a lobbyist or seen. He had never used public office as a private snap and was foolish enough to die in the belief that it is the proper thing for a man in a public office, to do the work himself and take only the proper amount of salary. Appropriate speeches on the prevailing subject were made by M. E. Griswold, J. Y. W. McClellan. D. D Moody and others. Altogether it was one of the most pleasant gatherings of the season.

Special Meeting, K. of P. Lodge

Special meeting K. of P. Lodge will be held this evening at Castle Hall, usual hour, to arrange for funeral of our deceased brother, B. C. Zeigler, which will occur on Friday at 2 p. m.

CHARLES M. BROWN, C. C.

CEMETERY MEETING.

There will be a meeting of the lot owners of Evergreen Cemetery at the Office of Dr. S. B. Johnstons on Friday evening March 4th 1898 at 7 o'clock p. m, for the purpose of electing five directors and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting as provided by the by-laws of said corporation.

BY ORDER OF THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

Many opinions given by men in public life, were published by the various metropolitan dailies, and we find among them, one by our member of congress Hon. J. M Robinson, and think it worth reproducing. He said:

"Washington was indeed a great man. Without a new country to establish and build up; without a nation ready to have engrafted upon it his sturdy, noble nature; without the encroachments of England, which demanded a man like him; without these things Washington would still have been a great man.

What opportunity gave him a chance to do he did well. He was of that type as was said of Burke, that you cou'd but meet him while under shelter from a passing shower and be convinced of his his nobility, his lofty character, his eminence as a man. Well do those of this generation do their duty when they hold up caracters like this to the gaze of the younger generations as a model for them to imitate, as an illustration that eminent public services will be appreciated and remembered, and that patriotism and love of country will always command its reward."

J. M. ROBINSON.

THE M. E. SOCIAL.

The M. E. anniversary social last evening was well patronized and in every way a success. The loaded tables were filled many times, and the evening passed in pleasant visits by scores of groups. A unique feature of the gathering was brought out by the fact that it was the 24th wedding day of the good pastor and his no less worthy wife Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Guild So his people got up a cute little surprise on him. They invited other ministers to come and take supper with him and the pastor suddenly found himsilf and his good wife at a table where preachers did most abound. The guests at his table were Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt, of the Baptist church; Rev. J. D. Brosy of the Lutheran church, Rev. F. C. Colvin of the Presbyterian church, and Mrs. Mary Ehlers, a leading member of the Baptist church, There was mirth and good fellowshiy all around that board, for everyone who came and for all things except chicken. May Mr. and Mrs. Guild have 24 more such anniversaries.

New Officers Chosen.

The business places made vacant by the death of the late John H. Lesh, at Goshen, were filled Friday. D. A. Saunders takes his place as president of the State Bank of Goshen. his son Joseph H. Lesh, succeeds the father as one of the directors of the Lesh Prouty & Abbott Co. of East Chicago; D. A. Saunders, becomes president of the Lesh, Saunders & Egbert Co. of Goshen.

INCREASING BUSINESS.

The business of the popular firm of Jones & Son has increased so that more room is necessary, and the owners of the building, the Hare heirs, are going to help it along. An addition of 20 feet to the west will be made, a new floor will be put into the present room, and an entire new outfit of furnishing, including five new counters and four new upright show cases, all of the latest style making 68 feet of new counters and 36 feet of new show cases. All the wood work and facings of the room will be in natural red oak. On the south side will be an office and counting room finely equipped and finished. There will be 128 feet of new shelving and all in the latest methods, as Mr. Jones has been looking over some of the finest establishments in this end of the state. The work is to be in the hands of Brandon & Long, and the material is already ordered. Work will be so arranged that Mr. Jones can go right on selling goods, for such as he can spare temporarily will be put up stairs. The wall at the rear end will be removed and its place supplied by a strong steel beam. It will be seen that Mr. Jones is on the highroad of improving business. New paper will also put on the walls.

Those In Jail.

We have called attention to the meetings in the jail here. Saturday we were shown a cane given to L. E Lane, by Geo Reed, the young man, who is in jail as a suspect in the burglary of the Hartman residence in Fairfield. Reed was the second one converted in the recent revival at the jail. He makes these canes by slipping circular pieces of card board, on over a steel rod. in the same way the prisoners at Michigan City used to make canes of thick leather pieces. It is quite an artistic job, and he sells them thus getting a little needed change. It is noticed that when a collection is taken up at the jail meetings, he always chips in. They are raising a fund in this way, to help sustain the men when they come out and keep them till they get work. It is loaned to them, and they are to repay it. This is a good plan.

Speaking of these prisoners, reminds us, of the other young man, named Reed, who was converted when our evangelists went to Albion recently. Since then, Mrs. Sparling has received a letter from him, that is considered a wonder of intellectual ability and religious interest. It covers forty-six well filled pages. He is but twenty years old, and to a great extent uneducated. There may be something valuable in him, and he may be heard from in later years.

The Flag of Cuba.

The Cuban flag has a blue triangle with the base against the staff and the point reaching into the flag, and in the center of this triangle is a single large star. The body of the flag is in five stripes, the two out ones and the central one being blue, and the two alternate ones, white. This description will enable some of our fighting senators to recognize the side they are on, without calling in an interpreter.

KILLED INSTANTLY.

Some, at least a few of our readers are acquainted with Dr. Dick of Pierceton, and will regret to learn his tragic death Yesterdap, Tuesday morning. he was returning from a call on a patient, somewhere west of Pierceton, and in going home had to cross the track of the Pittsburg & Ft. Wayne road at the litt'e station of Kosciuska. He was in a closed carriage and did not see a fast train that was coming on at full speed The engineer saw the carriage and whistled a hasty warning, but the Doctor did not seem to hear. The train was too close to be stopped, and the carriage was struck squarely and knocked to pieces. The horse was cut to pieces and the man instantly killed. The coroner of Kosciusko county took the remains to Pierceton. The doctor was well-known all over that section.

FIRE AT COLUMBIA CITY

Special to the DAILY COURIER

COLUMBIA CITY. Feb. 22, '98

Fire broke out this morning at the rear part of the Chambers House, the only hotel in the place and for a time there was a hard fight to save the property. It started in the laundry and as the building is a frame, and pretty old, there was great danger of its complete destruction. Three streams from the the water works hydrants were turned on, and by the help of an efficient fire department, it was got under control by 8 a. m. The fire department here is excellent, and the team is exercised every day. A fire like this, in an old and large wooden building, would probably not have been put under control had it occurred in Auburn, where only an engine could be used, and no water works. Besides, it would take our fire team too long to reach the fire over present roads.

J. J. VANAUKEN.

Surprise To John Olinger.

Following close upon the announcement in the dailies of preparations for the mobilization of military and naval forces in event of unpleasantness growing out of the Maine disaster between this country and Spain, comes intelligence of a night attack, surprise and subjugation of John Olinger's castle by the G. A. R and W. R. C. of this place on Monday evening. The attack had been carefully planned and such means of transdortation for the troops secured that failure of the enterprise was impossible. Three sled loads, to the number of thirty, left here about 7 o'clock, and after a seemingly interminable drive over almost impassable roads, arrived at the scene of action without the loss of a man (or woman), despite the frequent narrow escapes from capsizing. The combined forces met with a warm reception, although Mr. Olinger had received no warning of their approach and had no time in which to fortify himself against attack.

Mr. Olinger is a member of the G. A. R. post at this place and a veteran of Co. A. 100th Indiana, and it was a remarkable fact that three of his old regiment. John Hanes, Joseph Culler and Joseph Prosser, were of the attacking party. The occasion was the 61st anniversary of Mr. Olinger's nativity.

After a song of welcome to the visitors had been nicely rendered by Miss Olinger, Commander Wm. H. McIntosh in a short address, in behalf of the Post, presented Mr. Olinger with a handsome rocker. Some time was then given over to social enjoyment, when all were summoned to partake of a bountiful repast prepaerd by the genial hostess, Mrs. Olinger. Conveyances were then called for and the homeward journey begun, all feeling that although not so young as they used to be, they had had a jolly good time. As they came in sight of their camp fires, the city engineer threw the switch and all was dark. J. I.

MAY BE NEW INDUSTRY.

Are our people aware that we are liable to have a new industry here? Charlie Jones at the store of Mrs Jones & Son informs us that within the last week or two they have made and sold twenty se (wrappers for ladies. Home made wrappers are quite popular as they are furnished at about the cost or even less than it would cost a lady to buy the goods and hire the dress made. These wrappers he has made for him by ladies who live here and he sells them at $1.50 ready to use. Who knows but this may develop into quite an industry and we be able to keep our money at home?

WANTED A WIFE.

South Bend Times: Monday a dark complected young man, who gave his name as Perry Powell from near Cassopolis, made application at the shirt factory for a young woman who would make a good housekeeper. Mr. John R. Haughton the manager, became suspicious, but after some questioning buought forth the fact that the young man was really looking for a wife. He then stated that he had no desire to accept such a serious responsibility as mating two young creatures and told Powell to bring his mother there so she cou'd act in the affair. He seemed willing to do this, but was then informed that the shirt factory's list of young ladies eligible for wives had been exhausted and referred him to one of the woolen mills.

Powell has not returned and the success of his efforts are not known.

AUBURN'S S. H. G. LADIES.

(Ft Wayne Journal.)

One of the literary clubs of the enterprising city of Auburn is preparing to give an entertainment on Washington's birthday, the 22nd, and will start the pleasures of the day with a fine dinner at 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. M. E. Griswold. As many Fort Wayne people have friends in Auburn, the names of the club members will be of interest. There are two memberships, working and associate. To the former belong Mrs. Jennie McClellan, who is the president; Miss Laura Ober, vice president; Mrs. Elizabeth Raut, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Jennie Clifton, critic. Mesdames Cornelia Caruth, Lucy Griswold, Winnie and Sophie Hebel, Marian McIntyre, Anna Moss, Clara Moody, Laura Roby, Millie Sheets, Maggie VanAuken, Etta Ryan, Mary West, Agnes Jones, Della Leedy, Mrs. Fitch. The associate members are Mrs. Luna Penfield, Mrs Geraldine Schaab and Mrs May Dills.

OBITUARY

Joseph G. Raub was born in Stark county Ohio, on May 25, 1837, and departed this life Feb. 16, 1898, aged 60 years, 8 months and 21 days. He was united in marriage with Mary Bowman, on Sunday Nov. 22, 1857. To this union were born three children, one son and two daughters, of whom none remain to mourn his departure, one daughter having proceeded him to the better world eighteen years ago. The death of Mr. Raub completes a rather extraordinary occurance, eighteen months ago, one son, one daughter, his loving companion and himself were all enjoying the blessings of good health but God saw fit in his all wise providence to afflict the family and on Oct. 1, 1896, the angel of death visited the family and took from their midst the only remaining daughter and again on the 14th day of the same month his loving and faithful companion was summoned by the death messenger and had to go thus leaving Mr. Raub with but one remaining child who was not spared to him long for again on the 16th of September 1897, the death angel called and took from him his only remaining child, thus leaving father Raub in his declining years, alone, but God has said in his holy word that he will not foresake those who put their trust in him, and a home was provided for him at the home of his former son-in law, S. W. Guthrie, in Sedan where loving hands did all that could possibly be done for him. He was stricken with that dreadful disease locomoto ataxia on Dec. 27, 1897, and gradually grew worse until his lamp of life was extinguished. He was a most patient sufferer never uttering one word of complaint during his sickness. Mr. Raub came to this county from Stark county Ohio. when 19 years of age, and has been a continual resident of this county until his demise. He embraced the Christian religion when a young man and as the years rolled by his faith grew stronger. He lived an exemplary Christian life and died in the triumphs of a living faith having finished the race, henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness which God the righteous judge shall give He lived and died a true christian, and no better thing can be said of any man. He leaves to mourn his departure two granddaughters, three brothers and one sister, besides a host of other more distant relatives and friends. Mr. Raub will be greatly missed not only in the home from which he was taken but in the entire neighborhood for he was loved and highly respected by all who knew him The funeral services were held in the Lutheran church on Saturday Feb. 19 conducted by Rev. Campbell assisted by Rev. James Barton and Rev. T. C. Benson, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Evergreen cemetery Auburn.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents a bott'e at H. B. McCord's drug store.

Town Free from Loafers.

From the Louisville Post: "Three miles from nowhere, in a little backwoods village over in North Carolina, the other day I found the one town in the world where everybody works and no loafing is permitted," said a well-known salesman last night. "In this hamlet there's no idleness that is not voluntary or vicious, and this privilege is not allowed even to the wandering Willie out of a job. On a sign at the postoffice in Beechland is this injunction: 'No loafing allowed in this town. We work, and so must everybody else who expects to reside here for any length of time. Idleness breeds crime, and as we never had a robbery or murder here we have determined to strike at the root of all evil. Tramps will be given one hour in which to depart, and honest men out of employment will be given work if they desire it. If not they must git, and git as quick as their lazy legs will carry them away from our village. This means you."

A Cold Trip.

Engineer Albert Rodgers, of the Pennsylvania railroad, petted and fed a stray cat in the Jersey City depot, and the feline followed him into the engine cab. The fireman put the cat off just as the train was about to start and nothing more was thought about it. It was a freight train, and eight hours were consumed in the journey, which ended in this city late at night. Before going home Rodgers took a look over his engine and found poor puss clinging to the trucks, almost frozen stiff, for the night had been bitter cold. The engineer wrapped his little friend in his overcoat and took it home, and, after thawing out, the cat was found to be none the worse for its perilous journey.—Philadelphia Record.

The Polar Resident's Advantage.

"I wish I was at the north pole," said the gentleman who had just received a six months' sentence. "What for?" asked the guard. "Then I could make a night of it."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—Married at the Lutheran Parsonage this forenoon, at 10:30 oclock by Rev. J. D. Brosy, Lancaster Morr and Daisy McCrory. They will make their future home on a farm about 6 miles east of Auburn. We wish for them a happy and prosperous future.

—It is now claimed that in case it is found that the Maine was blown up by outsiders, that our government will demand damages of fifteen millions from Spain. This is sheer nonsense. If Spain, or Spanish subjects did the cowardly deed and destroyed a warship of a friendly power, it is not a case for money damages. It a case for war.

—Friday evenining of this week the Maccabees give a literary entertainment at their hall. There will be recitations, readings, speeches, music etc. All are welcomed who can come. It is free to all and a good treat will be given to all.

—Read our advertisement for the Indianapolis Sentinal Almanac. It contains an immense amount of statistics of all kinds including correct election returnes etc. Price 25 cents. Send orders to the COURIER office.

—It is hoped there will be a full attendance at the meeting of lot owners of Evergreen cemetery as each will be entitled to a vote. The cemetery has been kept up by gratuitous help of a part of the owners and all should feel an interest. Read the notice in this issue.

—There is a bran new joke out on our lively correspondent at St. Joe. Just as he was penning a very interesting item at the close of this weeks letter someone rushed into court and wanted a divorce and the item was never finished, but we will accept it at any time.

—The new principal of the High School is expected here now any day: It is very difficult for Mr. Coe, to fill the place any longer, as his own work as county superintendent is now crowding him. Since writing the above we have seen Mr. Shull, who says he will reach Auburn by Saturday, certainly. He is favorably impressed with the new teacher.

—Auburnites should learn wisdom, and raise the grade of their moral ideas. James Ludwig went down to Fort Wayne according to an item in the News of that place and put up with an attractive girl and her two friends. Now he has had them arrested for stealing his watch.

Gov. Tanner of Illinois has offered his service to the government in case of war with Spain. It is to be hoped that he will make a better soldier than he does a governor.

—That would be a sensible contest should it ever take place. We allude to the comtemplated chopping contest between Australian and American axmen.

—Money ready to loan on good real estate security.

WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—Willis Randall one of the best known as well as the best posted of the restless old-time printers was here yesterday. Few people have seen more of the country than he.

—Boys! E. C. Sheets respectfully calls your attention to his fine line of Spring Suiting of which he has just received a part of his order. The balance will be here soon.

—An Auburn citizen lost a bunch of keys yesterday and sent a "lost" notice to the COURIER. In half an hour his keys were found. If you want anything advertise in the COURIER.

—A bequest is not always desirable. For instance, a wealthy man has given the town of Van Wert $40,000 to be expended on a public library. Now the city wants to use up all the money on a fine building and then tax the people of the whole county to buy the books. But the people if the county at large make a vigorous kick.

A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—The 19th annual encampment G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans and Ladies' Aid Society; also Ladies G. A R. will be held at Columbus, Indiana, on Wednesday and Thursday, May 18 and 19, 1898. A rate of one cent per mile, coming and going has been secured on all railroads. —The early spring fakir who holds forth by the Kiblinger block, took a new way to drum up a crowd yesterday He got his goods ready, then wrapped up a package of something, in strong paper and went about dragging it on the slushy sidewalks and crossings, all the while talking and preaching to it. It may be was doing penance for the condition he was in the night before We don't know.

—There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created—they are the ant, the bee and DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the last being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

—Several young ladies of the Peru High school were summoned before the prosecuting attorney a few days ago apu interrogated as to where they had procured there cigarettes. Prosecutions are likely to follow, says the Plymouth Independent, and the satisfaction enjoyed by these girls in smoking a few nasty "coffin nails" will not begin to compensate them for their utter humiliation and disgrace being compelled to testify to their guilt in a public trial.

—We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter orbetter way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung trouble that can follow neglected colds. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—Wm. Swartz of Waterloo came down on the forenoon train as the roads are too bad to drive over. He was putting up bills for his sale of March third.

—Rev J. D. Brosy, informs the COURIER, that during the recent revival at their church there were thirty accessions to the membership and that the church is in a highly prosperous condition. At the prayer meeting last week there were eighty-five present. He conducted the revival without help, for the entire series.

—L. E. Lane and James Myers have been at Chicago in the interest of the new starching machine the former has patented. They brought home a number of the machines last night, they being now made in Chicago. Mr. Lane has arranged to have them handled in Chicago and is in a fair way to make his invention pay handsomely. We are glad to hear that he has struck a bonanza in his invention. It seems to take well wherever it is introduced.

—J. J. Martin the Albion hardware man, came down last evening, going this way to Ft. Wayne where he has some business. He comes back on the evening train. In the odd times spent in Auburn, he will have a chance to visit many old friends, including his relatives of the COURIER family. He also called on Operator Riley, of the Postal Telegraph Office, he himself being the operator for that line at Albion. The many friends of Mrs. Martin will be interested in hearing that she and a sister are visiting in Ohio.

—Goshen Democrat:—The Lake Shore railroad has double track be- Elkhart and Ohio state line with the exception of a piece between Kendallville and Ligonier. Undoubtedly this piece would be filled was it not by thus leaving it their valuation for purposes of taxation is greatly lessened through a technicality of the law. If this second track was connected it would then be assessed as a second main track and the assessed valuation would be much greater than it now is, for as long as the ends remain unconnected it is assessed merely as a side track.

—After all, enjoyment depends largely on how we feel ourselves and how we look at things. We noticed three little lads today, Paul Trout, Edmund Richards and Elton Yesbera Paul was on a little wagon, while Elton and Edmund were his horses and drawing him bumpety-bump over the half frozen mud in the lumpy road. It was hard to say which had the harder job, the rider or the team. But all enjoyed it. No rich man with cushion tired carriage, fine team, with livered coachman and smooth pavements, ever enjoyed a ride as much as much as did theses lively lads.

—Ligonier Banner: Among the Republican congressmen who are growing tired of the McKinley policy of inaction toward Cuba, is our old friend, Joel P. Heatwole, formerly of Middlebury, but now a member of the lower house from Minnesota. He is one of the most active members of the committee on foreign affairs and has been looked upon as one of the most conservative members of that body, but since the DeLome-Canejas affair he has shown a disposition to demand redress from Spain. He does not hesitate to express the opinion that the course of the administration toward DeLome was very disappointing to him.

—J. J. Martin returned to his home at Albion on 11:45 train today. He met a large number of old friends who knew him when he was B. & O. agent so long, at the Junction.

—Columbia City Post:—Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McNear report a big boy baby. Joe was able to be down town this morning.

—We had a pleasant call Saturday from Wm. Antony, of Smithfield and Sherman Gall, of Jackson, two enterprising young farmers. Glad to make their acquaintance.

—Auburn got her share of the honors at the late state meeting of Republican clubs. Jas. H. Rose was elected delegate to the National League to be held at Omaha and G. A. Bishop alternate.

—Waterloo council has decided not to put in electric lights at present. This was not expected. It is believed the town's finances are in such good shape the lights could be easily afforded.

—Blizzards are raging all over the west and northwest, the worst storms of the season. Travel is at a standstill in many parts and some trains snow-bound. The worst storm they claim since 1880. We are having the tip end of it —The Waterloo G. A. R. gave a big campfire last Monday evening. The Press gives a very interesting report of it. Among other items we notice that Gen. Blair recited, Sheriden's Ride; Mrs. F. W. Beidler gave the Germanized parody of Barbara Frietchie and Mrs. F. W. Willis read a very fine paper on what she saw on her visit to the battlefield of Shilo.

—March 1, will be the date of the Athletic contest at the Opera House. It is to consist of boxing, wrestling and similar contests of strength and skill and will be a new feature in entertainments in Auburn amd we look to see it largely patronized.

—Fort Wayne Gazette says their ball club has two pitchers, and therefore "one to sell," Auburn can beat that. Olds Brothers here have "scores of pitchers for sale," real scores and real pitchers. Come to Auburn to buy your pitchers.

—There was another suit before 'Squire Walter Friday. The case was brought by Geo. Zurbuch, of Fort Wayne against the A. F. Voal Co. of Cleveland, and the Auburn Mining Co. were made garnishee defendants. The result of the case was a judgment of $18 53 against the Voal Oil Co., and $28 against the Auburn Mining Co. D. D. Moody was attorney for the plaintiff and T. H. Sprott for the defendant.

—The lovers of fistic and athletic are to enjoy the best entertainment of its kind ever given in Auburn, at the opera house on the evening of March 1st and the managers of the same have given us to understand and request us to say that it is to be of a strictly moral and high class nature. Among the noted men in attendance, and who will assit, are Herbert Hale, welter weight champion wrestler of the world, and Prof. Loveless, instructor and trainer of the Ft Wayne Athletic Association, who formally acted in same capacity for the Y. M. C. A. of Fort Wayne. Elwood George, who is well known here, will also help make the thing a success.

—NEW SUBSCRIBERS, say about forty, can pay us in wood, when the roads become better. Send in the names. We also have a number of old subscribers who pay in wood and when roads get good, they can deliver it.

He recently had a visit with Marshall Ingraham, who was in Mr. B's Company, and who is now a prosperous farmer, eighteen miles from Concordia, Kansas.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

A Study of His Personality as Soldier, Statesman and Citizen.

AMONG great historical characters there is none exerting a wider or more potent influence upon succeeding generations than that of George Washington. It is conceded that all history furnishes not another character so symmetrical in all its parts as that of the first President of the United States. As a patriot, a citizen, a soldier and a statesman, Washington stands out in bold relief on the pages of history, the greatest American that ever lived. It is this magnificent equipoise of character attributes that most strikingly impresses the student of his personality and achievements. It may be said of Washington as was said of Louis Phillipe: "He had no youth; he was born a man." Washington received only a common school education. He was ev r sensitive of his educational limitations, and even after he had served as commander-in-chief of the army, acted as President for two terms and indelibly set the impress of his character upon the foundation principles of the greatest of free governments, he appealed to half a dozen of his colleagues and friends for help in writing and revising his farewell address. Though in his youth he was content to earn his living as a hired surveyor, when he died, Washington was one of the wealthiest Americans of his time, his property, exclusive of his wife's and the Mount Vernon estate, being worth over $500,000. He was a successful business man, as well as a great soldier and statesman.

In his youth, and even during the revolution, Washington was a good deal of a candy. In his personal appearance he was exceptionally clean and neat. He is described as tall and well proportioned and of commanding presence. His feet were unusually large. Though he wore false teeth and his large-featured face was colorless and pitted from smallpox, he was considered handsome. Washington was fond of a good time with congenial companions. He was passionately fond of dancing, and he frequently went to picnics, one of his particular diversions. He was fond of cards and billiards, usually with small stakes. His diary shows that he lost fully as often as he won at both games. Washington was also fond of fishing and hunting, the theater and the circus. Music, too, charmed him. In reading Washington favored works on agriculture and military science, though there were historical books, besides poems and novels by standard authors in his library. After more than a dozen love affairs, Washington, in 1759, when he was 27 years old, married the wealthy widow of Daniel Parke Custis. Martha Washington is reported to have been comely, obstinate and a poor speller, yet well bred and generally kind to relations and friends. Washington, though, always seemed satisfied with her.

Washington's conduct as President showed the natural results of his characteristics and training as a citizen and a soldier. Guided by no other impulse but that of duty, bound by no other ties save those of honor and the best interests of the whole people, his principles and work as the first President of the new republic ought ever to serve as the motto and model of every public official, as they have always been and must ever be the true basis of good government and lasting political reform. Prudence, conciliation and firmness proved to be the characteristics of his conduct during the two administrations, whether in dealing with domestic troubles, or the United States' relations with England and France, or the jealousies and divergent opinions of the members of his own cabinet. Other features of his statesmanship were his progressive views and efforts in behalf of the abolition of slavery, and the founding of a national university. Washington's whole career is animate with the heart throbs of American history; his every public act resplendent with the coloring of American sentiment. Beneath the apparent austerity of his manner there moved a current of patriotism as broad as his country, and as deep as humanity.

WASHINGTON'S BURIAL.

Masonic Ceremony to Commemorate the Hundredth Anniversary.

A grand Masonic memorial service is projected to commemorate the death and burial of George Washington on the occasion of the centennial, December, 1899. The celebration will be under the immediate auspices of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, but will be participated in by all the Grand Lodges of the United States, directly by those within a radius of miles to permit of personal attendance and by representation from afar. This celebration will take place at Mount Vernon and will revive as closely as possible the burial ceremony.

WASHINGTON IN MASONIC REGALIA.

The movement for a proper commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the burial of Washington had its inception about two years ago in the Grand Lodge of Colorado. Since then one after another of the Grand Lodges of the United States have appointed committees to take measures for a representation of their Masonic jurisdictions. This national movement, initiated by Masons, has extended to all patriotic and civic societies, so that in every city, town, village and hamlet a memorial service will be held, on Dec. 18, 1899. There are cogent reasons why this movement should appeal with peculiar force to Masons everywhere, for a review of the records of Washington's death and burial is beautifully suggestive of the high ideal of fraternal love and charity ever cherished by the Father of His Country.

During his last illness "the General," as his friends and neighbors called him, was attended by three physicians. The first was his old friend and companion-in-arms, Dr. James Craik, surgeon general of the Continental Army, and in private life a member of the Masonic fraternity. The other physicians from that neighborhood was Dr. Elisha Cullen Dick, then Master of Alexandria Lodge. Dr. Brown of Port Tobacco was also called into consultation. At the moment of Washington's death, Dr. Craik stopped the pendulum and hands of the clock that stood on the mantel of the room and which remains to-day in the same condition as it was ninety-nine years ago. The clock has become the possession of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, of Alexandria, Va., of which lodge Washington was first Master. In his dying hours the General communicated to his private secretary, Mr. Lear, his desire not to be buried until after three days had elapsed. His wishes were respected.

At Washington's death the Deacons of the lodge were directed to have the orders cleaned and prepared and to furnish spermaceti candles for them. To Alexandria-Washington Lodge was given the post of honor in the Masonic detachment of the funeral procession. Masons of the District of Columbia were also in line. Of the three lesser lights that were borne into Washington's tomb two were held by members of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Alexandria and one by Brother Alexander McCormick of Georgetown and Washington city. Two of these candles are preserved under lock and key by Alexandria-Washington Lodge, and the third is in charge of Secretary Singleton of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia. This third light was carried, burning, at the laying of the corner stone of the Washington monument in Washington city, at the dedication of the same, and it will be lighted for the fourth and last time at the centennial celebration of Washington's burial.

As a Mason Washington had presided at the laying of the corner stone of the capitol in Washington, officiating, on Sept. 18, 1793, as President of the United States and Masonic Past Master. On that occasion he wore his Master's sash and the apron presented to him by Lafayette and which had been wrought with gold and silver tissue and beautifully adorned with Masonic emblems by the Marquise de Lafayette.

Mt. Vernon.

Upon the broad Potomac's shore,
Below the city of his name,
His ashes rest, who evermore
Will live the favorite of fame.
He stood the greatest of the great,
When giants battled. It was he
Who with his sword carved out a State
And gave a people liberty.
He seems to us almost divine;
The calm, the brave, the good, the just.
This spot becomes a nation's shrine,
Because it holds his sacred dust.
There is no bound unto his fame,
But every land beneath the sun
Lends to the general acclaim,
Which greets the name of Washington.

BUTTONS MADE OF MILK.

A Factory in Holland Engaged in Their Manufacture.

For a long time buttons and other articles for which bone is generally used have been made from congealed blood, purchased at the slaughter houses, and treated with some substance that hardens it to the sufficient consistency, says the Philadelphia Times. The same articles can be made from milk by a process invented by an Englishman. The milk used is the skim-milk. The process of turning this liquid into buttons pool balls, combs, backs of hair brushes and similar articles consists of mixing it with a substance, the ingredients of which are a secret of the inventor, and compressing it. At the end of three days the substance is as solid as celluloid and is ready to be cut and shaped in any way the manufacturer wishes. At present a factory in Holland is engaged in fashioning the hardened milk into various articles, buttons being the chief. The buttons made in this peculiar way differ very litle in appearance from ordinary bone buttons. They are a creamy white in appearance, but can be colored black or red or any other color by simply mixing the coloring matter with the milk before the hardening process begins. They are said to possess advantages over the bone and celluloid article in being less brittle and less liable to chip. For combs the milk substance has been found to be especially well adapted, as it is smooth and delicate to the touch, and derives from its creamy origin a glossy surface. In the same way it is a good substitute for ivory in billiard and pool balls.

A RELIC OF WASHINGTON.

The Cabin Which Sheltered Him While on a Surveying Tour.

While hundreds of pilgrims daily crowd the shrine of Mount Vernon and other hundreds break pieces of marble from the monument over his mother's grave, one of the most interesting relics of Washington remains unknown and is rapidly falling into decay. This is a small cabin used by Washington when as a young man he was engaged in surveying the lands of upper Virginia.

Near Berryville, Clarke County, Va., Gen. Daniel Morgan, a revolutionary soldier, built a handsome home, which he called Soldier's Rest. About 200 yards from this manor is located the cabin, which is regarded with almost religious veneration by the people of the neighborhood, and which is slowly being eaten away by the tooth of time. The house is 12 feet square and there are but two rooms, one on the ground floor and one used as a garret. Beneath the building a small stream flows, or rather it did at the beginning of the present century. Entrance to the loft was obtained by a ladder, up which Washington was accustomed to climb, as he kept all of his surveying instruments in the upper room. This apartment is lathed and plastered, one window lights it up, and a rough door gives access to the visitor.

Lord Fairfax, who was a wealthy English nobleman, obtained from his Government large concessions of lands in the upper part of Virginia in the early days of the last century. Desiring to have his lands accurately surveyed he called into his service George Washington, then scarcely more than a boy. He did the work so well that he won the friendship of Lord Fairfax for life. It was in 1748 that the old cabin sheltered him.

THE WASHINGTON ELM.

Old Tree Where Washington Took Command of the Army.

One of the historic landmarks of Cambridge, Mass., is the Washington Elm, an illustration of which is here given.

On May 10, 1775, the Second Continental Congress met at Philadelphia and elected George Washington commander-in-chief of the American forces. Three weeks later Washington arrived at Cambridge, Mass., and assumed the command of the army under the elm tree. The latter is still standing and is surrounded by an iron fence, outside of which is a large stone tablet upon which is inscribed the fact that Washington took command of the army under the tree.

By throwing up entrenchments at Dorchester Heights and thus commanding the harbor and the city of Boston, Washington compelled Gen. Howe to evacuate the city on March 17, 1776. Fifteen hundred families of loyalists sailed with the British general for Halifax.

SHEARING THE SHEEP.

Machine Does It at the Rate of One Every Two Minutes.

When Dick Marquies takes a sheep by the hind leg, tosses the struggling animal into position and reaches for the steam power clippers, which hang near at hand, it takes just two minutes for that sheep to emerge from his professional care clean and white and minus about six pounds of first quality wool. That is the way they shear sheep nowadays in the big plant of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, near Aurora, Ill. About three weeks ago the steam power plant was started and twenty men have been steadily bending over the lambs and sheep ever since, sending the buzzing clippers scurrying through the matted wool and making 1,500 sheep every day look as if they had been shaved by a barber. Until now this work was done by hand, and the process, while exceptionally rapid, did not yield such results in many ways as does the steam shearing.

Although steam shearing plants have been in operation in Australia for many years, this country has been strangely backward about adopting the system, and sheep raisers have largely clung to the old hand shearing, although power plants are in operation at Casper, Wyo., and in certain parts of Montana. The system is simple. The clippers work on the familiar principle of the hand clippers used on small boys' heads in barber shops, a comb with very sharp triangular teeth and a moving set of teeth passing back and forth under it. Shafting is put in and each clipper is attached to a flexible standard, which allows the cutter to be moved in any direction by the operator. Behind each operator is a small pen into which about a dozen sheep at a time are driven from the runway. The men wear overalls and caps and work very steadily. When the operator is ready to begin he opens the door of the pen, which causes a great scurrrying among the heavily fleeced lambs and sheep. Selecting an animal at random, the man seizes it by one of its hind legs, and with a quick jerk throws it to the floor. Then it is dragged out of the pen and the door is closed. With a deft move the sheep is made to sit up on its haunches, as though sitting in a chair, and when its head and forequarters are pressed between the knees of the operator it is helpless. After a few ineffectual struggles the animal becomes resigned to the situation, and with the left arm of the operator encircling its neck and his hand clutching its horn or face it has no chance to escape.

The clipper swings on its flexible support close to the operator, and when he has the sheep in the correct position he reaches for the machine and passes it through the wool on the breast between the forelegs. A broad streak of white shows as the clipper rapidly mows a swath through the fleece and the wool falls off in a great curl to the floor. All over the belly of the surprised sheep the buzzing little machine is passed, revealing the pink flush of the skin under the wool. The sheep's position is shifted slightly, and the machine with a few sweeps whisks the wool from its legs and then the heavy fleece on its back goes to swell the pile on the floor.

Two minutes is record time for the completion of this process, although, of course, all of the operators are not so expert as to make this mark. Some work slowly and carefully, removing every vestige of wool in a neat, systematical way and leaving the lambs as clean as a freshly shaved cheek. If an operator shears 100 sheep a day he is making a good average, and some fall below this number. When the sheep is returned to the pen the operator gathers the wool in a little pile and binds it up with a cord hanging beside him. Down the center of the narrow shed between the two rows of machines runs a little track on which a big car is pushed by a stout young man, and into this the wool is tossed and thus transported to the end of the room, where it is sacked. The sacks are about twenlve feet long and are rigged up in a framework. The packages of wool are tossed into the sack from the car until the sack is nearly full, and then a heavy man jumps into the sack and tramps down the wool into a compact mass. More is thrown in and tramped upon until the sack is packed full, when it is tied and piled in a corner, awaiting the orders of the owner of the sheep from which it was taken.

The Emperor's Playing Cards.

The Emperor William's faithful subjects are interested just now in an account of his playing cards. It appears that the royal table does not admit the usual French designs. His Majesty's packs are printed in an Altenberg manufactory, and exhibit old German patterns. The backs are devoted to a symbolical exposition of the triple alliance. The Prussian eagle, the double eagle of Austria and the silver cross of the house of Savoy appear on a red field, surrounded with ivy and surmounted by the imperial crown. Similar designs are introduced at the corners, and the "four colors" are strewn over the card. The picture cards are executed in corresponding style. The king of diamonds is said to have a family likeness with the great Kugfurst. The queen of hearts appears as a simple gretchen and the knave of diamonds as a knight of St. John. History does not relate whether the Emperor is a whist player or confines himself to the national game of skat.—London Post.

SOAP BUBBLES.

Mysterious Dancing Figures Inside of the Glistening Spheres.

A most interesting trick is the soap bubble one. To perform this two cork figures must be made. They can be colored with bright paint. Fasten them with wire to a small cork stand.

The soap bubble mixture is important to prepare. For it you must have a quantity of castile soap, perhaps half a teacup, and add to it a fourth of the quantity of glycerine. Melt the soap in warm water before adding the glycerine. This should make perhaps a pint of heavy, soapy water. Test the bubbles, and if you cannot blow them as large as the moon the mixture is not properly mixed. Soap bubble exhibitors often blow bubbles as large as three and four feet in diameter by the use of this mixture.

Take a short strip of wood (a foot rule will do) and drive a small nail into each end. Then stretch a thin string, or, better still, a piece of wire, from one nail to the other, and place a bridge under it so as to form a primitive musical instrument. Next nail to one end of the strip of wood the lid of a tin in such a manner that it touches the string or wire, and place the figure inside the lid after moistening it well with soap and water. Now take a straw and blow a bubble in the lid and then touch the string gently. The vibration of the latter wil lthen be communicated to the lid, and the figures will dance inside the bubble. A beautiful optical effect is thus obtained, and the delight of the audience is such that the bubble performer is kept busy all the evening with fresh creations. There are many variations of the soap bubble trick possible, and which will readily suggest themselves.

THE FLY AND THE MATCH.

A Striking Illustration of the Strength of Insects.

The strength of various insects is tremendous in proportion to their size. A man who had time recently experimented with a common house fly, and found it could lift a square of paper so large that the feat was equal to a man five feet high lifting a stout and stiff carpet covering a room twenty-five feet square. He also lifted a safety match seven times longer than himself. This would represent to the average man a timber thirty-five feet long and as thick as his own body, carried under one arm. The fly was able to circulate around the room with a piece of cotton thread tied to one leg, equaling a cable sixty feet long and thicker than a man's thigh, if a man attempted to carry the same weight in proportion to his size.

Too Much for Him.

"I like modesty," said the old doctor, "but there's such a thing as overdoing it."

"How's that?" his assistant asked.

"I was called, this mouning, to see a Boston girl, who is visiting friends here, and when I asked her to let me see her tongue she flared up and insisted that I had insulted her."

LIVINGSTONE'S GRAVE.

Great Explorer's Remains Repose in Central Africa—Site May Be Lost.

Those of us who have read the late Professor Drummond's "Equatorial Africa" can recall his interesting visit to the grave of Mrs. Livingstone, wife of the great missionary and geographical discoverer.

Mr. Poulett-Weatherley writes, after a recent visit to the hero's grave, the most graphic description of the utterness of its desolation.

For miles around the Mpundu tree, near Chitambo's village, the country was parched and burned up, and since Chitambo's death the natives have scattered so that no longer is there a village near.

Mr. Weatherley very much fears the destruction of the tree by grass fires, and suggests that some brass or indestructible memorial should mark the spot.

There need be no fear of the natives stealing, destroying or ravaging the same, as they have the most superstitious regard for the graves of their own dead, building open diminutive huts near them, in which such charms as bread, pumpkins, tobacco or anything likely to be loved by the dead are hung up. On the hoed or cultivated soil around a grave a native will not even set his foot, and so he urges that a clear space be somehow kept open for twenty or more feet around this notable grave.

When there he had to clean off undergrowth, scrub and tall grasses, in order to be able to photograph the inscription on the tree.

It is hard to believe that the grave of such a man could be neglected and desolate in appearance after hearing and knowing so much of the force and power of his perpetual living monument—the Livingstonia Mission. Could we but only preserve its indentification in the heart of tropical Africa for the present, we need have no fear for its careful preservation in the future after the missionary effort, to which his whole life was devoted, has colonized and settled the country in which he died.

At home in his native village of Blantyre, on the banks of the Clyde, opposite Bothwell, one of the jubilee offerings has been a tablet affixed to the house, popularly believed to have been the home of his boyhood.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Armour Tried to Tip a Baron.

P. D. Armour of Chicago spent his regular summer vacation at Carlsbad, Germany. Baron Kissengen, one of the richest noblemen in Germany and a great lover of horses, was at the springs at the time of the Chicago millionaire's visit. Near Carlsbad the baron kept half a hundred magnificent horses. Mr. Armour, says the New York Herald, with an American friend, went out to visit the stable. A custodian to whom they applied granted permission.

"Can you give us some one to show the horses?" asked Mr. Armour. The custodian looked about. Near one of the stalls stood a plain-looking man, and the custodian said: "I think he will show you the horses."

The plain-looking man did show them, and did it well. He knew the horses by name, their pedigrees, and he told all about them. It happened that Mr. Armour always carried in his pocket when in Europe a number of silver coins, which he distributes among people who are good to him. So when it was all over he fished out about a half pint of the coins and tendered them to the plain-looking man. The latter, with an amused sort of smile, declined, but waved the American to the stable boys, as people who commonly made small objections to such favors.

"I am Baron Kissengen," said the plain man simply, but graciously. "I am glad to know you," said Armour. "Not only because you have the finest lot of horses I have seen in the country, but because you are the first person I have found in this country who has refused to take a tip."

Every Watch a Compass.

"Several weeks ago in London," said an English tourist, "I was standing beside an American acquaintance, when I expressed a wish to know which point was north. He pulled out his watch, looked at it and at once pointed in the right direction. I asked him whether he had a compass attached to his watch. 'All watches are compasses,' he replied. Then he explained to me how this was. Point the hour hand to the sun, and the south is exactly half way between the hour and the figure XII on the dial. For instance, suppose it is 4 o'clock. Point the hand indicating 4 to the sun, and II on the watch is exactly south. Suppose, again, that it is 8 o'clock. Point the hand indicating 8 to the sun and the figure X on the dial is due south. My American friend seemed surprised that I did not know this, and not wanting to be left alone in my ignorance, I asked Henry M. Stanley, whom I met the following day, whether he knew of this simple means of taking the points of the compass. My self-esteem rose when that famous traveler told me he had never heard of it. So, perhaps there may be plenty of folks in your country who still remain in my original state of ignorance. I don't know what place my American friend hails from, but somewhere in your great West."—New York Herald.

Eagle Was in the Revolution.

Eagles are not so scarce as is generally believed. It is said that there are hundreds of the great birds in the highlands near West Point; but though the matter of "hundreds" may be doubted, to Buffalo Express asserts that there are many. Among these is one old fellow that lives on Turks Head above Garrison. He dates from Revolutionary days, and still bears a scar made by a British bullet. His habit of flying sideways and the peculiar droop of his right wing make him an easily recognized object. This droop was caused by the shot of a British soldier, who while passing up the Hudson on a man-of-war was ordered by his captain to shoot the eagle as it soared quite a distance aloft. The soldier's marksmanship was good, but it cost him his life. A band of patriots hidden in the rocks saw the deed, and as the ship lay well toward the shore their volley killed the sharpshooter. The wounded eagle was cared for by the patriots.

There'll probably be no one in heaven that is better than the average man thinks he is.

Consideration of the Indian appropriation bill was resumed in the Senate on Friday, and, after being amended to some extent, the measure was passed. The most important amendment was that offered by Mr. Pettigrew, which, if finally enacted, will restore the free homestead law so far as it relates to Indian lands ceded to the United States, for which lands the settlers have been obliged to pay the purchase price paid to the Indians. The bill carries appropriations aggregating nearly $8,000,000. The Senate adjourned until Monday. The House was not in session.

In the House on Monday a resolution calling for information as to the concentrados in Cuba was adopted. Another resolution calling for the correspondence relating to the exclusion of American fruit, beef and horses from Germany was adopted. The remainder of the day was devoted to District of Columbia business. A feature of the Senate session was a speech in advocacy of the free coinage of standard silver dollars by Mr. Allen. Mr. Harris introduced a resolution calling for information regarding the abandonment of the Government's purpose to bid in the Kansas Pacific Railway under a guarantee of the full amount of the principal of the debt. On Mr. Chandler's objection it went over one day.

In the House on Tuesday the time was devoted to the consideration of bills and joint resolutions and sixteen of more or less public importance were passed. An order was entered by unanimous consent for the consideration of the Loud bill relating to second-class mail matter, on March 1, 2 and 3, and the order for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill was modified so that the final vote shall be taken on Saturday instead of Monday. The Senate bill amending the navigation laws was passed, as was the bill to make it lawful to transmit through the mails private postal cards with a 1-cent stamp affixed. In the Senate a resolution was passed, after a spirited debate, calling for information regarding the sale of the Union Pacific road.

The debate on the bankruptcy bill opened in the House on Wednesday, but it attracted little attention, the interest of the members being entirely absorbed by the disaster to the Maine. At times the hall of the House was almost deserted, the members being congregated in the lobbies or cloak rooms discussing the accident and speculating upon its probable consequences. Just before the House adjourned Mr. Bonteile, chairman of the naval committee, presented a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, expressing regret for the disaster, condolence with the families of those who lost their lives and sympathy with the injured. A discussion upon the coast defenses was the interesting feature of the Senate. Many Senators took the ground that the appropriations should be for the full amount of the estimates by the War Department instead of some $4,000,000 less. Senators Perkins and Hale said that it was the policy of the Appropriations Committee to make an annual expenditure of $10,000,000 for fortifications. Senators Stewart, Hawley, Chandler and Lodge spoke in favor of increases. Senator Teller also advocated liberal expenditures, and during his remarks made significant allusions to Cuba and Hawaii. In the early part of the day there was a discussion of the Kansas Pacific Railroad sale, but no action was taken.

In the House the debate on the bankruptcy bill continued on Thursday, Messrs. Moody (Rep., Mass.), Alexander (Rep., N. Y.), Broderick (Rep., Kan.), McCall (Rep., Mass.), Knox (Rep., Mass.), Crumpacker (Rep., Ind.) and Dolliver (Rep., Iowa) spoke for it, and Messrs. Little (Dem., Ky.), Smith (Dem., Ky.), Wilson (Dem., S. C.), Maddox (Dem., Ga.), Sparkman (Dem., Fla.) and Bartlett (Dem., Ga.) against it. In the Senate by a vote of 34 to 29 the resolution of Mr. Turpie, declaring the Senate's opposition to the confirmation of the sale of the Kansas Pacific Railroad, was agreed to. The Corbett senatorial case was discussed by Mr. Pettus and Mr. Hoar. An agreement was reached to take a final vote upon the case Feb. 28.

The Bloke that Sneaked the Coal.

At a board school recently, during scripture lesson, the teacher was explaining to the class about the devil being everywhere to catch bad children, and said, as an example, that he was in the classroom at that moment.

"And is he at our house?" asked one of the boys.

"Yes," said the teacher, "he is."

"And is he in our coal house?" he asked again.

"Yes," was the answer.

Then replied the youngster:

"I'll tell my father, for that must be the bloke that sneaks our coal."—Spare Moments.

Arguing the Point.

A clergyman new to a living in the West of England was told that an old man in his parish was of an exceedingly crusty disposition, so he determined to make friends with him the first opportunity he had. Overtaking him in the village one day he said:

"This is cold weather, John."

Receiving no reply, he tried again.

"I said this is cold weather, John."

Turning angrily around, the old man replied:

"Well, who said it warn't D'ye want to argy the p'int?"

When her majesty the Empress of Japan drives out no one is permitted to look at her from the windows or chinks in the doors or any part of the house, but must sit down by the side of the street through which she passes. Each person must doff hat or cap as she passes, except the women in European dress, whose heads may remain covered. No one may speak or follow the carriage, and no noise of any kind is allowed on the streets through which she passes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Never Too Sure.

Against the probability or possibility of mischance or accident we can never be too sure. But if we should stop to consider how great is the chance of sudden death, we would be made too timid and unhappy. Caution is needed not to be foolhardy, and precaution to know what is best to do when an accident happens. One day this winter two men were walking and one said: "We're too timid in treading on slippery places. I tread firmly and never think about them, and so escape a fall." "Never be too sure," said the other; "it is that that throws you off and makes the fall the harder." Just then they came upon a place covered with thin snow, where kids had been sliding. The first speaker slipped and came down with his foot turned and badly sprained his ankle. He was a cripple on crutches until a short time ago, having used many things without benefit. Up to that time he had not used St. Jacobs Oil, which, when used, cured him completely, so that he walks as usual. There is a probability that for the rest of the season he will walk cautiously, with the precaution of having this great remedy ready for use.

Horse racing was indulged in to a limited extent in Maryland and Virginia as early as the middle of the seventeenth century.

A GREAT TIDE OF PROSPERITY.

Canadian Loan Companies Getting Money on Mortgages that Had Been Written Off.

Probably in the history of the continent there never was such a tide of prosperity enjoyed by any country as the Dominion of Canada is being favored with. That portion of Canada known as Western Canada is attracting thousands of people, who are seeking homes on the arable lands of that new but rapidly developing country. Possessed of exceptionally good railroad privileges, the best school system in the world, churches in every small settlement, while in the towns and cities all denominations are represented, and with markets in close proximity to the grain fields, most of the requirements for a comfortable existence are met. The development that is now taking place in the mining districts gives an impulse to agriculture, and good prices, with good crops, bring about a state of affairs that the crowded districts of more populous centers are taking advantage of. The Associated Press dispatches a few days since had the following telegram:

Toronto, Feb. 4.—(Special.)—Loan companies that made advances on Manitoba property years ago report that the returns from the West during the past three months have exceeded expectations. One company has taken from Manitoba over $20,000 interest and discharged mortgages, many of which had been written off a year ago. Directors of leading loan companies are taking a greater interest in business of their institutions, and are inquiring into many properties on which advances have been made.

The climate in the Western provinces of Manitoba, Alberta, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan is excellent, there being no healthier anywhere. The Canadian Government is now offering special inducements for the encouragement of settlers, and they have their agents at work throughout the United States for the purpose of giving information and distributing literature. Among those going to Canada are many ex-Canadians, who have failed to make as good a living as they expected in the United States.

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food-drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it, like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15c. and 25c. per package. Sold by all grocers.

The true greatness of man is to be found in his capacity for forming and cherishing ideals, and those only the best.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs at only ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

If you do good, forget it; if evil, remember and repent of it.

MANAGING HUSBANDS.

LEARN to rightly manage yourself before you attempt to manage a husband. Never by word or action say or do that which may lessen your husband's respect for you. Ever maintain a gentle dignity, avoiding sarcasm, nagging, jests which reflect upon his personal appearance or conduct. Study his disposition and tastes, also your own, and govern yourself accordingly. Be ever ready to compromise. Be patient, but not cringing; keep your proper footing with your husband; he will respect you the more, if you assert your rights with gentleness and tact. It is not wisdom to weakly yield to unreasonable whims.

Respect his feelings and appreciate his attentions. Keep home comfortable and cheery, properly care for his clothing, rightly attend to his meals. Do not waste time by recounting the trifling annoyances of the day when something of importance about the household demands his attention. Wait, if possible, until he is properly fed and rested a bit before you seek his counsel. Be actuated always by the spirit of love, as well as wifely affection, bearing and forbearing, and there is no fear of failure with the average man, who is a reasonable being.

Young Cabinet Lady.

Miss Helen Long, youngest daughter of the Secretary of the Navy, who recently christened the American built Japanese warship Kasagi after the unique oriental method of liberating a pigeon as she pronounced the name, must be really reckoned among the cabinet ladies, for Mrs. Long is so much of an invalid that she is unable to do her full share of entertaining, leaving a good part of these duties to be borne by her handsome and talented stepdaughter.

Miss Long was first introduced to Washington society last spring when she presided over her father's home during the absence of Mrs. Long. She showed that she was fond of the social whirl, for, in spite of the limitations of hotel life, she managed to give some very enjoyable receptions in their apartments at the Portland. She has many friends in the capital where she lived and studied for six years during her father's Congressional term.

Secretary Long has still another daughter, older than Miss Helen, but she has little time to devote to society. She is a young woman of unusually brilliant mind and is bent on putting her talents to some use. Last year she was graduated from Smith College, and she is now studying medicine at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Won't Mind the Doctor.

A prominent physician, who has what is termed a "fashionable" practice, recently told some of his troubles to a friend in a burst of wrath over a case of a society woman. "When anaemic girls, sleepless women and dyspeptic children are brought to me, I fee like going out of business," he declared. "I have one patient, a girl of 18, who might as well go to a fortune teller for advice for all the benefit she will ever get from a doctor. I give her a scolding and draw up a set of rules for her to live by, prescribing certain things to eat, certain times to sleep, certain hours for exercise, give her a tonic and dismiss her.

"Do you think that girl improves? Not she. In a fortnight she trails into my office, pallid and melancholy. I haven't the heart to scold her, but I anticipate her answers to my questions. Has she taken the tonic? Oh, yes, she hasn't missed a dose. Has she eaten pastry or lobsters or drank ice water or ice cream soda? Well—er—once or twice. Has she eaten the oatmeal and raw beef and drunk the hot water and beef tea? Yes. She doesn't add 'once or twice,' but her pale face adds it. And has she gone to bed early? Got up early and slept after lunch? Well, not every day. And yet the girl of intelligence and apparent common sense wonders why she doesn't get well. I am going to try once more. If she doesn't obey me, then I shall positively refuse to attend her further."

Russia's Adamless Eden.

While Russia does not take rank as thoroughly up to date and progressive in all lines, it will surprise many people to learn that there is in that country a district which is wholly administered, and for the greater part of the year exclusively inhabited, by the fair sex. It comprises some fifteen square miles in the province of Smolensk. In the early spring all the able-bodied males emigrate in search of work to the large towns, and remain absent for nine months or more, leaving their wives and daughters to cultivate the fields, and manage local affairs generally under the presidency of a mayoress. This Adamless Eden is one of the most prosperous and best conducted portions of the empire, and the Czarina takes a strong interest in its welfare.

Woman Dog Enumerator.

The only woman dog enumerator in the world is Mrs. Sarah A. Richart, of Kansas City, Kan. The canine census taker has the further distinction of working without pay, the fruits of her work being turned over to the public library. Her duties are to see that the owner of every dog in the city pays the proper municipal tax. She was appointed by the Kansas City, Kan., City Council at the instance of the Federation of Clubs, one of the strongest women's organizations in the State.

MRS. RICHART.

For a long time the question of dog taxes had been a botheration to the city. Some people paid and some didn't, and it was next to impossible to force the delinquents to obedience. The condition of things was somewhat bettered when the dog taxes, through an ordinance, were turned over to the public library, and the library was given charge of the collection. The Federation of Clubs, which is at the helm of the Library Association, was consulted as to what was the best means to remedy the evil. It was the federation that suggested the idea of appointing Mrs. Richart to take charge of the dog taxes. It was decided to call the office Mrs. Richart was to hold that of "city dog enumerator," as it sounded better than "dog impounder." Since that time the question of dog taxes has been solved.

Women's Pockets.

Ladies fifty years ago, when going on a journey by stage coach, carried their cash in their under pockets. There were no railways opened in Wales then, and people who had not a close carriage either went in the mail coach or in a post chaise. Farmers' wives and market women wore these large under pockets. I remember my Welsh nurse had one wherein, if she took me out cowslip picking, or nutting, or blackberry gathering, she carried a bottle of milk and a lot of biscuits or a parcel of sandwiches, often a clean pinafore as well. Her pocket on those occasions was like a big bag. I was very proud when she stitched up a wee pocket for me to wear under my frock out of some stuff like bedticking, similar to that of which she made her own big pockets.—Notes and Queries.

Their Beautiful Hands.

To American women belongs the distinction of having the smallest hands in the world. Next come the women of Austria, Spain, France and Italy. Russians have long but beautifully shaped hands, while those of Spaniards are often spoiled by the thickness of the fingers, which are apt to round at the tips. The hands of aristocratic Englishwomen are apt to be well shaped, but are somewhat long and frequently hard. No one, perhaps, takes such good care of her hands as the French woman of fashion. German women usually have large flat hands, with flat fingers.

Except for the christening robe, the baby's dresses, slips and wrappers are all made quite plain, but of the finest French nainsook. When laces and embroideries are used, only those of daintiest pattern and finest quality are in good taste. Plain hems at the bottom, hand-finished or hem-stitched, are simple, babyish and always in good taste. In most dresses the trimmings are confined to the yoke, neck and sleeves, with perhaps a band of trimming to mark the waist-line. Many have the fullness at the back held in with a sash of the same material starting from each side of the fullness in the front of the waist, which makes a garment easy to launder and fashion.—Woman's Home Companion.

Modish Wedding Ring.

The fashionable wedding ring is engraved with ornamental chasing and enriched with precious stones. Fanciful ideas are allowed full play in the choice of emblematic stones. They are made to spell "Amor" by means of an amethyst, a moonstone, an opal and a ruby.

Scraps About Women.

A woman with money has always something to go buy.

A mother is never satisfied that she has washed her boy's face clean unless his kisses taste soapy, declares the Atchison Globe.

According to the Feminine Observer of the Hutchinson News, the woman who is a good conversationalist is seldom a good whist player.

A BEAUTIFUL GIRL'S AFFLICTION.

From the Republican, Versailles, Ind.

The Tuckers of Versailles, Ind., like all fond parents, are completely wrapped up in their children. Their daughter Lucy has given them much concern. She is fifteen, and from a strong, healthy girl, three years ago, had become weak and kept falling off in flesh, until she became a mere skeleton. She seemed to have no life at all. Her blood became impure and finally she became the victim of nervous prostration. Doctors did not help her. Most of the time she was confined to bed, was very nervous and irritable, and seemed on the verge of St. Vitus' dance.

"One morning," said Mrs. Tucker, "the doctor told us to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which he brought with him. He said he was treating a similar case with these pills and they were curing the patient. We began giving the pills and the next day could see a change for the better. The doctor came and was surprised to see such an improvement. He told us to keep giving her the medicine. We gave her one pill after each meal until eight boxes had been used, when she was well. She has not been sick since, and we have no fear of the old trouble returning. We think the cure almost miraculous."

FRANK TUCKER,
MRS. FRANK TUCKER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of April, 1897.

Merit Always Wins.

The hard times of the past three or four years have been very destructive to all industrial affairs, and the railways have had an unusual amount of difficulty in making both ends meet. Roads that have, during this trying period, earned dividends while at the same time affording high class transportation facilities to their patrons, have, indeed, been fortunate. And such an event speaks well for the management of the roads.

The record of the Nickel Plate road during the recent period of industrial depression has indeed been remarkable, and it speaks most eloquently of the conservative judgment of the managers. For this road has made great and steady progress in the material improvement of its roadway and appliances, and in perfecting its equipment. The interests of the public have been in nowise neglected; in fact, the success of this road has inured to the benefit of the public as much, if not more, than to the stockholders. The condition of the road today shows this. Great and valuable improvement of a permanent character have been made—in the shape of strengthening the roadway, bridges, and other accessories, and procuring new and improved safety appliances; new coaches have been added, elegant Wagner sleeping cars put on, new and powerful engines have been placed in service, and everything has been done to raise the standard of the road, to perfect its service, and to give it a leading place among the best roads in the country. The result has been obvious. The people have observed the progressive spirit of this road, have given it a liberal patronage, have enjoyed its excellent facilities, and that tells the whole story of a highly successful enterprise.

Among the most noteworthy improvements effected by the Nickel Plate route is the introduction of a first-class dining-car service which has won the approval of the best class of patrons. Then the coaches have been illuminated by the brilliant Pintsch gas, heated by steam, and placed in the care of a colored porter. So the passengers have had the best that money can afford, at the lowest rates.

The through train service of the Nickel Plate, running in connection with the West Shore and Fitchburg railroads—over the great Hoosac Tunnel route, between New York, Boston and Chicago, ranks with the best in the country, and has become deservedly popular. Elegant new coaches, and palatial Wagner buffet sleeping cars run through without change; the service is unexcelled, the time fast, the scenery most fascinating.

Located along the south shore of Lake Erie are many substantial and attractive summer resorts that are yearly growing in popularity, and this class of travel promises a continually increasing source of revenue to the Nickel Plate road.

Tramp—Yes'm; I canvass.

Lady—What do you canvass for?

Tramp—My livin'.

Did You Make Your Grain-O This Way?

Here are the latest directions: Use one tablespoonful of Grain-O to two cups of cold water. Mix the Grain-O with half an egg and add the water. (Be sure to measure.) After the water gets to the boiling point let boil for fifteen to twenty minutes. Use cream and sugar to suit the taste. If you have not cream use hot milk.

A lady said: "The first time I drank Grain-O I did not like it, but after using it for ten days and forming the habit, nothing would induce me to go back to coffee." This is the experience of all. If you will follow directions, measure it every time and make it the same, and try it for ten days, you will not go back to coffee.

BETTER THAN A SILVER MINE.

The editor estimates that the increase in yields had by the American farmer by planting Salzer's Potatoes and new creations in Wheat, Oats, Corn, Rye, Grasses and Clovers the past year amounted in round numbers to $50,000,000. The reason of this is Salzer's farm and vegetable seeds are bred up to big yields. Salzer is the largest grower of grasses, clovers and farm seeds in the world; 100,000 barrels potatoes, $1.50 a barrel and up.

Elbow-grease (with a little soap) used to be the thing to clean house with. Now-a-days it's Pearline. Pearline is easier and quicker and better than elbow-grease. One reason why millions of women prefer Pearline, rather than anything else, in cleaning house, is that it saves the paint and woodwork. But the principal reason, of course, is that it saves so much work. 548 it is not only palatable, but it is already digested and made ready for immediate absorption by the system. It is also combined with the hypophosphites, which supply a food not only for the tissues of the body, but for the bones and nerves, and will build up the child when its ordinary food does not supply proper nourishment.

BIG K. P. MEETING.

Ligonier Does Itself Proud and Pleases the Knights Greatly.

The K. P. Meeting at Ligonier yesterday was a grand affair. Work began at 1:30 p. m. by the Albion Lodge on first degree work and then Grand Instructor Powell gave instructions on the first and second degrees. The public meeting at the M. E. church was at 7 p. m. Miss Mate Sack gave a splendid violin solo; a song by Mrs L. J. Dunning, a short talk by Mr. Hunt one of the grand officers, another violin solo and an encore by Miss Sack and a song by Miss Gola Baker and benediction by Rev. Nelson of the M. E. Church, closed the services. Then came the meeting at the hall, followed by lunch at 11 p. m. and they took trains home, feeling they had had a grand time.

Those from Auburn, were:—M. B. Willis, H. R. Culbertson, C. M. Brown, U. S. Raut, C. E. Rainier, John Ober, S. H. Hine, Frank Depew, T. M. Guild, Dr. Nusbaum, Perry Long, F. E. Rose and Miles Baxter.

SALMAGUNDI PARTY

It Was a Delightful Gathering at the Residence of Clerk Long

The party at Clerk Long's that we spoke of yesterday, proved one of the most delightful of the season. Mr. Long's daughters, Lenore and Louise, had invited about forty of their young friends, ladies and gentlemen, and gave them a lovely evening of social enjoyment. There were progressive games, conversation and music. The awards in the games, the first for gentlemen to J. P. Crimmins, a fine sterling silver key ring. The first prize for the ladies was awarded to Miss Anna Trentman, a handsome handmade kerchief. And the guests all had lovely hand painted souvenirs. At the close, there was a fine supper in three courses, there being oyster cocktails, salted wafers, etc, for the first; then came the second, including lettuce sandwiches, chicken salad, pickles, jellied fruit, coffee, etc The third included, ice cream, white cake, and Devil's food. Altogether it was one of the most enjoyable suppers our young people have had, and delicately served.

The guests from Auburn were. Ladies: Myra Wateon, Helen Ralston, Mamie and Anna Trentman, Nellie and Margaret Buckley, Sadie Weamer, Edna Davis, Cecile Bishop, Della Weaver, Ollie McClure, Flora and Clara Stafford, Nellie Franks, Eva Nichols, Lila Baker and Lela Morse, of Angola.

Gentlemen: James Eldridge. Will Raut, Chas Ladue, Chas Nelson, Dr. J. H. Johnston, Geo. Boland, Geo. Kuhlman, Teet Ashelman, Claude Benedict, Will Buckley, James Dills, Harry Trentman; John P. Crimmins and Ed. Koons, of Garrett, and Will Brown, of Butler.

All of the above young people are unanimous in the opinion that as entertainers, Mr. and Mrs. Long, and their two daughters, have no superiors.

THE MAIN.

Nothing Certain Is Known so far of the Terrible Disaster.

It is hardly worth while to add to to the many things that have already been said of this unfortunate affair that has cost the nation the loss of one of its finest battle ships and the lives of 258 men. For several days the papers have been filled with accounts and conjectures. The nature of the explosion that sent the great iron clad to the bottom may never be known. An investigation has been ordered, but even that may not throw any light on it. On the other hand, there is a bare posibility that something may be learned. At present all is guesswork The ship lies in water about forty feet deep, which of course, covers her a part of the way at least, and all the forward part is destroyed and shown only as a pile of wreckage at the top of the water. There are several theories, but as we said, no proofs. If the investigation can show anything it may show whether the explosition was from something within the vessel or from without. If the iron plates are found bent inward, the explosion may have been from without and then may have been done by a torpedo. In that case, the question will arise, was the torpedo sent against her by Spaniards who are angry at us? Or, was it sent from the shore, by Cubans, who were trying to destrov the Spanish war-ship Alfonso, which lay several hundred yards away for if sent in a certain direcition, the torpedo may have missed the Alfonso and gone on past and struck the Maine. And again as to a torpedo, it may have been one of those said to have been placed at various points in the harbor, by the Spaniards, for use in case of danger to themselves from a foreign emeny. These would be on the bottom of the sea, and may have been fired by the Main striking them or something attached to them, or it may have been fired from the shore, by electric wires in the Spanish forts. So much for the torpedo theories. As to an explosion within the ship, If her plates are bent outward, the explosion was likely inside. In such a case, the question is, was it a boiler or some guncotton stored there, or some shells or powder in the magazine. Here are difficulties to explain. At the time of the explosion the ship had not been moved for a week or more and the boilers forward were cold. One boiler in her middle only, was being used for lights. But her middle is not hurt. As to shells, it is not belived they could have exploded all at once to make such destruction. The gun cotton was flooded with water to keep it from exploding.

Powder, such as is used on ships, is not easily ignited by heat or by a spark. There are still other theories but nothing satisfactory about any of them. The only thing to do is to wait and be patient and even we may never know more about this terrible catastrophe. It is the most terrible sea accident that has occured since the British cruiser, Victoria, was run into and sunk in the Mediterranean about five year ago, by another British cruiser while practising some maneuvers. There the loss of life reached nearly 400.

TREE 10,000 YEARS OLD.

Giant and Prehistoric Times Unearthed in England.

From the London News: An extraordinary discovery, and one which is just now exciting considerable interest in antiquarian circles in Lancashire and Cheshire, has been made at Stockport. During the excavations in the construction of sewage works for the town some workmen came across what has since proved to be a massive oak tree, with two immense branches. Professor Boyd Dawkins, the well-known antiquary, is of opinion that the tree is one of the giants of prehistoric times, and he says that the tree is certainly 10,000 years old. The corporation of Stockport are at a loss what to do with the gigantic fossil, which is supposed to weigh about forty tons, and as it is necessary that it should be removed a proposal has been made to blow it up with dynamite. This has aroused the indignation of a large section of the public, who presented the following petition to the corporation: "That there is a valuable tree of old oak at present lying upon and exposed in the gravel on and within their property; that the quality in color, grain and solidity is better than any that can be bought in the open market; that for artistic work alone it is greatly to be treasured, for nothing in this country is at present grown which can come up to its dimensions; that it contains within itself sufficient material to make the furniture for any public building or town hall which may be erected for the public benefit within our borough; that it only requires lifting from its bed, which in the opinion of competent geologists may be roughly estimated as 15,000 years of occupation; that private effort has failed to achieve its removal; that its destruction would be a public loss and an artistic calamity; that your representatives in council be and are hereby requested to conserve for the borough this grant of nature to her sons and daughters, whose signatures are hereby affixed." The corporation have reserved their decision, and in the meantime efforts are being made by local antiquarians and others to bring pressure to bear upon the council to preserve the tree for the benefit of the town and the country. It is believed that no discovery of such importance has hitherto been made in this country, and this being so it is hoped that those interested in such matters throughout the country will lend assistance toward preserving the tree.

A Common Cold

and common carelessness can make a combination strong enough to defy all the healing skill of the physician. Common carelessness lets the cold root and grow. Common carelessness says, between paroxysms of coughing, "It will be all right in a day or two," and the common end is confirmed lung trouble, perhaps consumption. The common-sense treatment of a common cold is a prompt dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the most efficient and reliable cure for colds and coughs, and is constantly prescribed by physicians.

S. HAYNES, M. D., Saranac, N. Y., says:—

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice since 1853, and have always found it reliable for the cure of colds, coughs, and all lung diseases."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is now put up in half-size bottles, for half price—50 cents.

SUGAR BEETS

Farmers should keep on the safe side when subscribing stock for a sugar beet factory. It will pay only when large capital is put into it and then closely watched. But when it does pay, it pays handsomely. Prof. Baird, of Norfolk, Va., knows more of the history of beet sugar in America than any other man. Here is what he says:

"The coming year will see a great growth in the interest taken in the production of its own sugar by the United States. Last year the government sent out four tons of seed, scattering it all over the country, for experimental purposes. The results of these trials are about in, and some of them are very flattering. Indiana, from these and other results, seems to be one of the most promising of the states. The people are now beginning to ask "How can we get a factory? How much will it cost, and of what advantage would it be?"

"The co-operative factory is talked of a great deal, but generally by persons who know very little about the cost of such a plant, and the difficulties to be met with in running it. A small plant, say one capable of working 100 tons of beets or less a day, could not be made to pay. The cost of labor would be practically as high in one as in the other. From three hundred to four hundred ton plants have been found to be about the smallest profitable. One of these will cost well up to half a million dollars by the time it is fully equipped, and in every way ready to run. Very few communities could command such an amount in a practically small number of hands.

A Terrible Blunder.

"Hands up!" said the villain with the low brow and the bulldog jaw. "All, right, I'll put up my hands," replied the man with the tall forehead and the pale countenance, "but you have evidently made a mistake. I am a newspaper man." "Here," said the footpad, tears of pity springing into his eyes, "is a quarter. Don't let this ever become known or the gang'll put me back in the amateur class."—Cleveland Leader.

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

We are apt to condemn all articles because similar ones prove worthless. Persons often reason; I have nervous prostration, St. Vitus' dance, spasms, rheumatism, can't sleep and am in a debilitating condition; have tried best physicians and most widely advertised remedies, but there is no cure for my case. No matter what your past experience may have been Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer will positively cure every case of nervous trouble—no failures. Here is expert evidence of that fact, Mr. J. H. Hutchings, Bancroft, Mich., for 20 years a successful druggist, tried every preparation he could hear of without benefit. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cured him. The following are his words, read them:
